Laſtly, Conſtantine ordered that the Jews might be made Decurians, becauſe 'twas fit that they ſhould have their ſhare in the publick Burthens; but he exempted [g] the Patriarchs, the Prieſts, and thoſe that had conſiderable Employs in the Synagogues, becauſe being taken up by their Functions, they could not attend on the Duties theſe Offices laid on them. For indeed the Poſt of Decurion was not an Honour, but a Servitude. Every one endeavoured to be diſcharged from it, by taking other Imploys in the Army and Government. They endeavoured to exempt themſelves by ſome Privilege which they beg'd of the Emperor. Conſtantine and his Children granted ſo many of 'em, that there was no body left to fill theſe Poſts in Julian's time [h]; which obliged him to revoke 'em all without exception, and this raiſed Murmers againſt him, even after his Death, whilſt others commended him for it. No wonder then, that Conſtantine, who did not love the Jews, made Decurions of 'em. Such was the Condition of the Jews under the firſt Chriſtian Prince.

VII. 'Tis under his Reign that they place the Council of Illiberis [i], which made two degrees againſt the Jews of Spain; in which Country they had great Correſpondence with the Chriſtians. They eat and lived ſociably together: But the Council forbad this Table Society upon pain of Excommunication to thoſe that eat with a Jew. The Puniſhment was terrible, and abſurdly afflicted, ſince eating together is an Action purely civil, and Excommunication ought not be iſſued except for Eccleſiaſtical Crimes. The learned Commentator of the Council of Illiberis pretends, that the Council of Nicæa ordered the ſame thing in one of its Decrees, which had been dictated by Oſius, who was Preſident of it, and who was for having the Diſcipline receiv'd in the Spaniſh Churches, admitted into all others. Mendoza is miſtaken; for the Canon he quotes was never made by the Council of Nicæa. He took it from the Arabians, who have falſly father'd upon this Council a great many Canons it never made. 'Tis a Fiction, that the ſame Oſius, who had cauſed this Law to be paſſed at Illiberis, went afterwards to infuſe the ſame Notion into the Nicene Fathers, that it might be executed over all the Church. Neither do we know what the Arabians mean by quoting the Apoſtles in their Decree; for St. Paul was ſo far from condemning the Commerce of civil Society, that he made himſelf all things to all Men, a Jew to the Jews, and a Greek to the Greeks. And if we have recourſe to the Cannons that bear the Names of theſe Holy Men, we ſhall only find, that they condemn'd Uſury without forbidding eating and Society with the Jews. Recardoe, who renewed the Decree of the Illiberan Council, and ſupported it with his Royal Authority grounded alſo upon the Authority of St. Paul, who ſays, that All things are impure to the defiled and unbelieving. From whence he concluded, that the Jews being impure, their Meats muſt be ſo too: But this is a weak Argument, and we ſhall ſpeak of it again in another place.

VIII. The Council of Illiberis [k] by another Decree forbad "the Poſſeſſors of Lands to ſuffer their "Fruits to be bleſſed by the Jews, becauſe their Be-"nediction fruſtrated that of the Chriſtians, and it "threatned abſolutely to caſt out of the Church ſuch "as ſhould not obey it." This Decree is obſcure. The Commentator obſerves two things; one, that Pope Eutychianus had commanded to go and bleſs in Private Perſons Houſes the Fruits which could not be offered upon the Altar, that the People might make uſe of 'em after the Benediction. He adds another Law, permitting the Prieſts to go into Fields and Houſes to bleſs whatever the private Poſſeſſors deſired. He obſerves in the ſecond place, that Tertullian had rejected as a kind of Idolatry the Benediction of the Heathens, who, when any one gave Alms, pray'd the God of their Colony, or their Art, to bleſs their Benefactor, as the Mendicant prays at this Day the Bleſſed Virgin, and Mr. St. Chriſtopher, or Mr. St. George, to re-pay the Alms he receives; and the Council of Laodicea alſo rejected the Bleſſings of Hereticks, becauſe they were Curſes rather than Bleſſings. Theſe two Obſervations don't ſufficiently illuſtrate the matter.

Firſt, we can't apply Tertullian's Nicety to this

[d] Joſeph. l. 11. c. 12. de Bello κολάζεσαι θανατῷ. [e] Cod. Theodoſ. l. 15. tit. 9. l. 1. p. 247. [f] Euſeb. de vita Conſt. l. 4. c. 27. p. 538. [g] Cod. Theod. l. 16. t. 8 l. 2. p. 219. [h] Ammian. Marcell. l. 25. c. 5. p. 463. [i] Conc. Elib. C. 50. Mendoza. l. 3. c. 27. p. 1274. [k] Concil. Elib. C. 47. Mendoza ibid. p. 1273.

Decree

Decree, who refuſed to give a Man Alms, that bleſſed him in the Name of his falſe Gods; for not to examine whether he was in the right, there is a a great difference betwixt the Heathen and the Jew, ſince the one bleſſes in the Name of the true God, and the other does it by Idols. Beſides, it is true, that the Fruits were ordered to be carried to the Altar, and were bleſſed there. Dom Luke d'Achery relating the Cuſtoms of the Monks of Clugny, ſays, that they commonly bleſſed the Grapes at the Feaſt of St. Sixtus. If the Seaſon was not enough advanced, they waited till they ripned. Then they were preſented to the Prieſt, who bleſſed them, and afterwards they were [l] diſtributed in the Refectory in the place of the Hoſts. They bleſſed three other things in the Refectory, new Beans, new Bread, and new Wine. The manner of doing it is expreſſed in the ancient Rituals, and particularly in the Sacramentary of the Queen of Sweden; Lord bleſs theſe Creatures with Water, Milk and Honey; make them drink of that eternal Fountain, which is the Spirit of Truth. Nouriſh them with Milk and Honey; for thou haſt promiſed to our Fathers, Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, that thou wilt introduce them into a Land, flowing with Milk and Honey. Unite, O God, thy Servants by a Spirit of Charity and of Bread, as this Milk and this Honey are united in Jeſus Chriſt, our Lord, by whom thou created'ſt all things. So that the Cuſtom related by Mendoza, is very certain. But there are three Defects in his Proof; for he quotes the Decree of Pope Euticianus, which is falſe and ſpurious, as being full of Quotations of St. Hilary and Pope Leo. D'Achery, who adds Damaſus's Pontifical, where this Decree is attributed to the Pope, is no better grounded; for the Pontificial is another Forgery, upon which we can lay no ſtreſs. Beſides, this Cuſtom of Bleſſing the Fruits is not ſo ancient: They only bleſs'd at the Altar, the Oblations, which the People preſented for the Maintenance of the Clergy. Laſtly, This does not acquaint us of what kind the Jews Benediction was; 'tis in vain to prove that the Church bleſſed the Fruits, ſince the queſtion is not concerning its Benediction, which was approved; but that of the Jews which was rejected. Neither were they the Bleſſings given in the Streets to charitable People, like that mention'd by Tertullian. Nor is it likely, that the Chriſtians invited the Jews to come and bleſs their Crops in the Fields, or that they carried their firſt Fruits to the Synagogues, to ſanctifie 'em by the Benediction of the Chief there. If it were ſo, they had Judaiz'd in Spain. 'Tis better, in my Opinion, to ſay, that the Jews in this Country were Tenants to the Chriſtians. They improved their Lands, and carried the firſt Fruits of their Harveſts to the Synagogue, or rather they implor'd the Divine Bleſſing upon their Fruits by publick Prayers. The Spaniſh Jews have ſtill in their Ritual, a Benediction, "which they pronounce for Almonds, Apricocks, Cyder and Acorns. They beſeech God to "Water the Earth with his Showers; that the Dew "may flow upon it; that there may be abundance "of good things; that he would bleſs all ſorts of "Herbs, and Greens, and Seeds." Salva [m] Ruego, y ſalva agora, Dio Ruego, Llama agora hartura, con Lluvias de los cielos, y Bendize todas maneras de verduras, y ſembradas. Theſe are the Benedictions which the Council of Elvira has condemned. It forbad Proprietors to ſuffer their Farmers to make them, becauſe this Jewiſh Bleſſing would render the Chriſtian uſeleſs: As if the Prayers addreſſed to the ſame God ſhould impugn one another, and the Infidel ſhould prevail over the Believer, and his Petition ſhould ſhed upon the others noxious Influences, fruſtrating its effect. What a Whimſie is this for a Council of the pureſt Ages! Nevertheleſs Excommunication was the penalty of violating this Decree.

IX. The Nation [n] at that time underwent a croſs turn of Fortune in the Eaſt, in the Perſon of one of its Grandees. 'Twas the famous Ravena, or Rabba Nachmanides, Head of the Academy of Sora. They talk of Two famous Men, one Ancient [o], and the other more Modern. The latter lived in the Year 474; but the other died before the Council of Nicæa, in 322. He was ſo eſteemed, that they reckon Twelve Thouſand Diſciples in his Academy. He was commonly called the Remover of Mountains [p]. Not that he had Faith enough to work Miracles, and convey Mountains into the midſt of the Sea, but ſo profound was his Knowledge, as to plane and level the greateſt Difficulties. He wrote a Book, that was in great Eſteem, whilſt he liv'd, and after his Death. 'Twas a Commentary upon the Firſt Book of Moſes, containing the Hiſtory of the Holy Land; the litteral and myſtical Senſe. The Title of it was Bereſchit Rabba. It muſt not be confounded with another Work of the ſame Name, which is a Commentary upon the Miſnah of Judah the Saint, Compoſed by one of his Diſciples [q].

Ravena, having long taught in the Academies of Babylon, was accuſed of diverſe Crimes by the King of Perſia. The fear of being taken and condemn'd to Death, obliged him to fly, and conceal himſelf. He died in his retreat. Some ſay he was committed Priſoner, and that Sapor was going to Condemn him, but that the Empreſs, his Mother, ſent to tell him, that He ſhould have nothing to do with that Jew, becauſe ſhe had ſuffered much on his account. I know not whether the Thalmudiſts [r] have Copied the Goſpel, or have invented the Story. But the Empreſs Dowager's Dream had a greater effect than that of Pilate's Wife, who from a Divine Dream oppoſed our Saviour's Condemnation; for Sapor only baniſh'd Ravena Nachmanides, and he died in his Exile. However this Perſecution was not general; for the Academies flouriſhed at Babylon, and the Neighbouring Parts.

Ravena [s] left a Nephew, whom he ſtiled Avii, אבי for two Reaſons; one was, that he meant to ſignifie, that he had been an Orphan, and that he had entertain'd him out of Charity; the other was, that he would not have him go by the Name of his Grandfather Nachman, leſt afterwards the Nephew ſhould be confounded with the Uncle, and the Diſciple with the Maſter. He made ſuch proficiency by Ravena's Lectures, as to become Head of the Academy of Pundebita, in the Year 325, which he govern'd till 339. At the latter end of his Life he Married a Widow, by whom he had a Son, who is well enough known by the Name of Rau bibi. Some Hiſtorians place Avii at the end of the Fifth Century; but by ſo doing they confound his Genealogy; for he could not be Nephew to Ravena Nachmanides the Ancient, and dye in the Year 489.

There was alſo [t] a Profeſſor in the Academy of Sora, called Joſeph of Great Light, or Saghi Nahor. He was blind; nevertheleſs his Soul was full of Knowledge. He was alſo Sirnamed Sinai, becauſe he knew in perfection all the Traditions that had been given Moſes upon Sinai. He is believed to be the Author of the Chaldee Paraphraſes upon ſome of the Holy Penmen, the Pſalms, the Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, Ruth and Eſther. This Paraphraſe is highly eſteemed, if [l] Conſuet. Clun. c. 35. Spicil. Dach. t. 4. p. 89. Præf. p. 7. Bon. Rer. Liturg. l. 2. c. 14. p. 650. t. 3. [m] Orden de las Oraciones Hoſſaana Raba, pag. 473. [n] In Juchaſin. V. Bartol. Bibl. Rab. t. 3. & t. 4. [o] The firſt is called חקדמון Hacadmon, the Ancient, and the other האחרון Haccaron, the latter. [p] עוקר חרים Oker Harim. [q] This Diſciple was called Oſchiangià. [r] Lightfoot Horæ Thalmud. in Matth. 27. [s] V. Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. iv. p. 670. [t] Ganz. Tſemach David. ad An. 113. or 353.

We

we judge of it by the number of its particular Editions, and there is reason for it, when People will feed themselves with Fables and subtile Explications.

X. 'Twas also in Constantine's Reign, that a Jew nam'd Judas, discover'd the Wood upon which Jesus Christ had suffer'd; and the finding of the Cross so frequently attributed to St. Helena must be restor'd to this Jew. Baronius [u] in his Zeal for such a precious Relick can't suffer the Glory of it to be given to a Stranger. 'Tis to no purpose to say, that Judas had already perhaps some Seeds of Christianity, or at least was Converted after he had found the Cross, and received the Name Cyriacus at his Baptism. This can't satisfie the Bigots: For indeed they have three great Reasons to deny this our Assertion; 1. They commonly make the Ancient Relicks of Saints to be found by Men of renowned Piety. It must not be Chance, or the Course of a general Providence, that governs these Events; which are often the Product of Miracle and Revelation. How shall we imagine, that in the question of the Holy Cross of the Son of God, a Jew was privileg'd to find it? Did God reveal to him, that this was it, and distinguish the true Cross from all others that might have been buried in this place? We must suppose a Miracle in the Person of a Circumcised, who was still a Member of the Synagogue united to the Society of those who had Crucified the Lord of Glory. 2. This overthrows the Tradition of St. Helena, which is more generally received, and does much more Honour to the Invention of the Cross. 3. Lastly, All the Miracles connected to this Invention disappear and vanish; for it is not said, that God wrought so much as one Miracle for the Jew, who found out this Wood; and tho' he should have done many for him, yet all those must be denied, that are commonly told. 'Tis indeed an unlucky Accident; but yet we ought not to dissemble it: But it does not suffice to relate it; but we must examine which of these two Traditions is most probable; and it will undoubtedly appear to be that of the Jew; Eusebius's silence about the finding of the Cross in a place adjacent to his Bishoprick, and his Residence deserves to be taken notice of. 'Tis no wonder that he should not mention it, if it was done without Noise, and without Miracle, by a Jew, but little known; but 'twas impossible for him to be silent, if 'twas the Mother of his Hero, who unburied this Cross, and that in a glorious manner, and if God recogniz'd her Zeal by publick Miracles: So that the silence of Eusebius makes much for the Jew. Besides, Gregory of Tours [x] is the most ancient of all those that have spoken of the Discovery of the Cross. But yet this Historian gives the Glory of it to Judas, and looks upon him to be the Man that pointed it out. Schelstrate [y], the Vatican Librarian, thinks, that Gregory of Tours took this fact from an ancient Catalogue of the Popes, which he has Published from a Manuscript of the Queen of Sweden, having corrected it by another of Mr. Colbert's Library. It signifies little to know whether Gregory of Tours drank at this Fountain; but this is certain, that in this ancient Catalogue, the discovery of the Cross, and the Baptism of Judas are placed under Eusebius's Pontificate. We read the same thing in the Pontificial, which Holstenius, another Vatican Librarian, had Revised with great exactness. These Proofs are not questionable, they come from good Hands. The ancient Historians of the Popes, furnish 'em, and their Librarians Publish 'em, and at the same time give glory to the Truth.

Baronius, and the obsequious Crowd that follows him, have often quoted a Letter of Cyril of Jerusalem, that brings Helena back upon the Stage. But the Letter is too evidently spurious to prove any thing; and that which is objected, that Gregory of Tours associates Helena with Judas, and gives one the Glory of shewing the Cross of our Saviour, and the other of receiving and honouring it, is of no moment; for 'tis a gross fault of an Historian [z] who had not well computed the Years of Constantine, and his Conversion; for Eusebius was Pope, before Constantine was a Christian. Judas found the Cross of Christ in Eusebius's Pontificate. 'Tis therefore impossible that Helena, who was yet an Idolater and a Heathen should have had any part in this Event; for it must be owned, that some foreign Hand being full of the current Tradition associated Helena with Judas by corrupting the Text, as has often happen'd to Gregory's History, or else but part of his Narrative is true. He ought to be believed about the Jew, since he would never have made that Confession, had he not been forced to it. But he is not at all to be credited, as to what he says of Helena, since he is contradicted by a Chronology own'd by all the World. Rome, and all the Worshippers of the Cross, are hereby much more oblig'd to the Jews than they imagine.

XI. This Jew would have done a compleat piece of Service, if he had told how the Wood of the Cross had been preserved from rotting, during the three hundred Years it had been left under Ground, and how it was found again after that place had been so often disseltled and disturb'd. Another Jew persevering in his Religion has done it; and his Piece has been Publish'd. He relates [a], that Abraham being one Day in the Place, where the Jor and the Dan unite, and make the Jordan, he perceived a Man that wept bitterly, he advised him to take Three Firebrands, to plant them and Water them daily with Forty Buckets of Water, till they had taken Root, because God would then be appeased. The Penitent obeyed, and related afterwards, that not only the Firebrands shot out, but after he had transplanted 'em into far different Places, united and made but one Tree. This Jew doubtless had no other design than to make Abraham one of his Patriarchs, the Author of a Miracle. But the Christians of Berytus disputing one Day about the kind of Wood the Cross was made of, espoused the Story of this Jews that was put into their Hands, and doubted not but the Cross was compos'd of these three miraculous Firebrands. 'Tis true, they are not all of this Opinion, and some chuse rather to invent new ones, than to copy the Jews. Allatius [b] has made a jumble of 'em that deserves relating. Why, says this great Man, should we trouble our Heads about Hereticks, who say 'twas impossible that this Wood should he preserved? They deny the Word of God; they deny the Writings of the Holy Fathers; they deny the Traditions of the Church. Should we therefore deny 'em too? On the contrary, we ought to believe it because they deny it. For they would not be Hereticks, if they believed. They accuse us of Stupidity, for believing what they reject, but they are much greater Fools for rejecting what we believe. After such a fine Proœmium follows the History of the Cross from the beginning of the World. Adam press'd with violent Pains, and feeling Death approaching, bad Seth go to the Terrestrial Paradise, to require of the Cherubim that kept it, the Oil of Mercy, which God had promised him when he expelled him from thence. Seth asked the Way to this Earthly Paradise; he was told, that he need only go to the Valley of Hebron, where he should find a Place where Herb never grew in, because Man had sinned there. He went, he found the Angel, [u] Baron. An. 305. [x] Gregor. Turon. l. 1. c. 36. p. 28. [y] Schelstrate Ant. Illust. p. 442. [z] V. Le Cointe Annal. [a] Apud Allat. Συμμικτ. p. 228. [b] Allat. ibid.

and

and preſented Adam's requeſt to him. The Angel made him look through the hole of a Gate, and he ſaw a Fountain, from which iſſued Four great Rivers, and hard by it was a Tree without Leaves and Bark. The Branches of this Tree bent to the Ground, and even to Hell, where Seth perceiv'd the Soul of Cain; but the Top of the Tree touch'd the Clouds; and there he ſaw a young Child crying. It was the Son of God, who was to expiate Adam's Sin, and was the promiſed Oyl. The Angel took Three Seeds of the Tree of which the firſt Man had eaten, and gave 'em to Seth, telling him that Adam ſhould die Three Days after his Return; that he ſhould put theſe Three Kernels in the Noſtrils of the Dead, from whence ſhould riſe Three Trees, a Cedar, a Cypreſs, and a Pine, which ſhould live to the Days of Noah. Lerico, one of this Patriarch's Sons, going to viſit Adam's Sepulchre, pluck'd up theſe Three Branches, and planted 'em in the Wilderneſs near Jeruſalem; but a little after they miraculouſly united, and made but One Tree, which was known by the Difference of its Leaves. Moſes tranſplanted it to Tabor, and from this Wood conſtituted of Three Incorruptible Trees was compoſed the Croſs of Jeſus Chriſt. David found this Wood, which had been cut by chance, and acknowledging the Trinity of Perſons, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, in theſe three ſorts of Wood, which made but one, religiouſly preſerved it as a Pledge of the Proſperity of his Houſe, and of that of Mankind. He had a Mind to introduce it into the Structure of the Temple, but this Wood was never found of a fit Length; It was one while too ſhort, and another while too long. The Architects after ſeveral uſeleſs Attempts to place it, acknowledged the Miracle, and publiſhed it. It was no longer doubted, but it was intended for the Death of the Son of God, and from that time they began to worſhip in the Temple. A Woman, who approach'd it in Solomon's Reign perceived her Cloths to be ſet on fire; but the People ſton'd her. One ſays, that Solomon ſhewing the Temple he had built to the Sybil Crythræa, asked her to ſit down with him upon that Piece of Wood, but the Sybil by a Prophetick Inſtinct refuſed to ſit there with the King, and exclaim'd: O thrice happy Wood, upon which the Lord and King ſhall be ſacrificed, which cauſed it to be adorn'd with Thirty little Silver Crowns, which were the Thirty Pieces given to Judas; and the Wood being afterwards found uſeleſs, and diveſted of its Ornaments, was made into the Croſs of Jeſus Chriſt. Another ſays, that the Queen of Sheba, who is made a Sybyl of, foretold that this Tree, which was trampled under foot in Solomon's Reign, ſhould one Day work a great many Miracles. And therefore after the Sybil's Departure he ordered it to be thrown into a very deep Well, which was cloſed up with Stones and Mortar. The Water riſing open'd the Well, and the Angel deſcended in it every Year to trouble it, and the firſt ſick Perſon that went down into it, was heal'd by vertue of this Wood: but it was taken from thence to make a Bridge for the Pool of Siloam; and the Jews, who ſought for a great Tree to make a Croſs of, took it, and faſten'd Jeſus Chriſt to it. The Latins vary the Matter a little; for they ſay that this Tree ſerved for a Bridge over the Brook Cedron in the Queen of Sheba's time, who foretold, that a King much wiſer than Solomon ſhould die upon this Wood, and that this ſhould cauſe the Jews Deſtruction. The King being incenſed cauſed this Wood to be buried where the Pool was, and at the Moment of the Paſſion it roſe out of the Earth to be Inſtrumental to the Death of the Son of God. Are not we very great Fools not to believe this? and have not they well corroborated the Faith of the Wiſe, who with Allatius have aſcended up to the Fountain-head of the Tradition? The Story of the Three Firebrands made by the Jew, is as good as the reſt, and this Order of Chriſtians ought no longer to reproach the Rabbins with their Rambles of Imagination about the Ark of Noah, the Rod of Moſes, or the Antiquity of the Cloud, ſince they have made ſuch great ones about the Croſs.

XII. Laſtly 'twas in [c] Conſtantine's Reign, that the Jews, who were potent at the Court of Perſia, reveng'd themſelves for what they ſuffered in the Roman Empire, by kindling a cruel Perſecution againſt the Chriſtians of the Eaſt.

The Goſpel had ſome time before arrived into Armenia. We are told that one of its Kings called Tiridates had embraced Chriſtianity. From thence it paſs'd on to the Perſians, who had a great Correſpondence with the Armenians. They began to build Churches, and to conſecrate Prieſts. There was alſo a Biſhop for the Two Cities of Seleucia and Cteſiphon, which were the moſt conſiderable of the Country. The Jews were multiplied there, becauſe as St. Jerom obſerves, they lived quiet and undiſturb'd, and were perſecuted by none of the Perſian Kings. Being jealous of the Progreſſes made by Chriſtianity, they murmured: but when they ſaw Uſtazades one of Sapor's principal Eunuchs turned Chriſtian, they no longer obſerved any Meaſures; but made a League with the Magi. Simeon Biſhop of Cteſiphon was accuſed of Criminal Correſpondences with Conſtantine. This was enough to deſtroy him. This Biſhop refuſed to worſhip the Sun and the King, when he was brought at the Foot of his Throne. I bent my knee formerly, ſaid he, before your Majeſty, becauſe I did it voluntarily, and it was a civil Homage, but I can't do it at preſent becauſe you make it an Act of Religion, and you would make me renounce my God. He would not ſo much as look upon Uſtazades, becauſe he had been ſo weak as to warp under Violence, and worſhip the Sun. The King being enrag'd cauſed him to be chain'd in a Dungeon. The Jews and the Magi taking advantage of this Opportunity, fell to work and pull'd down all the Chriſtian Churches. The Perſecution was long and barbarous. Uſtazades, an old Eunuch of Sapor, and eminent for his Services, repenting of his Infirmity, was the firſt Martyr [d].

XIII. Conſtantine's Sons were much ſeverer than their Father had been. 1. Conſtantius coming to the Empire was oblig'd to make War againſt 'em. This Prince muſt have been mov'd by the Diſorders the Jews had committed at Alexandria, when Gregory the Cappadocian went to ſucceed St. Athanaſius [e]. Joyning [f] with the Heathens who were then numerous in this great City; they burnt the Sacred Books, undreſs'd themſelves in the Baptiſteries; and profan'd 'em in ſo impudent a manner, that St. Athanaſius durſt not ſpeak it. Their Inſolence went ſo far as to force the Virgins they had ſtripp'd to abjure their Religion. But as this Diſorder was acted at the Sollicitation of Gregory, who paid the Mutineers; and as this Arrian Biſhop had great Favour at Court, no body troubled themſelves to puniſh 'em for this Riot; and it was the Rebellion of the Inhabitants of Diocæſarea, that oblig'd the Emperor to take up Arms againſt 'em.

XIV. They thought they might ſafely riſe during Magnentius's Revolt. This Rebel was a Chriſtian as well as Conſtantius, ſince we find his Medals have the Labarum or Church-banner; and Baronius abſurdly ſuppoſes him to have diſſembled,

[c] An. 344. [d] Sozom. l. 2. c. 9. p. 455. [e] Athanaſ. Ep. ad Orth. [f] An. 341. and and cheriſhed Heatheniſm in his Heart like Julian, becauſe he revoked all the Edicts publiſh'd againſt the Idolaters in the Places he was Maſter of. The Jews could expect nothing from him, eſpecially ſince it was in the Weſt, that his Rebellion had the greateſt Footing. But as he was powerful; and his Troops had often been ſucceſsful, the Emperor was obliged to go Perſonally into Hungary to encounter him. The Perſians taking Advantage of his Abſence afar off, took up Arms, and attack'd Niſibis, which ſuſtain'd a Four Months Siege. The Jews ſeeing the Fire kindled at both Ends of the Empire, could not forbear making uſe of ſuch a favourable Conjuncture. Diocæſarea is a City but little known, ſituate in the Second Paleſtine. People talk indeed of Three Cities of this Name, one whereof was in Cappadocia, and another in Phrygia. There was a Third in Iſauria, ſince John Biſhop of Diocæſarea in Iſauria ſubſcribed in the Council of Chalcedon [g]. But yet the Geographers, without excepting the Learned Holſtenius, generally forget that of Judæa. Scaliger [h] confounds it with another City of Paleſtine called Geth, in the Neighbourood of Gaza. This Learned Man's Errour, which has been often copied, proceeded from his not underſtanding St. Jerome. This Father ſays, that Geth was but a Mile and an half from Sephoris, call'd at preſent Diocæſarea. This Father ſpeaks of Sephoris, and he was thought to ſpeak of Geth. Sephoris had been famous, and the Romans made it a Metropolis, when Agrippa II. was put in Poſſeſſion of Tiberias, which occaſion'd great Jealouſies and Diſputes betwixt theſe Two Cities. It retain'd its Name till the Empire of Trajan; for Father Harduin [i] has publiſhed a Medal ſtruck in this Prince's time, with the Name of the Sephorenians on it; but it left it quickly after out of Gratitude. As after the taking of Jeruſalem, a great Number of Jews were retired to Sephoris and Tiberias, the Heathens and Chriſtians, who continued with 'em in theſe Two Cities, ſuffer'd much in their Revolt againſt Adrian, in which the Rebels put all to the Sword, that came to their Hands. And therefore when the Emperor had delivered 'em from their Inſults, they teſtified their Acknowledgements with Emulation. Thoſe of Tiberias built a Temple we have ſpoken of, which they call'd Adrianion, and Sephoris forſook its ancient Name, to be called Diocæſarea Adriana, or Diocæſarea. Tho' great Slaughter had been made of the Jews in this Country, yet they ſtill got together there under the following Princes in ſuch Numbers, that in Conſtantine's time, they were the only Inhabitants, and ſuffer'd no body elſe of whatever Religion to ſettle there. 'Tis no wonder then, that this was the Rendezvous of the Malecontents under Conſtantius; and that the Inhabitants of this City were the forwardeſt to arm, when they underſtood, that Magnentius obliged the Emperor to march with his Troops into Hungary, and that the Perſians made a great Diverſion in the Eaſt. But Gallus, whom Conſtantius had made Cæſar, and commiſſion'd to march againſt the Perſians, came [k] into Judæa, beat the Rebels, and razed Diocæſarea, which had been the Seat of their Rebellion. Nevertheleſs this City raiſed its Head again from under its Ruins, and the Jews ſettled in it. We find it in the ancient Notices that Carolus [l] a Sancto Paulo has Publiſhed, as a Suffragan Biſhoprick of Jeruſalem; and it ſtill ſtood in the time of the Cruiſades ſince Godefroy of Bouillon, gave it to Tancred with Galilee, of which it was then the Capital.

XV. Conſtantius being incens'd againſt the Jews, and being with all zealous for his Religion, made ſome Laws againſt them. There is, ſaid St. Hillary [m] who lived at that time, an Edict of the Emperor, which hinders 'em at preſent from entring into Jeruſalem. He makes 'em circuit about the Walls of that great City without entring it. They complain'd to Julian, when he came to the Throne of this hard Uſage, of being excluded the Gates of a City, which had been the Reſidence of their Anceſtors for a great many Ages. All this is an Argument, that Conſtantius had renew'd Adrian's Edicts, or had made a new one upon the ſame Subject.

This Prince [n] made it Death for a Jew to Marry a Chriſtian, or to Circumciſe a Slave. He alſo prohibited their having Chriſtians in their Service; and eſpecially he forbad, under great Puniſhments the embracing their Religion. So that if they had Liberty of Conſcience for themſelves and Poſterity, they were not permitted to receive Proſelytes, when they offer'd themſelves. Laſtly he loaded 'em with Taxes, and had alſo projected new Pecuniary Edicts againſt 'em when he died.

XVI. 'Twas [o] in his Reign that St. Epiphanius, who was born a Jew, embraced Chriſtianity. The Authors [p] of his Life give ſuch a ridiculous and fabulous Account of his Converſion, as makes a Man uneaſie to read it. He was born in a Village near Eleutheropolis, which ſome confound with the ancient Hebron. It ſtill went by this Name at the Council of Nicæa; ſince Macrinus, who was Biſhop of it, Subſcribed with the other Prelates of Paleſtine. St. Epiphanius's Mother continuing a Widow was ſo poor, that ſhe ſent her Son to ſell a paultry Horſe ſhe had remaining, with the Hopes, that the GOD of Iſaac and of Jacob would vouchſafe the Sale of him, and that he who had wrought ſo many Miracles by Moſes againſt Pharaoh, would hinder this Beaſt from diſcovering his Faults. A Jew came to buy him; but having touch'd Epiphanius's Conſcience, he choſe rather to give him Three Crowns in Charity, than to be troubled with that unruly Beaſt. A Chriſtian afterwards cheapen'd him, and I know not whether the young Jew made any Scruple to cheat him; but the Brute fell a kicking, threw his Rider, and broke his Thigh. The Charitable Chriſtian cured him in the Name of Jeſus, and kill'd the Horſe, who at his Word fell dead upon the Ground. Epiphanius was not ſufficiently affected with this Miracle to think of turning Chriſtian. On the contrary, he enter'd the Family of a Jew call'd Tryphon, who confirm'd him the more in his Religion, becauſe he promiſed him his Daughter, and would make him his Heir. The Father and Daughter died, and left Epiphanius the entire Poſſeſſion of their Eſtate. And as he went to ſee it, he met a Monk upon the Road, called Lucian, who having ſtripp'd himſelf, to give a poor Man Subſiſtence, was miraculouſly cloath'd with a Robe that fell from Heaven. This Second Miracle being more effectual than the former touch'd Epiphanius's Heart. He deſired to be made a Chriſtian; and his Siſter deſired the ſame thing, upon the Account of her Brother. Lucian carried 'em to the Biſhop, becauſe 'twas his Buſineſs to receive the Abjuration of theſe Proſelytes. This Prelate led 'em to the Church, and whilſt the Goſpel was read, he ſaw the Countenance of the young Jew all radiating: He baptiz'd him; but the young Convert going ſoon after into Egypt, ſuffered himſelf to be dazled by the Devotions and Dotages of the Gnoſticks, ſo that he was very near running into their Sect, with the ſame Precipitation as he had enter'd into the Church. If he had ſeen ſo many Miracles wrought, not only under his Eyes but upon his Perſon, how could he be ſo eaſily ſeduced?

[g] Concil. Chalc. Act. iii. [h] Scaliger in Euſeb. Chron. Adrichom. deſcr. Terræ Sanct. p. 22. V. Baubrand. Carolus à Sancto Paulo in Geogr. Patriarch. Holſten in Not. p. 306. edit. Amſtæl. [i] Hard. p. 449. [k] An. 353. [l] Carolus a Sancto Paulo p. 7. [m] Hilar. in Pſ. 58. p. 731, 734. Pſ. 131. p. 1050. Pſ. 146. p. 1176. [n] Sozom. l. 3. c. 17. p. 529. [o] An. 348. [p] Joannes Vita Epiph. n. 1. &c. p. 338, 339, 340.

XVII. Julian's Reign [q] was much more favourable than Conſtantius's. This Prince had no Reaſon to love the Jews, who worſhip'd but one God, and abominated the Heathen Idolatry. But he was glad to augment the Numbers of the Enemies of Chriſtianity, which he thought moſt formidable, and to ſet all Religions at War, that Paganiſm might triumph in the midſt of theſe Conflicts. He diſcharged the Circumciſed from the Taxes wherewith Conſtantius had loaded 'em. He wrote to 'em, and in his Letter honours their Patriarch with the Style of Brother; which is a Sign they were then conſiderable in the Empire. Laſtly he gave 'em Liberty to Sacrifice, and to rebuild the Temple at Jeruſalem, becauſe they repreſented to him that they could not offer Sacrifice out of the Holy Land. They employ'd the Emperor's Protection firſt to inſult the Chriſtians; for they aſſembled in many Cities of Judæa and Syria. They pull'd down their Temples at Gaza, Aſcalon and Berytus. They demoliſh'd Two at Damaſcus, one of which was ſtill ruined in St. Ambroſe's time [r]. Thoſe of Egypt did the ſame thing, and the fineſt of all the Temples of Alexandria was deſtroy'd. Secondly they fell to rebuilding the Temple of Jeruſalem. But this Event, which Hiſtorians relate with a great many Circumſtances, deſerves to be inſiſted on.

XVIII. The Emperor not only authoriz'd the Building of the Temple of Jeruſalem, but alſo furniſhed 'em with Materials and Money. St. Jerom, ſpeaking of the Jews of his time, ſays, that they imagin'd that Four Hundred and Thirty Years after their Diſperſion, they were to become Maſters of the Romans, ſell 'em to the Sabeans, rebuild Jeruſalem; and that the Meſſiah then coming, this City ſhould appear again in its Primitive Magnificence; that the Boroughs and Neighbouring Cities, not excepting Sodom it ſelf, ſhould be rebuilt. They grounded upon ſeveral Oracles, promiſing that God would revenge his People of their Enemies, and rebuild Sion. When they ſaw Julian ſollicite 'em to labour upon this Structure, they fancied God prevented their Hopes, and began to accompliſh his Promiſes. They inſultingly ask'd the Chriſtians, whether they would cauſe Gold and Silver Tools to be made, to work upon this New Edifice. The Women and Children lent a helping Hand, and the Heathens themſelves aſſiſted 'em in the Reſtoration of the Temple. 'Tis ſaid that God prevented it by Three ſucceſſive Miracles. Three Ancient Hiſtorians [s], Socrates, Sozomen and Theodoret unanimouſly relate theſe Facts. And Sozomen, who is afraid the incredulous would look upon them as fabulous, refers 'em to Depoſitions of Eye-witneſſes, who were ſtill alive at the Time of his Writing.

XIX. The Firſt of theſe Miracles was an Earthquake, which happen'd, when they were cleanſing the Foundations of the Old Temple to lay new ones; which Earthquake overturn'd the Materials. There are Two Variations about this firſt Miracle; for Theodoret makes it preceded by I know not what Divine Power, which brought back by Night the old Rubbiſh, and Ordures, that had been removed, and afterwards by a miraculous Wind, which ſevered the Stones, tho' they had been ſtrengthen'd and cemented with a great deal of Lime and Mortar. Secondly Sozomen makes this Earthquake kill a great many people, who came as Workmen or Spectators, and who were cruſh'd under the Ruins of the Neighbouring Houſes and Porches, under which they were retired.

The Second Miracle was a Fire, that burſt out from the Foundations they had juſt laid, conſumed Part of the Workmen, and put the reſt to flight. One makes this Fire deſcend from Heaven, and the other Two ſay it came out of the Earth. Socrates makes it laſt a whole Day, to conſume the Mattocks and Shovels, and all the Tools deſign'd to the Work. Sozomen relates the Death of the Workmen with ſome Uncertainty. He alſo obſerves there was ſome Difference in the Account; ſome ſay the Fire had conſum'd 'em when they went to enter into the Temple, which was impertinent, ſince the Foundations were ſcarce finiſh'd; and others affirm'd, that this happen'd, when they began to remove the Earth and to carry it away. There is a Fourth Difference about this Miracle; for 'tis added, that the Jews acknowledged Jeſus Chriſt to be God, whether they would or no, but yet they perſever'd in their Enterprize, which is contradictory.

But that ſignifies nothing; their Conſtancy occaſion'd a Third Miracle; for they perceived in the Morning a great many ſhining Stars ſcattered upon their Cloaths, which they attempted to bruſh off, but could not do it. Sozomen adds that theſe Stars were made with ſo much Art, as if they had been put there by the Hand of a Workman. Theodoret is ſomewhat different; for inſtead of ſhining Stars he puts black ones, which better repreſented the Crime and Puniſhment of the Jews, and at the ſame time he makes many of 'em cruſh'd to Death, who were a-ſleep under a Porch. But the great diverſity conſiſts in the Effect of the Third Miracle; for ſome affirm, that the Jews retired home as obdurate as if they had ſeen nothing, but the other two pretend that moſt of 'em turn'd Chriſtians, and that the News of their Converſion came even to the Ears of the Emperor Julian. We have thought fit to obſerve theſe different Circumſtances, that the Reader might better weigh the Truth of this Story. Some will find a Pleaſure in multiplying theſe Miracles as Theodoret; and adding to 'em the Accounts even of the Modern Writers. But 'tis fit, that others ſhould alſo find the Reaſons, that ſome have for ſuſpending their Belief. I will only add two things. One, that the Proof Sozomen alledges for the Truth of his Aſſertion is very weak. He appeals to the Event, and maintains that we can no longer doubt of this long Train of Miracles, ſince the Temple was not finiſh'd. But had this Hiſtorian forgotten that this Permiſſion was not given the Jews, till Julian ſet out for his Perſian Expedition, in which he was kill'd, and ſo there was no need of ſo many Miracles to obſtruct the Building? The Oppoſition of the Chriſtians, who took Advantage of this Prince's Remoteneſs, his Death, and the Elevation of Jovian, the Jews Enemy, were ſufficient to cut ſhort this Deſign. Beſides he refers his Readers to Eye-witneſſes in indefinite Terms, without naming or intimating any body. Laſtly Cyril of Jeruſalem [t], who was then Biſhop of this City, muſt have been upon the Place, ſince 'twas he, who encouraged the People, from a Prophecy of Daniel, foretelling, as he thought, that the Undertaking would not ſucceed. In the mean time

[q] An. 363. Julian. Ep. κοινῶ Ἰουδαίων, p. 223. [r] Ambr. l. 5. Ep. 29. p. 154. [s] Socrat. l. iii. c. 20. p. 193. Sozom. l. v. c. 22. p. 632. Theodoret. l. iii. c. 20. p. 142. [t] Cyrill. Hier. Ep. ad Conſt. p. 24. Ibid. Catech. xv. p. 168.

Cyril

Cyril has never ſpoken of theſe Miracles. Not but that he loved 'em, for he writ as is ſaid to Conſtantine the Younger, that he was happier than his Father, in whoſe Reign the Croſs of the Son of God had been found in the Earth, ſince the Heavens manifeſted a more glorious Prodigy. Which was a Croſs more Luminous than the Sun, which all the City of Jeruſalem had ſeen in the Firmament a long time together. How came he to ſpeak of this Croſs, and to ſay nothing of theſe Miracles? He tells the Jews, that they ſhall ſee the Sign of the Croſs which ſhall precede the Coming of the Son of God; and do s not ſay one word of thoſe Stars, which had been miraculouſly faſten'd to their Cloaths. This Silence of a Biſhop who was upon the Spot, who delighted in Miracles; and the Converſion of the Jews ought to be ſuſpected, when none but remote Witneſſes ſpeak of them.

However it muſt not be diſſembled, that if one of the Jewiſh [u] Chronologers affirms, that the Temple was not built, becauſe of the unexpected Death of Julian. Another [x] aſſerts, that this Temple, rebuilt at a great Expence fell down; and that the next day a great Fire from Heaven melted the Tools that remain'd, and deſtroy'd an innumerable multitude of Jews. This Confeſſion of the Rabbins is the more conſiderable becauſe it is affrontive to the Nation, and theſe Gentlemen are not wont to copy the Books of Chriſtians.

XX. Julian [y] who had permitted the re-building of the Temple, before he departed for Perſia, carried his Conqueſts very far. He found there a Part of the Ten Tribes, which poſſeſs'd an entire City. Indeed the Hiſtorians [z] obſerve that this Prince being arrived at Meſene, which is an Iſland made by the Tigris, where Apamea bore a conſiderable Rank, march'd towards a Place, where the Euphrates divides it ſelf into many Chanels, and found a City call'd Bithra, which was inhabited by the Jews, who had abandon'd it, becauſe the Walls were not ſtrong nor high enough to ſuſtain a Siege. This City had been conſiderable in the Perſian Empire, ſince the Emperor's Palace, and Houſes to lodge a Garriſon were ſtill ſeen in it. Julian's Army ſeeing it deſerted ſet fire to it and reduced it to Aſhes. It can't be doubted, but theſe were Jews of the Ten Tribes diſperſed in the Eaſt, ſince they were ſituate between the Chanels of the Euphrates. They were numerous and potent there, ſince they poſſeſs'd an entire City. They were alſo faithful to their Prince, ſince they rather choſe to forſake all than to wait and receive the Romans, who would have profited by their Stay.

XXI. Julian was kill'd in this War, and Jovian his Succeſſor was obliged to check the Inſolence this Prince's Countenance had infuſed both into the Heathens and Jews of the Roman Empire. He did it, but his Reign was ſo ſhort, that they look'd upon it only as a fleeting Cloud; and the rather becauſe Valens reſtored an entire Liberty of Conſcience to all the Enemies of the Chriſtian Religion, Heathens, Jews, and Hereticks. He did ſomething more; for Valentinian and he maintain'd the Jews and their Patriarchs in the Poſſeſſion of all their Privileges. The Law of theſe Two Princes is loſt; but ſince Arcadius ſupports himſelf with their Example in confirming all theſe Privileges, it can't be doubted but they made it. However Valens [a] aboliſhed one of their greateſt Advantages, ſince he ſubmitted them to publick Offices, and revok'd the preceding Decrees, that had exempted them. This Prince's Words are conſiderable, becauſe they ſhew that the Clergy was not ſo far priviledged as is at preſent imagin'd. The Edict, upon which the Jews flatter themſelves that they are exempted from the Offices of Court is voided by theſe Preſents; for even the Clergy are not allowed to conſecrate themſelves to the Service of God without having firſt paid what is due to their Country; and he that will truly give himſelf to God, ought to furniſh a man to fill up his place in Publick Offices [b].

XXII. Tho' Theodoſius had not revoked this Law of Valens, which was executed in the Reign of Arcadius, yet the Jews continued happy enough at that time. Maximus rebelling [c] in the Eaſt, and obliging Valentinian to implore the Protection of Theodoſius, who was then in Illyricum, thought it his beſt way to gain the Jews, and bring them over to his Intereſts. He not only favour'd 'em; but underſtanding that the People had burnt one of their Synagogues at Rome, he order'd it to be rebuilt. St. Ambroſe [d] was violently ſcandaliz'd at it, and imagin'd, or rather deſired to perſuade others, that God had deprived him of the Empire for this Act of Protection he had done in favour of the Circumciſed. Indeed Maximus's Reign was ſhort. Theodoſius having often beaten his Troops, cauſed his Head to be cut off at Aquileia, and came afterwards to Milan, where Valentinian and he revok'd all they had decreed. But as the rebuilding of the Synagogue at Rome, was a particular Ordinance, and Theodoſius was perſuaded, the Jews ought not to be depriv'd of their Religious Places, I queſtion whether he annull'd that relating to the Jews.

XXIII. Indeed the ſame Queſtion was afterwards debated in the ſame Theodoſius's Reign. The Prefect of the Eaſt had permitted the Building of a Synagogue in a little [e] City of Oſrhoene, named Callinicum. Mr. du Cange ſays that theſe ſorts of Cities had no Biſhops, but he is miſtaken, for there was one in this, who ſet himſelf at the head of the Rabble, and went to burn the Edifice. Cedrenus [f] overthrows this Event; for he ſays that the Sedition happen'd at Conſtantinople; that 'twas the Prefect of the City, a Heathen, who licens'd the Jews to build a New Temple, and rejected the Remonſtrances of the Chriſtians, who ſet fire to it in the Night. The Emperor, ſays he, having order'd the Damage to be repair'd by the Incendiaries, they intreated St. Ambroſe to ſupport their Intereſts. He undertook it, and taking his Opportunity, when Theodoſius was at Sermon, made a violent Digreſſion upon this Affair, He brings in God reproaching Theodoſius, that 'twas he that had ſet the Diadem upon his Head, which lice and ſcabs ate before. The Emperor ordering him to be habited on occaſion of our Saviour's Nativity, which they celebrated the Feaſt of, and asking him, whether it were lawful for Mutineers to do what they pleaſed in the Capital of his Empire? St. Ambroſe reply'd, that the Prayers of the Jews were as ſo many Curſes and impious Execrations, and that they ought not to be ſuffer'd to Sing in the Capital, nor the Ears of the Saints to be defiled by 'em. The Emperor ſubmitted to the Remonſtrance, and prohibited the Jews the having any Synagogue at Conſtantinople, and making their Prayers in publick. Zonaras confirms the beſt part of this Story.

XXIV. But tho' theſe Two Hiſtorians have ſome Reputation, yet 'tis certain they are miſtaken; for St. Ambroſe who acted ſo great a Part in this Buſineſs, ought be believed rather than Authors, who lived a long time after him. 'Twas not at Conſtantinople, but at Callinicum that the Synagogue was built and burnt. Theodoſius [g] was not at Milan, to hear St. Ambroſe's Sermons, either in the Pulpit, or at the Door of the Church; for having ſtay'd three Years in Italy, upon Maximus's Rebellion, he was return'd to the Eaſt, and Conſtantinople; ſo that all theſe Diſcourſes are fictitious. What Aſſurance muſt a Man have, to make a Preacher and a Prince Diſcourſing, whilſt one is at Milan, and the other at Conſtantinople! Laſtly, The Emperor had not the Complaiſance to inhibit [h] the Publick Exerciſes of the Jews; for here is a Law which he made in the laſt Year of his Life, and it does not appear that he ever revok'd it. There is no Law depriving the Jews of the Liberty of Conſcience; and therefore We are diſturb'd, that their Synagogues have been taken from 'em in certain Places; and We Order your Lordſhip to ſtop the Violence of the Chriſtians, who, under the pretence of Religion, have the Raſhneſs to do what the Laws forbid; and to Puniſh with a due Severity, ſuch as ſhall Plunder or Raze the Synagogues. Thus this ſame Prince, who had ſhut up the Temples of the Hereticks, firſt in the Cities, and afterwards in the Country, maintain'd thoſe of the Jews. And as this is not the Decree, which Theodoſius had given, to make amends for the Synagogue burnt at Callinacum, it can't be ſaid, that St. Ambroſe caus'd it to be revok'd: And indeed, we don't find that this Biſhop had obtain'd his Requeſt; and this Law made by Theodoſius ſome Months before his Death, is a Proof to the contrary.

[u] Ganz. Tſemach David. p. 2. [x] R. Gedalia Schalſche'et Hakkabbala. [y] An. 363. [z] Ammian. Marc. l. 24. c. 4. p. 432. & Zoſim. Hiſt. l. 3. p. 173. [a] An. 383. [b] Val. ad Hypat. [c] An. 387. [d] Amb. Ep. 29. [e] Caſtra. [f] Cedren. p. 248. Zonar. t. 3. p. 30. [g] An. 393.

XXV. 'Tis only true, that St Ambroſe was violently angry with the Emperor upon this Account. He did not ſpeak, but wrote to him; and his Letter, which is conſider'd as an Effect of Zeal, is preſerved. 'Tis ſtrange, that a Biſhop of Conſtantinople durſt not open his Lips; and that St. Ambroſe, from his Biſhoprick of Milan, ſhould intermeddle in an Affair of Oſrhoene, and venture ſo boldly to cenſure his Prince. But there are a ſort of Men ſo bold, as to think that they can do any thing, provided they walk and talk under a Cloak-Religion: He declares to his Prince, that he ought not to take charge of his Prayers before God, unleſs he would hear him, and grant him his Requeſt. After ſuch an inſulting Preface, he [i] asks him how he could oblige a Biſhop to rebuild this burnt Edifice; ſince he muſt neceſſarily make him a Prevaricator, if he obeyed his Orders; or a Martyr, if he diſobey'd them. He ſets himſelf in the Place of the Accuſed, and declares that he has Commanded him. This was not ſo; but 'tis a Bravado he makes to the Emperor, and a Challenge to Puniſh him. He urges, That he would have done the ſame thing at Milan, if God himſelf had not began to burn the Synagogue. He ranks among the Prevaricators the Count who was charged with the Prince's Commiſſion. He introduces the Jews boaſting of being enrich'd, and of having built a Temple with the Spoils of the Chriſtians, as the Romans had built one with the Spoils of the Cimbri. He repreſents the Church in Tears, the Faithful in Chains, the Servants of God condemned to the Mines, and the Triumphs of the Faithleſs Jews, which muſt be a Conſequence of this Order, if 'twas rigorouſly executed. Theſe Sophiſms and bombaſt Expreſſions, are ſo many Teſtimonies of St. Ambroſe's Gratitude to Theodoſius, who had preſerv'd him from Baniſhment, Impriſonment, and ſeveral Calamities. 'Tis a ſtrange thing to ſee Biſhops talk at this inſolent and haughty rate, and to apply to the Jews of his time the Prohibition that God gave Jeremy of Praying for this People. 'Tis ſaid, that Theodoſius diſcharged the Incendiaries from the Reſtitution he had inflicted on 'em, and forbad the building a Synagogue within the Walls of the City.

XXVI. St. Ambroſe, to make the Jews odious, aſſured [k] the Emperor, that this Nation did not think it ſelf obliged to obſerve the Roman Laws; that, on the contrary, it look'd upon its Obedience to be a Crime. It's a hard matter to find out the meaning of theſe words. Did the Jews, in thoſe days, pretend not to be ſubject to Magiſtrates and Laws? This Biſhop, perhaps, overſtrain'd Matters; and would inſinuate, that the Jews obeyed not the Emperor's Edicts without great reluctancy. However, 'tis not amiſs to illuſtrate the Extent of their Power and Juriſdiction at that time.

The Jews being excluded from Dignities, exactly paid the Taxes, which they were often loaded with to exceſs. You cannot (ſaid St. Auſtin to 'em) be either Emperors or Prefects: You can't enter into the Army of the Senate: You have not ſo much as liberty to eat at the Table of great Lords: You pay Taxes. Here then you have a People fully ſubjected to the Laws. But as they had Controverſies with the Chriſtians, or even among themſelves, Theodoſius granted them a particular Juriſdiction. I know not whether it was this Prince, who diſmiſs'd 'em from the City of Conſtantinople, and granted them a Place in the Stenor, that is, in the Space that was left void betwixt the City and the Sea. But they built there a ſort of a City, which ſtill remain'd in the Year 1204. when the Cruſaders went into the Holy-Land; [l] car ils ſe hebergierent devant la Tor en la Fuerie, que l'on apelle Stanor, où il y avoit mult bonne ville & mult riche; and here it is that they ſubſiſt at this day. Theodoſius priviledg'd them from anſwering, except before the Prætor of Stanor, or the Judge of that Part; and they enjoy'd this Privilege [m], till Manuel Comnenes aboliſht it, and ſubjected them to the other Juriſdictions. This Prætor was an Imperial Judge; but however, the Jews had a great Advantage, that they could not be Summon'd before any other Juriſdiction. A Judge who lives by our Bounty, is more eaſily enclined and won; and beſides, they avoided the trouble of going to ſolicit in unknown Tribunals.

XXVII. Beſides their Civil and Publick Judge, they had alſo their Particular Officers and Magiſtrates, which they elected themſelves, and were of their Religion. St. Chryſoſtome ſays in expreſs terms, that the Election belong'd to 'em, and that it was commonly made in September. Theſe Particular Magiſtrates commonly Judged Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, or concerning Diſcipline; and Theodoſius made a Law, by which their Authority, which was ſhaken by the Judges, was reſtored. The Primates Excommunicated Sinners, and drove Scandalous Perſons from the Synagogue. The Guilty, who could not mollifie their own Judges, addreſs'd themſelves to the Civil Magiſtrates, who, whether by their Authority, or menacing Solicitations, reſtor'd 'em to the boſom of the Church. The Primates complain'd to Theodoſius [n] of the Violence that was done 'em, and that they were forc'd to diſhonour their Religion, by receiving Perſons unworthy of their Society; and the Emperor inhibited the Magiſtrates of the Empire from giving them Aſſiſtance and Reſcripts, and authorizing ſuch Intruſions, referring all to the Judgment of the Illuſtrious Patriarchs, and Perſons dignified in the Synagogue: And this Law was renewed ſome time after by Arcadius. I know not how Selden [o] could conceive, that the Queſtion was only about Proſelytes, upon whoſe Admiſſion the Magiſtrates made [h] Cod. Th. l. 16. t. 8. l. 9. Judæorum ſectam nulla Legum prohibitam conſtat. [i] Ambr. l. v. Ep. 29. p. 155. [k] Ambr. l. v. c. 29.

[l] Ville Hardoin. [m] Balſamon in Nomo Canone, tit. 1. de Fide, c. 2. p. 8. [n] An. 393. Cod. Theod. l. 16. t. 8. l. 9. p. 225.
[o] Selden de Jure Nat. l. 2. c. 2. p. 147.

great

great Scruples; for beſides that they were not allowed to make Converſions, Theodoſius ſo evidently ſpeaks of thoſe who had been thrown back by a Decree, and who demand their Reconciliation, that 'tis ſtrange a Man could be miſtaken. Theſe Excommunicates did not Appeal from the Sentence of their Eccleſiaſtical Judge to the Magiſtrates of the Empire; but only implored their Protection, which could not chuſe but be formidable to People that lived in a Dependance: So that tho' there were Rebels, that went from the Tribunal of the Church to the Civil Court, as there have been among the Chriſtians in all Ages; yet it is certain, that the Jews had Authority to execute the Sentences they paſs'd in their Eccleſiaſtical Council, about Religion or Diſcipline. So that their Condition was gentle and quiet enough in Theodoſius's Reign.

XXVIII. St. Jerome had not the ſame Abhorrence for the Doctors of this Nation, as St. Ambroſe; for, on the contrary, he paid them a Penſion, and made uſe of their Inſtruction for the underſtanding the Hebrew Tongue, and the Holy Scripture. This Father, who thought that God had caus'd him to be ſcourged before his Tribunal, and puniſh'd in a lamentable manner, becauſe he had taken too much pleaſure in reading Cicero and Virgil; You are not a Chriſtian, but a Ciceronian, (ſaid the Judge to him) changed his Opinion for the Hebrews, learn'd their Language with difficulty, conſulted their Doctors, ſtudied under 'em, and made uſe of them to compoſe a Latin Verſion of the Scripture.

He acquaints us, That to reſtrain the Sallies of his Youth, he put himſelf under the Diſcipline of a young Hebrew, that was turn'd Chriſtian. He afterwards over-ſtrains the Difficulties he found in the Study of the Holy Tongue: [p] "He ſweated, "he groan'd, he labour'd like a Slave at the Mill, "he quitted all, he deſpair'd; he calls his Conſci- "ence to Witneſs, and thoſe that have liv'd with "him, that this Toil was inſupportable." If the Queſtion was about a thing unknown, St. Jerome would have frighted us with theſe great Words: but he underwent a very common Labour, that of learning a ſtrange Language under a good Maſter, in his Youth, in which this Study was eaſie. And we ought no longer to wonder that he ſo ſorrowfully ſpeaks of the frightful Sound of the Hebrew Letters.

XXIX. He [q] He was not contentd with this Converted Jew; but took another, who ſo paſſionately lov'd him, that he fetch'd the Books from the Synagogue, under pretence of reading 'em, and brought 'em to his Diſciple. This Maſter was an ingenious Man, and St. Jerome has quoted ſome of his Explications. He ſent for a third from Tiberias, whom he employ'd to reviſe, by the Hebrew, his Verſion of the Chronicles, which he had made by the Septuagint. He ſays, that this new Maſter was admir'd by the Synagogue. He ſent for a fourth from Lydda, whom he paid very dear, becauſe he was a learned Man, and interpreted the Traditions in the Synagogue. 'Twas this Rabbin that help'd him to Tranſlate the Book of Job. He had Occaſion for new Aſſiſtance to underſtand Daniel and Tobias, becauſe of the Chaldee Expreſſions that are ſcatter'd in theſe Books. But as he labour'd with a great deal of haſte, he employ'd but one Day in the Tranſlation of Tobias; which a Rabbin, equally ſkill'd in the Chaldee and the Hebrew, Dictated to him.

XXX. But the chiefeſt of all his Maſters was Barabbanus: This Doctor came by Night, like a Nicodemite; becauſe his Brethren of Bethlehem and Jeruſalem would not have ſuffer'd him to have had ſo particular a Correſpondence with a Chriſtian Prieſt. As he commonly gave Encomium's on Barrabanus; Ruffinus, who thought the LXX's Verſion was preferable to that of an obſcure Rabbin, laugh'd at him; and the better to turn him into ridicule, he call'd him Barabbas. I ſee on one hand Jeſus, and on the other Barabbas: You are at liberty to cry, with the Jews, I will have Barabbas, and I to prefer Jeſus-Chriſt. The Jingle would be much worſe, if this Doctor was call'd Barrhaninus, as St. Jerome inſinuates: But 'tis more probable, that his Name was Barrabanus, and that Ruffinus only retrench'd ſome letters, to allude to the Barrabbas of our Saviour's Paſſion. Joſephus relates a Quibble of this nature, which the People had frequently in their mouths at the Siege of Jeruſalem; for when they ſaw thoſe great Stones flung from the Machines of the Beſiegers, in their approaches to the Wall, they cried, The Son comes. A [r] learned Man has thought they cried, [s] Barabbo. Another concludes, that Joſephus underſtood not Hebrew, and that hearing his Brethren cry, The Stone comes [t], imagin'd they ſaid, The Son comes. But 'tis an Equivocation common with the People, who love 'em on the ſaddeſt Occaſions. The words Ben, Son, and Aben, which ſignifies a Stone, have a great reſemblance. Inſtead of a Stone which was coming to fall upon them, they cried, by way of Inſult, to the Son of God, who had threatned 'em with an extreme Deſolation, The Son comes. Ruffinus's Pun upon the Name of Barrabbas, was of the ſame Nature, though it contain'd not the ſame Impiety [u].

XXXI. St. Jerome grew ſo much the haughtier, from theſe Aſſiſtances which he had drawn from the Synagogue; becauſe this Erudition, which was new, and almoſt unknown in the Chriſtian Church, diſtinguiſh'd him from the reſt of the Prieſts, and even from the Biſhops, who hardly knew any more than their Mother-Tongue. In doing ſome Juſtice to his Maſters, he boaſted of his own Skill and Underſtanding of the Scripture. St. Auſtin, who did not love him, yet admir'd him as a Prodigy, becauſe he underſtood three Languages. An Author, who has taken his Name, adds, that St. Jerome underſtood the Language of the Greeks, the Hebrews, the Chaldeans, the Perſians, the Medes and Arabians, and of all Nations. This Elogy is very extravagant; for this Father, who was at ſo great pains to learn Hebrew, proceeded not much farther. The Moderns have gone farther than the Ancients; and becauſe this Father underſtood the Holy Tongue, they have eſpouſed his Obſervations, as thoſe of an almoſt infallible Critick. Whereas, it is not enough to underſtand Hebrew, to interpret the Holy Scripture; otherwiſe the Talmudiſts and Jews would be the beſt of all Interpreters. St. Jerome wanted Judgment, which is infinitely neceſſary for Tranſlators; and he Writ with too much Precipitancy, to weigh the Difficulties. A Man that in one Day Tranſlates a Sacred Book, from a Language he does not underſtand, and from another's Report, can neither be Exact nor Judicious. [w] There were at that time neither Grammars nor Dictionaries, which being compoſed, as they are at preſent, after twenty and thirty Years Study, are a great Aſſiſtance to the Moderns. They muſt be of another Make and Molding than the Ancients, if, with theſe Aſſiſtances, they are not more ingenious than they. Beſides, though St. Jerome boaſts of his Maſters, 'tis eaſie to obſerve, that they had at that time an Imagination fitter

[p] Hier. in Ep. iv. ad Ruſtic. c. 6. in Epitap. Paulæ, & Præf. ad Daniel. [q] Hier. Præf. ad Paral. [r] Lightfoot, in Matth. xxvii. p 385. [s] ברבו Baraba. [t] אבן בן Abenbo, the Stone comes, inſtead of, בן בן Benbo, the Son comes. [u] Le Moine Varia Sacra, t. 2. [w] V. Clerici Quæſtiones Hieronym. § v, vi, vii.

fitter to darken than explain the Scripture. Nor ought we to be prejudic'd by unknown Perſons, becauſe they have liv'd ſome Ages before us; but we muſt weigh what they have ſaid. St. Jerome [x] had learn'd from his Maſter, the Interpreter of Traditions at Lydda, and highly eſteem'd, that theſe words of the Prophet Habakkuk, Wo unto him that giveth his Neighbour drink, and maketh him drunk, ought to be underſtood of Zedekias, whom Nebuchadnezzar cauſed once to ſit at his Table; he order'd a Purgative Wine to be given him, which produced ſo ſudden an Effect, that the poor King found himſelf in a naſty Condition, before he could leave Nebuchadnezzar's Table. Can we truſt ſuch Interpreters, as falſifie the Hiſtory of their Kings with ſuch kind of Stories? They have done a Service to the Church, which would have continu'd longer with its ancient barbarous Verſion, had not they lent St. Jerome their Aſſiſtance to Correct it. But this Service is not Perfect, ſince we ſtill obſerve in it ſuch groſs Defects. We could not wave giving this Circumſtance of St. Jerome's Life; ſince we learn by it, that the Jews had learned Men and Interpreters of Traditions at Lydda, Tiberias and Jeruſalem, at the end of the IVth, and the beginning of the Vth Century [y], whereof we are going to give the Hiſtory.

[x] Hier. in Habac. c. ii. 15. p. 358. [y] An. 390, & 406.

CHAP. XV.

The Hiſtory of the Jews in the Grecian Empire, during the Fifth Century.

I. The Feaſt of Haman forbidden in the Vth Century. The Inſolencies in this Feaſt. II. Whether the Murther of a Child, was the Motive of this Inhibition. III. Synagogues deſtroy'd. Theodoſius's Edicts againſt this Violence. IV. Moſes a falſe-Meſſia in Candia. V. A Paralytick Jew cured by Baptiſm. This Miracle examin'd. VI. Whether Sabbatius and the Sabbatians were Jews. VII. Neſtorius's Judaiſm confuted. VIII. A Hundred thouſand Jews expelled from Alexandria. IX. St. Cyril's Violence condemned. X. The Apparition of Gamaliel to the Prieſt Lucian. XI. What Intereſt the Jews have in this Relation. XII. Proofs againſt Gamaliel's Chriſtianity. XIII. His Apparition ridiculous. XIV. The Falſhood of his Revelation. XV. The Barbarous Names given the Saints. XVI. Their Epitaph at Piſa. XVII. The Patriarchs aboliſh'd in the Year 429. XVIII. A Miracle of St. Sergius, wrought for a Head of the Synagogue. XIX. The Origine of this Monaſtery at Conſtantinople.

I. MOST of the Edicts which the Chriſtian Emperors had publiſh'd in the IVth Century, were executed in This: Some of them were renew'd, and others added that were thought neceſſary to check the Jews Inſolence againſt the Chriſtian Religion. Theodoſius the Younger was oblig'd to remedy this Miſchief; but he always did it in an Equitable manner, for he only puniſh'd thoſe who had deſerv'd it by their Crimes. The firſt Occaſion that offer'd it ſelf, reſpected one of their Devotions, which they abuſed. They continued [a] to celebrate the Feaſt of Haman, and their Deliverance by Eſther. The People being Solemnly Aſſembled at this Feaſt, committed a thouſand Extravagancies; for as they read the Hiſtory of this Enemy of their Religion, the Men and Children made a frightful Noiſe, by ſtriking with their Feet, or knocking the Benches with Stones and Mallets, as often as the Name of Haman was pronounc'd. After the Devotion, follow'd the Debauch; as is the Cuſtom of all Feaſts celebrated for ſome Deliverance. The Chriſtians took little notice of theſe Follies. But they were uſed to ſet up a great Gallows, and to hang up Haman's Effigies; and 'twas imagin'd they deſign'd to Inſult the Chriſtians upon the Death of Jeſus-Chriſt, who was hang'd upon a Tree. And perhaps this was true enough; for indeed they chang'd the Gibbet into a Croſs, and afterwards burnt the Croſs, with the Figure faſten'd to it; which was not done without Maledictions, which reflected upon the Meſſiah we adore. Theodoſius II. having Notice of it, forbid the raiſing and burning of theſe ſorts of Gibbets, under pain of loſing all their Privileges; becauſe it was not fit they ſhould inſult the Myſteries of Chriſtianity. They obeyed in ſome Places; but yet new Troubles ſprung up in Macedonia and Dacia. On the one hand, the Jews of theſe Countries continued to inſult the Chriſtian Religion: And on the other, the Chriſtians burnt their Houſes and Synagogues, and even ſometimes Condemned the Jews to Death, who had no other Crime but their Religion. Theodoſius, who was always Equitable, condemned [b] this Oppreſſion of the Jews, forbad the Magiſtrates to puniſh 'em for Religion; to ſuffer the Edifices belonging to 'em to be burnt, on Condition that on their part they would not violate the Reſpect that was due to the prevailing Church. But yet the Inhabitants of Inmeſtar, three Years after, fell into an Exceſs. Debauchery prevail'd over the Reſpect that was due to the Prince's Laws; for they faſten'd a young Chriſtian to Haman's Gibbet, and whipt him ſo cruelly, that he died. The Chriſtians of that Country, inraged at ſuch a barbarous Sport, run to Arms. The Battle was violent, becauſe the Jews were numerous. The Governor of the Province giving Theodoſius Information of it, he ſent Orders to chaſtiſe the Guilty, and the Tumult was appeaſed by their Puniſhment.

II. Godefroy [c], that learned and judicious Lawyer, who had ſo ſcrupulouſly examin'd the Laws of the ancient Empire, pretends, that 'twas this Murther of the young Chriſtian, that oblig'd Theodoſius to Iſſue out his Laws; but he has been guilty of a Miſtake. Indeed, there is a difference both as to Time and Place; for the firſt Edict was given in the Year 408. for all the Eaſt; and therefore it is addreſs'd to Anthemius, who was then Governor. The ſecond was not publiſh'd till four Years after, and reſpected only Eaſtern Illyricum, Dacia, and Macedonia; wherefore it was directed to Philip the Governor: And the Child's Murder happen'd not till the Year 415. at Inmeſtar a City ſituate between Chalcis and Syria.

Beſides, Theodoſius's Law does not mention the Murther of a Child, but the Cuſtom of burning the Croſs of Haman. 'Tis certain then, it was not this Murther, that occaſion'd the Emperor to Condemn the Jews; but that they deſpiſed the Imperial Law, and, inſtead of obeying it, crucified a Child, which expos'd 'em to a Sedition near Antioch.

Theodoſius, who ſpent the Winter at Conſtantinople, (in the Year 425.) made many Ordinances there,

[a] An. 408. [b] Cod. Theod. l. 16. l. 18. An. 408. p. 433. Id. l. 21. An. 412. p. 438. [c] Gothofr. ibid Socrat. l. 7. c. 16. p. 353.

one

one of which forbad the Celebrating Games and Spectacles on Easter-Sunday, and during the principal Feasts of the Year. The Jews and Heathens might have alledg'd, that this Decree did not relate to 'em, since they had no Respect for the Memory of Jesus-Christ, in whose Favour it was made. But the Emperor Declared, That they were subject to the Law; and told 'em, There was a Time for Devotion, and another for Pleasures. They thought to excite the Prince's Jealousie, by complaining, that this mistaken Devotion, hinder'd the People from Crowning and Saluting the Emperor's Statues: But Theodosius put himself above that, and declared, It was Honouring of him, to do Service to God. However, we see, that this Relick of Heathenism was still retained in this Prince's Reign, of Saluting the Emperor's Statues, and inserting the Stile of Numen in the Laws.

III. Those that profess the predominant Religion, fansie that every thing is lawful to 'em. They think that they signalize their Zeal, in proportion to the Outrages they commit, and under this Notion, they prescribe no bounds to their Passion. It always belongs to the Prudence of Kings, to restrain these Excesses; and to cherish the Publick Peace, by punishing a Cruel Zeal. But this is not commonly done; and those who being convinc'd of its necessity to undertake it, don't always succeed. They often render their Religion suspected; they expose themselves to the Ralleries of the People; they incur the Hatred of the Priests, and raise 'em against 'em. Nevertheless, a Prince ought not to give way to these fiery Motions, nor put himself at the Head of a People breathing nothing but Sedition. But where are those that have this love for Justice? The Christians in Theodosius's Empire pull'd down the Synagogues, without any other reason for it, than their Hatred to this Religion. A private Person thought himself affronted by a Jew; immediately he engag'd the Populace in his Interests: The next thing was, to run in shoals to the Synagogue, and set it on-fire. This was often done in Macedonia; and the Emperor was obliged to represent to his Subjects, That it was not Lawful for Private Persons to do themselves Justice; That there were Tribunals appointed to Hear their Grievances, and to Judge of their Complaints; and he Commanded the Judges of that Country to take Care of 'em. The Ecclesiasticks, accustom'd to fish in a troublesome Sea, join'd with the People: Those of Antioch, where the Jews were numerous and rich, plunder'd the Synagogue, and consecrated their Robberies to God and the Church: They thought to sanctifie the Theft, by giving to God, what no Particular could have dared to appropriate, without exposing himself to Punishment. Complaints were made of so scandalous a Conduct, which were so reasonable, that they were back'd by the Prefect of the Prætorium, who gave Informations of the Disorder, and the Occasions that had produc'd it: And Theodosius Condemned the Clergy to restore what they had taken, or the Value; and Order'd a Place to be assign'd 'em to rebuild the Temple. The Decree was equitable, since the Jews lived in the Empire upon the Publick Faith of the Edicts. But it did not seem so to Simeon Stilites, who was then alive, and violently espoused the Interests of the Clergy, and the Mutineers of Antioch: He wrote so pressingly in their favour to Theodosius, that he not only [d] revok'd the Orders he had given, but cashier'd the Prefect, who had advised him to punish the Robbers. This Prince wrote, they say, to this Hermit, and put this singular Inscription on his Letter, To the most holy Martyr in the Air. At least Valesius says it: But I know not whether these are the Words of Theodosius, or of Evagrius, a great Admirer of this Anchoret; for it seems the Emperor contented himself with having Simeon Stilites told, that he should Pray for him. I confess also, that the Title given him is pleasant. What means, a Martyr in the Air? This is indeed prostituting an honourable Title, reserved for those that sign the Truth with their Blood, to apply it to a sort of Mad-men. Be it how it will, the Favour which Theodosius Granted, upon his Request, not only encourag'd the Christians of Antioch, but those of the Cities and neighbouring Provinces, to make new Assaults upon the Synagogues. They were oblig'd to have recourse to Theodosius, to procure [e] some Security against these frequent Insults. This Prince, who was an Enemy to Violence, forbad 'em doing any. The Christians were disgusted at it: They resum'd the Charge against the Jews, and complain'd, that the Emperor's Protection had render'd them Insolent. In Explication of the preceding Decrees, it was said, that in answering the sad and doleful Complaints of the Jews, it was design'd to skreen 'em from the Persecution that some turbulent Spirits exercised on 'em, under pretence of Religion, and to prohibit the burning of their Churches; but at the same time [f] it was Declared, That if they had nothing to fear for the Temples they were in possession of, it was not lawful for 'em to build new ones; and that Death should be inflicted on all those that undertook the Circumcising of a Christian. There were still Christians at that time that embraced Judaism; for Laws are only made against reigning Abuses; and it was pretty difficult for the Jews to confer Circumcision on a Christian, if he had not a mind to it.

IV. The Losses of the Church were repaired, by an Accident that happen'd in the Year 434. in the Island of Candia, where there were a great many rich Jews, most whereof were converted, after they had been grosly deceived by a False-Messiah. This Messiah's Name was Moses, and he pretended to be the ancient Law-giver of the People, who descended from Heaven to procure them a glorious Deliverance, by leading them through the Sea, to return to the Land of Promise, as they had done when they left Egypt. We can't conceive how a Man could be so mad as to attempt such a Miracle, or to persuade himself that he was able to effect it. But yet [g] Socrates affirms, That he not only had this Imagination, but also, that he had occasion but for one Year to run over all the Cities and Villages of the Island, and to persuade the Inhabitants of his Religion. The Infatuation was so great, that, in expectation of the Day appointed to throw themselves into the Sea, the Ploughman neglected the Tillage of his Fields, and the Proprietors abandon'd the Possession of their Lands and Houses to the first Comer; every one contenting himself with taking what he could carry away. Moses having muster'd up his Flock upon the top of a Rock, the first at hand threw themselves into the Water, without any wavering of Faith: The Women and Children plung'd themselves in with an equal Ardour. 'Twas quickly perceiv'd that Moses was an Impostor; some were drowned; others were sav'd by the Christian Fishermen, who happen'd to be there with their Barks, and went to acquaint their Brethren, how near their Credulity had been to cost 'em their Lives. They attempted to seize the Imposture, but he had disappear'd: Which made it suspected (says Socrates) that it was a Devil, [d] An. 423. [e] An. 425. [f] An. 423. Cod. Theod. L. 16. t. 8. l. 25, 26, 27. p. 242. [g] Socr. Hist. l. vii. c. 38. p. 383.

who

who had aſſum'd the Figure and Name of Moſes, to deceive this Credulous Nation. But this Notion is another Piece of Folly; for if the Impoſtor believed the Miracle he had promiſed, he periſh'd with the reſt in the Sea; and if he did not believe it, he took care in good time of his Retreat, wherein he had Leiſure to reflect upon the Extravagance of thoſe that had believ'd him. Moſt of 'em grew wiſe, and being aſham'd of putting ſo much Confidence in an Imaginary Meſſiah, they ſought the true one, and became Chriſtians.

V. There were other Adventures, that happen'd in the ſame Reign of Theodoſius, that muſt have anger'd the Nation. A Jew of Conſtantinople, who had remain'd paralytical for a great many Years, and who had exhauſted the Art of the Phyſicians, thought he might recover the Uſe of his Limbs, if he were Baptized, therefore he deſired this Grace. Atticus the Patriarch caus'd him to be inſtructed; he received Baptiſm, and coming out of the Baptiſmal Font, he found himſelf cured. This Cure ought to have converted a great many Jews, and the rather becauſe they are fond of Miracles. But yet they perſever'd in their Infidelity, whilſt many Heathens ſtruck with ſo unexpected a Cure enter'd the Church. It muſt be confeſs'd, that [h] Socrates was very credulous in point of Miracles. He relates a ſecond very extraordinary, and which we ſhall report too, becauſe it ſerves to manifeſt the Method, that was uſed with the Jews, who were converted. 'Twas the Cuſtom of that time to give 'em Money to oblige 'em to change their Religion. Each Sect had the weakneſs to open their Purſe to 'em. A Rogue of a Jew, who was much perplex'd about the means of a Livelihood, bethought himſelf of tricking the Chriſtians, and making a Traffick of Baptiſm. He went from one Sect to another, and was baptiz'd by all that were tolerated in the Empire, But at laſt having run through almoſt all Religions, he was put to his Shifts. He addreſs'd himſelf to the Novatians, whom he had not yet bubbled, and demanded the ſame Favour that he had obtain'd elſewhere. The Biſhop had more Precaution than the reſt; for he made his Proſelytes faſt a long time, and often whilſt he inſtructed them. The Jew did not reliſh Faſting. He pretended [i] to have a holy Impatience for a Sacrament, which was to cleanſe him from all his Faults; and he ſo eaſily conceal'd his Hatred of Mortifications under a Zeal for Religion, that the Prelate was deceiv'd by him. That he might not diſcourage this ardent Votary, he ſhorten'd the time of his Examination, bought him a White Habit, and caus'd Water to be pour'd into the Font; but it all run away as ſoon as the Jew enter'd. They ſought for the Hole, through which the Baptiſmal Water had paſs'd, but it was not to be found; they put in freſh, and the ſame thing happen'd. The Novatian Biſhop preſently accuſed his Proſelyte of Impoſture, and ſuſpected he had already been Baptiz'd. The Noiſe of this Adventure ſpread over the City, the People ran in Crouds, and diſcover'd the Rogue, who had been Baptiz'd by Atticus, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople. Thus it is that God works Miracles among the Schiſmaticks, as well as in the Catholick Church.

VI. Socrates afterwards lays to the Jews Charge a thing that relates to 'em but very indirectly. The Novatians, who were then numerous at Conſtantinople, had a Prieſt call'd Sabbatius, who had a violent Deſire of being made a Biſhop. This Man officiating in a particular Chappel, and reading theſe Words of the Goſpel; for it was the Feaſt of the Jews, which is call'd the Paſſover, added theſe words; and curſed is he, that celebrates it beyond the Days of unleaven'd bread. By this he meant to introduce into his Church a Track of Judaiſm, and to cauſe the Feaſt of the Paſſover to be celebrated like the Jews, before the Sunday that follows the Full Moon of March, and at the time of unleaven'd Bread. Some Auditors eaſily obſerved that Sabbatius had added theſe Words to the Text. It was eaſily to perceive it, and the want of Connexion was ſufficient for it. But yet a great Number gave way to be over-reach'd. Being won or ſupported by Sabbatius, they thought, they ought to make a Schiſm in a Schiſm, and celebrate the Paſſover with the Jews. It coſt them a very bloody Miracle to recover theſe Schiſmaticks from their Errour. Sabbatius had not ventured to break entirely with his Biſhop; and tho' he had a mind to communicate with the Jews, yet he ſtill obſerved Eaſter-Sunday, and the Vigil of that Feaſt. As they were aſſembled in a great Crowd to keep it by Night, a Rumour was ſpread, or rather a panick, or diabolical Terrour, ſays Socrates, ſeized all the Congregation; as if Siſinnius, Biſhop of the Novatians, was come with a great Multitude to fall upon them, they all betook themſelves to flight; and the Place being ſmall they cruſh'd one another at the doors, which were very narrow; and ſeventy Perſons were kill'd. This Accident carried off a great many of Sabbatius's Followers. Some however ſtuck to him, and he found means to be made Biſhop of the Novatians at Conſtantinople: but as he paſſed for a half-Jew, and was very much hated, he preſerved his Biſhoprick but a very little time.

VII. Neſtorius was accuſed of being a Jew as well as Sabbatius. Bartolocci [k] ſpeaks of one Neſtorius an Apoſtate Monk, who turned Jew, and wrote a Book for Judaiſm againſt the Chriſtian Religion. He affirms likewiſe that the Manuſcript of this Book is to be ſeen in the Vatican Library; but we ought not to confound this unknown Monk with the famous Antagoniſt of Cyril of Alexandria. Bartolocci, who had the Book in his Hands, ought to have let us known it better, and have taught us what Countryman this Author was, at what time he lived; or whether it be a Book fooliſhly father'd on Neſtorius a Monk, and afterwards Biſhop of Conſtantinople, whom the Ancients have accuſed of Judaiſm, and on whom the Moderns ſtill faſten that Imputation. For indeed Proclus writing againſt Neſtorius calls him Jew. He that hath redeem'd us, ſays he, O Jew, is not a man; for humane nature was inſlav'd to Sin. The Church has ſtyl'd the Symbol Jewiſh, which Neſtorius ſpread abroad by his Party. In fine they have found a great Analogy of Belief. 1. Becauſe the Jews believe Jeſus to be born of Mary by the common ways of Marriage; and tho' Neſtorius left Mary her Virginity, yet he would have her Son to be a Man. 2. He follow'd the Jews in the Explication they give to ſeveral Paſſages of Iſaiah; for when this Prophet affirms that the Meſſiah ſhall be Immanuel, God with us, he aſſerts, that the Divinity only dwelt with the humane Nature. Laſtly Neſtorius's Diſciples, and particularly Anaſtaſius [l], were accuſed of reſtoring the Jewiſh Impiety becauſe he rejected the Title of Mother of God.

The Moderns make uſe of theſe Particulars to bring Neſtorianiſm under great Abhorrence; but if they frighten the ignorant by theſe odious Names, they leſſen the Veneration which Wiſe Men have for the Fathers. For hereby we are inform'd, that theſe Venerable Ancients inflamed like the reſt

[h] Socr. H. l. 7. c. 4. p. 341. c. 17. p. 354. [i] Ibid c. 5. p 342. [k] Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. p. 260. [l] V. Garnier. in Mar. Mercator. Diſſ. 1. c. 4. p. 304, &c. V. Douchin. Hiſt. of Neſtor. l. 1. p. 14.

of

of Mankind, by an over-ruling Spleen, rail'd at and upbraided their Adverſaries with the moſt infamous Names. 'Tis authorizing Miſchief and Injuſtice, to go about rationally to prove that a Creed is Jewiſh, or that Neſtorius was juſtly accus'd of being a Jew. Our Duty is to excuſe the Fathers in their Extravagance, inſtead of juſtifying them, leſt ſuch forcible Examples ſhould authorize Modern Divines, and confirm the Hatred and Revenge of Writers. Proclus ſaid that Neſtorius was a Jew, and Neſtorius return'd him the ſame Compliment with as little Foundation. 'Twas an Edifying Engagement, for the Church at that time to ſee their Principal Biſhops beſpattering one another with the Titles of Jews, Gentiles and Manichees; for they proceeded from Reproach to Reproach, and from one Abuſe to another. The Neſtorians deſerve not the Title of Jews; for theſe latter look upon our Lord as an Impoſtor, who deſerv'd the Death their Anceſtors inflicted. This is the diſtinguiſhing Doctrine of Judaiſm concerning the Meſſiah, which we are to find in Neſtorianiſm, but ſhall never be able to diſcover it. The Neſtorians made the Meſſiah to be born of a Virgin, and the Jews deny it. The Neſtorians maintain'd, that the Child was full of the Divinity dwelling in him; the Jews own neither any inhabiting Divinity in this Child, nor Gifts of Grace. On the contrary they believe, that he had a devil, and that he caſt out devils by Beelzebub. Neſtorius applied Iſaiah's Prophecies to Jeſus Chriſt, and only explain'd the Union of the Divine with the Humane Nature differently from the Orthodox. But the Jews are far from believing, that Iſaiah ever ſpoke of Jeſus Chriſt, or that he had any kind of Union with the Deity. So that there is no Compariſon to be made betwixt their Doctrines. To ſay that Neſtorius was worſe than a Jew, becauſe he made Mankind to be ranſomed without the Deity, without any Incarnation, and without a Redeemer, is making a Compariſon upon Conſequences, which no body will own. We don't know what the Jews Thoughts are upon the Subject of the Redemption by way of Satisfaction; becauſe they do not believe it, and if it were to be made, he perhaps would be much perplex'd to determine, whether he believes it ought to be done by a Dying God or by a Man, whom God approves. Beſides Neſtorius did not make Jeſus Chriſt a common Man. He at laſt gave him an Aſſiſtant co-operating Divinity, which gave a Value to the Sufferings of the Humane Nature. So much for Neſtorius's Judaiſm. Let us ſee the Hatred his Enemy Cyril conceived againſt this Religion, and the violent Effects that were the Product of it.

VIII. They reckon'd a Hundred Thouſand Jews in the City of Alexandria, who like the reſt of the Egyptians beſpoke the Heat of the Climate in their Tempers. They were mutinous and ſeditious; and the Hatred they cheriſh'd againſt the Chriſtian Religion help'd to ſharpen and exaſperate their briſk and turbulent Conſtitution. So that [m] Commotions frequently happen'd in this great City, and they ſeldom ended without Bloodſhed. Saturdays were noted, as ſo many Days of Battel, becauſe the Jews who gave this Day to Idleneſs and Debauchery, inſtead of going to the Synagogue, ſought Occaſion to ſignalize themſelves; and the Chriſtians and Heathens commonly inſulted them, when they went to the Synagogue. There were [n] alſo publick Shows upon that Day; and the Jews choſe rather to be there than at their Devotions. Whereupon the People that flock'd thither, often ingag'd in Quarrels with 'em. They uſed to come to Blows, and the Governours had ſeldom ſufficient Authority to reſtrain theſe Riots. One Day Oreſtes, the Governour of Alexandria was in the Theater, where he was making ſome Political Regulations about the Shows and Stage-Plays. He deſigned perhaps by good Laws to prevent the Diſorders, which had ſuch fatal Conſequences to the Publick Peace and the Good of the City. But he was miſtaken; for as he was attempting it, it was perceived, that he was ſurrounded by thoſe of Cyril's Party. 'Twas ſuſpected, that they came only there to incenſe the Governour, and dictate to him, ſome Ordinance againſt the Jews. The Preſence of Hierax, who was only an Uſher of the lower Claſſes, but one of Cyril's hired Flatterers, and who uſed to clap this Biſhop as he Preach'd, help'd to provoke them. They cried aloud, that that Man whom they look'd upon as their Enemy, was come only to inſult them, and to raiſe Sedition. He muſt have given Occaſion for theſe Complaints, ſince the Governour cauſed him to be ſeized by his Officers and whipp'd upon the Stage, without any Form of Trial. Cyril was not a Man, that would bear ſuch an Inſult from the Prefect, whom he mortally hated. Inſtead of complaining to him of his Injuſtice, if 'twas true that he had been guilty of any, he ſent for ſome Jews to his Palace, and threatned them. They deſpiſed the Threatnings of an Eccleſiaſtick, whom the Governour openly thwarted and oppoſed; and they even reſolved to Maſſacre the Chriſtians. In order to which Deſign, a Body of the Conſpirators run along the Streets in the Night, crying that the Principal Church of the Chriſtians at Alexandria was on fire. The Croud run out without Arms, to extinguiſh it. The Jews, who had a Mark to diſtinguiſh themſelves, kill'd 'em as faſt as they came. Cyril having Notice of it came out with a Multitude of People, enter'd into all the Synagogues, appropriated them to the Church, gave up the Houſes to be plunder'd, and drove the Jews quite naked out of the City. The Governour was highly enraged, becauſe the Biſhop encroach'd upon the Juriſdiction of the Officers of the Empire, and becauſe he ſaw this great City almoſt unpeopled by ſuch a general Baniſhment of the Jews. He inform'd the Court of it, whilſt Cyril alſo ſent his Complaints againſt the Jews. The People ſided with the Governour againſt their Patriarch, and obliged him to go and ſue for Peace with Oreſtes, who refuſed to be reconciled.

IX. Cyril brought Religion into the Affair, and went to the Governour with the Goſpel in his hand, to oblige him upon Sight of that Book to a Reconciliation; but Oreſtes being inflexible in his Reſentments, Cyril, who had a Troop of Dragoons in the Habit of Monks, ordered 'em all down from the Mountains of Nitria. Theſe Anchorets were never ſeen to deſcend, but they put the People in Frights. They march'd down that Day to the Number of Fifteen Hundred; and ſpying the Governour as he went into his Coach, they began to load him with Abuſes, and accuſed him of being a Heathen, that they might have a Pretence to get rid of him, under a Shew of Religion. 'Twas in vain for him to cry out, that he had been Baptiz'd at Conſtantinople. Inſtead of hearing him, they fell upon him with a Shower of Stones, wounded him in the Head, and covered him with Blood. His Guards run away, being oppreſs'd by Numbers; and the Governour would have been left to periſh, if the People had not run in to his Aſſiſtance. Ammonius, one of the Rioters, was arreſted and condemn'd to Puniſhment. Oreſtes wrote to the Court. Cyril on his Part juſtified the Proceedings of the Monks by making a Martyr of the Man, and making his Panegyrick in the Pulpit, who died for such a glorious Action. The Tumult began again some time after, and Cyril was loaded with all the Odium of the Event, in which the famous Hypatia lost her Life, whom this Bishop, jealous of his Reputation, had caus'd to be assassinated.

[m] An. 415.

[n] Socrat. l. 7. c. 13. 14. p. 350, &c.

'Tis in vain to extol Cyril of Alexandria, and to make him one of the principal Saints of the purest Church. Tho' there were nothing else but this Series of Actions in his Life, related by a Man who has endeavour'd to flatter him, I could not forbear saying, That People suffer themselves to be easily dazled in favour of some Men, and Canonize those who have had violent and criminal Passions, instead of a regular Devotion. 'Tis own'd, that Cyril incurr'd Orestes's Hatred, by his Ambition, and Encroachment upon the Authority of the Imperial Officers. And how did he take his Revenge on him, after he had acted the Comedian, in bringing him the Gospel? He causes him to be Assassinated by the Monks he brings down from the Mountain. Is this the Conduct of a Bishop? But he stops not here; he again brings his Officers, who were like so many Murtherers in the Field, against a Philosophical young Lady, who unmercifully kill'd her at a Church-door. Socrates had reason to say, That this Action involv'd Cyril and his Ecclesiasticks in Shame and Confusion. This same Prelate had drawn upon him the People's Hatred; since they always engag'd against him, in spite of their Reverence for Religion, and sacred Persons. How could they esteem an ambitious Prelate, who hired People to clap their hands and applaud his Sermons in publick, as Cyril did, and who afterwards acted the Votary, and crown'd a seditious Monk, who had been punish'd for his Crimes, with Martyrdom? We can't justifie his Conduct against the Jews, since they were not of his Jurisdiction: It belong'd to the Governor to expel 'em the City, if he thought it convenient, and the Bishop was no Judge of their Privileges and Settlements. 'Twas a perfect Highway Robbery, to Head a Rabble, to plunder their Synagogues, and appropriate them to themselves, with their Houses and Effects. Lastly, It was uncharitable to banish People quite naked, who had liv'd there ever since Alexander the Great, under the Protection of Edicts.

X. The same Year [o] that the Jews were banish'd out of Alexandria, Gamaliel bethought himself, Four hundred Years after his Death, to expose them to an Affront at Jerusalem. This ancient Doctor of the Law Appeared by Night to one Lucian a Priest of Gaphargamala, and reveal'd to him, That being turn'd Christian, he had been baptiz'd by the Apostles, with Akiba his youngest Child, whose Learning and Virginity he commended: That he had bury'd St. Stephen at his own Charge, as also Nicodemus, his Nephew, whom the Jews, in spite of his Dissimulation, had scourg'd to the Blood, and so absolutely depriv'd of his Estate, that he had been forced to maintain him in one of his Farms. This Man, coming in the Shape of a Priest, with a long White Beard, and a Mantle thrown over him fasten'd with Precious-Stones of Gold, at the bottom whereof hung Crosses, spoke with Authority, and ask'd Lucian, why their Relicks were so long left in the Grave, since the World was upon the brink of Destruction, through a Deluge of Sins? He Order'd the Bodies of my Lord Stephen, of Akiba, and Nicodemus his Nephew, who were buried with him, to be taken out; and in order to distinguish 'em, he caus'd four Baskets to descend from Heaven, one of which was full of Red Roses, and signify'd St. Stephen the Martyr. The other two were also of Gold, and fill'd with White Roses; because Gamaliel, and his Nephew Nicodemus, were but Confessors. Lastly, The fourth Basket was of Silver; because Akiba, who always liv'd in Celibacy, had not been defiled with any stain of a Woman. Lucian being convinc'd of the Truth, by three Admonions, acquainted John of Jerusalem, who, with the Assistance of Eleutherus Bishop of Jericho, and Eleutherus Bishop of Sebaste, discover'd the holy Bodies. These fat and odoriferous Relicks, as they were taken from the Tomb, cur'd Seventy three Sick Persons; and diffus'd such a pleasant Smell, that People thought themselves in Paradise, because they had never perceiv'd the like. These holy Bodies were carry'd to Jerusalem, with a singing of Hymns; and afterwards they sent Bones, and Ashes, and Teeth, and Arms, and Hands, and intire Bodies, to several Parts of Africa, to Minorca and Spain, to Constantinople, Rome and Pisa, and abundance of Places.

XI. It seems, that the Jews have no Interest in this Discovery: Nevertheless, it would be a great Confusion for 'em, if Gamaliel, one of their Senators, had turn'd Christian, and had reveal'd his Conversion, at a time wherein there was no Dissimulation. The Christians ground themselves upon an ancient Relation, written by Lucian, and quoted, as is thought, by St. Austin, translated by a Cotemporary [p] Author, who sent St. Stephen's Relicks, newly discover'd at Jerusalem, to Spain, and collated upon four Manuscripts of the Vatican. The Father Benedictines have also since produced a new Copy of this Relation, taken from the Abbey of Fleury, which they have join'd to St. Austin's Works. We neither engage in the Party of the Jew or Christian; but we cannot wave observing some Circumstances, that render this Event suspicious or doubtful.

XII. Gamaliel was Preceptor to St. Paul; but to make him the more renown'd, they turn him into a Christian, a Priest, and Patriarch of the Jews. In the mean time, there is not one of these Titles but is contested. We have prov'd, that the Patriarchs began not to appear till after the Ruine of Jerusalem. And tho' they shou'd be more ancient, yet Gamaliel, St. Paul's Preceptor, who gave his Voice in favour of the Apostles, was not President of the Sanhedrin, nor discharg'd the Functions of it. This Office rather belong'd to Nicodemus, whom St. John [q] call'd Prince, or Ruler of the Jews. Lastly, Tho' we could suppose Gamaliel to be President of the Council, yet this would manifest Lucian's Relation to be the more evidently false; for this Patriarch's Eldest Son, who continued incredulous, and succeeded him in his Office, was call'd Simeon; whereas Lucian gives him the Name of Selemias, who is altogether unknown. Gamaliel's Christianity is much more uncertain than his Patriarchship. The Jews assert, It was he, that seeing the Hereticks multiplying in Israel, made an Imprecation against 'em, which they repeat in the Synagogue, and which others attribute to Samuel the Little his Disciple. They are so fully persuaded, that he persevered in Judaism to his death, that they affirm, he was still Patriarch, when he died in the Year 52. and that the Glory of the Faith ended with him. The Evangelists, who have praised his Toleration, and his moderate Advice, about the Apostles, have never mention'd his Christianity. Would St. Luke have so exactly related the Conversion of his Disciple, without intimating that of the Master? St. Paul gloried to the Jews, of being educated at the feet of Gamaliel; which would have exasperated

[o] An. 415. in the Month of December. [p] Baronius, An. 415. p. 371. [q] Joh. iii. 10. Ἄρχων.

exaſperated their Minds, already diſturb'd; if Gamaliel had deſerted the Synagogue and the Law, like himſelf. This Doctor muſt have died in the open Profeſſion of his Religion; ſince the Apoſtle endeavour'd to mollifie the Nation, by crying out, He had been brought up under this Maſter, whom they had in Veneration. For would not the Name of Gamaliel have been odious to the Circumciſed, if he had been Converted, and if his Son [r] Abibas had been ever in the Temple an Aſſociate of St. Paul, teaching the Goſpel with him? Thoſe that make Gamaliel a Chriſtian, confeſs that he Diſſembled, to preſerve his Place in the Council of the Jews: And Bede juſtifies his Diſſimulation, as if it had been innocent, and that his Conduct was authorized by the Apoſtles. But is this a Chriſtianity the Church can do it ſelf an Honour by? And muſt it not be very greedy of Saints, to ſeek 'em in in the Sanhedrin of the Jews? Gamaliel therefore only became a Chriſtian and a Saint, by a Nocturnal Revelation, that happen'd Four hundred Years after his Death. His Prieſthood is ſtill more uncertain than his Chriſtianity: 'Tis only known that he exerciſed this Office, by his Figure, and his Mantle faſten'd with Claſps with Croſſes on 'em. According to this Viſion, he was a Chriſtian Prieſt. But did the ancient Prieſts of the Chriſtian Church wear White-Mantles, with Precious-Stones [s] and Gold, and a Golden-Rod in their Hand?

XIII. The Apparition of Gamaliel, a Prince of the Senate at Jeruſalem, and afterwards a Chriſtian and a Prieſt, ſtrangely ſurprized Lucian, who was half a-ſleep. Salazar [t] makes him a Spaniſh Prieſt in the Service of the Church of Gaphargamala. But if he was a Native of Spain, his Relation would not have been Tranſlated into Latin; for he would rather have Written in his Country Language, than in Greek. This good Prieſt heſitated whether it was an Apparition of the Devil, or came from Heaven; and concluded in his mind, That if the Phantom call'd him but once, it was a Devil that came to tempt him; but if it call'd him thrice, it was a heavenly Apparition. This method of proving and diſtinguiſhing Spirits, is eaſie and extraordinary. Gamaliel thrice repeated, Lucian! Lucian! Lucian! And from that moment the good Prieſt doubted not of his being a Divine Man. However, he obliged St. Gamaliel to return three different Days, during which, he faſted on Bread, Salt and Water. The Saint was angry at this Diffidence; but the Prieſt excuſing himſelf, upon his deſire of being aſſured of the Truth, by three Apparitions, St. Gamaliel thrice repeated, I Pardon you! I Pardon you! I Pardon you! and gave him ſo many Marks of his Power, that Lucian thought him to be a God; I knew every thing, and from whom nothing was hidden. I know, that the Simplicity of Lucian and St. Gamaliel, is compar'd with that of the Evangeliſts and Apoſtles, who have reveal'd the Myſteries of Faith; but that Parallel is equally falſe and odious.

XIV. Gamaliel's Revelation conſiſted chiefly in Four things. 1. It relates the Hiſtory of his Wife, which he recounts to her Burial, and that of his Son, who continued in Unbelief; as if God reveal'd to the Saints in Heaven, that part of their Family was miſerable in Hell. For if Gamaliel's Wife died before him, his Son muſt ſurvive him; and he could not learn his Damnation, but by a particular Revelation of God, which muſt diſturb his Felicity. 2. He circumſtantiates the Converſion of his Son Abibas and of Nicodemus, and affirms that he was Baptiz'd by the Apoſtles. It has been a long time after conjectured, that theſe Apoſtles were St. Peter and St. John; and Photius has made a glorious Martyr of this Head of the Diſſembling Nicodemites. The Jews might exclude this Prince from the Council, and might even ſcourge him till the Blood came. But had the Jews, who were ſubject to the Romans, the Power of Plundering and Confiſcating the Eſtate of a conſiderable Particular, and Prince of the Nation, ſo as not to leave him wherewithal to ſubſiſt, and that his Uncle Gamaliel was oblig'd to maintain him in one of his Farms? This Circumſtance, tho' reveal'd by Gamaliel, who makes himſelf Uncle to Nicodemus, gives a Blow to the Story. St. Stephen's Burial, affords us another evidently falſe; for he aſſerts, that this Martyr's Body continued, by Order of the Jews, expos'd Night and Day to Wild Beaſts, in the City or Place call'd Exapolis; and that God not ſuffering any Beaſt to touch it, he ſent the Faithful, who liv'd mix'd with the Jews at Jeruſalem, and caus'd it to be bury'd, at his own Charge, ſecretly in his Country-Houſe. Gamaliel was not a Chriſtian, when he Voted for the Apoſtles in the Council; ſince he ſtill diſſembled at St. Stephen's Martyrdom, and cauſed other Perſons to bury him in ſecret. Beſides, this Martyr's Body did not remain expos'd to the Wild Beaſts Night and Day. We know neither the Place nor the City Exapolis, with ſix Gates, where his Body muſt have been expos'd. This is one of thoſe Falſhoods, by which an Impoſtor frequently betrays himſelf. St. Luke ſays, That after they had Martyr'd St. Stephen, devout men carried him to his burial, and made great lamentation over him. He neither ſpeaks of his Body being expos'd Night and Day, nor of the Miracle of Providence preventing the Wild Beaſts, nor of the City Exapolis, where the Miracle was wrought, nor of Gamaliel, who ordered the Funeral. All the Honour of it is given to ſome private Perſons. The Church being well pleas'd to lament ſuch a glorious Death, it is ſtrange that Gamaliel ſhould come from Heaven Four hundred Years after, to reveal his good Works, which the ſacred Hiſtorian had paſs'd over in ſilence. Gamaliel does not forget, that he had order'd all the Charge to be put to his Accompt, and promis'd to reimburſe the Expences. But why did not he ſpeak of the Pomp of this Funeral, which St. Jerom and the Legendaries deſcribe in lofty Terms, nor even of a little Ship, upon which the Body was convey'd from Jeruſalem to Gaphargamala. This Saint, hitherto unknown, reveals the preſſing neceſſity of taking his Body from the Grave; becauſe the world is upon the very brink of ruine, through the multitude of ſins that were then committed. And there was already a terrible Drought, which ſcorch'd up the Earth, and threaten'd it with abſolute Ruine.

Et [u] tunc arida, vel ſiti peruſta
Accepit pluvias diu negatas
Tellus germinibus ſoli creandis.

Moreover, it was neceſſary to take theſe Bodies from their Graves, that, by their Prayers, the Gate might be open'd for the Mercy of God. Is it, that the Gate of Divine Mercy is ſhut, when the Bodies of Saints reſt quietly in their Graves? Do the Saints that Pray, never make their Interceſſions, but when their Relicks are drawn from the bowels of the Earth, and expos'd to the ſight of the People? Is it poſſible the World ſhould be threaten'd with impending Ruine, in the Year 415; and that ſo ſmall a thing ſhould retard it, till our time, near Thirteen hundred Years. The Drought which then ſcorch'd up the Earth was not very dangerous; for Lucian had this Viſion the Twenty-fifth of December, at which time the Rains are not very neceſſary, nor the Sun over-ſcorching.

[r] Epiſtola Luciani ad omnem Eccleſ. c. 2. [s] Ibid. [t] Tamayo Salazar Commemoratio Sanctorum Hiſp. t. vi. p. 587.
[u] Notker. Hymn. 2. de Revelat. Corpor. SS. Steph. apud Caniſ. t. vi. p. 772, 773.

XV. Laſtly the Accounts, tho' written by the ſame Author, are not conſiſtent about the manner the Holy Bodies were found. I will not quote a Sermon that has beeen publiſh'd in the Name of Baſil of Seleucia, as if it had been ſpoken in the Year 458. wherein St. Stephen is introduced ſpeaking to John of Jeruſalem, and diſcovering to him the Place where he was buried, whilſt the Prieſt Lucian aſſumes all the Honour of the Viſion to himſelf; but this ſame Author ſays in one place that before they opened the Ground, he gave Notice of it to John of Jeruſalem, who ſent for Two Biſhops, and came along with 'em to the Place. He contradicts himſelf, ſince he gave no Notice to the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, till after the Diſcovery of the Relicks. Beſides, it is ſtrange that theſe Saints would appear at all under John's Epiſcopacy, an intimate Friend of Pelagius, and whoſe Doctrine was very much ſuſpected. He had no need of ſending in queſt of Biſhops, ſince they were with him in the unhappy Council of Dioſpolis, where Pelagius was abſolved. He gives the ſame Name of Eleutherus to both theſe Biſhops. But Cardinal Noris has obſerved this to be a Fault of the Tranſcriber, and with good Reaſon; for in the Manuſcript of Fleury [x] there is a Diſtinction of Names. But at the ſame time he changes their Biſhopricks; for Eleutherus was Biſhop of Sebaſte, and Euthonius of Jericho. There is another groſſer Fault in the Inſcription, that was ingraven in very eminent Characters; in which were read [y] theſe Names, Keayea, Celiel, Apaan, Dardan. The Author ſays that Pope John [z] interpreted theſe Words in his Preſence, the Servant of God, Nicodemus and Gamaliel. He might ſay what he pleas'd, ſince it is a barbarous and unknown Language; but we have Reaſon to ſay, there is no Appearance in it of the Names of Stephen, Abibas, Gamaliel, and Nicodemus. Indeed the Manuſcript of Fleury relates the Inſcription thus, [a] Celeliel, Naaſon, Gamaliel, Abibael: However of four Names here is one. We may too, by aſſiſting the Letter, diſcover the Son of Gamaliel. But what ground is there to conjecture, that St. Stephen is Celeliel? 'Tis, ſay they, becauſe חלל Chalal ſignifies to dance. Joy may denote a Crown, and the Crown is the Name of St. Stephen [b]. Nicodemus may alſo be call'd Naſoan, from Two Hebrew Words, Natſak Gnam נעח עם. But tho' theſe Two Etymologies were as genuine as they are unworthy of their Author, how ſhall we find Gamaliel, Nicodemus and Abiba, in Keayea, Apaan, Dardan? And tho' we could diſcover here the Names of theſe Three pretended Saints, yet an unconquerable Difficulty would ſtill remain, ſince one and the ſame Writer, and an Eye-witneſs, relates the ſame Inſcription ſo differently, which ought never to vary. Beſides, the Inſcription of the old Manuſcript, which we are tempted to prefer, is more ridiculous than that of Fleury publiſhed by the Benedictines.

XVI. I will add nothing concerning the different Removals of their Relick after this Diſcovery, the Falſhood whereof is ſo manifeſt, that the Authors [c] who dote moſt on this Event, dare not diſown it. I ſhall only obſerve, that they ſhew at Piſa near the great Altar, the Tombs of Gamaliel, Abiba and Nicodemus. St. Luke is made to ſay, that the firſt was a good Chriſtian and Teacher of the Goſpel, and Nicodemus is rank'd among the Martyrs, as had been done by Photius, tho' the Revelation makes him die in his Uncle's Eſtate:

Hoc [d] in Sarcophago requieſcunt corpora ſacra
Sanctorum, quorum nomina dicta trium.
Sanctus Gamaliel, Abybas & Nicodemus
In ſimul ipſe pater, filius, atque nepos.
Gamaliel, Divi Pauli diſcalus olim,
Doctor & excellens Iſraelita fuit,
Conſilii magni fideique per omnia cultor,
Narrat ut Hiſtoriæ ſcriptor Apoſtolicæ.
Magna in Evangelio præconia ſunt Nicodemi.
Denique Martyr obit.
Hoc Epigramma legens, horum ſuffragia quære;
Teque recommendans, poſce ſalutis opem.

All theſe Reflections neceſſitate us to reſtore Gamaliel and his Son to the Jews, in ſpite of his pretended Revelation, and his very fat and odoriferous Relicks; in ſpite of the Miracles they have produced, and the Effects they expect at Piſa, and other Places from their Interceſſion; for it does not appear, that they abandon'd the Synagogue to turn Chriſtians, nor that this great Doctor of the Law came Four Hundred Years after his Death to reveal, that he ought to be number'd among the Saints.

XVII. A little after [e] a more real Calamity happen'd to 'em in the Empire; for the Jewiſh Patriarchs way of living raiſed Murmurs and Complaints againſt 'em, and the Taxes they levied upon the Nation, occaſioned their Fall. We have ſaid enough [f] of the Privilege the Patriarchs had of raiſing this Tribute; let us add, that Theodoſius and Valentinian deprived them of it, and applied this Impoſt, that was made upon their Subjects, to the Imperial Treaſury. Honorius [g] alſo publiſh'd at the End of the Fourth Century, a Law upon the ſame Subject. But beſides that it reſpected only his Empire, it was only executed during the Diviſion of the Two Brothers, which was then very great.

Geminam quid dividis aulam,
Conariſque pios odiis committere fratres?
Te magis, ah! demens! veterem ſi reſpicis artem, Conciliare decet, ſaid Claudian to Eutropius, whom he conſider'd as the Cauſe of the Diviſion. Honorius [h] revok'd his Law Five Years after the making it, and reſtored the Patriarch to all his Privileges, ſo that he then enjoy'd 'em over all the Empire; and therefore St. Jerom, who liv'd at that time, had reaſon to ſay, that this Cuſtom was practiſed in his time. Baronius, who highly exclaims againſt theſe Tributes of the Jews, thinks that the Poet Rutilius alluded to 'em in his Verſes.

Atque utinam nunquam Judæa ſubacta fuiſſet
Pompeii bellis, imperioque Titi!
Latius exciſæ peſtis contagia ſerpunt,
Victoreſque ſuos natio victa premit.

But he is in the wrong; for not to examine, whether the Poet intimates the Chriſtians ſcattered over all the Univerſe, and who came out of Judaiſm; rather than the Jews, who were not formidable, particularly at Rome where he wrote, it can't be ſaid that they oppreſs'd their Maſters by theſe Taxes; for the Tribute was not raiſed upon the Heathen nor Chriſtian, but upon the Jews; and the Patriarch extended his Authority no farther than his own Nation. They grew weary of ſuffering this Tax, and the Emperors wholly appropriated it to themſelves. Photius thinks too, that the Primates

[x] App. Aug. t. 7. MS. Ulimmerianum & Floriacenſe, p. 6, 7. [y] Ep. Luciani MS. Ulimerianum, p. 7. [z] He calls him alſo Biſhop of Jeruſalem. [a] MS. Floriacenſe, p. 8. [b] Tillemont Notes upon St. Stephen, n. 4. t. 4. pag. 311. [c] Tillemont ibid. Note 7. p. 313. See alſo Salazar Commemoratio Sanctorum Hiſpan. t. vi. not. p. 588. & Ep. Anaſtaſii ad Landulfum in App. Auguſt. t. 7. p. 10. [d] Apud Wagenſeil in Sotah Miſnæ, t. v. p. 314, 315. [e] An. 429. [f] Book xi. c. 1. [g] An. 399. [h] An. 404.

who

who ſucceeded the Patriarchs, were obliged to be reſponſible, and to bring this Money into the Treaſury. Laſtly Theodoſius deſtroy'd this Patriarchal Dignity in the Year 429, unleſs any one had rather ſay, it was aboliſhed by the Jews, tired with maintaining ſo great a Lord; which is not probable, for this Office did honour to the Nation, and to be a Center of its Unity in the Roman Empire.

XVIII. Nicephorus [i] relates, that the Year that Acacius became Biſhop of Conſtantinople, the Diſputes about Arrianiſm being then at their Height, Two Biſhops challeng'd each other to throw themſelves into a burning Pile, to diſcover the Truth. The Fire being kindled, the Arrian Biſhop was afraid; but the Orthodox boldly faced the Danger, and Preached upon the flaming Pile, without loſing ſo much as the Edges of his Cloaths. Such another Prodigy is reported in behalf of a Jew, who [k] was condemn'd in Hatred to his Religion. A Tumult was raiſed by the Children at Conſtantinople; but the Head of the Synagogue was ſuſpected to have a Hand in it. He was put to the Rack, and in the Height of his Tortures, he ſtill call'd the God of St. Sergius to his Aſſiſtance, continually crying, St. Sergius, thou knoweſt whether I am guilty. The Judges without any regard to theſe Symptoms of Chriſtianity, which they thought pretended, unmercifully condemned him to be burnt. But they were ſurprized to ſee Two Gentlemen in the midſt of the Flames cloathed in white, who hinder'd the Jew from being burnt; and the People moved by the Miracle, ruſh'd into the Fire and fetch'd out the Accuſed, who being Baptiz'd with his Two Children, ſold all his Eſtate, and built a Temple to St. Sergius in the very Place where the Pile had been made. He cauſed himſelf to be ſhaved, and lived as a Monk with his Children, who follow'd his Example.

XIX. One would think, there was no doubt of the Truth of a Miracle, in acknowledgement whereof Monuments have been built, which ſtill remain; but this Monument mentioned by Nicephorus, affords an Argument againſt his Narration. Sergius and Bacchus muſt have ſuffered under Dioclefian; but they are known only from Acts full of Lyes, that bring their Martyrdom in great queſtion. But without engaging in this Diſcuſſion, 'tis certain, that the Emperor Juſtinian built the Temple or Monaſtery we ſpeak of; and therefore it could not have been done [l] by a Jew long before. This Prince, who thought himſelf indebted to 'em for his Life, becauſe in an Apparition, they had convinced the Emperor Anaſtaſius of his Innocence, Conſecrated many Temples to theſe Two Martyrs. He Conſecrated one at Conſtantinople, near the Imperial Palace, and the Church of the Apoſtles. Zonaras ſays, that Juſtinian pull'd down the Houſe he lived in before he was Emperor, and built St. Sergius's-Church there. Cedrenus adds, that he Conſecrated to it all the Eſtate he poſſeſs'd whilſt he lived as a private Perſon, and that he made a Monaſtery there, which became very famous; and Procopius's [m] Commentator has produced Verſes from the Vatican ſaying the ſame thing. Juſtinian, to teſtify his Devotion to Sergius, has honour'd him with this magnificent Structure:

Ἡμέτερος δὲ
Ἐυσεβὴν σκήπτοχ☉ Ἰουστινιανὸς ἄεξων
Σεργιὸν ἀγλαΐηπι δόμῳ θεραπόντα γεραίρει.

This [n] Houſe and Monaſtery were not built then till the Sixth Century, when Juſtinian was Maſter of the Empire. Here it was Pope Vigilius ſought a Sanctuary againſt Juſtinian's Anger, who could not bear this Pope's Excommunicating Mennas. Mr. du Cange has thought that the Pope lived there, and that this Monaſtery at that time belong'd to the Biſhops of Rome; but he is miſtaken, for the Donation was not made to the Latins ſo ſuddenly. But the Artful and Politick Pope preferr'd this Church before all others, becauſe he thought Juſtinian, who had a great Veneration for St. Sergius, would not violate a Temple and an Altar he had built. 'Twas a long time before the Emperors ſuffer'd the Service to be made in Latin, and the Pope's Reſident to live there. Theſe Remarks are a manifeſt Proof that the Church and Monaſtery of St. Sergius at Conſtantinople were not built by a Jew, miraculouſly deliver'd from the Fire; which gives Nicephorus's Relation ſuch a violent blow, that it muſt be rejected as fabulous.

[i] Nicephor. Hiſt l. 15. c. 23. t. 2. p. 624. [k] An. 471. [l] Ibid. [m] Alamannus in Hiſt. Arcan. Proc. c. 10. p. 124. [n] Procop. de Ædif. l. 1. c. 4. p. 13. t. 1.

CHAP. XVI.

The State of the Jews in the Weſtern Empire during the Fifth Century, and of the Cœlicolæ.

I. An equitable Law of Honorius in Point of the Jews. II. He deprives them of the Office of Agents. III. Different Opinions concerning the Jewiſh Samaritan and Eſſenian Cœlicolæ. IV. The Schamain, a particular Sect of the Jews in Egypt. V. An Explication of this Sect. VI. A different Opinion about the Cœlicolæ. VII. They were Donatiſts. VIII. Why they were called Cœlicolæ. IX. This Sect ſhort-liv'd. X. It ſymbolized in nothing with the Synagogue. XI. The Jews numerous at Minorca, where they exercis'd the chief Offices. XII. Dreams, by which Severus is determin'd to convert them. XIII. Miracles that happen'd. XIV. Violences that were uſed, proved from Severus's Account. XV. The State of the Jews under the Vandals in Africa. XVI. The Arguments made uſe of to convert them. XVII. Valentinian preſerves their Privileges. XVIII. Theodorick, King of the Goths, protects them.

I. HOnorius, who poſſeſs'd the other Part of the Empire, met with a great many Rebellions. Never Prince maſter'd ſo many Tyrants. And therefore we ſee him in moſt of his Medals, holding a Labarum in one Hand, a Victory in the other, and trampling a Rebel under his Feet. St. Chryſoſtom, who derived this Prince's Glory from hence, was not well skill'd in Heroes; for it is moſt commonly the Weakneſs or Cruelty of the Governour that excites Rebellions; and 'tis no great Honour for a Prince to ſee his Subjects vanquiſh'd, and in Chains at his Feet. The Zealots perſuade themſelves, that his Victories were the Recompence of his Vehemence againſt the Sectaries. 'Tis true he ſometimes tormented them; but yet he had a great deal of Equity for the Jews who lived in his Dominions. There is even a Law preſerv'd, made upon their Account, which is an Honour to him; for he declares [a] "That the Glory

[a] An. 412. Cod. Theod. t. 16. l. 20. p. 237.

"of

" of a good Prince, conſiſts in permitting every " Society quietly to enjoy the Privileges they have " acquired; and, That tho' a Religion is not ap- " approv'd by a Sovereign, yet he ought to pre- " ſerve its Privileges." Purſuant to theſe Maxims, he Decreed, That no body could Deſtroy or Appropriate the Synagogues, with Impunity. He even forbad them to Violate the Sabbath, under pretence of the Publick Good and Service of the State; becauſe the reſt of the Week was ſufficient to ſatisfie the Neceſſities of the Empire.

II. Nevertheleſs, as he would not give new Encouragements to this Religion, he forbad the Building of Synagogues, and deprived the Profeſſors of it of the Offices in the Militia, and of Agents. The Agents were diſtinguiſh'd in the Militia, having three ſorts of Employs: To raiſe Taxes in the Provinces; to convey Bread into the Magazines and Army, for the Subſiſtence of the Troops; and to be Spies and Couriers to the Princes. Auguſtus had appointed theſe Inſpectors [b] in every Province and Legion: They brought an Account of all that was done to the Prince, and to this Purpoſe, they had the Diſpoſal of the Publick Carriages. Honorius deprived the Jews of this Employ, who were at that time Commiſſion'd to furniſh the Magazines, as they are at this day in many States.

III. This Prince more ſeverely reſtrain'd the Sect of the Cælicolæ, or the Worſhippers of Heaven, who began to appear in his Reign. It has been thought, that theſe were the Jews who have often been reproach'd with the Worſhipping of Heaven, and who took the Name of Cælicolæ, or Heven-Worſhippers, to avoid the other which was more odious.

Quidam [c] ſortiti, metuentem Sabbatha patrem, Nil præter Nubes & Cæli Numen [d] adorant.

Judæus [e] licet porcinum numen adoret,
Et Cœli ſummas advocet auriculas.

The Jews gave Occaſion to theſe Reproaches, becauſe they had no Image of the Deity in their Temples: They Pray'd to God in open Places, and on flat Roofs: They neglect the Temples, (ſays Tertullian) and go to make their Prayers upon the Banks in the Air. Laſtly, They Swore by the Heaven. 'Tis ſaid, that this more particularly agrees with the Samaritans, who had formerly an Oratory near Napolouſſe, built in the form of a Theatre, where they went to pay their Devotions. Beſides, they had a Baptiſm like the Sectaries we ſpeak of. Laſtly, They were call'd Cæleſtes, or Cælicolæ, becauſe they read the Bible in Hebrew, as it came down to 'em from Heaven *. Scaliger, who has often varied upon this Matter, thought it was a Sect of the Eſſenes, that bore the Name of Cælicolæ, or Angels, by reaſon of the Angelical Life they led. And thus, in the lower Ages, the Monks have been intitled Cælicolæ, as if they had led the Life of Heavenly Citizens whilſt they were upon Earth.

IV. There was † another Sect in this Nation, call'd Schamain, or the Heavens. Benjamin of Tudela found it in Egypt; which Name has ſo much reſemblance with that of Cælicolæ, that 'tis very probable, it was a Remainder of thoſe who were Condemn'd in the Theodoſian Code. It has been [f] further maintain'd, that they were Apoſtates, who forſook Chriſtianity and turn'd Jews. Laſtly, Cunæus [g] has thought the Cælicolæ to be half-Chriſtians, that Judaized.

V. I have thrown all theſe Opinions together; becauſe they may be all confuted at once, by one general Reflexion. For Honorius looks upon theſe Hereticks, as People that were but juſt ſprung up in Africa, and whoſe Doctrins he was yet unacquainted with. This Character can't be applied to the Jews, nor Samaritans, nor Eſſenes, nor to the Apoſtates that return'd to Judaiſm, whoſe Doctrins, and Worſhip, and Auſterities could not be unknown to the Emperor. Beſides, the Schamain, which Benjamin [h] of Tudela found in Egypt, were not Cælicolæ, nor ſo much as Sectaries. This is eaſie to be obſerv'd by a Man that reads this Traveller with any attention; for he diſtinguiſhes two different Synagogues he ſaw at Grand Cairo, one whereof belong'd to the Jews of the Irack, and the other to the Jews Schamain. As the firſt Name is that of a Province from which theſe Jews came, viz. the Babalonian Irack, from whence they went into Egypt; the ſecond Name muſt alſo ſignifie a Province from whence the Jews who poſſeſſed that Synagogue proceeded; and Syria is actually call'd Scham, and the Syrians, Schamain; or rather, there needed no more, than to forſake Arias Montanus's Verſion, and to follow that of the Emperor Conſtantine, which removes all the Difficulty. Indeed, Benjamin makes no difference between theſe two Synagogues, except in their manner of dividing their Reading, and the Sections of the Law, which makes no Variation in the Worſhip.

VI. An ingenious [i] Critick has departed from all the reſt, by obſerving, that the Cælicolæ are accus'd by Honorius, of diſturbing the Sacraments of the Church: Wherefore he ſuſpected, they were Baptized in the Name of Heaven, inſtead of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt; and by Heaven, they underſtand the God that reigns in it. This was the Jews Style long ago. They ſay ſtill, that the Name of Heaven is profan'd; that the Fear of Heaven is neceſſary; that the Aſſembly inſtituted by Heaven ſhall remain; and 'tis God they mean by all theſe Expreſſions.

VII. Since nothing but Conjectures can be offered about a Sect ſo little known, let us obſerve, that theſe Cælicolæ, Worſhippers of Heaven, were in Africa; for 'twas to the Governors of this Province that the Emperor Directed his Orders againſt them. They were alſo Schiſmaticks, for they had their particular Aſſemblies, and Honorius was for reducing them within the Pale of the Church. Theſe Sectaries attack'd the Sacraments of the Catholick Faith, and the Worſhip and Veneration of God. All which is an Argument, that they were real Donatiſts; for theſe latter impugn'd the Sacraments of the Church, by Re-baptizing thoſe who had been Baptized by the Orthodox, and by the addition of ſome Ceremonies. And indeed, St. Auſtin [k] ſays, that Major, one of the Cælicolæ, was ſearch'd for, who had invented a new Baptiſm among them, and had ſeduced a great many People. Here you have the Cælicolæ in Africa; their Principal was Major of the Sect of the Donatiſts, with whom St. Auſtin would have engag'd in a Conference, had he not been call'd away upon the Ordination of a Biſhop. The Baptiſm Major had invented was new, and little known: This Man had ſet up new Congregations, and miſ-led a great many People by this New Sacrament. St. Auſtin's Paſſage ſo perfectly agrees with Honorius's Declaration, that one ſeems to be a Comment of the other.

VIII. They departed alſo from the Worſhip of God; for we know that the Donatiſts Swore by their Martyrs, as by the only Religion, ſays Optatus [l]. They Swore by the Gray-hairs and by the Joints of [b] Salmaſ. in Spartian. p. 28, &c. [c] Juvenal. Sat. 14. [d] Or, Lumen. [e] Petron. in Catalect. * Petit. Var. Lect. l. 2. † Druſius. [f] Baronius. [g] Cun. de R. H. l. 3. c. 6. [h] Benjamin de Tudel. Iter. p. 114. [i] Petit. Var. Lect. l. 2. c. 11. [k] Auguſt. Ep. 162. t. 2. p. 479. [l] Optat. l. 3. Auguſtin. contra Parm. l. 3. c. 6. Baluſ. Miſc. l. 2. p. 25.

theſe

theſe pretended Martyrs. Laſtly, They demonſtrated their Veneration for 'em, by admitting their Deciſions, as ſo many Oracles. This is enough to make 'em paſs for Cælicolæ, ſince the Saints are regarded as the Inhabitants of Heaven, and they Swore by 'em; which was not done in the Chriſtian Church. 'Twas a thing unheard of by the Orthodox, that a Man ſhould Swear by the Gray-Hairs of a Martyr. Perhaps they Swore alſo by the Heaven, who refuſing to prononnce the Name of God in their Oaths, cry'd, By Heaven, the thing is ſo; By Heaven, thou haſt made me remember it: and this Conformity of Oaths, has caus'd 'em to be confounded.

IX. This Sect is little known, becauſe it continued but a ſhort time. And as the Donatiſts ſoon vaniſh'd after Honorius, the Cælicolæ, who made but a very ſmall part of theſe Schiſmaticks, quickly diſappear'd; and therefore we only find their Name in St. Auſtin, and the Theodoſian Code. We find no Track of 'em among the Ancients, who have given the Catalogue of Hereſies; and almoſt all the Moderns have forgot 'em, aſwell as the Ancients.

X. Laſtly, They muſt not be confounded with the Jews; becauſe we find them in the Theodoſian Code under the ſame Title, and included in the ſame Law. Godefroy has judiciouſly obſerved, that the Law ought to be diſtinguiſh'd into Two Articles, one whereof relates to the Cælicolæ, who were obliged to return to the Church before a Year's end, under pain of being confounded with other Hereticks; and the other forbids the Jews the making of Proſelytes.

'Tis true, that this learned Commentator thought the Cælicolæ had a Worſhip common with the Jews, who worſhip'd the Heavens and the Stars; but ſince this Worſhip of the Ancient Idolaters was aboliſh'd among the Jews, and the Donatiſts had a Baptiſm, and a peculiar Worſhip for their Martyrs, there is no need of confounding two different Religions. And therefore we diſcharge the Synagogue from this new Crime, of which it hath hitherto been thought convicted by the Laws of Honorius.

XI. [m] Betwixt Africa and Spain is the Iſland of Minorca, in which were two conſiderable Cities; one, [n] where the Biſhop reſided, was inacceſſible to the Jews; when they went to enter it, they were ſtruck with Lightning, or ſeized with ſome violent Diſtemper: And for the ſame reaſon, there were neither Wolves nor Wild Beaſts there; and the Serpents, which were very numerous there, loſt their Venome. On the contrary, in the other City, call'd at preſent Port-Mahon, the Jews were ſo conſiderable, that tho' it was ſubject to the Emperor Honorius, whoſe Laws we have reported, yet they arrived to be Counts, and exerciſed all Civil Dignities: For Theodoſius, who was Doctor of the Law, and Head of the Synagogue, bore the firſt rank among the Chriſtians, becauſe he had paſs'd through all the Offices. Severus [o] becoming Biſhop of the Iſland, reſolved to convert this Nation, which was too potent and numerous in his Dioceſe. The Voyage of Oroſius, who came from Judæa loaden with the Relicks of St. Stephen, to carry 'em into Spain, put him upon this Deſign; for upon the Approach of the Saint, People found themſelves inflamed with the Fire that the Lord came to kindle upon Earth; and they began to diſpute with the Jews in Houſes, and even in publick places.

XII. Severus was confirm'd in this Deſign by Dreams, which the Author thinks himſelf obliged to recount, becauſe St. Luke has related that of St. Paul, who ſaw a Macedonian by Night, deſiring him to come into his Country. Severus ſaw a Widow Woman conjuring him to ſow her Field. This Widow was the Synagogue ſeparated from her God, who deſired to be inſtructed by the Biſhop. The Rabbin alſo heard a Voice in a Dream crying to him, there was a Lion in the place where he went; which Lion was that of the Tribe of Judah. The Jews, who were afraid of this Conference, would not enter into the Church of the Chriſtians, for fear of being defiled on the Sabbath. And therefore Severus reſolved to go to the Synagogue, attended with a great Croud of People. The Jewiſh Women waited for 'em, and began the Combat. The Chriſtians had no longer Patience, when they perceived they had hidden Arms, and provided Stones in the Synagogue to knock 'em on the Head. They betook themſelves to Arms likewiſe, and overturn'd the Synagogue, ſaving only the Books and the Money. Upon this Execution the Biſhop returned to the Church to return Thanks to God for the happy Succeſs of his Journey. Abundance of Jews came thither. Reuben was the firſt-born of Jacob; for he was converted before the reſt. But Theodorus was to be humbled, who was the Head of the Synagogue, and upon whom was repos'd all the Confidence of the Nation. Reuben flatter'd him with the Hopes of ſeveral Points of Honour; as to ſit with the Biſhop and Clergy, whilſt the others ſtood. But what contributed moſt to his Converſion, was a Sentence ill-underſtood. Reuben cried aloud, Theodorus, believe in Jeſus Chriſt. But God changing either the Auditor's Ears, or the Sound of this Word, all the Nation imagined, that Reuben pronounced, Theodorus has believed. They mutinied againſt him, and call'd him a Deſerter. What haſt thou done Theodorus? cry'd the Women in tears, without attending to what he ſaid. Theodorus finding himſelf deſpiſed by ſome and courted by others, turned Chriſtian. He promiſed to aſcend the Pulpit in three Days, and to make a ſolemn Abjuration, which ſhould bring over thoſe of his Nation. In the mean time many embraced Chriſtianity. Thoſe that were retired from the City into the Caves, found themſelves forced to pronounce theſe Words, Chriſt in thy Name. They attempted to ſwear, and to ſpeak Obſcenities, in order to diſtract this Thought; but they ſtill pronounced the ſame thing, whether they would or no.

XIII. Miracles accompliſhed their Converſion; for the Rain fell from Heaven as often as a Jew came to be converted. They ſaw round the Church a Globe of Light. There fell a ſmall Hail, which was a Manna ſweeter than Honey. The Cloud alſo appear'd again; God working Miracles like thoſe that were ſeen upon their Departure from Egypt, in order to acquaint 'em, that he deliver'd 'em from a Slavery more ſevere and fatal than that of Pharaoh. The Water of the Caves, in which ſome obſtinate Women had hid themſelves, had alſo the Sweetneſs of Honey. Such a Number of Miracles deſtroy'd the Infidelity of the Jews who were all converted in eight days time, aud chang'd their Synagogue into a Church.

XIV. This Event is related by Severus Biſhop of Minorca, an Eye-witneſs, by whoſe Miniſtry theſe numerous Converſions were made. However this Severus is only known by the Letter which goes by his Name, which lay concealed, till it was drawn out from the Regiſters of the Vatican. Freculphus [p] ſays indeed, that ſo many Books were written upon the Effects produced by St. Stephen's Relicks brought into Spain by Oroſius, that it was Proverbially ſaid, he that boaſts he has read 'em all, has lyed. But theſe Books muſt have been very bad,

[m] An. 428. [n] Jammona. [o] Epiſtola Severi ad omnem Eccleſiam, de virtutibus ad Judæorum converſionem factis, cap. 2, &c.
[p] Freculph. Chron. t. 2. l. 5. c. 12. p. 634.

ſince

ſince of ſo great a Number, there is hardly any remaining. Beſides it can't be doubted, but that this Biſhop imploy'd Sedition and Violence; for Converſions not only are always ſuſpected when they are made in general [q] in a little time; but the Suſpicion ought to be twice as great, with particular Relation to the Jews ſo ſtrongly conceited with their Law and Religion. Indeed Severus has not diſguiſed the matter, that many conſiderable Perſons betook themſelves to flight, and hid themſelves in Caves, from whence they came not out but upon the approach of Death occaſion'd by Famine. Why ſhould they ſeek Sanctuary among the Rocks, and run the risk of Death, if the People had expreſs'd no Fury, nor the Biſhop any Violence? He owns, that they put themſelves to Sea to leave their Country and Eſtates: This is not uſed to be done when People have nothing to fear. Laſtly he introduces one Galileus, exclaiming, I can no longer live with you other Jews; for the Chriſtians Hatred is ſo violent that they would kill me: I will go to Church to avoid Death, and ſave my life. There is no need of bringing Miracles on the Stage for ſuch kind of Converſions; Fear being ſufficient to effect them. Let it be only obſerv'd, that theſe Miracles are very ill contrived; and if we judg'd by 'em of Severus's Senſe, they would give us but a bad Opinion of it; for the Manna and the Cloud that were renew'd again, were fitter to confirm their Bigottry to the Law of Moſes, than to deſtroy it. And of what Uſe were thoſe Drops of Rain, which made thoſe who ſaw 'em fall, cry, A Jew is going to be converted? Baronius not only confeſſes that Violence was uſed; but that this Example ſo edify'd the People and the Biſhops, that they employ'd the ſame Expedient in other Places; and Matters would have been carried farther, if the Princes had not put a ſtop to 'em.

XV. The Eruption of the Vandals a cruel People, and who had no Notion of Toleration in Point of Religion, was very likely to create them new Troubles. But yet it is probable, they brought upon this Nation only ſuch Confuſions, as are inevitable in great Revolutions; for we find in St. Auſtin's Works ſeveral Tracts compoſed againſt the Jews, whilſt the Arrians reign'd in Africa, which ſhew that their Condition was not grown more hard nor unhappy, than in the other Parts of the Empire.

In the Plea of the Synagogue againſt the Chriſtian Church, written by a Lawyer of that time, the Synagogue alledges, "[r] That ſhe is neither a Slave "nor the Servant of the Chriſtians, ſince they are "not committed Priſoners; and inſtead of wearing "Irons, and other Marks of Slavery, they were "left the Liberty of Sailing and Merchandizing." The Vandals therefore promis'd them their Liberty of profeſſing their Religion and Trading. But on the other hand the Church anſwers her, "That ſhe "is obliged to pay Tribute to the Chriſtians; that "a Jew can't pretend to the Empire, nor become a "Count or Governour of a Province; that he can't "enter into the Senate nor the Camp; and that "he is not even received at good Tables; and "that if he be left the Liberty of getting his "Livelihood, 'tis only to prevent his dying with "Hunger.

XVI. From the other Works, that go by St. Auſtin's Name, we learn, that [s] all ſorts of Arguments were then made uſe of to convince them. They proved Jeſus Chriſt by the Expreſſion of Lot, who ſeeing the Angels, ſaid to 'em; [t] My Lord, Behold now thy Servant hath found grace in thy ſight, as if he had diſcover'd a God with the Angels. 'Tis true the LXX have tranſlated it in the ſingular, My Lord; but 'tis alſo certain, that the Hebrew Word [u] is equivocal, and that the Chaldee Paraphraſt, who muſt have known the force of it, has tranſlated it My Lords. But yet, as if the Victory was infallible, he cries out: "Away with you Jews, be gone "ye Arrians, and Sabellians. you ſee nothing here; "I ſee all: I ſee two of 'em; and I find them e-"qual: yet I pray but to one, becauſe I divide "not the Father from the Son." This is very declamatory; but yet is nothing in compariſon of the Author [x], according to whom Nebuchadnezzar is made an Inſpired Perſon, who diſcover'd the Son of God in the Furnace, and who finds him in this Verſe of Virgil.

Jam nova progenies cælo dimittitur alto;

as well as in the Acroſticks, of the Name of Jeſus attributed to the Sybils.

XVII. Valentinian confirm'd all their Privileges at Rome, and in the reſt of the Empire under his Obedience; he left the Synagogues remaining that had been built in the preceding Reigns; but at the ſame time he oppoſed Innovations; and underſtanding they were building a Temple, he cauſed it to be pulled down and fin'd the Undertaker. When the Empire chang'd its Maſter, and the Goths ſeized on Italy, the Jews ſtill found Protection from theſe barbarous Kings.

XVIII. Theodoric defended them againſt the Inſults of the People and Churchmen. He followed the Maxims infuſed into him by his Secretary Caſſiodorus, of forcing no body; becauſe all Violence in point of Religion is criminal. This Prince often repreſented to 'em, their exceſſive love of riches and a temporal Reſt, whilſt they loſt Immortality. But he would not have 'em driven into this Road by Violence, ſince they equally ruined their Salvation, when they don't enter it with their whole Deſire. He was diſturbed, when he heard, that to revenge a private Quarrel, the Synagogue of Rome was burnt. He cenſur'd the Senate for permitting it, and repreſented the Conſequences ſuch a Tumult might have had, ſince the Flame of that Building carried by the Wind might have conſumed a great Part of their City. He alſo ſeverely reprimanded the Eccleſiaſticks of Milan, who went to ſeize upon a Synagogue, and all the Emoluments annex'd to it. The Chriſtian Religion does not authorize Robberry: And 'tis a great Abſurdity to think of enriching the True God with Plunders committed upon other Religions. Laſtly the Citizens of Genoa were going to vacate all the Privileges which the Jews poſſeſs'd, who had been ſettled there for a long time. The People [y] fermented by their Leaders mutiny'd, and went to plunder the Synagogue, of which they carried away the Roof. The oppreſs'd had Recourſe to Theodorick, whoſe Equity was known to them. They were not miſtaken; for this Prince maintain'd their Privileges, and permitted 'em to rebuild the Synagogue, on Condition that they would add no Ornaments, nor make it larger than it was before. And thus the Jews concluded [z] the Fifth Century in the Roman Empire. They frequently ſubmitted to the Hatred and Tumults of the People, but ſtill they preſerved the beſt Part of their Privileges by the Authority of the Sovereigns.

---

[q] There were 540 Perſons converted in leſs than Eight Days. [r] Altercatio Eccleſ. & Synagogæ apud Aug. t. 8. Appendix. [s] Contra quinque Hæreſes, c. iv. apud Aug. t. 8. Appendix. [t] Geneſ. 19. 18. [u] Ainſworth. upon Geneſ. 'Tis in the Hebrew אדני The Greek has tranſlated it κύριε. And the Chaldee Paraphr. רבוני Domini mei. [x] Sermo de Symbolo contra Judæos, Paganos & Arianos, c. 14. apud Aug. ibid. [y] Caſſiodor. l. 2. Ep. 27. p. 33. l 4. Ep. 33. p. 70. l. 4. Ep. 43. p. 73. l. 5. Ep. 73. p. 91. [z] An. 500.

CHAP.

CHAP. XVII.

The History of the Jews diſpers'd among the Perſians during the Fifth Century.

I. Aſce elected Preſident at Fourteen Years of Age. II. A new Method of Teaching. III. The Babylonian Thalmud, how it was compiled. IV. His Succeſſors. The Throne and Kingdom of the Doctors explain'd. V. The Revenues and Power of the Prince of the Captivity examin'd. VI. A Perſecution that puts a ſtop to the Compoſition of the Thalmud. VII. At what time the Thalmud was finiſhed. VIII. A new Difficulty ariſing from the time of the Perſecution. IX. An Account of this Perſecution. X. A Conjecture about the Union of theſe Two Events. XI. The Riſe of the Sebureans. The Advantages of the Scepticks in Point of Religion. XII. Peroſez's War againſt the Nephtalites. XIII. Schickard confuted upon this Subject.

I. THE Academies flouriſh'd in the Eaſt under the Conduct of R. Aſce, Compiler of the Thalmud of Babylon. This City was his Birth-place [a]; but he taught at Sora. He was elected Preſident of this Academy at Fourteen Years of Age. This is doing him a great Honour; but very little to his Electors, ſince they made a Child the Depoſitory of Traditions and Religion. For howſoever great were his Parts and Talents, he could not be qualified in ſo green an Age to manage the Office of Preſident, and Head of the Prime Univerſity. They give him great Encomiums; for with him was found the Law, Devotion, Humility, and Magnificence; four things never poſſeſs'd by any other than himſelf.

II. He invented a new Method of Inſtruction; for inſtead of fixing his Diſciples conſtantly to the College, and reading 'em Lectures all the Year, he only did it in the Months of February and Auguſt. In February he gave his Scholars a Treatiſe, and ſent 'em to Study at home for Six Months. They returned in Auguſt, and gave Account of their Proficiency. The Subjects [b] were examined; they diſputed in his Preſence, and afterwards he removed the Difficulties by the Deciſions of preceding Doctors.

Ten Perſons were ſeated over againſt him, Seven whereof were called Princes [c] of the Crowns, whoſe Office it was to Paraphraſe upon the Dictates of the Maſter, and to make Repetitions to the Scholars, whoſe Number amounted to Two Thouſand Four Hundred. Thoſe that diſtinguiſhed themſelves by their Diligence, were praiſed and rewarded. The Preſident made a Collection of all the Subjects that had been handled, and from this the Babylonian Thalmud was compoſed. Laſtly he gave 'em a Subject they were to Study the half Year following, and ſo the School broke up.

III. Aſce having taught in this manner Sixty [d] Years, Publiſhed a Collection of his Deciſions, which he divided into Four different Parts, The Firſt contained the Maxims and Recleſs of the Miſnah, with the Doubts that might be propoſed, and their Solutions. In the Second he handled diverſe Queſtions, and related the Opinion of the Tanneans and Gemariſts about them. The Third Part conſiſted of the Sentences and Maxims that had been publiſhed ſince Judah the Saint: And in the Laſt were all the Explications the Scripture affords for the Determination of Differences, with the Commentaries of the Principal Doctors. This was the firſt Diviſion of the Babylonian Thalmud. But as R. Aſce could not finiſh his Undertaking, thoſe that came into it after him, changed the Method, and made Additions, which have render'd it much more confuſed.

IV. [e] This great Doctor died in the Year 427. They make Marimar his Succeſſor; but others ſay that the Feet of R. Hovna haſten'd; that is, that this Maſter was made Preſident of the Academy of Sora in Aſce's Place. His Son Thobiomi aſcended the Throne of his Father in the Year 455, and reigned Thirteen Years, during which the Nation enjoy'd ſuch a great Tranquility, that they called this Doctor their Daily Proſperity. He muſt needs have contributed to this Felicity, ſince they gave him the Name of it. We ought not to be ſurpriz'd to hear 'em talk of the Succeſſion to the Throne, and Thirteen Years Reign, tho' the Queſtion be only about the Office of a Doctor, or the Pedagogue of a School. 'Tis the Rabbicinal Style to give great Idea's of their Maſters, and to careſs 'em with flattering Titles. Thoſe that are unaccuſtomed to this Style, are eaſily dazled by it; not imagining that a Pedant is placed upon the Throne, and that they ſhould expreſly ſay, he reign'd Thirteen Years, when his Empire extended no farther than over ſome Scholars, to whom he told Stories and Traditions. They alſo call'd plain Students Princes of Crowns, becauſe they were the uppermoſt of a Claſs.

V. Seeing ſuch a glorious Title is given to the Scholars, we need not wonder that the Prince of the Captivity wore it likewiſe. They give themſelves lofty Notions of theſe Princes; whereas their Power was not ſo conſiderable, as is commonly believed. 1. The whole Nation did not depend on 'em, as is ſaid, ſince to the Year 429. the Patriarchs of Judæa extended their Juriſdiction over a great many Provinces; and ſince that time, the Jews diſpers'd in the Roman Empire, could not acknowledge a Prince reſiding in the Territories of the Perſian or Arabian Kings, with whom there was continual Wars. Would the Grecian Emperors, ſo extreamly jealous of their Authority, have ſuffer'd a foreign Jew to come and raiſe Taxes upon his Subjects, and to have correſponded with 'em in time of War? 2. This Prince's Revenues were but ſmall. The Doctors tell, that he obtained of the Perſians the Privilege of ſetting up but one Judge for the Determination of Differences betwixt Man and Man, without being obliged to repair the Damage, when the Sentence was given wrong; whereas by the common Laws they were to be judged by Three Perſons. This Obſervation is childiſh: For 'twas the Thalmudiſts that fix'd the Number of theſe Judges to Three; and 'twas impertinent to deſire the King of Perſia the Diſpenſation from a Law, which they had voluntarily impos'd on themſelves. But however, the Prince eſtabliſhed One or Three Judges at Nerean, a Town half a Day's Journey from Babylon; and here they paid the Didrachm, when they came to be Twenty Years old. He alſo puniſhed the Violations of the Law by Fines, which were reſerved for the Prince. There was ſuch another Tribunal at Chaloan, Five Days Journey from Babylon. There was a Third at Keſar: and the Laſt at Babylon, where the Prince reſided: and in all theſe Courts they collected but Seven Hundred Gold Crowns, which made the Prince's Revenue: And ſuppoſing his Dignity proportion'd to his Income, it could not be conſiderable. 3. By this we diſcover the Reaſon of the Silence of all the Hiſtorians, concerning theſe Heads of the Captivity. They say, that all these Princes were of the House of David. They assign 'em a great Empire in their Fancies, by which the Sceptre was preserved in the Tribe of Judah. However these Historians, that preserve the Succession, the Names and some Actions of the Doctors, who taught in the Schools of Sora, Pundebita and elsewhere, hardly ever mention the Heads of the Captivity; and we discover some Names of 'em not without great Uncertainty. R. Asce is highly celebrated; they reckon his Successors in the Academy: But in all the Fifth Century we are examining, we find but one Name of a Prince of the Captivity. 'Tis impossible to believe they should have been so perfectly forgotten, if they had done any important Actions in the Fifth Century, or had been Princes as they are styled. But to return to the Babylonian Thalmud, which the Head of the Academy composed.

[a] An. 353. [b] Juchaſin, p. 124. Bartol. B. R. t. 1. p. 486. [c] ראשי כלות. [d] A Fault muſt be corrected which has ſlipp'd in l. 3. c. 6. to 2. p. 700. where it is Forty Years inſtead of Sixty. [e] Ganz. Tſemach David. p. 119.

VI. This Work was interrupted by the Death of Asce, tho' he left able Disciples that might have finish'd it. But this Interruption was caused by a Persecution that lasted Seventy three Years: It was violent; for the Sabbath was taken away; that is, the Celebration of it was forbidden. The [f] Synagogues were shut up. The Holy Houses were given to the Magi. The Principal Doctors of the Nation were made Prisoners. Amimar, Mor, Asce's Disciples, and Huna his Son, who was Prince of the Captivity, were condemned to Death, and suffer'd it couragiously; but the Youth more addicted to to the Pleasures of Life, deserted their Religion, so that Israel was found in great Affliction, towards the End of the Fifth [g] Century. However they resum'd Courage some time after, and the Thalmud was accomplish'd in the Year 500. It was dispersed over all the Nation, which agreed, That no Addition or Diminution should be made to it for the future. Thus one of the most able Historians [h] has related this Event.

VII. Others put off the Conclusion of this Work somewhat later; upon which Subject Doctors differ by some Years, since according to their Calculation, the Thalmud was not finished till the Year 545. This Difference would not be considerable; but we find greater Difficulties in weighing the Testimony of these Historians. He [i], before quoted, makes the Thalmud to be finish'd in the Year 500; but he does not reckon exactly; for Asce, the first Author of this Work, died in 427. His Eldest Son was created President of the Academy of Sora in 455, and reigned Thirteen Years. The Nation was at Peace in his Reign. Jesargar, King of Persia, had a Design to Persecute it; but the President of Sora had such an Interest with him as to obviate the Proceeding of this Violence. The Persecution began not till 474. which was the Year of Martyrs: And if it lasted 73 Years, as we are told, the Babylonian Thalmud, which was not compleated till after the end of this Persecution, must have been deferr'd to the Year 547. And so the Historian contradicts himself.

VIII. There is a second Difficulty more considerable; for almost all the Jewish Historians [k] say, That the Seventy three Years Persecution was raised by Isdigerdes, and that it lasted till the Reign of the Ismaelites prevailed.

IX. These Difficulties may be carry'd farther; for one of these Historians says, "That the Kings "of Persia had always a Love for the Jews, who "had then Doctors as famous and holy as before "the Destruction of Jerusalem: But the King, at "the Instigation of the People, who Mutiny'd at "the time that they were threaten'd with a Foreign "War, had the Complaisance to Arrest the three "Princes [l] of the Captivity: They were cruelly "Whipt, without being able to shake their Constancy. A great many Princes of the Nation "were Imprison'd, and made to Fast to that degree, that nothing remain'd but Skin upon their "Bones. Most of 'em being macerated by the continuation of so many Miseries, abandon'd their "Religion. But after that time, the Persian Affairs "chang'd Countenance. The Arabians gave 'em "many Battles, and took all the Kings of Persia, "and put 'em in Irons. The King of the Arabians, "who knew that Constraint, in Matter of Religion, "was Unjust, sent for the Jews, and granted 'em "full Liberty of Conscience." The Author [m] says, he took this Event out of the Annals of the Kings of Persia, which had been sent into Spain: But he places it in the Year 244 of the Christian Æra; which discovers a gross Falshood or Ignorance in his Narrative.

X. All these Occurrences are perplex'd; for the Doctors are almost equally agreed about two things, which are contradictory: One, that the Babylonian Thalmud was finish'd at the end of the Vth, or beginning of the VIth Century. They agree, that R. Asce, who form'd this Design, Taught in the Year 370. And those that give him the longest Life, make him Die in the Year 474. They agree also, that the Persecution, which prevented the perfecting this Work, was rais'd by the Orders of the Last King of Persia, a little before the Saracens made the Conquest of that Monarchy. Shall we say, that the Jewish Historians are mistaken in the Time of this Persecution, or in R. Asce's Age? We cannot venture to do it, since we find an almost equal Consent about these two things. In the mean time, under this Incertainty, we follow the Tradition, that the Thalmud was accomplish'd in the Year 500, or some Years after; because nothing is more common with these Authors, than to combine Events very remote from one another. They may have known the Time when the Thalmud was compos's'd, and have join'd to this great Event the Persecution they suffer'd a little before the Victories of the Saracens. But we propose this only as a very uncertain Conjecture. We will only Observe, That the Jews have noted many such Combinations; because there is nothing more common with the Doctors, than to confound Chronology. Besides, it was so much the easier to run into this Errour, because there was one Isdigerdes upon the Persian Throne at the time we speak of; and 'twas a Prince of the same Name that, reign'd, when the Saracens overturn'd this Monarchy. For Procopius [n] calls the King of Persia, Isdigerdes; to whom Arcadius, when he died, committed the Education of his Son, and who discharg'd this Trust with so much Generosity. The Jews may have confounded these two Princes, one whereof liv'd when the Thalmud was compos'd, and the other persecuted them a little before the Ruin of the Persian Monarchy.

XI. 'Twas towards the end of the same Century, that a New Order of Doctors arose, call'd Doubters, or Sebureans, headed by R. Josi. I know not whether these Gentlemen carry'd their Doubts so far as the Decisions of the Thalmud, and shook its growing Authority, by Difficulties they did not resolve; or whether they were contented to propose new Questions, upon which they disputed in utramque partem, without admitting any Conclusion. These Fathers of Difficulties are troublesome in all Religions; for there is not one but has its weak-side, against which we may raise batteries with success: and if we gain any advantage by illustrating many things, that have been too inconsiderately believ'd, [f] Ganz. Tsemach. p. 121. [g] An. 474. [h] Ganz ibid. [i] Ganz. [k] Serira Gabon. Abraham. [l] Amimar. Murcia & Masurgia. [m] Salom. Ben. Virgæ Schævet Judah, p. 5. [n] Procop. de Bello Pers. l. 1. c. 2. p. 8.

we

we alſo loſe conſiderably, becauſe many, who can't digeſt theſe Difficulties, are ſtagger'd, and fall into Incredulity. By going to oblige moſt Men to ſtand upon their Guard againſt certain Errors, we poſſeſs them with an exceſſive Diffidence, that ruines 'em. They are ſure of nothing, when they ſee thoſe Truths wreſted from them, that they thought indiſputable. A Man ſhould only propoſe his Doubts in the Schools, and Language of the Learned, who might be able to make a juſt Diſtinction, whereas the Sebureans writ in the Language of the People. Thoſe that doubt, have a great Advantage in the Conteſt; for taking no Side themſelves, they are ſtill the Aggreſſors, without being obliged to ſtand upon the Defenſive Part. Beſides it is eaſier to pluck up than to plant; and to throw down a Building, than to raiſe one without Defect. But on the other hand, is this making a Judicious Uſe of Reaſon, to keep it always fluctuating in ſuſpenſe, without giving it an Inch of Ground, whereon to fix its Foot? Is it ſo great a Glory to have laid our Enemies proſtrate, whilſt we know not what we are our ſelves, nor what we ought to be? We muſt not wonder then that the Sebureans or Jewiſh Pyrrhoniſts made themſelves odious in their Nation. They began to make their Entrance towards the End of the Fifth Century, and made their Exit in the Sixth, when the Excellents ſucceeded them, as we have ſaid elſewhere.

XII. Hiſtorians agree, that Peroſez engag'd in an unhappy War, wherein he loſt his Life; but the People he went to fight with are little known. Agathias [o] ſays they were Nephtalites. An Ingenious Critick [p] has concluded, that theſe unknown Nephtalites were the Remains of the Tribe of Nephtali, which Tighat Pileſer had conveyed upon the Frontiers of Perſia. Indeed theſe People were Allies and Neighbours to the Medes, with whom they often made great Irruptions. Procopius [q] affirms they had been ſettled there a long time. They had their King, who underſtanding Peroſez's Deſign, left upon the Road a Lord of his Court, bound with Cords, with Orders to tell his Enemy, he had been ſo treated, becauſe he had adviſed to yield, and pay Tribute to the Perſians. Peroſez [r] found the Lord, credited his Advice, and ſuffered himſelf to be conducted by this faithleſs Guide, who led his Army into dry and barren Places, where it periſhed with Thirſt, when, the Enemy falling upon him, he was routed and taken. He ranſomed himſelf upon Condition he ſhould make War no more againſt the Nephtalites, and never paſs beyond a Stone, which was placed for the Boundary of their Kingdoms. Peroſez laugh'd at his Oaths, and to elude them, reſolv'd [s] to have the Stone, which was to ſerve for the Limits, carried before him, imagining by this he ſatisfied his Oath, and paſs'd not beyond the Stone. His Council wiſely repreſented to him, that the Queſtion was not about a Stone; but a ſolemn Treaty made with the Enemy, which ought never to be violated. An Oath, ſaid the Perſians, depends not upon the Stone, but upon a Promiſe given, which muſt be explained, as the Enemy conceives it. Peroſez was inflexible in his Opinion, raiſed Troops, gave Battel, and was kill'd. And his Children, that attended him, were moſt of 'em deſtroy'd. Procopius relates the Matter very differently. He ſays, that Peroſez's Raſhneſs engag'd him in the Mountains, where the Enemy, which he yet thought at a great diſtance, ſurrounded him on all Sides. The Perſians being terrified, knew not how to extricate themſelves out of a Danger, which was ſo much the greater, becauſe the King did not perceive it. Euſebius, Zeno's Embaſſador, acquainted him with it by the Emblem of a Lion, who was going to devour a Goat; and who throwing himſelf too furiouſly upon his Prey, fell into a Ditch, that was made for him, where he periſhed. Peroſez was then ſenſible of his Fault, but could not repair it The King of the Ephtalites made a Propoſition to him, that he ſhould come and worſhip him as his Maſter, and ſwear, he would never make War with him any more. The Magi, to ſalve their Prince's Honour, made choice of the Morning, when the Sun riſes, to perform this Adoration, that the King might ſay, he had worſhipp'd the Sun after the manner of the Perſians. The Oath and Homage being made, Peroſez led back his Army. He began the War again, but the Ephtalites having dug a Ditch in the middle of a Plain, and cover'd it up, the Perſians, who fell too violently upon ſome of the Enemies Squadrons, who ſeem'd to fly before them, fell into the Snare, and Peroſez periſh'd there with his Army and Children.

XIII. 'Tis not our Buſineſs to reconcile the Arabian and Greek Hiſtorians upon ſuch different Circumſtances. We will only obſerve, that according to Procopius, it was not the Tribe of Nephtali againſt which Peroſez made War, ſince he calls theſe People Ephtalites, and aſſerts, that inſtead of being the Poſterity of the Ten Tribes, they were White Huns, who lived upon the Frontiers of Perſia, in Chorazan, near the River Oxus. They were infinitely more polite than the other Huns, and lived in a very different manner. But we muſt not from thence conclude, that they were Jews. Agathias alſo, who by calling 'em Nephtalites, has given occaſion to believe they were the Remains of that Nation, acknowledges 'em to be Huns, which removes all the Difficulty.

[o] Agath. l. 4. c. ii. [p] Schickard Taarick, p. 130. [q] Procop. de Bello Perſ. l. 1. c. 3. & 4. p. 10, &c. [r] Patricides & Elmacinus. [s] An. 475.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Continuation of the State of the Ten Tribes in Perſia, Arabia and Æthiopia, till the Seventh Century.

I. Cavade's Genius. II. The Jews can't expel a Dæmon that keeps Treaſures. III. A Diſpute betwixt Chanina and the Head of the Captivity. Its Conſequences. IV. The Inſurrection of the Jews againſt the King of Perſia. The Pillar of Fire appears again. V. Choſroes the Great ſhuts up their Academies. They make a League with him. VI. Hormiſdas III. gives 'em their Liberty. VII. Their Cruelty towards the Chriſtians under Choſroes II. VIII. Their Conſpiracy againſt the Inhabitants of Tyre puniſh'd. IX. Whether Choſroes II. was a Chriſtian. X. Whether the Jews join'd with Mahomet. XI. The Reſemblance of Religions. The Equity of the Jews. XII. The manner of Mahomet's dealing with 'em. XIII. A Diſtinction of Jews. XIV. Obadiah's Dialogue fictitious. XV. Mahomet's Reproaches of the Jews. XVI. An extraordinary Treaty of Mahomet and the Chriſtians. XVII. Jews metamorphos'd into Apes. Wars made againſt them in Arabia. XVIII. The Jews Conſpiracy againſt Abdalla. XIX. A Diſpute betwixt them and Mahomet.

I. THE Sixth Century commenc'd with the Perſecutions the Ten Tribes ſuffered in the Eaſt. Cavade, a violent and haughty Prince, who could not bear a Difference of Religions in his Kingdom, cauſed a great many Chriſtians to be ham-ſtrung; but this did 'em no great Harm, if we believe Theophanes, ſince they continued to walk with the ſame Eaſe as before [a]. He deſign'd alſo to force the Iberians to forſake Chriſtianity for the Perſian Religion; but having firſt demanded of their King, that their Bodies ſhould be left unburied a Prey to the Birds and Wild Beaſts, and the Iberians not being able to conſent to an Action, which ſo manifeſtly contradicted Humanity, they gave themſelves to the Romans. Laſtly the Manichees were ſo conſiderable at his Court, that they had ſeduced a young Prince of his Family; and under Pretence of crowning him before his Death, he ſummon'd 'em all together, and put ſome to death, and burnt the reſt. We muſt not therefore wonder, that this King tormented the Jews of his Empire; and 'tis probably to this that we are to aſcribe the frequent Alteration that happen'd in the Dignity of the Princes of the Captivity [b]; for in leſs than Ten Years we find Four of theſe Princes ſucceeding one another, and even Zutra, one of 'em, was hang'd, as we ſhall give an Account of it hereafter.

II. Firſt [c] we are told, that they fell into Diſcredit with Cavade, becauſe they could not put him into Poſſeſſion of a Caſtle fill'd with Treaſures, which the Devils guarded. Cavade had beſieg'd it with hopes of growing rich by this one Conqueſt; but he was aſtoniſh'd to ſee the common Machines of War to be uſeleſs in the Siege, and that the Devils diſappointed all his Efforts. He Summoned all the Religions, that were known in his Kingdom, to his Aſſiſtance. The Magi, the Maniches, the Jews and Chriſtians reſorted to his Camp to make Trial of their Art; but the Chriſtians alone having the good Luck to drive away the Devils by a Sign of the Croſs, Cavade deprived the Manichees and Jews of their Privileges, and beſtow'd 'em upon the Chriſtians, whoſe Biſhop reſided at his Court with great Authority and Intereſt.

'Tis the Chriſtians that relate this Story, having founded it upon the Opinion of the Vulgar, who imagine the Devils to be covetous, doting on Riches, that are uſeleſs to 'em; and that they carefully guard 'em, and envy even the Idolaters the Poſſeſſion of them, tho' they be their Slaves. 'Tis ſtrange that Ancient Writers ſhould have an Opinion ſo ill-grounded, but yet Theodorus and Cedrenus are not the only ones, that have offer'd it; for Procopius [d] ſeriouſly tells, that a Devil lay with Juſtinian's Mother, and begot this Prince for the Deſtruction of Mankind. He even affirms, that Juſtinian was a Devil in Humane Shape, becauſe there were Witneſſes, who had ſeen him walk upon his Head, and that his Face became a formleſs Maſs. Laſtly an Anchoret moſt acceptable to God, having been admitted to this Prince's Audience, came back ſtrangely frighted, and talking like a Mad-man, becauſe he had ſeen the Devil, inſtead of the Emperor upon the Throne, What Tales do we find in the Writings of the Ancients! The Biſhops ought to have been better inſtructed, and not have imployed the Name of God or Exorciſms to deprive the Devils of their Cuſtody of Treaſures, and leave ſo fooliſh an Opinion in an Idolatrous King; but ſome Biſhops are often as ſuperſtitious as the Heathens. Laſtly, this pretended Miracle does not agree with the Hiſtorian's Account, that Cavade, inſtead of granting the Chriſtians great Privileges, often perſecuted them.

III. A Diviſion aroſe among the Jews in his Reign, betwixt the Head of the Academy, and the Prince of the Captivity. The latter coming to Chanina, went to interpret a Section of the Thalmud about Sermons: The other look'd upon this Attempt as an Uſurpation of his Privileges, and ſtrongly withſtood him. The Prince of the Captivity order'd his Officers to take Chanina, and to pluck off the Hair of his Beard, at the ſame time forbidding all the Inhabitants of the City to lodge him, and ſupply him with Neceſſaries. Chanina wept bitterly, and God hearing his Petition, ſent the Plague into the Prince's Family, which kill'd every body, except a Child, that was not as yet born. Chanina foreſaw that this Stem ſhould ſhoot out again; for he dream'd by Night, that he enter'd a Garden, and cut down all the Cedars, excepting a very ſmall one. Whilſt he was cutting down all the Trees, a red old Man came to him, and told him the Garden was his. He reproved him for having cut all the Cedars, and gave him ſuch a violent Box on the Ear, that his Head was turn'd on the other ſide. Chanina being awak'd by the Blow, perceived that he was ſtruck, becauſe he had been the Author of the Death of all the Children to the Prince of the Captivity; but he believed ſome new Sucker would ſpring from the Family. He conſulted the Doctors, who told him that his Daughter was with Child, and near her time. He went, and ſat at her Door, and neither left it by Night or Day, nor when it ſhin'd or rain'd, till the Child was born. He brought it up, and took Care of its Education.

In the mean time as David's Family failed, Paphra, who had lately been allied to that Houſe, brought the Dignity of Prince, and enjoy'd it till the Minor came to be Fifteen Years old. Then Zutra, which was the Child's Name, deſired of the King a Dignity belonging to his Family, of which he was the only Heir. His Requeſt was granted. Paphra was degraded by order of the King of Perſia, and a Fly having ſtung him, he continued ſneezing till he died, as a Puniſhment for his being made Prince of the Captivity by Money. Zutra enter'd upon the Office, and reign'd Twenty Years.

IV. In his time roſe the famous Rabbin [e] Meir, for whoſe ſake God renew'd the Pillar of Fire. He ſaw it, and this Miracle authorizing him to do ſome mighty Action, he aſſembled Four Hundred Men, with whom he declared War againſt the King of Perſia. His Succeſſes continued Seven Years. The Pillar of Fire often appear'd; his Victories were frequent, and he raiſed great Contributions. But at the end of this Term, his Soldiers debauch'd with the Perſian Women; they drank Wine conſecrated to Idols; which Sin not only made the Miracle ceaſe, but the Perſians taking Meir Priſoner kill'd him. They alſo enter'd the City, where Zutra the Prince of the Captivity lived. They plunder'd it, and hang'd the Prince, with the Preſident of the Council upon a Bridge. All that were of David's Family, were forced to fly [f]. Zutra II. Son to the Prince of the Captivity, retired to Judæa, where he became Preſident of the Senate. Thus the Jewiſh Hiſtorians recount the firſt of their Misfortunes, the Conſequences whereof were ſo laſting, that their Doctor Habonai durſt not ſhew his Head for Thirty Years [g]; that is, all the time of Cavade's Reign.

V. Choſroes the Great was not more favourable to 'em than his Father. They had endeavour'd to purchaſe his Favour by betraying the Emperor Juſtinian. This Prince had ſent Embaſſadors to the [a] Theoph. Chron. p. 137. Id. p. 145. An. Ch. 512. Procop. de Bello Perſ. l. 1. c. 12. p. 33. Ganz. Tſemach David. ad An. 265 267. 270. that is, in the Years of the Church 505. 507. 510. [b] Theſe Heads of the Captivity were, Houna who reign'd Two Years; Acha who governed Three Years. Tettana and Meir Zutra, who were Heads the ſpace of Four Years. V. p. 121. [c] Theodor. Lect. l. 2. p. 564. Cedren. p. 297. [d] Procop. Hiſt. Arc. c. 12. p. 38. [e] Zeder Olam Zuta cum Not. Meieri. Vide Imbon. B. R. t. v. p. 46. [f] An. 522. [g] An. 331.

Eaſt

East, to negotiate a Peace, and had loaded 'em with Preſents; which were receiv'd with ſuch Acknowledgments, that there was reaſon to hope for a ſpeedy Iſſue of the Treaty, when the Jews, who had their Spies and Deputies at this Court, inſinuated [h] to Choſroes, That if he was willing to continue the War, they would furniſh him with Fifty thouſand Men in Judæa; by which means he might take Jeruſalem, one of the richeſt Cities in the World. Choſroes accepted the Project, broke off the Negotiation, and was preparing to go and ſecond the Endeavours of the Traitors; when News was brought, that the Deputies, who were departed to execute the Deſign had been ſeiz'd upon their return, and ſentenc'd to Death, having firſt confeſs'd their Crime.

This deſire to Oblige the Perſian Prince, did not engage him in their Intereſts; and they not only had their ſhare in the general Miſeries of the Empire, when Choſroes, who often took Arms againſt the Romans, pillag'd Syria, and advanc'd to Judea, to make himſelf Maſter of Jeruſalem: But this Prince [i] ſhut up all the Academies of the Eaſt; which ruin'd the love of the Sciences. We don't ſo much as find that there was then a Prince of the Captivity, ſince Zutra II. had been oblig'd to retire to Judea, where he long exercis'd an Office infinitely beneath that he would have poſſeſs'd at Babylon, if he had been ſuffer'd there.

VI. Hormiſdas III. [k] reſtor'd 'em their loſt Liberty; for the Academy of Pundebita was open'd. R. Chanan Mebiſchka began to Teach, and a new Order of Doctors appear'd, under the Title of Gaons, or Excellents; but this unhappy Prince reign'd not long [l]: His rebellious Subjects took him Priſoner; and his own Son Choſroes II. depriv'd him of his Life, by Baſtinado.

VII. This young Prince did not peaceably enjoy his Barbarity; for Varame, who had been his Father's Enemy, declaring himſelf alſo his, and pretending to aſcend the Throne, expell'd him Perſia, having firſt beat his Army. He was oblig'd to throw himſelf into the hands of the Romans. Mauritius lent him Troops, and Generals. He was forc'd to engage in many Battles, before he could get the Maſtery of Varame, who had made a great Party in the State, and defended himſelf with great Bravery. The Jews were in his Intereſt. This faithleſs, reſtleſs, imperious, jealous, envious, implacable Nation (ſays [m] the Greek Hiſtorian) was then ſo powerful in Perſia, as to raiſe the People againſt their Princes, and to fortifie the Rebels; becauſe it was extremely multiply'd, and had amaſs'd prodigious Wealth. Choſroes getting the Maſtery, expiated this Treachery with their Blood. Thoſe of Antioch fell firſt into the hands of Mebodus the Roman General. This was not the Syrian City; but another, which Choſroes I. had built in Perſia, and had given it that Name, becauſe he had form'd it by the other's Model, and had tranſplanted its Inhabitants. 'Tis ſaid, they were amazed, when they enter'd it, to find their Country again; a ſecond Antioch; the ſame Streets and Houſes they had left. Mebodus having taken this Place, put abundance of Jews to the Sword, deſtroy'd others by different Puniſhments, and reduc'd the reſt to a miſerable Slavery. However, Choſroes being reſettled, was reconcild to 'em, and uſefully employ'd 'em in his Deſigns. Indeed, this Prince, who delighted in War, gave out, That he Arm'd, to revenge the Death of Mauritius, his Benefactor, upon Phocas, who had kill'd him, and made himſelf Maſter of the Empire. A Heathen Prince deteſted the Injuſtice, Murther and Uſurpation of Phocas, whilſt Pope Gregory the Great incens'd and panegriz'd the Uſurper. Shall we condemn the Chriſtian Patriarch, and praiſe the Idolatrous Prince? They both acted by Intereſt; one ſordidly flatter'd a Tyrant he had need of, and the other ſought a Pretence to ravage the Territories of the Empire: In effect, he broke [n] into Syria and Judæa, where he made a terrible Execution. He return'd again in Heraclius's time, took Jeruſalem, and carry'd with him a Croſs which a Jew had found. 'Tis moſt probable, this Nation had Intelligence with Choſroes; ſince, upon his being Maſter of Jeruſalem, he [o] return'd 'em all the Chriſtian Priſoners, which they only bought, to ſatisfie their Hatred, by the unmerciful Murther of 'em. Ninety thouſand Perſons periſh'd by their Hands upon that Occaſion.

VIII. Elmacinus [p], and the other Arabian Hiſtorians, add, That Choſroes going to beſiege Conſtantinople, there was a neceſſity of evacuating all the Places of Syria, and drawing out all the Garriſons, to come to the Aſſiſtance of the Capital; and the Jews ſeizing this Opportunity, Conſpir'd with all their Nation in Judæa, to Murder on an Eaſter-Day all the Inhabitants of the City of Tyre, to make themſelves Maſters of that important Poſt. All the Conſpirators came ſecretly to the Walls; but finding greater Reſiſtance than they look'd for, becauſe they were expected, they ſpread themſelves in the Country, where they burnt the Chriſtians Churches. The Tyrians, who beheld this Spectacle from the Ramparts and Towers, ſtruck off a Jew's Head upon every Church that fell or was burning: As they kill'd Two thouſand Jews, they muſt have burnt Two thouſand Temples. The Citizens going out, found this Company diſpers'd, like a Flock of Sheep in the Field, and made a great ſlaughter of 'em. 'Tis no wonder that Choſroes then favour'd the Eaſtern Jews, ſince they made ſuch advantageous Diverſions on his Account.

IX. 'Tis pretended [q], that he was retired to the Emperor Mauritius before, and that he marry'd one of his Daughters, and that this Princeſs oblig'd him to change his Religion. Indeed, Evagrius [r], Biclar, and many other Hiſtorians affirm the thing; but we can't ſubſcribe to theſe Authorities, tho' they ſeem to be ſtrong. 1. They give Mauritius a Daughter, which this Prince never had: He had three by the Empreſs Conſtantina; but theſe three Daughters were ſhut up in a Convent, with their Mother, before Mauritius's Death, and were never marry'd. They muſt therefore make a new Princeſs, which the Ancients never heard of, to be marry'd to the King of Perſia. The thing is not without Example; for the Greeks have placed in their Conſpiracies one Sopatra, Daughter to the Emperor Mauritius, who never was; and ſhe is an imaginary Saint, who ought to be ſtruck out of the Catalogue of thoſe they worſhip. Fredegaire [s] has carry'd the Fiction farther; for he has imagin'd, an Arnolfus King of the Perſians, with a Queen Ceſarea, who, at the Solicitation of the Emperor Mauritius, was Baptized with Sixty thouſand Perſians: Whereas no King of this Monarchy had that Name. The other Hiſtorians contradict one another; for ſome make him change his Religion on account of his Marriage with Mary, Mauritius's Daughter. Others ſay, he was already a Chriſtian when he marry'd Syra, who alſo profeſs'd the Truth. Some place his Converſion at his Reſtauration to his Throne, and others put it off to the end of his Life. One certain Fact ought to determine the Matter; for Heraclius having deſired Peace, his Prince, who was always addicted to Idolatry, [h] Theoph. p. 152. [i] An. 589. [k] Ibid. [l] Twelve Years. [m] Theophil. Simocatta in Maur. l. 5. c. 7. [n] An. 615. [o] Theoph. p. 252. [p] Elmacin. p. 271. Patricides, p. 236. Hotting. Hiſt Orient. l. 1. c. 3. p. 129. [q] Willel. Tyr. l. 1. c. 2. [r] Evagr. l. 6. c. 16. Simocatta Theophan. p. 252. l. 5. c, 13. Biclar. An. 8. Maurit. [s] Fredegair, c. 9.

demanded

demanded as a Preliminary, that the Emperor ſhould embrace the Perſian Religion, and worſhip the Sun; and he would not grant him Peace, but upon that Condition.

'Tis ſaid [t] indeed, that Choſroes being forced to abandon his Capital to the Rebel Varame, invok'd St. Sergius, and promis'd him a Croſs of Pearls, and of the richeſt Stones the Indies could afford, if he obtain'd the Victory over his Enemy. He afterwards acquitted himſelf of his Vow, by ſending to the Biſhop of Antioch the Croſs which Choſroes the Great had taken from his Church, in Juſtinian's Reign, and he added at the top of it a little Gold Croſs very fine, with a Letter wherein he teſtified he had placed his chief confidence in St. Sergius, when one of Varame's Generals, call'd Zadeſpras, advanced with his Cavalry towards Niſibus. Three Years after he deſired a Child of the ſame Saint; and having obtain'd his Requeſt, he made the Saint an Acknowledgment, by a Letter he wrote to him in Paradiſe, and by rich Preſents: He thought alſo he had been ſuccour'd by the Virgin, who appear'd to him, and promis'd him the Victories of Alexander the Great. This looks like a indiſputable Sign of Chriſtianity; and this is what has really deceiv'd many Writers.

In the mean time, the ſame Hiſtorian relates, that Choſroes continued always devoted to Judicial Aſtrology; that entring one day the Church of Dara, whilſt the Service was perform'd, the Chriſtians were diſturb'd, as if the Myſteries had been profan'd, and the Religion diſhonour'd, by the Preſence of this Heathen Prince. Domitian Biſhop of Melitene, not being able to bear the Affront he offer'd the Church, went out, and threaten'd to bring his Troops. Choſroes ſent his Apology to the Prelate; who receiv'd it, return'd, Cenſur'd the Prince, and drove him out of the Church. All this Noiſe was made, becauſe Choſroes, being a Heathen, ought not to be preſent at the Service. Laſtly, in the Letter which he is made to write to the great Martyr St. Sergius, by the King of Kings, he ſays, [u] "I "have intreated you, Great Saint, to do me the "favour, that Syra may be with Child; for tho' "ſhe be a Chriſtian, and I profeſs Heatheniſm, "and the Laws forbid me to marry her, yet I have "done it, and love her more than any of my "Wives." Thus Choſroes was a Heathen, and a Polygamiſt, like the reſt of the Perſians, at the time he wrote Letters, and made Preſents to St. Sergius, who was dead long before. This Prince [w] was Impriſon'd by his Subjects and his Son, and they gave him Gold and Silver inſtead of Bread, ſaying, Enjoy at thy pleaſure all the things thou haſt deſired with an inſatiable thirſt. He died of Famine, in the midſt of his Treaſure, in the Year 628; and three Years [x] after concluded the Perſian Monarchy, which went to the Saracens; Iſdigerdes, the laſt of their Kings, having been conquer'd near Cadeſia. This is the ſame that Theophanes calls Hormiſdas.

X. Mahomet appear'd at the beginning of the VIIth Century, and diffuſed his Religion by force of Arms into abundance of Places. The Chriſtian Hereticks and Jews are accus'd of having furniſh'd him with the Syſtem of Religion. 'Tis affirm'd, that many Neſtorian and Eutychian Biſhops, being baniſh'd by the Greek Emperor into the Plains of Arabia, ſupply'd this Impoſtor with many of their Doctrines, which we find at preſent in the Alcoran. But I know not where to find this number of Biſhops, baniſh'd into Arabia for their Errors, who would join with Mahomet, and mingle their Religion with his. The Eutychians had a great Party in Egypt, where Cyril of Alexandria, by his violent Expreſſions againſt Neſtorius, had given occaſion to believe this Opinion to be the true one: But there is ſo wide a diſtance betwixt Eutychianiſm and Mahometiſm, that it can't be imagin'd that they acted in concert with each other. The Jews have been more violently charg'd with being Accomplices in this Impiety. Theophanes ſays, That this Nation ſeeing Mahomet make a great Figure, began to look upon him as the Meſſiah; and that the moſt Conſiderable deſerting Moſes's Religion, embraced the new Doctrine of this Falſe-Prophet. They diſlik'd him, when they perceiv'd he ate Camels Fleſh: So that theſe People, who had renounc'd the Law, were yet concern'd, to ſee Mahomet violate one of its lighteſt Precepts. This ſeems contradictory; but there are commonly ſuch Contradictions in the Humour and Conduct of Men. Theophanes adds, That the Jews, tho' diſguſted with Mahometiſm, durſt not venture to renounce it publickly, for fear of being accus'd of Levity and Inconſtancy. Beſides, they thought, that by continuing their Devotion to the Founder of this Religion, they might eaſily ſuggeſt the Means to him of doing great Miſchief to the Chriſtians. And therefore they continued about him, till this Falſe-Prophet was ſtabb'd. We know not what they mean; becauſe that Mahomet died not a violent Death, and was not ſtabb'd. If there be any fault in Theophanes's Text, it muſt be of Old Date, ſince Cedrenus ſays exactly the ſame thing. The Criticks have attempted to Correct it, by ſubſtituting another word, which ſignifies to Eat: But this barbarous word affords no natural meaning. It wou'd be more reaſonable to ſubſtitute Flight, inſtead of Eating, and Death; for Mahomet was obliged to flie; and his Flight, from which the Hegira is dated, might be a motive for the Jews to forſake him.

An Hiſtorian, publiſh'd by Caniſius [z], ſays, That the Jews corrupted Mahomet; for he took Circumciſion, Abſtinence from Swine's Fleſh, and many other Rites from them. A Lady, who always ſaw him ſurrounded with Jews, doubted not but he was a Divine Man. As the Chriſtians often charge the Jews with their Confederacies with Mahomet, and produce a great many Proofs of it, 'tis neceſſary to relate them.

XI. They draw a Parallel betwixt the Jewiſh and Mahometan Religion; becauſe the Arabians obſerve Circumciſion, and tax the Jews with the Violation of the Sabbath: But theſe ſorts of Compariſons, which are always odious, are ſeldom juſt. Some degree of Conformity in certain Doctrines, is not ſufficient to confound two Religions; no more than ſome ſlight Stroaks of Reſemblance, ſuffice to confound Perſons, and make us believe they are Brothers, or Children of the ſame Mother. Shall we believe that Mahometiſm and Luther's Reformation are two Religions a-kin, becauſe a Controvertiſt * who deſign'd to exerciſe his Zeal againſt the Jews and Saracens, finds Twelve Articles of Conformity, one whereof is, that they reckon Seventy Sects among the Muſſulmans, and there are ſo many among the Goſpellers? Shall we think the Muſſulman and Roman Religion ought to be confounded, becauſe Jeſus-Chriſt is conſider'd there, as a Prophet arm'd with Power of working Miracles, and the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin, is maintain'd in them? It can only be ſaid, That the Jews, who [t] Theoph. Simocatta in Maur. l. 5. c. 1. Ibid. c. 13. c. 15. [u] Ibid. c. 14. [w] Niceph. Chron. [x] An. 631. [y] Theoph. An. 622. φαγῆς αὐτῷ. The Criticks read, φαγῆς. We ought rather to read, φυγῆς. Cedren. p. 347. [z] Epit. Bellor. Sacror. Caniſ. t. 7. p. 287. * Dom. Martinus Alphonſus Vivaldus, Not. ad Petri de la Cavelleria Zelum Chriſti contra Judæos & Sarracenos, apud Adrianum Reland de Religione Mahomed. Præfatio.

diſpute

diſpute with the Muſſulmans, are more equitable than ſome Chriſtians, for they aſſault their true Doctrines; whereas the others diſguiſe 'em, and make Monſters of 'em, the eaſier to overthrow them. The King of Cozar, introducing a Mahometan explaining his Religion, makes him ſay, [a] That he firmly believes the Unity and Eternity of God; that the World had a Beginning; and that all Men are deſcended from Adam. We abſtract all kind of Body, and all Incarnation and Incorporation from God: And if there be any thing in our Books, that ſeems to inveſt God with a Body, we maintain, that it is a Metaphorical Expreſſion, accommodated to the weakneſs of Humane Underſtanding.

But Lipſius [b] explaining the Muſſulman Religion to Chriſtian Princes, imputes to 'em the Belief of a Spherical God, perfectly Round, and Incorporeal; which makes a ridiculous Contradiction, and a manifeſt Falſhood. Euthymius [c] deſigning to arm the Chriſtians againſt the Errour, affirms, That the Mahometans believe God to have a Spherical Body, and this Figure indicates a Condens'd and Conſtipated Body, from whence 'tis eaſie to conclude, that God, who, according to Mahomet, is a Round Figure, neither Sees nor Underſtands. Pope Pius II. went further; for even in his Letter to a Turkiſh Prince call'd Mahomet, he ventures to aſſert, That the difference between the Chriſtians and Saracens conſiſts in this, That the one declare God to be Corporeal, to have a Head, and Hands, and Feet, and a Body, whereas the Chriſtians regard him as an Eternal and Incomprehenſible Spirit. The Jews are more equitable; but the Equity theſe Rabbins have for the Mahometans, ought not to make them ſuſpected of loving their Religion. The Chriſtians ought to imitate them, inſtead of taking an oppoſite courſe.

XII. Secondly, This Nation was very potent in Arabia, and even in Hegiaſa. This Name ſignifies Separation, becauſe it lies betwixt Arabia Deſerta and Arabia Felix, without belonging to either. The Greeks, who have join'd it to the latter, have not examin'd its Situation, which is very barren. Here it is that Mecca ſtands: The Jews had there, Fortreſſes, and Caſtles, and Armies, and Princes commanding them, when Mahomet laid the Foundation of his Empire. It was his Policy to flatter People that could ſerve or hurt him; and the Jews, who only ſought a Conqueror to Head 'em, being dazled by the luſtre of his Victories, and ſeeing him boaſt of being the Meſſiah [d], follow'd him. Nay, the Arabians boaſt, that the Jews ſent to their Maſter Twelve Perſons of their Body, to inſtruct him in their Religion, and to join in the Compoſition of this wretched Alcoran. So that if this Nation ran not after this Impoſtor, as after its expected Meſſiah, yet at leaſt it confederated with him in compoſing the Syſtem of his Religion, and afterwards taught him the means of doing much miſchief to the Chriſtians.

XIII. In the Third place, Mahomet declares in his Alcoran, That there is a Race in the People of Moſes, that teach others the Truth, and live with great Juſtice and Equity. He diſtinguiſhes this People into the Righteous, who ſubmit willingly to God, when he afflicts them; and the Wicked, who cry, God is poor, ſince he gives us nothing: The hand of God is faſten'd to his neck; but we acquire good things by our Induſtry, and we want nothing. He adds, That the Remainder of the Houſe of Moſes and Aaron ſhall be carry'd into Heaven by the Hands of Angels. The Honour Mahomet did to Moſes's his Family, and this Diſtinction of Good and Bad Jews, who teach others the Truth, are a ſufficient Argument, that one part of the Nation, which was ſituate in Arabia, adhered to his Opinions.

Moreover, he brings in God ſpeaking, and reproaching the Jews with his Miracles, and their Incredulity, and exhorts them to believe in the Prophet whom he ſends; promiſing Salvation, if they obey'd his Voice. Enter (ſays he to 'em [e]) into this City, and eat what you like; enter the Gate with Humility. And the Arabians, paraphraſing the words of God, make him ſpeak thus: "Enter into this "City of Elia, which is Jeruſalem; becauſe it ſtill "bore that Name, which Adrian the Emperor had "given it; or elſe into that of Ariha, which is Je"richo, or the City of Giants." It not only appears, that Mahomet had read Moſes's Writings, ſince he relates the Miracles this Prophet had wrought; but he had the cunning to take the Jews on their blind-ſide, by talking to 'em of returning to Jeruſalem.

At the end of the Alcoran [f] we find the Conference Obadiah the Son of Sca'om had with Mahomet, in quality of the Jews Deputy, who put a hundred Queſtions to this Falſe-Prophet: And as he was perfectly ſatisfy'd with his Anſwers, he turn'd Muſſulman, with his Co-Deputies, who perform'd great Services for this new Maſter.

Laſtly, The Mahometans affirm, That at the Birth of Mahomet, many Prophecies were found in the Jews Writings, relating both to him and his Father Abdalla; but that they have ſtruck 'em out ſince, to prejudice the Mahometan Religion. Some body has ſaid, That theſe Prophecies were made after the Event, but Mahomet quoted 'em to the Jews of his time: Therefore they muſt have been given out, to contribute to the Elevation of this Falſe-Prophet.

Thus it is People argue againſt the Jews, to render them odious by their Confederacy with this Impoſtor. I do not pretend to be their Apologiſt, but a faithful Hiſtorian.

XIV. What occaſion is there to ſeek this promiſcuous ſwarm of Errors any-where elſe than in Mahomet's fruitful and diſorder'd Brain? Don't we know what a humane Mind is capable of, when it leaps its bounds, and follows the motions of a heated Imagination? The Alcoran is a confus'd Medley of Errors: But a moderate knowledge of the Chriſtian Religion and Judaiſm, was ſufficient for its Author to form that monſtrous Union, in which Mahometaniſm conſiſts, without any need of Monks and baniſh'd Biſhops, or Arabian Jews, to ſupply their reſpective Portions. The Arabians, who aſſert, that the Jews ſent him Twelve Deputies to aſſiſt in the Compoſition, diſhonour their Maſter, who boaſted of receiving the Alcoran from the Hand of the Angel Gabriel, whom, for that reaſon, he call'd the Maſter of Treaſures, that is, of Revelations. Obadiah's Dialogue with Mahomet is not the Product of that Impoſtor, but of a Diſciple who meant to do himſelf honour by the baffle of the Rabbins, but miſs'd of his aim; for the Queſtions and Anſwers are equally ridiculous. What ſignify'd it to a Jew, bigotted to the Law of Moſes, to ask Mahomet what was One, Two, Three, Four, and ſo to Ten? And tho' this Dialogue ſhould be true, yet no Conſequence ought to be drawn from the Apoſtacy of ſome Perſons, to the whole Nation. 'Tis not impoſſible but ſome Jews might follow Mahomet; but the Queſtion is here, concerning what the People did in that Conjuncture, which ſeem'd a nice one, becauſe of their Idea's of a Temporal Kingdom. Laſtly, The Motive aſſign'd to the Jewiſh Doctors of favouring Mahomet, that they might diſpute the Chriſtians the Univerſality of their Religion, has no

[a] Coſri, P. 1. p. 12. [b] Lipſ. Monita & Exempla Polit. c. 2. p. 17. ὁλόστυρον. [c] Euthymius Zygabenus Panophia Dogmat. p. 22. Reland. de Relig. Mahomed. l. 2. § 3. p. 105. [d] Imbonat. Bibl. Rabb. t. v. [e] Alcoran. c. 2. p. 9. [f] Dialog. Abdiæ ad finem Alcor. p. 189.

Probabi-

Probability; for they could not divine that Mahomet's Succeſſors could make ſuch vaſt Conqueſts, which happen'd not till Eight Years after the Alcoran.

XV. 'Tis true, the Alcoran in ſome Places makes a favourable Mention of the Jews. But not to obſerve that it continually reproaches them with their Diſperſion, and Miſery, and Hatred of the Prophets they have murdered, and which Mahomet apply'd to himſelf, becauſe he conſidered himſelf as a new Prophet whom the Jews hated, as they had perſecuted the old; we know that the Elogies given this Nation in the Chapter Aaraf of the Alcoran, relates not to the Jews of Arabia; but thoſe pretended to have been tranſported into Tartary, or beyond China, and who could not then have any Correſpondence with Mahomet. And therefore the Interpreters of the Alcoran tell a ridiculous Story, how he had known 'em in that myſterious Voyage he made one Night to Heaven; and that having only read to 'em Ten Verſes of the Alcoran he converted them all.

XVI. If People built malicious Conjectures upon Appearances, might they not ſay that Mahomet had concerted his Book with the Chriſtians, ſince he acknowledges Jeſus Chriſt to be a great Prophet; calls him the Word of God; can't bear any ſtain of Sin to be fix'd upon the Bleſſed Virgin, who conceived her Son, without the Miniſtry of any Man, by ſmelling a Roſe? Would not they ſay, that he engag'd with them in a ſtrict Union, by a Treaty more ſolemn than Obadiah's Conference, and which appears at this Day? This Treaty, made at the Requeſt of the Chriſtians, imports an Alliance betwixt 'em and Mahomet. This Impoſtor enters with them into the Covenant of God, into the Peace of the Prophets, Apoſtles and Saints. By Virtue of this Alliance "He [g] promiſes to protect "the Chriſtian Magiſtrates, their Temples and Con- "vents. He aſſures 'em, that no Biſhop ſhall be re- "mov'd from his Dioceſe, nor any Chriſtian forced "to change his Religion. He exempts all the Eccle- "ſiaſticks from all Impoſts, and regulates the Tri- "bute the rich Merchants ought to pay him." It can't be denied, but this Treaty is advantageous to thoſe that ſettle in the Muſſulman Territories. It has been found in the Convent of Monks of Mount Carmel, near Mount Libanon, and the Original Sign'd by many Witneſſes, Mahomet's Diſciples, and by his Secretary Moavia, has been brought to the King of France's Library. The Chriſtians are even ſo fond of this little Advantage, that they make bitter Complaints, that they are not ſuffer'd to enjoy it; and that Mahomet having aſſociated with 'em at the Birth of his Religion, which was yet weak, ſhould deſert them afterwards. Could ſuch a Piece be produced againſt the Jews, we ſhould be the more perplex'd to anſwer for 'em, in as much as this is ſaid to be acknowledged genuine by ſeveral Muſſulmans. But yet I am perſuaded it is a Fraud, or rather a bungling Trick of the Monks, who have thought to procure ſome ſhadow of Reſt, and Relief by this Impoſture; for not to obſerve, that it enumerates too many Particulars, of whatever might be advantageous to Chriſtianity, whilſt Mahomet demands nothing for his Religion, nor ſo much as the Liberty of its Exerciſe; there are two things that manifeſt the Falſhood; one that this Treaty is dated the Fourth Year of the Hegira; that is from Mahomet's Flight; and indeed it is ſuppos'd, he had yet made no great Progreſs, when he concluded this Alliance. But 'tis known, that Dates did not run thus in Mahomet's time. 'Twas Omar, the ſecond Caliph that ſucceeded him, who began this Epoch, in Imitation of the Chriſtians, who ſometimes reckon'd their Years from the Perſecution of the Chriſtians, which they call the Æra of the Martyrs. Seventeen Years were already paſs'd when this Æra began, and Mahomet Died the Tenth, or rather in the Beginning of the Eleventh Year of his Flight. Beſides Mahomet in this Treaty calls the Chriſtian Religion, a Religion ordained of God. The Chriſtian, who was the Author of the Fraud, has ſpoke according to his own Opinions, forgetting that he ought to have deſcribed only thoſe of Mahomet. Obadiah can't be accuſed of making ſuch Alliances.

XVII. On the contrary Mahomet infinitely hated this Nation; whether he did it out of Policy to engage the Chriſtians in his Train, or that their Reſiſtance did not pleaſe him. He has inſerted Curſes againſt 'em in his Alcoran. He looks upon them as Murderers of the Prophets; and People juſtly puniſhed by God, for their inſolent Violation of the Sabbath, the Obſervation whereof had been ſo ſtrictly enjoin'd; and his Interpreters add, that God for an exemplary Chaſtiſement, once metemorphos'd into Apes all thoſe that ſold Fiſh on that Day; ſo that their Neighbours returning from the Synagogue, did not know them. This Change continued Three Days, and ended with the Death of the Guilty. Mahomet farther complained of the Incredulity of the Jews, and maintained, that one of the Articles of his Alcoran againſt them fell from Heaven, becauſe inſtead of receiving him as a Prophet, they endeavour'd to carry off his Followers, and bring them into their Religion. He could not bear the Reſiſtance of Cajab, one of the Principal Jews, who ſtopp'd the Progreſs of his Sect; and therefore he ſuborned People to kill him. Laſtly he came to an open War againſt them. In the Third Year of the Hegira he beſieged the Caſtles they poſſeſs'd in the Hegiaſa, and forcing thoſe that were retired there, to ſurrender at Diſcretion, he baniſh'd 'em the Country, and gave their Eſtates to the Muſſulmans. The Jews muſter'd together again, and fought him in the [h] Battel of Kaibar, Four Days Journey from Medina. The Arabians ſay, that he carried off the Gates of the City, and uſed 'em for a Shield to fight the Jews. However they were defeated and maſſacred, excepting Cajab, who had the Art to eſcape with the reſt of the Nation. 'Tis no Wonder, that he afterwards gave 'em Safe-guards, becauſe he looked upon 'em as a Conquered People, and ſubject to his Empire. Nevertheleſs the Jews ſtill confederated with this Prophet's Enemies in the War of the French; but a Muſſulman Convert had the Art to divide them, and break the Treaty. Mahomet took Advantage of ſuch a favourable Circumſtance; and reduced the Jews to the hard Neceſſity of paying Tribute to enjoy their Incomes. Laſtly [i] in the Seventh Year of the Hegira, a Jeweſs named Zinghe, reſolved to deliver her Nation from this Impoſtor's Yoke, and preſented him with a poiſon'd Sheep. Mahomet taſted it; but immediately ſaid, This bit informs me, that the beaſt is poiſon'd, and refuſed to eat it.

XVIII. The Arabians farther complain, that Seventy Jews form'd a Conſpiracy againſt Abdalla, Mahomet's Father; and that to execute this Deſign, they all came ſecretly to Meccha, with poiſon'd Swords, and fell upon him in an unexpected manner; but that Angels in the Appearance of Men, came to his Succour; and reſcued him from their hands [k]. The Jews Hatred begun with Mahomet's Father; but no Conſequence can be drawn from that, for the Arabians have imagin'd this Conſpiracy only to raiſe Abdalla's Glory. We muſt alſo put to their Account what they ſay, that the Jews of the Hegiaſa kept a Tunick of St. John Baptiſt all bloody, and that the Blood run from time to time; and that another Tradition ſaid, the Blood ran till the Birth of Abdalla, the [g] Vide Ricaut's Hiſtory of the Ottoman Empire, l. ii. c. 2. p. 320. [h] Abulphar. Dyn. p. 102. [i] Vattier Hiſt. Mahometan. l. 1. p. 6. 8. [k] De Generat. Machumet. Lat. reddita ab Herman. Dalmata, p. 207.

Father

Father of Mahomet. The Arabian Jews had neither the Tradition nor the Tunick aſcrib'd to 'em. 'Tis a Fable of the Arabians, who think by this to exalt the Glory of their Falſe-Prophet, and who otherwiſe honour the Memory of John-Baptiſt; for they ſay, that his Blood could not be ſtench'd, when his Head was cut off, till God had reveng'd his Death by a great Deſolation of the Jewiſh People.

XIX. Laſtly, The Jews ſeeing Mahomet appear, and the Succeſs of his Arms, which was alledg'd to 'em as an Argument for the Truth of his Religion, anſwer'd this Impoſtor, [1] You are not our Maſter; the Meſſiah the Son of David, who muſt come, ſhall be our Lord. Mahomet continuing to exhort them to pay the Prayers, and Tythes, and Tribute to God, which are due to him, (for the Tribute that was paid to the Prophet, was the Tribute of God;) Phineas, who maintain'd the Conference for the Jews, anſwer'd, by way of Drollery, That 'twas a pleaſant thing to ſee a God poor, and Men rich; a God that required Money and Tribute of Men. This Jeſt drew upon him a box o' th' Ear from Abubecer, who was on Mahomet's ſide, and who was the Firſt of the Caliphs; he would alſo have kill'd him, and expiated this Anſwer with his Blood. The Deputation of the Twelve Perſons, whom this Nation ſent to Mahomet to Interrogate him, and which has given occaſion to theſe Accuſations, proves nothing againſt it; for theſe Deputies might deſign to entangle this Impoſtor, and lay Snares for him. We know this had long ago been the Cuſtom of the Scribes and Phariſees, and Doctors of the Law: And therefore Mahomet, who was aware of their Artifice, diſmiſs'd 'em with ſhame, and would not anſwer them. 'Tis ſaid, that they afterwards addreſs'd themſelves to Aly, Couſin and Son-in-Law to Mahomet, and who was afterwards Caliph, to ask him the reaſon of the Diviſions that ſprung up amongſt 'em, about their Religion and Government, from the Riſe of their Sect. But Aly anſwer'd, That their Feet were ſcarce dry, after the Paſſage of the Red-Sea, but they murmur'd againſt Moſes, and deſired Gods like thoſe of the Nations. They return'd another time to inſult him, upon ſome unlucky Reports that were ſpread of Aiſchah, Mahomet's Wife. But he anſwer'd 'em, That there had been People among 'em ſo very Wicked, as not to have ſpar'd the Virgin, the pureſt of Creatures. Some will have Aly's Anſwer relate to the Ancient Hereticks, who diſhonour'd the Virgin; but it fell directly upon the Jews, who had reviled her after the Conception of the Son of God. If theſe Anſwers of Aly diſcover the ſubtlety of his Wit, they prove, at the ſame time, that the Jews held no Correſpondence with Mahomet, or his firſt Diſciples. But when they ſaw the dreadful Progreſs of his Empire, they made uſe of it to evade Daniel's Prophecy, in maintaining, that he is noted by the Legs and Feet of Iron in Nebuchadnezzar's Statue; from whence they conclude, that the Meſſiah, who is to deſtroy this Empire, ought not to appear, till it is form'd, and had exercis'd all its Violence; which Time is not yet arrived.

[1] Sufrata xxxix. p. 265. Hotting. Hiſtor. l. 11. c. 2. p. 216.

CHAP. XIX.

The Continuation of the Hiſtory of the VIIth Century, and of the State of the Ten Tribes, and other Jews of the Perſian Monarchies.

I. The Conqueſts of Omar, the next Caliph to Mahomet. II. The Taking of Jeruſalem. Theophanes's Narrative compared with the Arabians. III. The Fall of the Perſian Monarchy. Its laſt King. IV. Othman elected Caliph. His Conqueſts. V. Aly: The Battle of Camel. VI. Moavia, Founder of the Ommiades, reigns at Damaſcus. His Character. VII. Ninety Battles fought againſt Aly. His Stratagems. VIII. The State of the Jews. Iſdigerdes's Perſecution. IX. Whether the Jews Confederated with the Muſſulmen. X. The Equity of theſe latter. Liberty of Conſcience reſtored. XI. Aly marries the Princeſs of Perſia to the Head of the Captivity. XII. Omar's Equity. XIII. Maimbourg confuted concerning the Perſecution of the Jews. XVI. The Academies reſtored. XV. The Converſion of the Jews in Egypt.

I. THE Arabians made great Conqueſts, and the Jews of the Eaſt univerſally chang'd Maſters. Omar, the Second Caliph after Mahomet's Death, reign'd but [a] Ten Years and a half. In the mean time, he took Thirty ſix thouſand Cities or Caſtles, pull'd down Four thouſand Temples belonging to the Chriſtians or Magi, built Fourteen hundred Moſques, and made himſelf Maſter of all the Eaſt.

Notwithſtanding all that Heraclius could do to Relieve Damaſcus, which this Caliph Beſieged by his Generals, he enter'd it at the ſame time by Aſſault and Capitulation; for they had forc'd the Intrenchments and one ſide, whilſt they Capitulated on the other.

II. Syria being Conquer'd, by the Taking of this Place, they proſecuted [b] the Siege of Jeruſalem, which was already begun. Theophanes [c] ſays, That the City being taken, Omar, habited in a tatter'd Chamlet, and walking the Streets with an air of Devotion, deſir'd them to ſhew him Solomon's Temple. Sophronius, who ſaw him in this Equipage, cry'd, The Oracle of the Prophet was accompliſh'd, and the abomination was ſeen in the holy place. The Application was neither appoſite nor judicious. However, Omar only deſired to ſee the Temple, that he might raiſe a Moſque in the Place: But he was amaz'd, to ſee the Foundation of his new Structure fall aſunder as they were laying. He conſulted the Jews about it, who anſwer'd, That the Miracle would never ceaſe, till he had pluck'd up a Croſs that was fix'd upon the Mount of Olives. Omar believ'd it: The Croſs was pull'd up, and the Foundations of the Moſque continu'd ſolid: Which was a Motive for the Muſſulmen to believe the Jews, and to pull down innumerable Croſſes.

The Arabians aſſert, on the contrary, That their Caliph granted the Biſhop of Jeruſalem a very honourable Capitulation for the City; That he enter'd it, without ſuffering any Diſorders of his Troops; and not allowing any Church to be taken from the Chriſtians, he very modeſtly deſired of Sophronius a Place where he might build a Moſque. The Biſhop ſhew'd him Jacob's Stone, and the Place where Solomon's Temple ſtood, which the Chriſtians had fill'd with Ordure, in hatred to the Jews. Omar labour'd himſelf upon cleanſing this Place, and was imitated in this Devotion by the principal Officers of his Army. In fine, he built a Moſque there. Theſe are two very different Accounts: In one, Solomon's Temple was ſtill ſtanding; and in the other, we find the Place where it ſtood, to be fill'd

[a] He began to reign in the 13*th Year of the* Hegira, which began in the Year 622. Abubecer was the Firſt Caliph. [b] An. 637.
[c] Theophan. Chr. p. 284.

with Filth. One imagines a Miracle of a Croſs, which the others knew nothing of: One brings in the Jews ſpeaking in hatred to the Chriſtian Religion, and the other charges the Chriſtians with Violence.

III. Omar at the ſame time attack'd the Perſians by his Generals, and after many Battles, Iſdigerdes, the laſt of the Perſian Kings, loſt that of Cadeſia. His Capital, and Children, and Treaſures fell into the Enemy's hands: For his own part, he fled to Chorazan, where he lay conceal'd for ſixteen Years, ſhifting from Place to Place [d], till one of his Subjects, the Governor of Merou, betray'd him, and invited Tarcan King of the Turks. Iſdigerdes gave him Battle; loſt it; and attempting to paſs a River in his Flight, the Boatſman diſputed with him about the Price of his Paſſage; he demanded but Four Halfpence, and the Prince, who perhaps had it not, was willing to pay him with a Precious-Bracelet, which the Ferry-man fooliſhly refus'd. Whilſt they were in this Diſpute, the Turkiſh Horſe, who purſu'd him cloſe, arriv'd and took away his Life. Thus ended the Perſian Monarchy; and the Jews, who had been long under its Dominion, came under that of the Saracens, and Omar, who puſh'd on his Conqueſts on one hand to the River Oxus, and on the other to Egypt, where he made himſelf Maſter of Alexandria. Mahomet had educated him, ſince two Parties Appealing from the Judgment of this Falſe-Prophet to that of Omar, when he had Heard them, he went and fetch'd his Sabre, and ſtruck off the Head of him that had refus'd to ſtand by Mahomet's Deciſion. He took the Title of Commander of the Faithful, and obſerv'd ſuch a great Simplicity in the midſt of all his Glory, that the Governor of Suſiana going to wait upon him in a Temple, he found him a-ſleep upon the Steps, among the Poor: And it was only to do an Honour to his Nation before this Stranger, that he went and ſate in the Pulpit of the Moſque, which ſerv'd him for a Throne. Laſtly, Renouncing the Ties of Nature, and the Endearments of Blood, he declar'd the Caliphſhip ſhould be Elective, and that his Son ſhould only have a Place in the Council, unleſs he was found worthy to Reign. He was kill'd by a Slave, as he was at Prayer.

IV. After his Death, the Six Electors met to Nominate a Caliph. One of them renounc'd the Election of himſelf, upon Condition he might Chuſe the Caliph alone. The thing was Agreed to, and he made Choice of Othman, in Preference to Aly the Son-in-Law of Mahomet, and who was the moſt Eminent for that Dignity. In reality, Othman had the ſame Pretenſions as Aly; for he was call'd the Poſſeſſor of Two Lights, becauſe he had marry'd Two Daughters of Mahomet, who had communicated to all his Poſterity the Light of Prophecy; and moreover, he was a Man of Merit. He intirely ſubdued Chorazan, and many Provinces of the Eaſt; and puſh'd his Conqueſts as far as Andalous, that is, Andaluſia and Spain. In the mean time, Aly, who always look'd upon him with a jealous Eye, rais'd ſome Arabians againſt him. They beſieg'd him in his Caſtle of Medina, where Water failing after a Three Month's Siege, he came out to the Rebels with the Alcoran in his Hand, and proteſted, he would have no other Judge than that Book, which was to be the Rule of their Conduct. This Proteſtation was not heard: The Reſpect they ought to have for the Alcoran, did not ſtop the Mutineers; they ſtabb'd him in many Places, and his Blood guſh'd out upon the Sacred Book.

V. Aly, Sirnam'd the Lion of God, always Victorious, was Elected in his Room; and though his Paſſion for the Caliphſhip was violent enough to make him kill his Brother-in-Law, yet he wanted to be intreated to accept this Dignity. The Muſſulman Pontiffs are as Politick as thoſe of the Chriſtians, who ſeem to flie and refuſe the Pontificate, whilſt they burn with a criminal deſire to poſſeſs it.

Et fugit ad ſalices, & ſe cupit ante videri.

Aiſchah, Mahomet's Widow, rebell'd againſt her Son-in-Law; and as ſhe had great Intereſt with the Muſſulmen, already provok'd by the Conſpiracy againſt Othman, ſhe was at no trouble to form a numerous Army. The Battle was fought [e] near Baſſora. Aly got the Victory, who took Aiſchah, after a great deal of Blood ſhed about the Camel ſhe rode upon; becauſe the brave Men had ſurrounded this Woman, and loſt their Lives in her defence: For which reaſon, it was call'd the Battle of Camel. He reſpectfully ſent back his Mother-in-Law to Mecca; and ſeeing Arabia and the Babylonian Irach fully ſubjected to his Command, he March'd to ſtifle another Rebellion, which was rais'd againſt him in Syria.

VI. Moawia Headed this Revolt, reſolving to revenge the Death of Othman, his Benefactor and Relation. This Prince was a Lover of Men of Wit; and he Pardon'd an Arabian Robber, for the ſake of four Witty Verſes he compos'd in his preſence. He prided himſelf in his Humanity and Clemency. The one is Brave, and the other Courageous, (ſaid he, ſpeaking of his Enemies) but for my own part, I am content to be conſider'd among the Muſſulmen as a Merciful and Gentle Prince. 'Twas he, that firſt made a Gallery, or a ſeparate Place in the Moſque, for the Caliph, who was at once the Pontiff and Sovereign. 'Twas from thence he repeated the Office of the Muſſulmen, and made 'em a ſort of Homily, as the Biſhop and Curate do in the Church of Rome. This Prince was Maſter of Syria, and made Damaſcus his Capital: He puſh'd his Conqueſts as far as Conſtantinople, and beſieg'd it ſo long, as to Sow and Reap in the neighbouring Field.

VII. This was a formidable Enemy for Aly, who notwithſtanding March'd againſt him, and arriv'd in a little time upon the Frontiers of Syria. Water failing him, he ask'd for ſome of a Chriſtian Hermit who had his Cell the Camp. The Hermit had only three Hogſheads of Water in his Ciſtern, but he told Aly, There was a Well in the Neighbourhood, ſhut up with a huge Stone, and Tradition declar'd, That a Prophet, or the Meſſenger of a Prophet, ſhould one day open it. Aly diſcover'd the Well, and caus'd it eaſily to be uncover'd; which oblig'd the Hermit to throw himſelf at the Muſſulman's Feet, and to follow him as a Prophet. This Cheat, under his Frock and Haircloth, preſented Aly with an old Parchment, written by the Hand of Simeon Ben-Sapha, that is, of Simeon Cephas, or St. Peter, which contain'd the Coming of the laſt of the Prophets, the Arrival of his Heir in Syria, and the Diſcovery of the Well. This was an agreeable Flattery to Aly's Vanity, who return'd Thanks to God, and continu'd his March againſt Moawia.

The Armies were quickly in ſight; but not venturing to give a deciſive Battle, they fought in little Parties; they reckon'd Ninety of theſe Skirmiſhes in a Hundred Days. Moawia loſt Forty five thouſand Men, but Aly infinitely leſs. The former perceiving himſelf too much weaken'd, faſten'd many Copies of the Alcoran at the end of Lances, and cauſing 'em to be carry'd at the Head of the Army, he cry'd, This was the Book that was to decide all Differences, and that it was not lawful, without reaſon, to ſhed Muſſulman Blood. Aly was ſenſible of the Artifice; but his Troops being ſtruck with an Inſtinct of Devotion for that Book, which they had already ſtain'd with Othman's Blood, demanded that

[d] An. 653. [e] An. 655.

Arbiters

Arbiters [f] ſhould be choſen, to terminate the Differences betwixt Moavia and Aly.

Aly's Umpire was nominated by his Generals, who choſe a Man of great Devotion and Simplicity; Ottimo Theologo, ma mediocre Pontifice, as was ſaid of Pope Adrian VI. Moavia's Arbitrator was a Man of Art. They Agreed to Depoſe the two Pretenders, and to Elect a Caliph, who ſhould Rule over all the Countries which the Muſſulmen had Conquer'd. Aly's Arbitrator ſpoke firſt, and cry'd, He Depos'd Ali and Moavia, as he took the Ring from his Finger. Moavia's Arbitrator approv'd Aly's Depoſition, and confirm'd Moavia in the Caliphſhip, with which he Inveſted him in the ſame manner, by putting his Ring upon his Finger. 'Twas in vain to appeal to ſincere Dealing, and the Agreement, which the laſt Umpire openly violated. They Curs'd and Excommunicated one another. In the mean time, Aly, who honeſtly obſerv'd the Suſpenſion of Arms, had the mortification to ſee a great part of his Army rebel againſt him, becauſe he had acknowledg'd another Judge betwixt him and Moavia, than God, who alone had that Title. He beat the Mutineers; and march'd [g] a ſecond time againſt Moavia with different Succeſs. Here he loſt Abdalla, one of his beſt Generals: He had alſo the misfortune to hear that his own Brother [h] had deſerted him, and ſided with his Enemies. At laſt, three Reſolute Men, ſhrag'd to ſee ſo much Bloodſhed, reſolv'd to kill the Heads of a Faction who caus'd ſo great a Diviſion betwen the Muſſulmen. Aly was kill'd [i] in the Moſque by one of theſe Aſſaſſines, and Moavia was only wounded. 'Tis ſaid, that to cure his Wound, he conſented to drink a Liquor that made him Impotent. Haſſan, Aly's Son, was forc'd to yield the Caliphſhip to Moavia, who remain'd Maſter of Syria and Egypt: He was the chief Founder of the Race of the Ommiades, which was always an Enemy to that of Aly.

Jeſid, his Son and Succeſſor, was Cruel and Impious; and therefore the Perſians never ſpeak of him, but they cry, The Curſe of God be upon him. However, he was acknowledg'd Caliph in Perſia, and in all the Lands of the Muſſulmen, except Mecca, Medina, and ſome Cities of Chaldea.

Moavia II. ſucceeded his Father; but he was of ſo weak a Conſtitution, that he voluntarily reſign'd the Caliphſhip [k] three Months after he had accepted it, and went and ſhut himſelf up in a Chamber, which he ſeldom or never came out of. Being wiſer, or more reſign'd than Charles V. he never repented his Abdication, and liv'd happily in his Retreat: But the People regretted the loſs of him, and caus'd the Man to be bury'd alive, who advis'd him to quit his Dignity. He was ſo ſcrupulous, as not to charge his Conſcience with the Choice of a Succeſſor, becauſe he did not know any one ſufficiently accompliſh'd to ſuſtain ſo heavy a Burden. His Device upon his Seal was, The World is nothing but a Cheat.

Marvan [l] was Elected, upon Condition, That his Children ſhould not ſucceed him, and that the Caliphſhip ſhould return to the Houſe [m] of Moavia. Marvan at firſt deſign'd to execute his Promiſe; but having humbled all his Enemies, he deſpis'd Khaled, who was to ſucceed him, and call'd him Baſtard. This young Prince's Mother, whom Marvan had marry'd, could not bear this Inſult, but reveng'd her Son, by ſtrangling her Husband.

VIII. We have related this great Revolution in a continu'd thread, by which the Perſian Monarchy fell, and the diſperſed Tribes came under the Empire of the Muſſulmen, who became Maſters of the Eaſt. Let us ſee at preſent what ſhare they had in theſe Events.

Firſt, Their Hiſtorians [n] aſſert, That Iſdigerdes King of Perſia Perſecuted them, ſome time before the War of the Arabians againſt him. Their Synagogues were given to the Magi; their Academies ſhut up; and the Perſecution caus'd the Fall of a great many Perſons. No wonder then, that they rejoyced upon the change of their Maſter. 'Tis an Inclination rooted in the Heart of all the Oppreſſed, to deſire and rejoyce at the humbling of their Perſecutor. They imagine, that God, a Juſt Avenger of the Innocent, puniſhes the Oppreſſor, and makes him ſenble of his Iniquity. The Jews paſs this Judgment upon Iſdigerdes, and the Perſians, who had given 'em ſuch rude Treatment.

They [o] are accuſed, not only of Rejoycing at the Conqueſts of the Muſſulmen, who deſtroy'd abundance of Churches, and did great miſchief to the Criſtians; but of Aſſociating with 'em; of taking their Mark, and encouraging them to carry their Arms into the Empire. 'Tis pretended alſo, that [p] Beda was inform'd of this horrible Conſpiracy, and, that notwithſtanding the prodigious diſtance of Places, he knew ſo many Particulars of it, as to make open Complaints, by comparing it to the League which Herod and Pilate had made againſt Jeſus-Chriſt. I doubt not, but the Jews of that time rejoyced at the Fall of their Enemies. 'Tis a common Motion of the Heart, which, tho' criminal, ceaſes not to be almoſt general. In the mean time, their Joy muſt have been often interrupted by their own Misfortunes: For the Havock which the Conquerors made in Perſia and Syria, cou'd not chuſe but give 'em Diſturbance. Beſides, it was not neceſſary that they ſhould provoke the Saracens to War, who were ſufficiently inclin'd to it: And from the moment they had taſted the pleaſure of Wealth, by plundering ſome Provinces, they deſpiſed their ancient Poverty, which was involuntary, and thought of nothing but enriching themſelves with the Spoils of all their Neighbours. We ought therefore to ſeek the Motives of the War, and of the Invaſion of ſo many Kingdoms, only in the Avarice of the Arabians, and the Ambition of their Leaders, which was never ſatiated.

X. In the Third place, The Jews highly extoll the Humanity of the Arabians, who condemn the Violence offer'd to Conſcience, and reſtor'd them to the free Profeſſion of their Religion. They liv'd peaceably under theſe firſt Caliphs, and their Academies were open; for Chanina govern'd that of Nahardea, whilſt Mahomet was extending his Religion and Empire. Chana [q], one of the Excellents, taught at Pundebita, under Omar. Mar. Rabba, who was another Excellent, ſucceeded him; whilſt Chenina Surſæus, the Son of Calipta, reign'd at Sora.

XI. Fourthly, Aly had ſome Controverſies [r] with them, about the Reproach they made him, That his Sect, tho' juſt born, was already divided into Factions. And indeed, the Muſſulmen had already great Diſputes among themſelves, about the Attributes of God, which ſome ſeparated from his Eſſence. Some maintain'd, That God is the Maſter of the Actions of Man, and that he can do in him and by him whatever he pleaſes; and that he was at liberty to bring all Mankind to Paradiſe. Others, denying this Neceſſity, which the Decree and Influence of God impoſe, pretend, That Man is Free; That the Deity having given him the Power of Acting, he determines himſelf to Good or Evil, without the need of any Aſſiſtance. Some ſo exalted Faith, as to believe Good Works uſeleſs: Others maintain'd, That he, who with Faith committed a great Sin, was a Deſerter of Religion, who ſhould periſh eternally in Hell. The Ancient Muſſulmen at that time debated the ſame Controverſies, which ſo frequently inflame the Chriſtians. Let us add further, one ſtroke of Reſemblance upon the Principle of Faith. Some are for having no other Rule than the Alcoran. Others believe, That the Alcoran being inſufficient to determine all Caſes, it is neceſſary to appeal to the Tradition of the Prophet. A third ſort add, The Conſent of the Doctors. And laſtly, Others will have Reaſon to be Judge; becauſe the Caſes being infinite, they are oblig'd to follow it, and make it the Rule of Faith.

[f] An. 657, & 658. [g] An. 659. [h] Okail. [i] An. 662. [k] An. 64. of the Hegira, of Jeſus-Chriſt 683. [l] Vattier's Mahometan Hiſtory, l. 1. p. 59. makes Gabdolli ſucceed, who reign'd but over certain Provinces. [m] By Khaled his Brother. [n] Salomon Ben-Virgæ, p. 5. [o] Paul. Diacon H. l. 22. p 312. [p] Beda in Luc. xxiii. [q] Ganz. Tſemach. An 374, 390, & 430. p. 122, 123. [r] Abulphar. Dyn. 9. p. 105, 106.

The Jews drew Advantages from theſe Diviſions, which were the more terrible, becauſe they tore each other by Civil Wars. They once preſs'd Aly upon this Subject; who demanded of 'em, in his turn, Wherefore, when they had ſcarce paſs'd the Red-Sea, they deſir'd Moſes to make 'em Gods, becauſe they had ſeen Idolaters proſtrate themſelves before the Idols of the Moabites? Which reduc'd 'em to Silence. The ſame thing will always happen, when People will judge of the Truth of a Religion, by the Conduct of its Profeſſors, and the Diviſions that ariſe amongſt 'em.

Nevertheleſs, Aly protected theſe ſame Jews with whom he diſputed; for they were ſtudious to prepoſſeſs him in their behalf, by the Homage they had paid him: For they ſay themſelves, that R. Iſaac, one of the Sublime Doctors, or Excellents, went to pay his Reſpect and Homage to this Caliph, when he had Conquer'd the King of Perſia; and that this Prince highly honour'd him, and rais'd him to a great Dignity. [s] He alſo marry'd the King of Perſia's Daughter to Boſtenay, who was then Prince of the Captivity. According to the Calculation of theſe Hiſtorians, this Marriage was one of the laſt things which Aly concluded before his Death; for he was kill'd the ſame Year [t], whilſt they were celebrating the rigorous Faſt of Ramhadam. We can only make ſome Objections, concerning the Homage that Iſaac paid to Aly; ſince it was not he, that won the Battle of Cadeſia againſt Iſdigerdes. Aly was not yet Caliph, or King, when the Perſian Monarchy fell; and we muſt give Omar the Glory of its Ruin.

XII. Omar ſometimes favour'd the Jews: For a Muſſulman having gain'd his Cauſe by Mahomet's Deciſion, and the Proceſs being brought before him to be reviſ'd, he took his Sabre, and cut off the obſtinate Muſſulman's Head, to avenge the Jew of his Adverſary's Cavils. After he was Caliph, a Jew complaining to him, of a Governor of a Province, to whom he had deliver'd ſome Goods which he did not pay for; Omar call'd for Ink: and there being none in the Place, he took a Brick from the Wall of Medina, which he was building, and drew upon it theſe words; Put an end to the Complaints that are brought againſt you, or leave your Government. The Jew carrying the Brick, was preſently paid the Money. Which ſhews what Acceſs this Nation had to the Caliph, and this Prince's love of Juſtice. But yet, if he had Equity for Private Perſons, he was very Injurious to the Nation: For that part which continued in Arabia after Mahomet's Conqueſts, exactly paid the Tribute to the Muſſulmen. [u] But Omar remembring the Words of the Prophet, That two Laws ought not to be ſuffer'd in the Iſland of Arabia, expell'd the Jews.

XIII. Laſtly, We are told, That ſome Jews, that tamper'd in Magick, and Predictions of Things to come, deceiv'd Jeſid I. and promis'd him a Reign of Forty Years, on Condition he would aboliſh Images in his Empire. A Saraçen, who was already ſcandaliz'd at Images, would have bought a long Life at a much greater Price. Jeſid therefore granted the Jews their Demand: But ſcarce had he publiſh'd his Edict againſt Images, but a great Inſurrection was made in Heaven againſt him. The Virgin, and all the Saints, concern'd for their Images, Petition'd for his Death. And at their Prayer, Jeſid ended his Reign and his Life. Moavia II. meant to revenge his Father's Death, and the Jews Impoſture; but they eſcap'd his juſt Reſentments, by flying to the Roman Territories, where they were the cauſe of greater Troubles. Bartolocci [w] aſſerts, That Saranta Pechis was kill'd by Ulid, who deſign'd to puniſh him for killing his Father. But Ulid was not then Caliph, and the Jews eſcap'd his pretended Vengeance. The Modern Hiſtorian of the Iconoclaſtes [x] has made this the Exordium of his Romance. But a Man can't be more manifeſtly deceiv'd, than he is: For Haſſan the Son of Aly, having given up the Caliphſhip to the Houſe of the Ommiades, to live retired, and do Alms-deeds, this Houſe was very favourable to the Jews, and permitted the Reſtoration of their Academies. Beſides, they make a Reign of Forty Years to be foretold Jeſid [y]: Three Years after his Death; for he died in 683. Whereas the Prediction was never made, according to Maimbourg; and the Edict againſt Images was not publiſh'd till the Year 686. How could a long Reign be predicted to a Man, whoſe Son had already left the Caliphſhip?

'Tis contradicting the Character of Aſtrologers, to make 'em promiſe a long Life, upon Condition of deſtroying Images; for they believe that the Aſpect of the Stars abſolutely determines the Event: ſo that neither Piety nor Religion directs them. Nor did Moavia II. think of revenging his Father's Death. The Arabians were overjoy'd, to ſee themſelves deliver'd from a Prince, whom they openly accuſe of Impiety; and his Son, as weak and ſoft a Prince as ever was, hardly took the reins of Government in hand, but he deliver'd 'em up again to the Grandees of the Nation. The Arabians call'd him the Father of Night, becauſe of his Natural Weakneſs, and want of Health, which hinder'd him from ſeeing Day, and appearing in the Light. This Prince, who hardly reign'd three Months, had no thoughts of making Executions, and Perſecuting the Jews, who could not have promis'd his Father's Life, till after he was Dead.

XIV. The Nation, inſtead of ſuffering under Jeſid and his firſt Succeſſors, enjoy'd a full and abſolute Peace. Its Prince of the Captivity reign'd with almoſt as great an Authority, as if he had been King; whether Jeſid's indifference for Religion contributed to it, or that he had purchas'd this Prince's Favour. The Academies had been almoſt abandon'd during the Revolution. So great was the Deſertion of Scholars and Maſters, that they were forc'd at Sora to make a Weaver Profeſſor, becauſe he had ſtudy'd the Law. But then they began to reliſh the Sciences again, and many Excellents came upon the Stage. The Profeſſion of Phyſick, which is always profitable, reſum'd its former luſtre. A Prieſt of Alexandria, nam'd Aaron, who, according to the Cuſtom of thoſe Times, had the Charge of Bodies aſwell as Souls, was at once Phyſician and Teacher: He had Publiſh'd a Book, intitled, The Pandects, or, The Treaſure of Remedies. The Jew Maſſergieuſe, who was at the Caliph's Court, then Tranſlated it into Arabick. I know not how this celebrated Jewiſh Phyſician is made to live in the Reign of Heraclius, and the Caliphſhip of Marvan I. ſince theſe two Princes were not Cotemporaries. Marvan I. Succeſſor to Moavia, and Jeſid I. reign'd in the 68th Year of the Hegira, which is the 684th of the Chriſtian Æra. We ought therefore to place him at the end of the VIIth

[s] Ganz. Tſemach. David. p. 123. An. 420. [t] An. 662. [u] Vattier. Hiſt. Mahom. l. 1. [w] Bartol. B. R. t. 4. p. 464.
[x] Maimbourg. Hiſt. of the Icon. l. 1. [y] An 686.

Century;

Century; and acknowledge, that the Jews flouriſh'd in the Eaſt, under the Reign of the firſt Caliphs.

XV. This Nation alſo flouriſh'd in Egypt, which the Ommiades had made themſelves Maſters of, aſwell as of Syria. A Solitary of this Country, call'd Coſmus the Schoolman, ſeeing the Harveſt to be abundant, undertook their Converſion; which he labour'd upon with ſo much diligence, that thoſe that viſited him, generally found him Writing againſt the Jews. As he not eaſily came out himſelf, he ſent his Diſciples, and, amongſt others, the famous Moſchus, to Diſpute againſt 'em by the Holy Scripture: But we know not what was the Effect of theſe Motions and Writings, which are loſt.

CHAP. XX.

Of the Immerenians, and Jewiſh Homerites.

I. The Immerenians were not Jews. II. The Jewiſh Homerites: Their Conference with the Chriſtians. III. Hiſtorical Reflexions upon their Converſion. IV. The Jewiſh Homerites War and Murthers of the Chriſtians. V. A Romantick Account of Metaphraſtes. VI. His Conformity with the Abyſſine Martyrologers. VII. The way to know the Truth of this Matter. VIII. Nicephorus's Contradiction. IX. Another Fault of this Hiſtorian. X. Dunaan, a Cruel King. XI. The Martyrs he made. XII. An uncertain Converſion. XIII. Procopius's Account. XIV. Reflexions upon it.

I. THE Perſians had a Nation of Immerenians in their Empire, under their Subjection. Theodorus [a] ſays, That theſe People turn'd Jews, at the return of the Queen of Sheba, who had taken their Religion, in the Viſit ſhe made to the Wiſeſt of Kings. Valeſius thinks theſe People were Homerites deſcended from Abraham, by Ketura, Subjects to the Queen of Sheba, and Inhabitants of the Sea-coaſts on the South, and in the Neighbourhood of Æthiopia. But not to obſerve, that we are perfectly ignorant of the Hiſtory of their Converſion, and of the Name of the Miniſter that effected it, the Homerites were not Converted till Juſtinian's Reign. So that they had reſumed their Judaiſm, if it be true, that they had turn'd Chriſtians in the Emperor Anaſtaſius's Time. The Difficulty is ſo manifeſt, that we can't get rid of it, without denying the truth of this Converſion, ſo little known, or acknowledging the Immerenians to be a different People from the Homerites we are going to ſpeak of.

II. Indeed, there was a People of Homerites, call'd Ethiopians, tho' they were ſituate beyond the Gulf in Arabia. Judaiſm triumph'd there, under the Protection of the King, who profeſs'd it. [b] Gregentius, Arch-Biſhop of Thephar in Arabia, labour'd to Convert them in the Vth Century. He had a Conference with Herbanus, before the King. The Aſſembly was numerous, becauſe the Principal Perſons of this Nation had been Summon'd from all the Cities of the Kingdom. They Diſputed a long time in the Palace to no Purpoſe. Herbanus maintain'd, That God had never, by his Prophets, commanded the Worſhipping the Son and the Holy Ghoſt; That it was an Innovation of the Chriſtians: He quoted the Commandment of the Law, which forbids the Worſhip of new Gods. Whether he read the Text otherwiſe than we, or maliciouſly paraphras'd it to apply it to Jeſus-Chriſt; but the Conference ended with a glorious Miracle, for Jeſus-Chriſt deſcended from Heaven, and ſending Thunder before him, he Appear'd to all the Company; he ſpoke, and ſaid, That He was come, upon the Arch-Biſhop's Prayer, to ſhew himſelf, and to declare, That He had been Crucified by their Fathers: And as he departed, he ſtruck all the Jews Blind, and only left the Chriſtians their Sight.

III. Herbanus, aſtoniſh'd at the Miracle, deſir'd Baptiſm, with all his Aſſociates, and they forthwith recover'd their Sight. Five thouſand and five hundred were Converted upon the ſpot, and Gregentius went to Baptize the reſt in all the Synagogues of the Kingdom. The King, who was already a Chriſtian, Iſſued out Edicts to prevent the return of Judaiſm, upon pain of Death. He ſubmitted himſelf to the Arch-Biſhop, and did nothing but by his Advice, in a Reign of Thirty Years. His Son Sordidus had always the ſame Deference for Churchmen. It appears by this Conference, Publiſh'd in Gregentius's Name, that moſt of the Homerites were Jews in the Vth Century; but that they all turn'd Chriſtians. In the mean time, great Scruples remain concerning the Truth of this Hiſtory; becauſe the Scribes and Phariſees are introduced into the Conference, whoſe Names known in the Goſpel, almoſt entirely periſh'd with the Temple, and never paſs'd into the Kingdom of the Homerites. The Miracle is too great, to have been no better known in ſo enlighten'd an Age. It is even ridiculouſly invented; for Jeſus-Chriſt never deſcended to ſpeak to his Crucifiers: And tho' he ſhould have done it, would he have amuſed himſelf in a Diſcouſe of two lines, to ſay, He was come, upon the Arch-Biſhop's Prayers. If Gregentius was the Author of this Piece, he ought not to have ſaid that; and 'tis plain, he only remark'd the Honour done him by Jeſus-Chriſt, and the King of the Homerites, out of a vain Oſtentation. But that which renders this Hiſtory ſuſpected, is, that twenty or thirty Years after this miraculous and total Converſion of the Kingdom of the Homerites, both King and People are found as much Jews as ever. However, Sordidus muſt have liv'd to the end of the Vth Century.

IV. The truth is, the Homerites were Jews under Juſtin's Empire, and at that time made an Enterprize againſt the Chriſtians of Negra. Theophanes, Cedrenus and Zonaras ſpeak only [c] in general terms of an Homerite Expedition, in which Arethas, King of the City of Negra, was a Martyr, and whoſe Death was reveng'd by the King of Ethiopia. But Nicephorus relates [d], That Dunaan, Prince of the Homerite Nation, and a Jew, being inſpired by the Devil, reſolv'd to attack Negra a City of Arabia. He cou'd not take it by Force; but having deſir'd leave of the Inhabitants to enter into it, upon his Oath, That he wou'd do them no Injury; it was no ſooner granted, but he offer'd all the City in Sacrifice to God, puting all to Fire and Sword. Arethas and others receiv'd the Crown of Martyrdom. A young Child, whom the Tyrant wou'd ſeparate from his Mother, bit his Thigh, and fled to die with her. Juſtin having notice of this Diſorder, ſent Troops to Elesbaan, who Commanded in Ethiopia, and having attack'd Dunaan by Sea and Land, vanquiſh'd him, took him alive, and put him to death. In acknowledgment of the Victory, Elesbaan threw himſelf into a very little Cell, where he liv'd upon Bread and Herbs.

V. Baronius ſays [e] a great deal more of it, becauſe he has follow'd Metaphraſtes, and imagin'd, that this Legendary, as Romantick as ever was, had

[a] Theodor. l. 2. p. 567. An. 515. [b] Gregentius Diſp. cum Herbano, B. M. P. t. vi. p. 1014, & 1040. [c] Theoph Chron. An 515. p. 144. Cedrenus Hiſt. Imp. p 299. Zonaras, t. iii. p. 49. [d] Nicephor. Hiſt. l. 17. c. 7. t. 2. p. 748. [e] Baron. An. 522. p. 85. t. vii.

tranſcrib'd

tranſcrib'd this Story from ſome very ancient Original. He not only makes Dunaan a Jew, but Circumciſes all his Subjects, Abraham's Poſterity by Ketura. Nevertheleſs, ſome worſhipp'd the Sun, and Moon, and Devils, whilſt others more ſtrictly obſerv'd the Law of Moſes. He places Negra, in the Kingdom of the Homerites, which was that of Dunaan; and imagines no other ground of the War, than a Hatred to the Chriſtians, becauſe that City had been Converted in Conſtantius's time, by I know not whom, that had work'd a great many Miracles, to bring the Inhabitants, who were Jews, to the Knowledge of the Truth. He gives us even the City's Capitulation with Dunaan, and all the Diſcourſes on one Side and t'other, before it was Concluded. We here find alſo, not only the Diſcourſes of Arethas, the Chief of the Martyrs that ſuffer'd on that Occaſion, but of Dunaan, and likewiſe of the Women and Children that reſiſted. He adds to all the other Hiſtorians, a miraculous Fire, that blaz'd in the Air, and falling on the Ground, terribly frighted Dunaan, and all the Army, without Converting it. To which he adds alſo the Leagues with Alamundar King of the Saracens, for Perſecuting the Chriſtians; tho' it was ſaid, but a little before, that this was a Chriſtian Prince. Laſtly, Elesbaan is made to arrive by Sea, having firſt loſt Fifteen thouſand Men by Land. He conſulted a Monk, who promis'd him Victory; and, upon Juſtin and the Biſhop of Alexandria's Prayers, God wrought a Miracle, to carry the Ships over a Boom, which Dunaan had placed at the entrance of the Harbour. He fought, took the Royal City; found Dunaan, who had chain'd himſelf and his Family in a Chain of Gold, and had given over all thoughts of ordering his Affairs. He kill'd him, with all his Court; built a Temple at Pharé; caus'd all the Homerites to be Baptized; and afterwards turn'd Monk. Thus the Jews of Æthiopia, after they had ſo long preſerv'd their Religion in this Country, became all Chriſtians, by Elasbaan's Victory over 'em. This Dunaan has been ſince made a Falſe-Meſſiah of the Jews, who boaſted of being the Son of Moſes, and ſeduced the Nation.

VI. This Juſtice muſt be done Metaphraſtes, that he agrees well enough with the Abyſſine Martyrologers; but as they are near as fabulous as thoſe of other Nations, and are very modern, no credit can be given to 'em. Metaphraſtes has manifeſtly hyperboliz'd, in aſſerting, that the Sea was but two Furlongs wide, and that Dunaan perceiving it, caus'd a Boom, or an Iron-Chain, to be made, able to reſiſt the Impetuoſity of the Waves; which is impoſſible, and falſe.

VII. Such as would attempt to diſintangle the Fable from the Hiſtory, ought to cut off that great number of Circumſtances, which having eſcaped the ancient Hiſtorians, could not be known by Metaphraſtes, and Baronius that came after him. They muſt ſtrike out all the Diſcourſes the Narrative is loaded with, which could not be preſerv'd, and the Hiſtorian only invented, to imbelliſh his Work. The Miracles, that are made to be wrought by the Fire, and the Waves of the Sea, whether to aſtoniſh Dunaan at his return, or to break a Boom, are no better imagin'd.

VIII. Nor can we juſtifie Nicephorus, who was not aware, that he related one Event twice, with quite different Circumſtances; for he ſays, in the Sequel of his Hiſtory, that in Juſtinian's Reign, Damnus King of the Jewiſh Homerites, hindering the Grecian Merchants from paſſing through his Territories to Caxumo, David the King of it Arm'd againſt Damnus, and made a Vow to embrace the Chriſtian Religion, if he return'd Victorious. It ſo happen'd, that he took his Enemy alive; and, in performance of his Vow, ſent to Juſtinian, to deſire a Biſhop, who Converted the Indians. There is a manifeſt Contradiction between theſe two Stories: for if the Kingdom of the Homerites terminated ſome Years before in the Perſon of Dunaan, as he ſays; and if the Indians of Caxumo were already Chriſtians, and their Prince a Votary; 'tis ridiculous to kindle a ſecond War againſt a Conquer'd People, and a Kingdom no longer in being, to give opportunity to the Chriſtian Church to eſtabliſh it ſelf in a Place where it was before. Either Nicephorus muſt groſly contradict himſelf, or elſe there was but one War made under Juſtin; and the Damnus, who is here made a King, was the Dunaan kill'd by Elasbaan, IX. Nor can we any more excuſe what the ſame Nicephorus ſays of Juſtin and Juſtinian; for 'tis falſe, that Elesbaan King of Caxumo Commanded in Æthiopia for Juſtin the Emperor, and that this Prince ſent him Troops to fight Dunaan. Æthiopia did not depend upon the Roman Emperor; and 'twas by his own Troops, which the Ethiopians make amount to 120000 Men, that Elesbaan defeated his Enemies. Nor is it probable that Juſtinian ſhould ſend a Biſhop to Caxumo to Convert David and his People. What occaſion was there to go in queſt of one to Conſtantinople, when there were Biſhops in Egypt? And Juſtinian could not have ſent thither a Jacobite Biſhop, as the Ethiopian Patriarch always was. Even thoſe, who agree in making Elesbaan or Kaleb a Cloiſter'd Saint, have not obſerv'd, that the Ethiopians were engag'd in Dioſcorus's Faction, and that they ſtill follow'd him, after the Council of Chalcedon. So that the Greeks and Ethiopians and Latins are agreed, to put a Prince guilty of Schiſm and Hereſie [f] in the Liſt of Saints.

X. Laſtly, Dunaan was not a Falſe-Meſſiah, as is [g] commonly ſaid; for he was King of the Homerites, and theſe Homerites were Sabean Arabians, who are often call'd Ethiopians. This Dunaan's Name was Pinchas, or Joſeph: and he is doubtleſs ſaid to be the Son of Moſes; becauſe, affirming that Moſes was his Legiſlator, and his Father, this Title has been taken literally. This cruel and barbarous Prince made War againſt his own Subjects; for Negra was upon the Frontiers of Arabia. 'Tis ſaid, That reſolving to ſuffer none but the Jewiſh Religion in his Dominions, he particularly attack'd the Inhabitants of this City, for being Chriſtians. But this does not agree with what all the Hiſtorians ſay, That there were People in that Place who worſhipp'd the Sun and Moon, and that the Jews were mingled with 'em. This might be a War of State, aſwell as of Religion.

XI. 'Tis pretty generally agreed, That he made 340 Martyrs, with Arethas their Prince. The Ethiopians add, That they threw 'em into Ditches, which Pinchas, or Dunaan, had caus'd to be dug, and burnt 'em in the Fire that was kindled there. 'Tis alſo pretended, that Mahomet alluded to this kind of Puniſhment, when he ſays, in his Alcoran, That thoſe that had dug the Ditch full of Fire, have been kill'd, and they ſhall one day be Witneſſes of what they have done to the Believers. But would Mahomet call the Chriſtians Believers, and deplore their Misfortune? Du Ryer has eſpecially ſpoil'd the ſence of his Verſes, by tranſlating it the true Believers. Mahomet could ſpeak thus only of his Followers.

XII. The Prince of Caxumo, whom the Greeks celebrate by the Name of Elasbaan, was call'd Caleb, by the Ethiopians. This is the Name given him by the Ethiopian Poet, who has made his Elogy, (as in the following Page.)

[f] Synaxaria 24 October. [g] Ludolph. Hiſt. Æthiop. l. 2. c. 4. n. 22. Id. Comment. p. 234.

Salutem

Salutem [g] Calebo, qui signum reliquit opum suarum,
Dum misit coronam suam Hierosolymam ut suspenderent eam.
Hic Heros vanâ gloriâ usus non est, ob fortitudinem suam, Cùm per manus ejus exercitus Sabæorum deletus fuisset,
Ita ut non superesset quisquam ex illo.

The War he engag'd in against Dunaan was not over-just, since Negra was not a Dependance on his Kingdom, and the Eastern Kings were so Absolute, as to tell their Subjects, This is my Pleasure. But however it was successful. What is added concerning the intire Conversion of the Jews by this Prince's Ministry, is suspicious: not only because general and sudden Conversions made by the Hand of a Conqueror, ought always to be thought so, but because the Jews have always kept their Ground in Æthiopia. They reckon at present above 60000 among the Abyssines; and 'tis not above a hundred Years ago, that an entire Province depending on them, and in which they were Absolute, was reduced. If the Conversion was general, it was very short, for the Persians came quickly after to take the Kingdom out of the Possessors hands. The Successors of Arethas II. favour'd the Romans; but the other Cities and Country gave themselves up to the Persians, which occasion'd long and cruel Wars; till at last Bazerius, the last of the Kings, submitted to Mahomet, and turn'd Mussulman.

XIII. This Event is thrown into a new Confusion, and made perfectly uncertain, by being confounded by many learned Criticks [h] of our Time, with that related by Procopius [i]. This Historian, giving a Description of the Red-Sea, or of Mecca, speaks of an Island call'd Jotaba, which was Peopled by the Jews; but they submitted to the Romans in Justinian's Reign. He does not say, whether this Prince preserv'd the Privileges of a People that voluntarily submitted to him, or whether he oblig'd 'em to abjure Judaism: And, should we determine, we must presume, that this Island remain'd Peopl'd by Jews. This Historian adds, That there was a War at that time betwixt the Kings of the Homerites, and the King of Caxumo. Helliſtæus the King of Caxumo, understanding that the King of the Homerites, situate on the other side of the Red-Sea, and whose Kingdom was Peopled by Jews and Heathens, rais'd excessive Taxes upon his Subjects, Declar'd War against him, took him and put him to Death; and set up in his stead Esimipheus, a Homerite by Extraction, and a Christian. Part of Helleſtæus's Troops refusing to follow him, at their return shut up Esimipheus in a Castle, and rais'd a Man of their own Rank to the Throne, the Slave of a Roman, who had settled at Aduïs a famous Port of Æthiopia. Helliſtæus sent Troops against the new King, who was call'd Abraham, and was a Christian. These Forces join'd Abraham, and laught at their Prince's Orders. He march'd himself with a numerous Army, but was beaten. Peace was made with his Successor, to whom Abraham promis'd a Tribute.

This History is very different from the former; for this Event occurr'd in Justinian's Reign, who, some time before, had desired to make a League with the Ethiopians to act against the Persians. The Subject of the War is absolutely different, aswell as the Names of the Kings of Æthiopia and the Homerites that made it. The Succes is likewise very opposite; for Helliſtæus had at first a great Advantage, he was beaten twice, and oblig'd to a scandalous Retreat. Moreover, Caleb must be deny'd the glory of turning Monk, aswell as that of his Victories, and the Donation he made of his Crown to the Church of Jerusalem, rather than to that of Alexandria.

XIV. The only puzling Difficulty, is the common Opinion, That the Kingdom of the Homerites was destroy'd by Caleb. For 'tis not probable, that Procopius, a Cotemporary Writer, who was in the Army which Justinian sent to Persia, and relates the Alliance that this Prince design'd to make with the Homerites, should speak of a Kingdom which was no longer in being, and should confound Events, which much more modern Historians, and more remote from these Places, would have distinguish'd better. We must conclude therefore, that these are different Wars, and that what we are told of Caleb's Converting the Jews of Æthiopia, is a Fable, since we find 'em appear again under Justinian.

[g] Ludolf. ibid. [h] Vid. Ludolf. [i] Procop. de Bello Pers. l. 1, c. 20. p. 57, 60, 61.

CHAP. XXI.

The State of the Jews in the Roman Empire, at Constantinople, in Italy, Spain and France, during the VIth and VIIth Centuries of the Christian Æra.

I. Justinian; his Character. II. His Edicts against the Jews, about the Passover. III. The Synagogues of Africa chang'd into Churches. IV. The City of Borium in Africa Peopled by the Jews. V. Simeon the Fool makes a Jew dumb. VI. The Glasses of another Jew broken. VII. The Remains of the Eucharist eaten by the Jews. A Child thrown into a Furnace by his Father. VIII. This Miracle related by Beda. IX. Several Insurrections of the Jews against Justinian. X. Their Fidelity to the Goths at Naples. XI. Whether Justin bought a Synagogue? The Fault of Historians. XII. A Sedition at Antioch. XIII. Leontius of Naples: His Sermons to the Jews. XIV. Gregory the First's Equity to 'em. XV. Heraclius's Journey to Jerusalem: His Motive. XVI. He expels the Jews out of his Empire. XVII. Sisebut does the same thing in Spain. XVIII. Isidorus of Sevil condemns him. XIX. The Inconstancy of Bishops, about Toleration. XX. The Laws of the Goths. XXI. The Jews Submission to Receſuinth, feign'd. XXII. Ervigius causes 'em to be Written against. XXIII. They accuse Cæsarius of Arles of Treason. XXIV. This Matter examin'd. XXV. Childebert's Decree. XXVI. Ferreol, Bishop of Usez, banish'd on account of the Jews, expells them. XXVII. Avitus, Bishop of Clermont, uses them ill. XXVIII. St. German of Paris converts them. XXIX. Chilperic persecutes 'em. XXX. Lunel, an Academy of the Jews. Whether Gregory I. Wrote to its Bishop? XXXI. This Pope censures the Violence of the Bishops of Arles and Marseilles. XXXII. Dagobert expells them out of France. XXXIII. Wamba meets with resistance from the Bishops, Protectors of the Jews.

I. JUstinian took upon him all the Affairs of Religion, and delighted in making Decisions and Laws upon this Subject. 'Twas in his Reign, that John the Schoolman began to make a Collection of Edicts; which were to serve for a Rule to Bishops, and which is call'd the Nomocanon. The Christians complain, that he abused his Power against the Church, and often reproach'd the Weakness of the Oriental Bishops, for suffering this Prince to lay his Hand upon the Censer; as if Vigilius the Bishop of Rome had not buckl'd under his Authority more cowardly than the rest. The Jews had also frequent Subjects of Complaint against him; him; for he made Laws and Military Executions againſt them.

II. Procopius [a] ſays, that he forbad 'em to celebrate the Paſſover on a Day different from the Chriſtians. Whereas their Calculation differ'd from ours, it rarely happen'd that that Feaſt fell on the ſame Day: And as the Jews are ſcrupulouſly devoted to their own Account, and to the Fourteenth Day of the Moon, 'twas depriving them of the liberty to Celebrate this Feaſt, to tranſmit it to the time of the Chriſtians keeping theirs. Moreover, he amerced all thoſe with great Fines [b], that ate the Paſchal Lamb.

Juſtinian [c] did the ſame thing to the Chriſtians, and overthrew the Order of Eaſter in his own Church, which cauſed great Confuſion; for the People had began to Faſt the Fourth of February: but the Emperor order'd the Butchers to kill the Meat, and expoſe it to ſale, alledging, that Lent ought not to begin ſo ſoon. The People kept on, and Faſted that Week: The Butchers loſt their Meat. But the People alſo loſt their Faſt; for Juſtinian reſolving not to be contradicted, put off Eaſter-Day to the Seventh of April, which was to be kept the Firſt of the Month; and the Faſt was hereby prolong'd beyond the term, becauſe the Emperor would not have the firſt Week reckon'd. Nicephorus [d] ſays, there was a great Famine that Year at Conſtantinople, which was the reaſon that Juſtinian order'd them to begin to ſell Meat the ſecond Week of Lent; but that the People oppoſing that Violence, would not buy it. All this is obſcure, and wants an Explication aſwell for the Jews as Chriſtians.

Firſt, Theophanes, who placeth this Event in the 19th Year of Juſtinian's Reign, is evidently miſtaken; for the Famine he ſpeaks of, happen'd at Conſtantinople in the Year 538. which is the 11th of Juſtinian. 'Tis true, this Prince's Years are differently reckon'd, becauſe Authors are not agreed about the Time of his Death. But we find an ancient Monument, in which Juſtin, his Succeſſor, reckon'd the Year 575. to be the 12th of his Reign: Therefore his Uncle muſt have died in the Year 565. This Prince publiſh'd an Edict the 14th of September, the Firſt Year of his Reign, Indiction 15. that is to ſay, 566. His Uncle therefore, who died the 14th of November, muſt have ended his Life the Year before. 'Tis agreed, that he reign'd 38 Years: He muſt therefore have aſcended the Throne in the Year 527. And whatever way Theophanes may reckon, he will never find that Juſtinian chang'd the Feaſt of Eaſter in the 19th Year of his Reign.

Secondly, Nicephorus has not well underſtood this Hiſtorian's Thought, tho' he copy'd him; for 'twas not the Famine, that oblig'd Juſtinian to open the Shambles in Lent. Theophanes ſays, that abundance of Rain ſpoil'd the Vintage and Harveſt that Year that there was an Earthquake; and he afterwards adds, the Change that Juſtinian made in Lent: but he does not produce one, as the Cauſe of the other, becauſe theſe two things have no relation to one another; and 'twas the change of Eaſter-Day, that caus'd a diſorder of Lent.

We can't eaſily apprehend, how they began to Faſt the 4th of February, ſince Eaſter-Day was not kept till the 1ſt of April; nor the reaſon that oblig'd Juſtinian to diſturb the Lent and Feaſt. The Matter was thus: They began Lent Seven Weeks before Eaſter. Sozomen ſays it expreſly. And not to trouble our heads, whether they made a diſtinction of Two Weeks, in which they were permitted to eat Eggs and Cheeſe; or whether they choſe Thirty ſix Days of Faſting in theſe Seven Weeks, that they might conſecrate the Tenth part of the Year to this pious Exerciſe, as Blaſtares affirms: 'tis ſtill true, that if Eaſter-Day fell on the 1ſt of April, they muſt have begun the Faſt with the Month of February. But Juſtinian finding the 14th of the Moon of March to happen on the 1ſt of April, and that People wou'd be oblig'd to keep Eaſter the ſame Day with the Jews, reſolv'd to put off the Feaſt and the Faſt for a Week. This is the Alteration Theophanes ſpeaks of. So that the Emperor was ſo far from According with the Jews, that he went farther off, that it might not be believ'd that he ſubmitted to their Laws and Rules. There remains but one Difficulty about the Paſchal Lamb, which Procopius makes the Jews to eat; and Juſtinian forbids the Cuſtom, upon pain of a great Fine. However, the Jews did not at that time eat the Paſchal Lamb, or elſe the Law of the Prince did not only relate to the Time of its Celebration. But this reſpects the Samaritans, who Sacrificed in ſecret, upon Gurizim; or ſome Jews, who dwelling at Jeruſalem, imagin'd they might celebrate this Ceremony in ſecret in the Holy City, and near the Temple, on the Day forbidden by Juſtinian.

III. The Emperor made another breach upon their Liberty, by forbidding the Magiſtrates to receive their Teſtimony againſt the Chriſtians, and depriving them of their Natural Right of making Wills and Donations. There were none but the Labourers of the Samaritans, whoſe Children might inherit their Fathers Goods. Some add, that he order'd their Children to be Catechis'd from Two Years old, the more effectually to work their Converſion. But this laſt Novel is not Juſtinian's. Laſtly, He depriv'd them of the publick Exerciſe of their Religion in Africa; for the Council of Carthage, making a Deputation to this Prince, to obtain of him the Reſtoration of the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtates, which the Vandals had uſurp'd, he wrote to the Prefect of the Prætorium in Africa, to take care that the Hereticks might not Baptiſe, nor do Publick Acts; ordering further, that the Synagogues ſhould be prohibited, and chang'd into Churches, and forbidding the Jews to meet in Caves, and perform the Service after their Way; becauſe 'tis an Abſurdity to ſuffer the Impious to do Acts of Religion, which are Conſecrated. The Reaſon upon which this Prince grounded [e] the Edict, is abſurd: But the Jews loſt part of their Privileges in ſeveral Places of the Empire.

IV. This Law was executed chiefly at Borium a City of Africa, ſituate at the foot of the Mountains, which bounded Pentapolis on the Weſtern-ſide. The Situation of this City was ſtrong, becauſe a chain of Mountains ſhut up its Entrance, and left but a very narrow Paſſage to come at it. The Jews had made it a Retreat, and fill'd it in Juſtinian's time: Here they liv'd the more peaceably, becauſe the Emperor demanded no Taxes of 'em, and no Imperial Collector was ever ſeen there. They had [f] a ſtately Temple, the Foundation whereof they referr'd to Solomon's time. What we are to conclude from this, is, that they had been a long time ſettled in this Place, and that they were rich, notwithſtanding the Neighbourhood of the Moors. Juſtinian undertook the Converſion of this City, aſwell as of that of Aigula, where Heatheniſm [g] ſtill remain'd, and where they ſacrificed to Idols, in Temples conſecrated to Alexander the Great, and Jupiter Ammon. This Prince ſucceeded in his Deſign: The Jews aſwell as Heathens embrac'd Chriſtianity. The Synagogue, or Temple of Solomon, became a Church; and Juſtinian caus'd the City to be Wall'd in, to make it more ſafe.

V. They boaſt of other Converſions, that were made in the ſame Reign by Simeon of Emeſa. This Man paſs'd for a Fool with moſt People: He was ſeen to run along the Streets, to enter into Shops, to eat what he found there; and to whip the Pillars, crying,

[a] Procop. Hiſt. Arc. c. 28. p. 82. [b] Alamanric. Not. in Proc Arc. Hiſt. [c] Theoph. ad An. Juſtin. 19. p. 190. [d] Nicephor. l. 17. c. 32. p. 787. [e] An. 535. [f] Proc. de Ædif. l. 5. c. 2. p. 110, 111. [g] An. 530.

crying, This is for Dancing, becauſe there had been an Earthquake, which threw down [h] many Cities. Nevertheleſs, he is [i] extoll'd as a Man that was full of Grace, that wrought glorious Miracles and Converſions. A Jew, who had ſome Inſpection over the Shops of Emeſa, ſaw two Angels near him in the Bath. Simeon forbad him to publiſh what he had ſeen; and as he cou'd not be aſſured of Secrecy, he touch'd his Lips, and made him Dumb. The Jew made a Sign to Simeon the Fool to cure him: But he could not obtain it, becauſe he would not be Baptiz'd. The Author obſerves, that theſe two People ſpoke by Signs; as if all Dumb People were Deaf. Zachary, the Father of John Baptiſt, perfectly underſtood the Reaſonings that were made in his Family, about the Child that was born: His Ears were open, tho' his Tongue was ty'd. Therefore they abſurdly ſuppoſe a Deafneſs in this Caſe. 'Tis another wonder, to ſee the Jew remain Incredulous, notwithſtanding the Miracle wrought upon his Perſon, and to ſuffer Simeon to Die before his Converſion. The Relicks of the Dead, and Poverty, did what the Preſence of this Saint could not effect. The afflicted Jew, ſeeing St. Simeon's Relicks carry'd about, demanded Baptiſm, with all his Family; and coming out of the Font, he recover'd his Speech.

VI. This Solitary, one day, had a mind to divert himſelf, and make the Spectators laugh at the Coſt of a Jewiſh Glaſs-maker, who was working at his Furnace. This Workman blow'd to make a Glaſs; but he made a Croſs, which immediately broke: He blow'd ſeven times, and ſtill made a Croſs, inſtead of a Glaſs. Simeon laught, and made all that were preſent laugh at this little Paſtime. But by playing the Fool, he attempted the Converſion of the Unbeliever; for he told him, That all his Glaſſes would break, till he had made the Sign of the Croſs. The Artiſt ſeeing his Time and Labour loſt, after ſo many repeated Trials, embrac'd the Religion, without which he could not work, nor get his bread. Thus Simeon the Simple found new Artifices to Convert this Nation, without Inſtructing it.

VII. Another Miracle was wrought at Conſtantinople, related by a great many Hiſtorians, and even by Controvertiſts [k], who, without troubling themſelves about the Truth of the Miracle, make uſe of the Fact, to prove, That the Remains of the Communion were given to Children to eat. For when the Communion was over, and ſome holy Parts of the immaculate Body of Chriſt our Lord remain'd, the Children, who were in the Schools, were call'd to eat theſe Remains. The Child of a Jew came there, and ate like the reſt. This retarded his return Home. The Father, wondering at his ſtaying longer than ordinary, ask'd him the reaſon of it? And being told it, this inhumane Glaſs-maker threw his Son into the Furnace, and ſhut it up. The Mother, being reſtleſs and fond, ſought her Child in all Places for three Days, without finding him: but at laſt, as ſhe pronounc'd his Name, ſighing near the Furnace, the Child call'd her, and told her, That a Woman cloath'd in Purple had hinder'd him from being burnt, and furniſh'd him with Food. Such a ſurprizing Event became publick: The Court was inform'd of it. Juſtinian ſent for the Mother and the Child, who receiv'd Baptiſm, and the Child was placed among the Clergy of Conſtantinople, where he doubtleſs became Reader, ſince at his Age he was not capable of any other Office, and the Mother was elected Deaconneſs: but the Father, obſtinately refuſing to be Converted, was Crucified in a Suburb of the City.

VIII. Beda [l] doubtleſs deſign'd to relate the ſame Event, when he ſays, "That a Jewiſh Child, eating "the Remains of the Euchariſt at Rome, found him-"ſelf inſpir'd with the Holy Ghoſt, and cried, He "wou'd be a Chriſtian. That his Father, enrag'd, "threw the Mother and Son into a Furnace, where "they were miraculouſly preſerv'd from the Flames." 'Tis true, he changes the Scene, ſince he makes the Miracle to be peform'd at Rome, whereas Evagrius places it at Conſtantinople: But even this thing diſcovers it to be the ſame Fact; ſince the Roman Church had not eſpouſed the Cuſtom of the Greek, of making the Children who came from the School, eat the ſacred Remains of the immaculate Body of Jeſus-Chriſt. He alſo heightens the Miracle, by making the Mother and the Child thrown into the ſame Furnace; which makes the thing more incredible. But 'tis the Character of Tranſcribers, to ſwell up the Narrative of their Originals. People make no ſcruple to imbelliſh a Miracle, being ſure to pleaſe, proportionably to its ſtrangeneſs: And in matter of Prodigies, the World ſwallows every thing, without conſidering whether the Aliment it takes in be coarſe, and of hard Digeſtion. Laſtly, Beda has alter'd the Times; at leaſt Baronius thinks ſo, ſince he has fix'd the Story in the Reign of Theodoſius the Younger: But as Bede does not note under what Boniface the Miracle happen'd, and there was a Goth ſo Named, who was made Pope in Juſtinian's time, we may believe, that Bede has follow'd Evagrius, and thought this Prodigy happen'd in the Year 530. We have ſaid enough of the Jews Converſions in this Reign: Let us come to their Inſurrections.

IX. The firſt [m] was caus'd by a Falſe-Meſſiah, Nam'd Julian. He appear'd in Paleſtine, and deluded the People of that Country. As he took the Title of Conqueror, the eaſier to ſurprize his Nation, he caus'd all his credulous Followers to Arm themſelves. The Seditious falling unexpectedly upon the Chriſtians, who fancy'd they had nothing to fear from a Nation ſo often humbled, made a great Slaughter of 'em; but Juſtinian's Troops ran to the relief of the Oppreſſed: They in a little time diſpers'd theſe Rebels, who wanted Experience, and follow'd the firſt Motions of their Hatred. Their Leader was taken, and puniſh'd with Death, which put an end to that Affair.

There was a ſecond Diſturbance [n], 25 Years after, at Cæſarea. The Samaritans and Jews, tho' mortal Enemies to each other, yet united againſt the Chriſtians of this City. They pull'd down [o] the Churches, murder'd many People, kill'd the Governor in his Palace; whoſe Wife eſcaping the Danger, carry'd her Complaints to Juſtinian, who ſent ſpeedy Orders to Adamantius to bring the Cauſe before him. The Informations being made, and the Jews charg'd with all the Odium and Cruelty of this Violence, Adamantius confiſcated the Eſtates of the Rich, put to flight a great number of the Mutineers who had a ſhare in the Action, and took off the Heads of others. The Execution was ſo bloody, that it made all the Jews of that Country tremble: And therefore I am ſurpriz'd, that modern Hiſtorians ſhould mention a third Rebellion of the Jews againſt Juſtinian; for the Greek Hiſtorians, who could not paſs by this Event, ſay not a word of it. Paul the Deacon, who is quoted as a Witneſs, upon whom they only depend, is profoundly ſilent about it. And the Terrour of the Puniſhment they had lately felt, was a powerful Motive to retain the moſt Seditious in Obedience.

X. Twas in Italy that they declar'd loudeſt againſt Juſtinian, and Beliſarius, who beſig'd Naples. This famous General had recover'd Africa to the Emperor's Obedience, and vanquish'd the Vandals; and in the Triumph decreed him for it at Constantinople, he brought out the sacred Vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem, which Titus had brought to Rome, and Gizeric had carry'd away, when he plunder'd that great City. This Spectacle, which reviv'd the remembrance of the taking of Jerusalem, and the ruin of its Temple, must have disturb'd the Jews of Constantinople. Upon this Sight, one of 'em seem'd seiz'd with a Prophetick Spirit, and cry'd, That these precious Vessels ought not to be brought to Constantinople, nor placed in the Emperor's Palace. They can't (said he [p]) be preserv'd in any other Place, than that where Solomon consecrated them; and this is the reason that Gizeric has taken Rome, and the Romans have conquer'd Gizeric. Justinian, who was told of this kind of Oracle, believ'd the Jewish Prophet, and forthwith sent the Gold and Silver Vessels to Jerusalem. This Prince's Superstition must be great, to imagine, that God had fix'd the residence of these Vessel at Jerusalem, when Solomon's and Zorobabel's Temple were both destroy'd; or that the taking of Rome, which happen'd so many Ages after these Vessels were convey'd thither, was a Punishment for not returning them to Jerusalem.

[h] An. 551. [i] Evagr. l. 4. c. 34. p. 409. [k] Evagr. l. 4. c. 36. p. 411. An. 552. [l] Beda Collect. ad fin. [m] An. 530. [n] An. 555. [o] Paul. Warnefr. Hiſt. l. 16. B. M. P. t. 13. p. 276. Cedren. p. 316.

The same Belisarius, who had conquer'd the Vandals in Africa, pass'd over into Italy, to fight the Goths, who were Masters of the principal Places, and he first attack'd Naples.

There were two Factions in this great City, one for the Emperor, and the other for the Goths, whom the Jews, who were numerous and considerable there, favour'd. The Imperialists, to free themselves from the Inconveniencies of a Siege, had represented to Belisarius, that it was more advantagious to lay Siege to Rome; because if he took that Capital, Naples, which continu'd in Subjection to the Barbarians but by Force, would naturally return to its Obedience: But he rejected this Proposition, and only made 'em great Promises, if they would Capitulate. The Articles of the Capitulation were already Drawn up, and Accepted by Belizarius, who granted all their Demands, when the Friends of the Goths pathetically harangu'd the Inhabitants, and supported their Arguments by the Presence of the Jewish Merchants, who were there, to assure the People, that they should neither want Provisions nor Ammunition during the Siege: The Citizens, encourag'd by this Assurance, took heart, and defended the Place for 20 Days with the greatest Vigour. Belisarius lost a great many good Officers and Soldiers in the different Assaults, in which he was repuls'd. Theodatus ought to have hasten'd to the Defence of so important a Place, and such zealous Subjects. But he said, That he amused himself with consulting the Dæmons, and a Jew, among others, pretending to Magick, who caus'd Thirty Hogs to be shut up: There were Ten in each Stable; the first Ten bore the Name of the Goths; the second, that of the Romans; and the third, was that of the Emperor. The Stables being open'd three Days after, Eight of the Gothick Hogs, and Five of the Romans, were found dead, and all the Emperor's alive. He concluded from thence, that most of his Nation should perish; that the Romans should suffer a great deal; and that Justinian should triumph. Astonish'd with this Presage, he had not the Courage to go and attack Belisarius in his Camp, who took Naples. The Jews defended that part towards the Sea; and as they were persuaded, they should have no Quarter, since they were the principal cause of the Resistance that was made, they fought like Desperate Men. The City was already taken on another side, whilst they still sustain'd the Enemy's Assault in their Intrenchments: But at last, when Day-light came, they were Forced in 'em. [q] Procopius says, that Belisarius exhorted his Army to be merciful; but whether he spoke but faintly, or that the Soldiers, bent on Murther and Plunder, were deaf to the General's Advice, or that the Historian design'd to flatter him on this Occasion, the other Writers affirm, that they respected neither Age nor Sex, nor Religion, and, without distinction of Persons, made a great Slaughter: If there was any difference, 'twas in respect of the Jews, who were doubtless more inhumanly treated than the rest. However, it can't be charg'd upon 'em as a Crime, to have continu'd faithful to the Goths, who were then their Sovereigns. Pope Sylverius's Action, who design'd to deliver up Rome to 'em, and was Convicted at the same time, by many Witnesses, of keeping secret Intelligence with the Barbarians, when Obedience was due to the Emperor, was infinitely more criminal.

XI. Justin [r] succeeded his Uncle, and ascended the Throne in the Year 565. The Historians [s] say, that he bought a fine Synagogue of the Jews, which remain'd to 'em in the Braziers Quarter at Constantinople, and that he turn'd it into a stately Church, which he Consecrated to the Virgin Calchopratiana. But they are mistaken. 'Tis true, the Jews were at first settled in that part of Constantinople, which took its Name from the Kettles and Brass that were sold there, because perhaps they were Artificers in Brass, and traded in it. But they had been a long time driven from thence, and made to dwell in the Stenor, where they are at this day. Besides, 'twas Theodosius the Younger who built the Church to the Virgin Calchopratiana, or the Seller of Brass and Kettles. It can't therefore be said, that the Jews had a Synagogue there, or that Justin bought it to make a Temple of. The Error of the Historians who have affirm'd it, proceeds from this; that the Church of the Virgin being destroyd by an Earthquake, Justin rais'd it again from its Ruins.

XII. Tho' Mauritius's Reign was often troubled with the Wars of the Avari, who came from the Danube, and made frequent Incursions into Thracia, yet the Jews were quiet enough there. This Prince's Avarice, perhaps, contributed to it; for 'twas easie to purchase their Liberty and Peace of him. Besides, the Avari were so remote from Judæa and Syria, that they could not flatter themselves to draw any Assistance from thence; and perhaps their Motions were but little known. But Phocas mounting the Throne, by assassinating his Master and his Children, it was fancy'd that this Revolution might cause many Alterations, and that there was Punishment to be fear'd for Crimes, whilst one part of the People submitted to the Tyrant with great reluctancy.

Those of Syria, finding themselves powerful at Antioch, laid hold on the Opportunity, and Arm'd against the Christians. The Sedition was General, and they fought resolutely on both Sides; but the Jews being the strongest, kill'd a great many People, and burnt others in their Houses, which they had set fire to. The Bishop was treated in a barbarous manner, for they dragg'd him along the Streets, cut off his Privy-Parts, and put them into his Mouth; and after they had carry'd him in this hideous manner, they threw him into the Fire and burnt him. Phocas was not a Man that would pardon such a flagrant Excess. The most inhumane Princes would have punish'd it. The Rebels therefore experienc'd his just Severity. He sent Count Bonosus to Antioch, who could not oblige 'em to lay down their Arms:

[p] Procop. de Bello Vand. l. 2. c 9. p. 255. [q] Procop. de Bello Goth. l. 1. c. 8, 9, 10. p. 329, &c. [r] An. 565. [s] Theophan. An. 569. p. 209. Paul. Diac. l. 16. p. 277.

He

He was oblig'd to muſter up Troops, who having beaten 'em, made a great Slaughter. The Priſoners were Executed, Maim'd, and baniſh'd the City. Nicephorus [a], relating this Event, has confounded two Anaſtaſius's Biſhops of Antioch, who immediately ſucceeded one another. He ſays, that it was the Firſt of theſe Patriarchs that ſuffer'd Martyrdom in the Inſurrection of the Jews, whereas it was undoubtedly the Second, and him, with whom another Nicephorus has concluded his Chronicle.

XIII. They were as numerous and formidable in the Iſle of Cyprus, where they had found means to eſtabliſh themſelves [b], notwithſtanding the Reſolution that had been taken in Adrian's Reign, of not ſuffering ſo much as Travellers of that Religion there. Leontius [c] Biſhop of Naples, in that Iſland undertook their Converſion, and publiſh'd an Exhortation to reduce 'em to the Church. We have but one Fragment of it remaining, which comes from a ſuſpected hand; ſince there never was any private Perſon ſo bold as to forge and publiſh falſe Pieces, as the Second Council of Nicæa, which has inſerted this in its Acts. As the Idolatry of the Chriſtians, who worſhip the Creature, was the greateſt Scandal to the Jew; Leontius alledges, 1. That the Jews ought to be confounded with Shame, to accuſe the Chriſtians of Idolatry; ſince they often worſhipp'd their own Kings, and thoſe of the Idolatrous Nations. For Abraham worſhipp'd the Princes of Canaan; Moſes, his Father-in-Law; and Daniel, King Nebuchadnezzar. 2. He maintain'd, That if the Jews were puniſh'd for the Worſhip they had paid to the Creature, 'twas becauſe they adored the Heifers of Samaria, that is, the Golden Calves of Bethel, inſtead of the Sacred Altar in the Temple; which only reſpected the Ten Tribes engaged in the Schiſm. They had alſo worſhipp'd Aſtarte the Goddeſs of the Sidonians, inſtead of the Rod of Aaron; and Baal, inſtead of the Rock from whence the Waters flow'd in the Deſart. Laſtly, Leontius call'd the Jew to witneſs, that the Chriſtians were not Idolatrous; ſince they not only did not ſacrifice their Children, nor Oxen, nor Bullocks, but alſo had no Altar, nor Sacrifice, nor ſo much as knew what it was. Theſe Words, ſpoken at the beginning of the VIIth Century, and ſo contrary to the Sacrifice of the Altar, are obſervable. We know not what was the ſucceſs of this Attempt, and whether the Inhabitants of the Iſland believ'd what the good Biſhop ſaid, or rather, whether this Exhortation be not a fictitious Piece.

XIV. Gregory the Great liv'd at that time: This Pope was perſuaded, that the Jews ought to be cultivated, inſtead of hated, becauſe they were, one day, to be Recall'd. The Foundation, upon which this Great Man built his Maxim, was very weak; for he drew it from the Revelations of the Prophet Ezekiel, whom God order'd to leave his Houſe, to go into the Plain, and afterwards to ſhut himſelf within this Houſe, when he was return'd to it. He thought that the firſt Order of God was addreſs'd to the Apoſtles, and Miniſters of the Goſpel, who were to leave the Jews ſhut up in the Houſe of God, to run after the Gentile Vagabonds diſperſed in the Plain, and Aliens from the Promiſes of the Covenant. But afterwards God order'd 'em to return to this Houſe, to Convert the Jews, or to ſhut themſelves up with 'em; becauſe, ſays this Pope, they were to hide themſelves, to eſcape the Violence of Antichriſt, who was then to reign. The General Converſion of this People, was the vehement Object of his Deſires: Let this Prophet (ſays he) ariſe, and go from the Houſe into the Plain, and return ſpeedily again; that the Number of the Gentiles being accompliſh'd, Judæa may recover the Faith, and receive the Graces it had loſt.

Gregory [d] labour'd upon their Converſion, and wrote to his Receiver in Sicily, to abate his Farmers, who turn'd Chriſtians, the Third of the Revenues they were indebted to him. "They muſt (ſaid he) "be call'd to the Unity of the Faith by Gentleneſs, "by Perſuaſions, and Charitable Advices. Vio"lence is likely to diſguſt thoſe, whom Gentleneſs "and Charity allure. Menaces and Terror ſtop "thoſe, whom the Idea of God's Juſtice, often re"peated, had ſhaken. The true method to Convert "them, is not to make 'em fear us, by carrying "Severity to exceſs; but to oblige People to come "and hear the Word of God."

He imagin'd it lawful to employ Money, without believing theſe Preſents could infuſe Faith; but, ſaid he, if we Convert not the Fathers, we ſhall Win the Children. The Maxim is not certain; for the Children often diſſemble, aſwell as the Fathers: And it is not lawful to do Evil, upon the uncertain hopes, that Good will come of it. However, the Jews have prais'd this Pope, in their Annals, for his Lenity and Indulgence to 'em: And they had reaſon; for the Abbeſs of St. Stephen de [e] Gergenti in Sicily, deſiring to ſignalize her Zeal to the Pope, and at once to procure ſome Money for her Monaſtery, that was poor, gave him notice, that a great number of Scicilian Jews deſired to be Converted. But he would not be dazled with a Notion of Encreaſing the Church. He order'd the Abbeſs not to be too haſty; to wait till theſe Catechumens were well Inſtructed, before ſhe ſuffer'd 'em to be Baptis'd; and if any of them were impatient to receive this Sacrament, becauſe of the Miſeries that threatned the Iſland, yet at leaſt they ſhould be examin'd by a Penance of Forty Days, and he conſented then only to give 'em a Suit for the Ceremony of Baptiſm: And by this Precaution, the Covetous Zeal of the Abbeſs was diſappointed. The Biſhop of Palermo in the ſame Iſland, had ſome Controverſies with this Nation, and oppreſs'd them, by employing the Authority of his Office. They complain'd of his Injuſtice to the Pope; who Wrote to this Prelate, to exhort him religiouſly to obſerve the Laws, and to take unſuſpected Judges; and if the Matters could not be agreed, that all theſe Controverſies ſhould be brought to him to be ended.

He [f] had the Equity to condemn the extravagant Zeal of a New Convert of Cagliari. A Jew that had receiv'd Baptiſm the Day before, and who thinking he might do any thing now he was turn'd Chriſtian, or that he was to diſtinguiſh himſelf in his new Religion, put himſelf at the head of a company of young People, and went to the Synagogue on an Eaſter-Day, and ſet up a Croſs there, with the Image of the Virgin. The Chief Officers, Military and Civil, inſtead of approving this Violence, certify'd againſt the Neophyte Jew. The Biſhop himſelf, whom he had conſulted, deny'd his Conſent, and condem'd the Action. Gregory the Great, deſiring to corroborate this Prelate in his equitable Notions, praiſes him for not confounding the Evil with the Good, and adviſes him to paſs a Cenſure upon the New Convert, without hearkening to the Excuſes he might make, by caſting the fault upon his Zeal, and love for Religion. He requires, that the Croſs and Image ſhould be remov'd, and the Synagogue left to the Jews; ſince, tho' the Law forbids 'em to build new ones, it appoints, that they ſhould be left the enjoyment of thoſe they had already. And with the ſame Spirit he condemn'd the Biſhop of Terracina, who had taken away a Synagogue in his Dioceſe, which the Laws had eſtabliſh'd, and had driven the Jews from another Place, where they were retired for their Devotion.

[a] Niceph. Call. l. xviii. c. 44. t. ii. p. 867. Zonaras, t. iii. p. 66. Paul. Diac. Hiſt. l. xvii. p. 287. An. 602. [b] An. 606. [c] Leont. Epiſc. Neapoleos Cypri ex V. Sermone pro Chriſt. Apolog. contra Judæos Concil. Nic. II. Act. 4. p. 235, &c. [d] Gregor. l. i. 4. Ind. 13. Ep. 50. p. 533. l. 7. Ep. 24. p. 631. Ep. 26. p. 632. l. 1. Ep. 34. p. 451. [e] This is Agrigentum. [f] Id. l. 7. Ind. 2. Ep. 5. p. 638.

Laſtly, This Pope, who was often conſulted concerning the Jews Domeſticks, left ſeveral Orders thereupon. He would not have Chriſtian Slaves ſold to 'em, becauſe he thought the Chriſtian Religion would be diſhonour'd, if it was ſubject to Judaiſm. He Wrote to Queen Brunehaut to hinder this Commerce, which was then made in France. He ſent another Letter upon the ſame Subject to the Governor of Sicily, which a conſiderable Jew had given the Occaſion of: He had bought many Chriſtian Slaves, whom Gregory I. would have reſtored to their Liberty, becauſe the Imperial Laws Commanded it. This ſame Naſa had built an Altar to the Prophet Elias, and had brought a great many Chriſtians to pay their Devotion before it, becauſe they thought to refer their Worſhip to this Prophet. The Pope having notice of this Conduct, and ſuſpecting that Juſtin had been brib'd to tolerate it, vehemently preſs'd the Governor to give the Guilty Corporal Puniſhment. The Story is pretty particular; for the Jews raiſe no Altars to the Creature; they nowhere build any, and believe it would be a Crime to do it. From whence then came this Altar conſecrated to Elias by a Sicilian Jew? The Pope [g] ſpeaks but dubiouſly of the Fact, and would have new Enquiry made into the Matter, before it was determin'd to attach the Perſon, which may make it ſuſpected. Baronius pretends that there was another Idolatry in ſome corner of Sicily, where the Jews caus'd the Angels to be worſhipp'd; which oblig'd Gregory [h] to Write to Eutychius, Biſhop of Santa Maria di [i] Tindaro, to haſten the Converſion of theſe People, moſt whereof defended themſelves, by the Authority of the Powers that protected them. But Baronius is miſtaken; for the Pope does not ſpeak of the Jews in his Letter; and the Analiſt charges them with a Crime, of which they were not guilty.

Laſtly, The Pope [k] Order'd the Jewiſh Servants, who fled to the Church to be Converted, to obtain their Liberty by it. Januarius, who was then Biſhop of Cagliari, ſent back his fugitive Slaves to their Maſter, as St. Paul had done Oneſimus, or elſe he bought their Liberty with the Church-Revenues. We may ſay, that the Pope here forgot his uſual Equity; for he would not have the Church-Money employ'd in the Ranſom of theſe People, who became Free, by their Flight; as if the Church and Religion could excuſe a Robbery. However, theſe Letters ſhew, that the Jews were Numerous in Italy, in Sicily, and Cagliari, and that they thitherto preſerv'd their Privileges in all the Places where they were not factious or rebellious.

XV. Heraclius chang'd the countenance of the Empire and the neighbouring Kingdoms towards 'em, by Declaring himſelf their Enemy. When he had concluded Peace with the Perſians, he reſolv'd to make a Voyage to Jeruſalem, to fetch from thence the Wood of the true Croſs. This Wood has been expos'd to a great many Adventures; for after it had been hid 300 Years under Ground, a Jew retriev'd it. It was placed in a Church; the Perſians carry'd it away, and kept it a long time: but 'tis preſum'd theſe Infidels reſtor'd it, ſuch as they had taken it. Sain, General of the Perſians, carry'd it off a ſecond time. Heraclius making a Peace with him, re-demanded this Relick. Siroes, who reign'd, promis'd to reſtore it, if he could find it, For 'tis probable, the Perſians did not religiouſly preſerve a Piece of Wood which was of no Uſe to 'em. But at laſt, Heraclius received both the Pieces of the Croſs. "He brought 'em to Jeruſalem, ſhew'd 'em to Modeſtus the Patriarch, who perceiv'd that the Seals "were intire, and that the Relick had not been "touch'd by Prophane Hands. The Key was brought, "and the Shrine open'd: The People ſaw and wor-"ſhipp'd the Croſs, which was afterwards ſent to "Conſtantinople, where Sergius placed it in the Church "of the Blackerns." Thus Nicephorus relates [l] the Matter, which may adminiſter great Objections; for Heraclius went not to Jeruſalem in his return from Perſia, but directly to Conſtantinople; and 'twas not till the Year following, that he took his Journey to Paleſtine. Modeſtus was not Patriarch of Jeruſalem when the Emperor came there; but Zachary, whom the Perſians had kept Priſoner, and who was reſtor'd to his See. 'Tis true, that the Criticks remove [m] this Difficulty, by ſaying, that Zachary died at his return from Perſia, and that the Emperor put Modeſtus in his Place. But this muſt be inſerted in Theophanes; for theſe Words that have been added to him, are not found in moſt Manuſcripts. Beſides, Can we imagine, that theſe Seals, and the Shrine in which the two Pieces of Wood were put, had not been broken by the Perſians, either in the Plunder, or the different Removals it had undergone, or in the obſcure Place it had been thrown into, ſo that the King knew not whether it could be found again? Laſtly, Nicephorus is miſtaken [n], in ſaying it was ſent back to Conſtantinople, and was depoſited in the Church of the Blackerns. 'Tis true, this Church, which was Conſecrated to the Virgin, was in ſuch eſteem, that it was preferr'd to Bethlehem; becauſe the Virgin, inſtead of one delivery in this Place, daily brought-forth ſome new Miracle in the Blackerns. Here they kept her Cloaths: But 'tis not true, that they preſerv'd the true or wrong Croſs; for Heraclius, who had ſhewn it the Year before to the People of Conſtantinople without Seals and Shrine, left it at Jeruſalem, when he had reſtor'd it thither, and Devotion was then the Occaſion of his Voyage.

XVI. Coming [o] to Tiberias, he found one Benjamin a Jew, ſo rich, as to have ſupply'd the Army and Court with Proviſions out of his own Stock: But being a mortal Enemy to the Chriſtians, he often embroil'd and perſecuted them. Heraclius being acquainted with it, and not loving the Nation, notwithſtanding the Services he had receiv'd from this Perſon, Cited him before him, and ask'd the reaſon of his unjuſt Proceedings againſt the Chriſtians? He declared, He hated 'em, becauſe they were Enemies to his Religion [p]. I know not whether the Emperor terrify'd him, but at leaſt he talked to him, ſo as to cauſe him to be Baptiz'd: And, to puniſh the whole Nation, he baniſh'd it Jeruſalem and forbad it to approach within three Miles of that Place.

The Prediction of ſome Soothſayers he had conſulted, gave him greater Provocation againſt the Jews. This reſtleſs Prince queſtion'd them about the Fate of the Empire, which was in violent Convulſions: And they anſwer'd him, It ſhould be ruin'd by a Circumcis'd Nation. As he ſaw the Jews, Numerous [g] Gregor. l. 2. Ind. 11. Ep. 37. p. 499. [h] Ibid. Ep. 59. p. 500. [i] This is an ancient City, upon the Ruins whereof a Church was built. Cicero (a) often ſpeaks of it to Verres. Dixio hic, quem vides non quæ publicè Tyndari, non quæ privatim ſibi eripuiſti; ſed unicum miſer abs te filium optimum atque innocentiſſimum flagitat. Et (b) Silius Italicus, — Tyndaris attollens ſeſe adſuit. — [k] Greg. l. 3. Ep. 8. p. 516. [l] Niceph. Chronogr. in Herac. c. 5. [m] Goar. Not. in Theoph. p. 609. [n] An. Heracl. 19. [o] An. 628. [p] Theoph. Chron. p. 273.

(a) Cicero in Verr. l. 4. (b) Sil. Ital. l. 14.

merous

merous and Powerful in Egypt, Arabia and Persia, and even in the Empire, Heraclius doubted not but they were these Circumcised who were to overturn the State. The Hope of a Restoration, with which they always fed themselves, and the violent Attempts they had made to render their Hopes effectual, encreased this Suspicion against them, and confirm'd the Application of the Oracle. Heraclius thought to prevent its Accomplishment, by Persecuting them, and oblige them, by Violence, to abjure their Religion. However, they bore the Punishment of a Revolution they were not the Authors of; it being the Saracens, who were Circumcis'd aswell as they, that overturn'd the Empire.

XVII. The Emperor, not contented to persecute 'em in his own Territitories, and to mortifie 'em by several kinds of Punishment, carry'd his Zeal against them into the neighbouring Kingdoms. He wrote to France, to oblige 'em to be Converted. He particularly address'd himself to Sisebut King of of Spain. This Prince had weaken'd the Romans by several Victories over 'em, and push'd his Conquests as far as Portugal: And the Affairs of the Empire were in so wretched a posture, that Cæsarius, who had the Direction of them, despairing to support them, and to help Heraclius, made Sisebut some Proposals of Peace. The Proposals and Presents were well receiv'd. They began to treat; and Heraclius demanded, as a Condition, That the Jews should be expell'd all Spain. Sisebut granted this Article, which Heraclius demanded in very strong Terms, and as an important Service. Instead of consulting of Bishops upon this Subject, says Mariana, he made the Decision himself, and did a thing contrary to the Christian Religion. The Jews were forc'd to quit their Religion, or to depart all the Goths Dominions. They speak of this Persecution, as if it had happen'd much [q] later. They tell how they address'd themselves to the Court, weeping, that they offer'd Money to the Ministers to stop the Course of the Persecution. But the King answer'd, He was oblig'd to make 'em be Baptiz'd; and that if they were Masters, they would not fail to force the Christians to embrace their Religion. They [r] alledg'd the Example of Joshua, who never forc'd the Nations to follow Moses's Law. They suppos'd that this Hero, before he attack'd a Place, offer'd 'em a Peace, upon Condition of observing the Seven Precepts of the Noachides. The Fact is false: But the King, without examining it, reply'd, That Joshua had done what he pleas'd; That he own'd no Authority above his own; That they must Obey, since the Bishops and Supreme Pontiff had inform'd him, That all who were not regenerate by Baptism, perish'd. They represented farther, That as the Children of Israel, who slighted the Holy Land, never enter'd it; it ought to be sufficient to exclude 'em from Eternal Life, since they had no mind to it. Sisebuc (for so they call him) maintain'd, That Men ought to be left a full liberty to accept or reject Temporal Goods; but for those of the Soul, they ought to be forc'd to receive 'em, as a Child is oblig'd to learn his Lesson. At last, Sisebut, weary of all these Reasonings, made the principal of them Prisoners. They were cast into Prison, where they languish'd a long time. Some abandon'd their Religion, to avoid the Punishments they were condemn'd to: Others retired into France, where Heraclius caus'd 'em to be Persecuted. The Jews insinuate, That they had not liberty to leave Spain during Sisebut's Reign; and the Privilege of preferring their Religion to their Country was not granted them, till after his Death. However, 'tis certain, that all those were Banish'd, who could not be conquer'd by Threats and severe Punishments.

XVIII. Isidorus of Sevil [s], who was one of Sisebut's great Admirers, has yet condemn'd his Prince's Zeal, which was without Knowledge; and instead of Impressing Faith in the Hearts of the People, Commanded it: and being afterwards, at the Head of the Fourth Council of Toledo, he caus'd a very Solemn Decree to be made about it. This Council was Assembled by Order of Sisenand, who had Dethron'd Scuintilla the Son of Sisebut, and who, perceiving that People's Minds were divided, because his Competitor was still alive, made use of Religion to Unite 'em. He Conven'd the Prelates of the Kingdom to Toledo; he prostrated himself before them, and in that too profound Humiliation of a King to his Subjects, desired a Reformation of Discipline. The Council labour'd for the New King, by giving great Instructions to the Goths to Unite under the same Prince, for the Defence of the Nation, and pronouncing Anathema's on those who should violate the Oath of Fidelity they had taken to the Usurper. The Council Declared, That neither Scuintila, who had Abdicated the Crown, nor his Wife nor Children, nor Gelanus his Brother, who had pretended to take Sisenand's part, and had deceiv'd him, should ever be admitted to the Peace of the Church. The Council went also upon the Correction of several Abuses, and made Two Regulations about the State of the Jews. 1. It condemn'd the Violence that had be done 'em by Sisebut's Order, Declaring, That no body ought to be Forc'd to Believe, because, God Hardens and has Compassion on whom he pleases; That we can only Save those that desire it; That as the First Man Ruin'd himself wilfully, by crediting the fallacious Promises of the Serpent, Man can't at present be Saved, but by a Free Conversion of his Mind; atd that he ought to be Persuaded, and not Driven to the Faith.

The 2d Regulation, in some sort, derogates from the former; for the Council Orders, That those that are Converted by Violence or Necessity, should be oblig'd to keep the Faith, and continue in the Church; because they have receiv'd the Sacraments: And the Holy Name of God would be blasphemed, and the Faith villified, by that Circumstance.

Lastly, They relate an Ordinance of Sisenand, who refers the New Converts to the Ecclesiasticks to Force 'em to Perseverance. The Criticks change the Text of the Council, and think this Ordinance was that of Sisebut: But they are mistaken; for it speaks of the Prince as Living, Our Glorious Prince: And 'tis very probable this Law was made by Sisenand, when he perceiv'd that the Jews, who had only dissembled, resum'd their old Religion, when the Persecution ceased. I confess, the Honour of the Church suffer'd, by these New Converts return to the Synagogue: But since this Council condemn'd the Violence, that had forc'd 'em from it against their Wills; Why does it add a new one, to hinder 'em from returning? Is it, that Perseverance in a Religion believ'd to be false, is not as criminal, as the first Entrance? Is it, that these words, God hardens, and has mercy on whom he pleases, relate not to Perseverance, aswell as Conversion? The Councils sometimes Reason after a manner that does 'em no Honour.

XIX. Five Years after [u], a much more manifest Inconstancy appear'd in all the Bishops of this Kingdom. Chintila, who succeeded Sisenand, and was perhaps his Brother, thought also, he ought to bring the Churchmen into his Interest. To which effect, he Call'd the Fifth Council of Toledo, which made many

[q] An 800. [r] Salomon Ben Virgæ Schævet Juda, p. 93. [s] Isidor. Chron Gothor. p. 402. [t] Concil. Tolet. IV. An. 633. C 57, & 59. t V. p. 1719. [u] Conc. Tolet. V, & VI. An 638. C. 3. t. V. p. 1742.

many Decrees in his Favour. But to render his Laws more authentick, he caus'd 'em to be confirm'd by another Council assembled the same Year in the same Place. This Council did Three things against the Jews. 1. It recommended its King, who was inflam'd with a Persecuting Zeal; and blessed God, for having given the Nation a Soul so Noble, and so full of Wisdom, and so inflamed with the Ardour of Faith. 2. It solemnly ratified the Law that this Prince had made, to Banish all the Jews out of his Kingdom. 3. Lastly, It Decreed, That no King, for the future, should ascend the Throne, till he had taken an Oath never to violate this Law; and Anathematiz'd him, if he broke it. How different are Councils from one another? One Man is sufficient to inspire 'em with contradictory Opinions. The King, perhaps, had a great Influence in this Change: But who knows whether he was not changed himself by Compulsion, or to please the Clergy, whose favour he was willing to gain? 'Tis most probable, this Variation of the two Councils was caused by the Death of Isidore of Sevil. This prudent and moderate Man, whose Sentiments are known, presided in the Fourth Council of Toledo: He died before the Sixth. Hence came the Inconstancy of the Prelates, who having lost their truly Christian President, leap'd from Moderation to Violence.

XX. Be it how it will, the Jews suffer'd much by this Condemnation [a]. These Visigoth Kings made a Law, which compleatly authoriz'd Violence. The Law alledges for a Motive, That as the Violent, are they that take the Kingdom of Heaven by Force, Men ought to be hasten'd to obtain that Advantage: And it Orders, That every Jew who shall not be Baptized after its Publication, shall receive a Hundred Stripes, and shall be Banish'd, and have all his Goods confiscated.

XXI. Receswinth [b] afterwards Call'd several Councils at Toledo, where he offer'd 'em a Draught of what ought to be the Subject of their Deliberations. He there reprimanded the criminal Life of the Bishops, who had Concubines, and solicited the Prelates to regulate this Matter, and to prevent the Scandal. They were to Debate about the Election of Kings, in which the Clergy had a great share given them. Lastly, The Jews were not forgotten, who, after their Conversions in the former Reigns, continued to Judaize, which they always did and still do in Spain. The King was weary of this Dissimulation, and would have it remedy'd. But the only Remedy, is, to give Liberty to Oppressed Consciences. However, it seems, that this Motion of the King, and the Decrees of the Council, produc'd a comfortable Effect; for the Principals of the Nation met, and wrote to the King, in the the Name of those of Toledo, and of all Spain, who were in the same Circumstances; protesting to him, That tho' they had hitherto dissembled, being neither perfect Christians, nor perfect Jews; they were resolved to change their Conduct, and sincerely embrace the Christian Religion. They assur'd this Prince, that they would no longer have any Commerce with those of their Nation who were Unbaptis'd; that they would not Intermarry with 'em, nor observe the Sabbath, nor Circumcision; and that if they could not resolve to eat Bacon, because of a long abstinence from it, yet they should make no scruple to eat what was boiled with Hogs-Flesh. Lastly, They promis'd to stone or burn him that should violate this Engagement; and if the King would graciously grant 'em their Lives, they would consent to be his Slaves, and that their Goods should be confiscated. This Letter is so particular, that it looks suspicious. 'Tis most probable it was dictated to 'em, to appease this enraged Prince, and to prevent the rigorous Executions of the Laws. Indeed, the following Councils of Toledo were often taken up with correcting this Dissimulation.

XXII. The Jews made so publick a Profession of the Law, as oblig'd Ervigius to Order the Arch-Bishop of Toledo to Write against 'em. They attack'd the Christian Religion, and then enforc'd an Argument taken from Jesus-Christ's not being born in the Sixth Millenium, which had been fix'd for his Appearance. Julian of Toledo, in Obedience to his Prince's Orders, took Pen in Hand, and shew'd, by a long Discussion of the Prophets, that the Messiah must have been born. He ask'd them, [c] Where was their Promis'd Land, since they were driven out of it? We look (said he) for the Kingdom of the Jews, and there is no such thing; we look for their Altar, and there is none to be found; and for their Priesthood, and discover it no-where: we ask, where are the Sacrifices? and no body answers; because all these things are abolish'd, as Daniel had foretold. To prevent this Reproach, the Doctors said, and had said it long before, That they had a King in some corner of the East, who ruled over the Nation. But Julian [d] taxed them with advancing an indefensible Falshood. Lastly, He proves to 'em, That Jesus-Christ was born in the Sixth Millenium, in the Year of the World, 5325. But to support this Chronology, he is oblig'd to espouse that of the LXX Interpreters, which he takes for Inspired Men. He [e] asserts likewise, That the Latin Church makes use of a Version, which is made by theirs: which shews, that the Spanish Churches had not yet receiv'd St. Jerom's Version, and that they had a very different one from the Vulgar. 'Twas upon the same Principle, that he accus'd the Rabbins of having corrupted the Hebrew Text, out of Jealousie to the Christians, and earnestly exhorted them not to follow it. However, this Accusation was ill-grounded, and the Chronology of the Hebrew Text is more exact than the Septuagint, which ruins the best part of this Bishop's Book, who wrote at the end [f] of the VIIth Century.

Egica complain'd [g] of a Conspiracy which the Jews and their dispersed Brethren in Africa had made against his Government. This Prince represented to the Council Assembled at Toledo, That the Mischief was spread into all the Provinces of the Kingdom: That it had not pass'd the Alps, nor come into France; but that it was nevertheless worthy of Consideration; and that it could not be dissembled or tolerated: And therefore he demanded not only the Council's Advice, but Assistance. Upon Deliberation, it was Resolved, That all the Jews should be degraded of their Privileges; declared Slaves for ever; That their Estates should be confiscated, and their Children Educated by Christians, This manifests the Error of Luke of Tudela, who affirms, that the Jews came not into Spain till the Reign of Vitiza, who invited them; for Vitiza was the Son of Agica, who persecuted them: and they had been settled in this Country for many Ages, Another [h] Author is more grosly mistaken, in placing Vitiza's Reign in the Year 520. and Sisibut's five Years before; for the one reign'd in the beginning of the VIIth Century, and the other at the end of it. How then could he place 'em so near one another in the beginning of the VIth Century.

XXIII. They were not much happier in France; but they commonly brought the Miseries they suffer'd upon themselves. They had made but little Figure there in the first Ages; and, excepting the Laws of Constantine, which mention'd them in Belgick Gaul, 'tis hard to find any footsteps of their Establishment and Power in this great Kingdom. For the Historians seldom mention them in the beginning of the VIth Century; and they even begin to talk of 'em, in a manner that disgraces 'em; for they speak of a treasonable Attempt of theirs, upon Cæsarius Bishop of Arles. Upon Alaric's being kill'd by Clovis, his Troops, went to besiege Carcassone; and the Troops of Bourguignon, his Ally, invested Arles. Theodoric sent an Army to the Assistance of his Grandson, whom they deprived [i] of the finest Cities of his Kingdom. The Soldiers plunder'd the Monastery that Cæsarius had built for his Sister. He was suspected to have had Intelligence with the French, and to have design'd to betray the City. The Jews who were besieg'd with him, vehemently supported this Accusation. Upon these Suspicions, the Bishop was Arrested and Imprison'd. I know not how he came to be found, some time after, conceal'd in his Palace: 'Tis only said, that God wrought a Miracle, to oblige the Goths to bring him back. In the mean time, as he remain'd there very secretly, the Jews, who believ'd him dead, triumph'd, and proclaim'd what they had done. Their Triumph lasted not long; for a Jew, pretending to shoot Arrows from the Wall, upon the Besiegers Camp, sent a Note of Intelligence, in which he exhorted the Enemy to approach the Place by Night where he kept Guard, and to scale it, and he would suffer 'em to enter the City, upon Condition, that all the Persons of his Nation should be secur'd from Plunder. The Billet was found next Morning, and discover'd the Treachery of the Jew, and the Innocence of Cæsarius, who, like another Daniel, came out of the Lion's Den. Thus speaks one of his Disciples, call'd Cyprian, who wrote his Master's Life.

[a] Leges Visigoth. l. 12. tit. 3. l. 3. [b] Conc. Tolet. VIII. An. 653. [c] Julian. Tolet. contra Jud. l. 1. B. R. t. 4. p. 126. [d] Ibid. p. 122. [e] Id. l. 3. p. 139, 141. [f] An. 686. [g] Ibid. in fin. [h] Jacobi Schudt Compendium Historiæ Judaicæ, l. 3. c. 8. [i] An. 503.

XXIV. In

XXIV. In the mean time, I can't conceive, how the Jews Treaſon made Cæſarius Innocent; and a very ſtrong Preſumption ſtill lies againſt him. For the Hiſtorians own [k], that Clovis advanced to Aquitain, invited by the Orthodox Biſhops, who being tired with the Yoke of the Arian Viſigoths, were willing to reſtore Liberty and Repoſe to the Church. Cæſarius was one of theſe Orthodox Biſhops, conſiderable in his Party, and who doubtleſs lean'd, with the reſt of the Prelates, to Clovis's Side. Moreover, a Citizen of Arles, a Clerk, and Couſin of Cæſarius, went over to the Camp of the Beſiegers. Cyprian ſays, The Devil had inſpired him with this Deſign, through his Hatred to the Saints. This is ſoon ſaid: But thoſe who don't believe the Devil to be Maſter of the Heart of Man, and who read in the Hiſtorians, that the Biſhops paſſionately deſired to change their Maſter, will eaſily believe, that Cæſarius's Clerk and Couſin was influenc'd by a Biſhop, rather than a Devil. And indeed, this was the Notion of the Goths, who Committed Cæſarius Priſoner, upon this Indication; which prov'd a great deal. Laſtly, A Jew might have the ſame View as Cæſarius; and the Crime of the one, does not make the other Guiltleſs. It only appears by this, that the Jews were employ'd in Arms by the Goths, and were intruſted with the Cuſtody of Arles, like the reſt of the Inhabitants.

XXV. France changing its Maſter, the Romans being expell'd, and the Viſigoths depreſs'd, the Jews laid hold of this Revolution, to make their Way into ſeveral Places, where they were not before. At leaſt we find, after Clovis, the Kings and Councils of this Kingdom to make many Regulations relating to their Conduct and Liberty. They muſt have been ſettled at Paris, and the adjacent Parts; ſince Childebert, to whom this Kingdom fell by Lot, publiſh'd [l] an Ordinance, forbidding them to appear in the Streets from Maunday-Thurſday till Eaſter-Sunday: becauſe he fear'd, that the People's Devotion might cauſe ſome Inſurrection againſt 'em; or that they might take advantage of that Conjuncture, when the Churches were full, and the Streets empty, to execute ſome villianous Deſign. The Council of Orleans, held in the Year 540. made ſuch another Ordinance; which ſhews, that they were ſpread in the Kingdom.

XXVI. They were eſpecially ſeen [m] Numerous and Potent in the Dioceſe of Uzes, ſince Ferreol, the Biſhop of it, fell under the King's Diſpleaſure, and was baniſh'd on their Account. He thought that he might Convert them, by living familiarly with them. This Familiarity render'd him ſuſpected: 'Twas imagin'd he engag'd in their Intereſts, and probably in their Opinions. He was oblig'd to quit his Biſhoprick, and go to Paris, to juſtifie himſelf to Childebert. He continued there many Years in Exile. But the King being convinc'd of his Innocence, and having reſtored him to his Biſhoprick, he fell into another Extreme, and expell'd all the Jews from his Dioceſe. Some make a Martyr of him: But it is much more certain, that he built St. Paul's Church, and a Monaſtery, for which he made Statutes, which are preſerved to this Day.

XXVII. Avitus Biſhop of Clermont went alſo to Convert the Jews of Auvergne; but the Means he employ'd, were not always lawful; and, on the other hand, the Incredulous fell into a criminal Violence: For a New Convert entring the City with his White Habit, upon his receiving Baptiſm; a Man of his Nation, enraged to ſee him in that Figure, threw upon him a Pot of ſtinking Oil. The People Rioting upon that Inſolence, were going to tear him in Pieces, if Avitus had not oppoſed it: But their Revenge was only retarded; for [n] on Aſcenſion-Day, the Chriſtians of Clermont Mutinying, quitted the Proceſſion, to pull down the Synagogue:

Et campus patuit, quo Synagoga fuit.

Avitus took occaſion to Write to the Jews, That he did not approve the Violence; but that, as a Shepherd, who was to take care of his Flock, and ſeek the ſtraggling Sheep, he exhorted them to Believe as he did, or leave the City:

Aut admitte preces, aut rogo cede loco.

And indeed, the Jews preferr'd Chriſtianity before Exile. Venantius has ſung this Converſion as a miraculous Event, which muſt render Avitus as acceptable to God, as Abraham was by the Sacrifice of his Son. Poets not only are Hyperbolical in their Encomium's, but, what is ſtrange, they change the Nature of Things. Venantius affirms, there was no Violence uſed in theſe Converſions. Whereas the Biſhop baniſh'd the Unbelievers out of his City; and they did not begin to ſend him their Confeſſion of Faith, till the People had Impriſon'd them, or threatned to Murder 'em. Venantius does not diſſemble it; but he calls [o] Gentleneſs, what we call Violence:

Vis hic nulla premit, quivis te collige liber,
Aut meus eſto ſequax, aut tuus eſto fugax.
Aſi Judæa manus ſimulante furore rebellis,
Colligitur, rapitur, conditur inde domo.
Chriſticolæ ut cernunt tunc agmina manzara jungi,
Protinus inſiliunt quâ latet ille dolus.
Si fremerent gladiis, ſentirent juſta, cadentes
Vtvere quò poſſint, aut daret alma fides.
Legati occurrunt, vati mandata ferentes:
Nos Judæa manus, jam tua caula ſumus.
Ne pereant acquire Deo qui vivere poſſunt,
Si mora ſit morimur, & tua lucra cadunt.
Tende celer greſſum; properes niſi præpete curſu,
Funera natorum ſunt tibi flenda, pater.

Thus the Threats of the Biſhop, and the Fury of the People had their Effect. The fear of a cruel Death, enlightned the Jews, and threw off the Veil of Moſes; and on the third Day, a part of the People ſent their Confeſſion of Faith to the Biſhop, deſiring to be Baptized; which was perform'd on Whit-Sunday. Thoſe who had courage to perſevere, were baniſh'd the City, and oblig'd to return to Marſeilles, from whence they came.

XXVIII. St. Germain, Biſhop of Paris, a little after, made another Converſion. [p] He was come to Bourges, to aſſiſt at Felix's Ordination, who was nam'd to that Biſhoprick. Here he found one Sigerius a Jew, whom he Converted without much trouble; but his obſtinate Wife would neither ſee nor ſpeak to the Biſhop. He went to her, and ſuſpecting that ſome Enchantment hinder'd her Converſion, touch'd her Forehead. Immediately a thick Smoke proceeded from this Woman's Noſtrils. The Charm was diſpell'd, and the Devil who bound her, being departed, ſhe attended to the Exhortations ſhe had deſpiſed; demanded Baptiſm, and was Converted, with all her Houſe. We think it not neceſſary to believe that the Devil throws out ſuch a groſs Smoke, when he departs from the Poſſeſſed; or that he went out by her Noſtrils, and by St. Germain's Touch. But we muſt relate what the Hiſtorians attribute to their Saints, when this ſerves to diſcover the Places where the Jews dwelt, and the different Means that were employ'd to Convert 'em.

XXIX. King Chilperic, who found 'em Rich and Conſiderable in his Kingdom of Soiſſons and Paris, alſo [q] undertook their Converſion. Bad Princes think to atone for their Sins, by an Expedient that coſts 'em no inward Regret: They often follow the Suggeſtions of Pride and Cruelty; and they ſatisfie their Paſſions, inſtead of impugning them, when they labour to change the Heart of others, inſtead of reforming their own. Chilperic, a wicked King, made it an honour to Force the Jews, and preſent them to the Font. But this Sacrament was prophan'd by theſe New Converts. It was quickly perceiv'd, that they obſerv'd Saturday aſwell as Sunday. Priſcus, the moſt Conſiderable of the Nation, refuſing to diſſemble, boldly maintain'd to the King, That God had no Wife; and that a God could not be Born, or be Scourged. He was [r] put in Priſon; but he came out again, for his Money: and requiring Time, to marry his Son to a Chriſtian; a Converted Jew, who was the King's God-ſon, quarrel'd with him, kill'd him, and eſcap'd, with his Conſpirators, to the Church of St. Julian, as to a ſafe Sanctuary. The King gave Phatir, the Principal in the Murder, his Life, who retired to Burgundy, from whence he came; but he was kill'd there a little after. One of the Conſpirators kill'd all the reſt in their Sanctuary, and afterwards attempted to flie; but the People took away his Life. And ſo no great Advantage was procured from theſe Deſigns of Chilperic; and indeed, he was ſet on by a Motive that God could not bleſs.

XXX. Lunel became afterwards one of the moſt famous Academies of the Jews in the Weſt. The Youth came to Study there, from the remoteſt Countries, and found not only able Doctors that inſtructed them, but an Exemplary Charity. Benjamin of Tudela affirms, that [k] Fragmenta de Moribus & Geſtis Francor. Hiſt. Fr. Script. t. 1. p. 232. [l] An. 540. [m] An. 556. Le Cointe Annal. [n] Gregor. Tuton. Hiſt. Franc. l. V. c. 11. p. 315. [o] Venantius, l. IV. Ep. 5. B. M. P. t. X. p. 554. [p] Fortunatus Vita S. Germani, c. 64. An. 579. [q] Gregor. Turon. ibid. p. 326. [r] An. 585.

the

the Doctors maintain'd their Scholars, and ſupply'd 'em with Cloaths, all the time that they ſtay'd in the Academy. Perhaps ſuch liberal Maſters were never ſeen. 'Twas from this City, in the Neighbourhood of Montpelier and Niſmes, that Salomon, the Son of Iſaac, took the Name of [r] Lunatick, or Jarki, who was one of the learned'ſt Rabbins that France ever bred. Bartolocci relates the Teſtimony of a Rabbin, who ſays, that Salomon was born at Troyes, or Treves, a City of [illegible]edoc, or Narboneſe Gaul. He was of Troyes in Champagne; but this City is not in Languedoc, as the Rabbin ſays, who is quoted by Bartolocci. In the mean time an ancient Tradition ſays, that Lunel was his Native Place, ſince he took from thence his Title of Lunatick. He was an ingenious Man, and his Deciſions are the more eſteem'd, becauſe he had collected them from the Mouth of the Doctors of all the Jewiſh Academies where he paſs'd, having, for that effect, run thro' almoſt all Parts of the World, where there were People of his Nation. The Chriſtians don't like his Commentaries upon the Scripture, becauſe he has fill'd 'em with Talmudick Notions: And ſome even can't bear that he ſhould ſay, upon the beginning of Geneſis, That Moſes ſpoke of this great Work, to ſhew, that God, the Maſter of the Nations he had form'd, had a Right to expell the Inhabitants from Canaan, to give it the Jews. But it would be happy, if there were none but ſome Prejudices of this kind in his Writings. If we rob the City Lunel of Jarki, we muſt reſtore to it Zerachia the Levite, for he was a Native of this Place: And if he be call'd a Spaniard, 'tis only becauſe Lunel, aſwell as the reſt of Languedoc, then depended upon Spain; or becauſe he left his Country, to live at Vigera, a City but little known, but which yet is placed among thoſe of Spain. He Wrote a Book, [s] intitl'd, The Two Luminaries; either becauſe he pretended to diſſipate the Darkneſs or Errors of Iſaac Alphes; or becauſe he deſign'd to allude to his Name, which ſignified, The Lord is Riſen. His Writing was not long Unanſwer'd, and a Diſciple of Alphes Refuted it out of hand.

Many of the Learned have imagin'd, that the Jews were ſettled at Lunel in Gregory the Great's time; and that this Pope wrote to the Biſhop of that City, to oblige him to retrieve ſome Chriſtians, whom the Jews had made their Slaves. But he that Gregory wrote to was not Biſhop of Lunel, but of Luna, a Biſhoprick ſituate between Lucca and Genoa. Gregory the Great [u] expreſly ſhews, in the following Letter, that this Biſhoprick is to be ſought in Italy, ſince he joins the Biſhoprick of Milan, with that of Luna, to correct ſome Abuſes that had crept into Religious Houſes. How could it be imagin'd that the Biſhop of Milan ſhould go to reform the Abuſes of the Convents of Languedoc? Luna, call'd at preſent Sarzana, muſt have been particularly known by the Italian Authors, and even by others, from Lucan:

Alaos [w] vicinæ procurrit in æquora Lunæ.

The Names of theſe Cities are very different. Beſides, all the Rabbins, who have made the City Lunel famous, lived not till the XIth, or even the XIIth Century. So that the Academy could only be erected at that time; and Gregory's Letters don't relate to it.

XXXI. 'Tis true however, that this Pope [x] concern'd himſelf in the Affair of the Jews of this Province. Theodorus Biſhop of Marſeilles was a turbulent Man, who had already embroil'd himſelf with King Guntram, who had forc'd him from his Biſhoprick, and convey'd him towards Treves, under a ſtrong Guard. It was not permitted to ſee him; and he ſcarce had wherewithal to cover his Nakedneſs. This Man, being eſcap'd from the Danger that had threatned him, reſolv'd to make the Jews in his Dioceſe, or that came to Trade there, feel his reſtleſs and violent Temper. Virgilius Biſhop of Arles, an ambitious Prelate, ſeconded Theodorus's Attempts. The Oppreſſed had recourſe to the Pope, who Wrote to the two Biſhops, to exhort them to Moderation; becauſe the Baptiſm they conferr'd on theſe pretended Converts, cauſed their Death, inſtead of giving 'em Life; and their Relapſes became more ſcandalous, than their Converſion could be edifying. Gregory's Letter informs us, that there were a great many Jews in that Province, and that they came from remote Countries to Traffick there.

XXXII. They quickly fell under a more violent Perſecution. [y] Dagobert, who reign'd alone in France, declared he could no longer ſuffer them in his Kingdom, unleſs they became Chriſtians. Heraclius, who had already expell'd them out of the Empire, had obtain'd the ſame thing in Spain; and ſent Embaſſadors to Dagobert, to oblige him to imitate theſe Examples. The King, who ſet up for Bigottry, notwithſtanding his ſcandalous Debaucheries, embrac'd ſo eaſie an Occaſion of pleaſing the People, and giving publick teſtimonies of his Zeal. He Aſſembled the Prelates of the Kingdom, to whom he communicated his Deſign, and the Requeſt of the Emperor. The Clergy approv'd the Reſolution of the Prince, which was an Argument of his Piety; and Order'd all the Jews, upon pain of Death, to depart his Dominions, or to embrace Chriſtianity: which was executed with a great deal of Rigour. Some ſuffer'd the hardſhips of a ſecond Flight; for they were come into France to ſeek Reſt, to avoid Siſebut's Perſecution in Spain; and they ſaw themſelves baniſh'd once again: Others yielded to the Temptation, and preferr'd Diſſimulation, before Baniſhment.

XXXIII. Wamba, King of the Goths in Narboneſe Gaul, attempted the ſame thing towards the end of the VIIth Century *; but he met with Reſiſtance, and caus'd an Inſurrection which he did not expect. For the Abbot Raymirius Biſhop of Maguelonne, and the Count of Toulouſe, joining together, took upon 'em the Protection of the Jews, and oppoſed the Execution of the Edict; and Arming the People, plunder'd all the Country as far as Niſmes, whoſe Biſhop they had put in Chains, becauſe he would not engage in their Party. The Diſorder encreaſed, by the arrival of Count Paul, who came to appeaſe it: He was originally a Greek, and had a great ſhare in Wamba's Favour, who gave him the Command of his Army againſt the Rebels. Inſtead of giving them Battle, he Declared for 'em; took Narbonne, and caus'd himſelf to be Crowned King. Wamba, who was at War with the Navarrois, quickly made Peace; and falling into Languedoc with three different Armies, retook Narbonne, and ſurpriz'd Count Paul in Niſmes. He hid himſelf in the Vaults of the Amphitheatre, expecting that the Arch-Biſhop of Narbonne would obtain his Pardon; but two Soldiers dragg'd him from thence by the Hair, and he was put in Chains. The King had him brought to the Bar, and after many Formalities, which it is needleſs to relate, he was found Guilty of High-Treaſon, and Condemn'd to Death: reſerving to the King the liberty of Pardoning him, on Condition that his Eyes ſhould be Put out, and that he ſhould remain a Priſoner. The Edict againſt the Jews was executed afterwards: The King † baniſh'd them from Narbonne, and return'd to Toledo, making Count Paul walk before him, carrying a Crown of Pitch upon his Head; with the principal Rebels, who were drawn in Carts, in wretched Habits made of Camels-Hair, with their Heads and Beards ſhorn, which was at that time a Mark of Infamy.

---

[r] By alluding to the Hebrew word, which ſignifies, the Moon. He was born in 1105. [s] An. 1150. Bartol. B. R. t. V. p. 822. [u] Greg. I. l. 11. Ep. 21, & 22. p. 421. [w] Lucan. l. 11. [x] Greg. I. l. 1. Ep. 45. p. 458. [y] Geſta Dagoberti, p. 580. Fredegarii Chronicon. Hiſt. Fr. t. I. p. 758. * An. 629. * An. 675. † Catel's Memoirs for the Hiſtory of Languedoc, l. 3. p. 308.

28 JY 58

The END of the Sixth Book, and of the Fourth Volume.

THE

THE HISTORY OF THE JEWS.

BRITISH MUSEUM

The Seventh and Laſt BOOK.
Containing the Hiſtory of their Diſperſions in the Eaſt and Weſt, from the eighth to the eighteenth Century.

CHAP. I.

The Hiſtory of the King of Cozar: Whether he and his Kingdom embraced Judaiſm in the eighth Century. The Letters of another King of Cozar examin'd.

I. The Deſign of this Chapter. II. The Cozareans Deſcendants of Japhet. Jews in that Country. III. Several Deſcriptions of the Kingdom of Cozar. IV. That of Iſaac the Son of Abraham. V. Sangari's Conference with the King of Cozar. VI. This Prince's Converſion to Judaiſm. VII. Chaſdai who ſpeaks of it, liv'd in the tenth Century. Bartolocci's Error. VIII. Chaſdai's pains to find out this Kingdom. IX. His Letter to King Joſeph. X. The King's Anſwer. XI. Bula's Converſion. XII. The Deſcription of his Territories and Provinces. XIII. The time of the coming of the Meſſias. XIV. Remarks proving theſe Facts falſe.

I. THE Converſion of the King of Cozar, makes one of the moſt conſiderable Events of the Jewiſh Hiſtory. They have placed this King in the eighth Century; and ſay, that after he had examin'd all Religions, in his Conferences with the Chriſtians and Philoſophers, he determin'd himſelf in favour of that of Moſes, and publickly profeſs'd it. Judas Hallevy not only relates this Fact in all its Circumſtances; but has alſo preſerv'd the Arguments and Objections that were made to the King of Cozar; and this the Doctors have thought ſo ſolid a Work, as to recommend it to be learnt by Heart, and made uſe of in every thing it contains. This Judas Hallevy was a Spaniſh Poet, of the twelfth Century, who after his writing this Book, reſolv'd to make his Pilgrimage to the Holy Land. Upon ſight of Jeruſalem he tore his Cloaths, and continu'd his Journey bare-foot, ſinging a Canticle of his making, with theſe words of the Pſalmiſt, Thy Servants think upon theſe Stones: A Muſſulman, who took him for a Madman, or was provoked with this Devotion, kill'd * him, being fifty Years of Age. Let us at preſent ſee what account he gives.

II. Cozar was the youngeſt of the Sons of Japhet, according to the Arabians; but the Jews ſay he was only his Grandſon, by Thogarma. And indeed Joſeph the Hebrew reckons Chozar among the ten Children of Thogarma. He parted from his Brethren, to go and People the World, that was depopulated by the Deluge. He arriv'd, ſay they, on the Banks of the Volga, where he built a City, and gave it his own Name. The Inhabitants of the neighbouring Country, ſituate on the North of the Caſpian Sea, took alſo the ſame Title, whether by reaſon of their Alliance with the Cozarians, or becauſe they deſcended originally from their Founder. However there was ſuch a Kingdom as Cozar, with Cities in it, whereof Thogarma was one of the chief. Some pretend, that the Jews of the Ten Tribes diſperſed by Salmanazur, in Media beyond the River Gozan, paſs'd above the Caſpian Sea, into the Country Cozar had peopled, and advanc'd as far as the Confines of Tartary, and from thence to China: They maintain'd themſelves in the Kingdom they had ſeiz'd; and there it was that Mahomet went to ſee them in his way to Heaven, where he was travelling. But this Tradition, which places the Jews in the Kingdom of Cozar, before the King we are going to ſpeak of, does not agree with the Account of the Conference we have received; For this Prince was an Heathen; and if there were any Jews in his Kingdom or Neighbourhood, they lay conceal'd, and perform'd their Religious Worſhip in the Caves of the Rocks and Mountains.

III. 'Tis a difficult thing to find out this Kingdom of Cozar; It is placed in Tartary, but no body can diſcover it there. One ſays, that this Kingdom being ſituate on the Banks of the Caſpian Sea, that is the reaſon that the Arabians give it the Name of Cuſar. Another dividing the Earth into ſix different Climates, aſſerts that the ſixth commences at the Kingdom of Gog and Magog and Cuſar, and proceeds to include Conſtantinople and France in it. A Traveller † affirms, that he abode eight Days in this Kingdom; that it is ſeparated by an arm of the Sea from

* An. 1140. † R. Petachia apud Buxt. in Coſri Præf.

Tartary; that the Women there continually lament their dead Relations: Seven great Rivers iſſue from its Frontiers; it has two Seas a days Journey diſtant from each other. One is ſo fetid, that it kills all that ſail in it with its ſtench: When the Wind blows from that Coaſt, moſt of the Inhabitants and Travellers fall ſick. The City of Thogarma is ſituate on the Mountains of Ararat; the Law of Mahomet is profeſs'd there. Paſſing from thence you come to Niſibe, which is remote from it a Weeks march; in which there is a Synagogue and a School, which R. Juda the Son of Betira built after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. There are two others founded by Eſdras. There is ſtill to be ſeen a red Stone, which Juda took out of the Ruins of the Temple, and is preſerv'd as a precious Relick. One would think there could be no doubt of the reality of a Kingdom of this Name, upon the Teſtimony of a Man, who affirms he made an eight days ſtay in it, and gives the Deſcription of it. Let us add the Account of another Doctor, Iſaac the Son of Abraham, it being neceſſary to diſcover the place, in order to be able to judge of the Truth of the Hiſtory.

IV. Iſaac, deſigning to prove that the Scepter was not yet departed from Judah, as had been ſo often objected to him, made a diligent Search after a place where his Nation had a Kingly Government, and a Supream Authority. This Man travelling from * Conſtantinople to Egypt, met with an old Turk in the Ship, who after a Relation of all the Wonders he had ſeen in the Indies, and the Land of Chaluſch, aſſured him that there were alſo Jews who acknowledg'd no other Soveraign than one of their own Appointment. Arriving at Alexandria, and deſiring to be more certainly convinc'd of the Truth of it, he made ſeveral Enquiries to no purpoſe; but at laſt the Prince's Phyſician, who was a Jew, not only aſſur'd him that the thing was true, but related divers Circumſtances, which confirm'd his Aſſertion. At laſt he found the Letters of Joſeph King of Cozar to a Spaniſh Rabbin, which permitted him no longer to doubt that there was a Kingdom under the Soveraignty of the Jews. The worſt of it is, that after all theſe Informations, it remains ſtill equally uncertain whether there be a Kingdom of Cozar; or rather it is evident that there is none at all, ſince neither the Jew, who has ſo great an Intereſt in diſcovering it, nor the Chriſtians who have travell'd, are able to ſhew its Situation; and all that we have been relating is founded upon Fables, or a Tradition void of Proofs.

V. However they ſay, that a certain King of Cozar, in the Year 740, reſolved to acquaint himſelf with all Religions, in order to chooſe the beſt, being determin'd to this Enquiry by a Dream. This was a devout Prince, and ſacrificed to falſe Gods with an upright Heart; but an Angel advertiſed him, that notwithſtanding the Purity of his Intentions, his Devotion was not acceptable to God. Hereupon he reſolv'd to find out the way how he might pleaſe the Deity, and make his Sacrifices accepted; and held Conferences with a Philoſopher, a Chriſtian, and a Mahometan. All this was diſpatch'd in a very little time, and in few words. Diſliking all theſe Religions, he ſent for a Jew, for whom at firſt he had a vaſt Contempt, as believing this Nation was quite ſunk; and that ſo long a Train of Miſeries had exhauſted it of every good Quality. Notwithſtanding, Sangari (for that was the Rabbin's Name who diſputed with Coſri) had the Happineſs to pleaſe him, and convince him that Judaiſm was the beſt of all Religions. He inſiſted much upon the Excellency of the Jews, and the Preference God gave them above all Mankind beſides, who, tho' they are devout, can be no more compared with them, than as a dead Image with a living Body. He maintain'd, that Judea was ſuperior to all the other Countries of the World; that Adam was created in it, and alſo buried there in Abraham's Sepulchre. He muſt have been ill-acquainted with the Situation of the Terreſtrial Paradice, to place our firſt Parents in Judea. However he added, † That the Diſpute which aroſe betwixt Abel and Cain, which occaſion'd the firſt Murder, proceeded from their joynt deſire to have each of them the Holy Land in their Diviſion. Cain went out from the Face of God; that is, from Judea. Thus Jonah fled from the Preſence of God to Tarſis, becauſe he quitted the Holy Land, which was called the Face of God. The Prophets were only divinely inſpired in its Boſom, or for its ſake; for Abraham and Daniel propheſied purely on this Land's account. It is better to live in it with Infidels, than to inhabit in any other place with Jews. No body can oblige his Wife, his Children, or his Slaves, to go out of it; but an Husband is oblig'd to follow his Wife, or to reſtore her Portion, if ſhe reſolves to go and live and dye in the Holy Land; and the Wife that does not attend her Husband in his Pilgrimage thither, forfeits all her Rights.

VI. The Jew had other Arguments to convince the King. And it muſt be confeſs'd, that he handled a great many Subjects in preſence of this Prince, who ‖ durſt not diſcover his Deſign, for fear of a Revolt from his Idolatrous Subjects. He truſted this Secret to the General of his Army, and departing privately with him, they arriv'd at certain Mountains ſtanding in a Deſart near the Sea, the Night ſurprizing, and obliging them to enter a Cave, they found Jews in it keeping the Sabbath. The Prince and the General, over-joy'd at this Adventure, made their Abjuration to theſe Jews, and being Circumcis'd, reſum'd their way back to the Capital. The King artfully cultivated his Officers and People. In the mean time, the Noiſe of his Converſion being ſpread abroad, thoſe who had hitherto diſſembled their Judaiſm, openly profeſſed it, and converted the Cozareans. Rabbins and Doctors were ſent for from ſeveral places to inſtruct the new Converts, and to convert the reſt; and above an Hundred thouſand imbraced this Religion. A Tabernacle was built, perfectly like that which Moſes ſet up in the Wilderneſs. The original Jews were exceedingly honour'd, and the King himſelf reſolv'd to have a Preceptor of that Nation, to remove his remaining Doubts, and to open to him all the Precepts of the Law. He had moſt Inclination for the Caraites, who are ſcrupulouſly addicted to the Law, and more zealous than the Traditioniſts; but he yielded to the Reaſons of Sangari, who was a Rabbaniſt. The King grew happy and potent; he triumph'd over his Enemies; he diſcover'd hidden Treaſures in the Bowels of the Earth; he made new Conqueſts, which render'd him formidable to his Neighbours.

VII. Judaiſm muſt have continued long in this Kingdom, ſince more than Two hundred and fifty Years after, King Joſeph gave an account of his Faith to a Spaniſh Rabbin, who deſir'd to be inform'd of his State, and the Method of governing his People. This Doctor's Name was Chaſdai. His Letter is believ'd fictitious, becauſe this Doctor lived not till the end of the XIV^th^ Century, whereas Abraham * Ben-Dior has mention'd him and his Letter Two hundred and thirty Years before. But Bartolocci has not accurately examin'd Chaſdai's and King Joſeph's Letters; for the firſt boaſts of the Clemency of Government his Nation enjoy'd in Spain, in the Reign of Abdalrachman, whom he calls Amir Amulmenim. This Prince, who is the Chriſtians Abderamus, reign'd in Spain at the beginning of the * tenth Century; who was the firſt that chang'd his Name, and took the Title of Emir Almoumenim; or, Commander of the Faithful. He reign'd glorioufly for fifty Years, notwithſtanding the Diviſions of the Muſſulmans, who meant to tranſlate the Caliphſhip to the Abaſſides. This agrees with Joſeph's Anſwer, who reckons but twelve Kings from him, that chang'd his Religion, and theſe twelve could not poſſeſs the Throne above two hundred and ſeventy Years. We muſt therefore remit Chaſdai to the tenth Century; and that will remove the Wonder of his Name, being found in the Chain of the Cabbala.

* An. 1562. † Coſri p. 2. p. 83 & 96. ‖ Coſri pars 2. p. 75. * Chaſdai muſt have lived according to Bartolocci Bibl Rabb. t. 2. p. 853. in the Year 5156. according to the Jewiſh Æra, that is, in the Year 1394. Abraham Ben-Dior compoſed his Chain of the Cabbala, Schialſchelet Hakkabala, in the Year 4921. i. e. in 1159. So that he could not ſpeak of him or his Letter.

hundred

VIII. Chaſdai was Treaſurer General to Abderamus; and had ſo great Authority at this Prince's Court, that if you'll believe him, nothing was done without his Advice. He confeſſes he had often heard mention of the Kingdom of Cozar, without being able to diſcover it, till the Ambaſſadors from Conſtantinople inform'd him, that Merchants frequently came from this Country, whoſe Commodities were Skins, and who told him, that the reigning King's Name was Joſeph. He reſolv'd to write to this Prince, and be at the Charge of ſending an Expreſs with his Letter. He took the opportunity of the Ambaſſador's return to Conſtantinople to conduct him ſo far. The Envoy reſided there for ſix Months, after which he was oblig'd to return the ſame way he came, upon Information that the Roads to Cozar were impracticable. Chaſdai, when he return'd, was ready to dye for Grief, being in a paſſionate Purſuit of a Kingdom, where his Nation bore the Rule. He deſign'd to ſend his Letter to Jeruſalem, that it might be carried to Niſibe, and from thence be convey'd to Armenia, and from Armenia to the Country of Baradas, and the Kingdom of Cozar. But two Ambaſſadors of the King of Gablim arriving at Cordua, undertook to make a more certain and ſpeedy Expedition. He was alſo inform'd, that there was an old blind Man in Spain, who had been a Favourite of the King of Cozar; but upon Search after him, he was not to be found, which oblig'd him to commit his Letter to the Gablim Ambaſſadors, who were as good as their words, and caus'd it to be deliver'd to King Joſeph.

IX. He was deſir'd to give a deſcription of his Kingdom, the number of his Provinces and Cities; what People he made War upon; whether there were any adjacent Iſles; whether any of theſe Iſlanders turn'd Jews; the Names of the Kings his Predeceſſors: He was ask'd too, whether War expelled the Sabbath? i. e. Whether it was allow'd to defend themſelves, and attack the Enemy on the Sabbath-day; and whether he had not ſome particular Prediction concerning the Meſſiah's coming, and the Deliverance of the People.

X. King Joſeph anſwer'd all theſe Queſtions: That his Subjects, the Deſcendants of Japhet by Thogarma, were extremely multiply'd; that they had alſo driven their Neighbours as far as the River Rona, near Conſtantinople: He tells, How one of his Predeceſſors, call'd Bula, was admoniſh'd by an Angel to worſhip God; but he could not reſolve upon Obedience to the Meſſage, till the Angel had carry'd the ſame Order to the General of his Forces, as fearing a general Inſurrection, upon any attempt to change the prevailing Religion, and aboliſh Idolatry. The Angel anſwer'd Bula's deſire, and in a Convention of the Council of the Nation, it was reſolv'd to follow Moſes Law preferable to that of their Anceſtors. The Angel return'd a third time, to command Bula to build an Houſe to God: He preſently excus'd himſelf upon the account of his Poverty; but the Angel informing him, that he might go and ſpoil his Neighbours of their Treaſures, by making War upon them, he brought back wherewithal to make a Tabernacle, an Ark, a Candleſtick, a Table, and Altars and Veſſels.

XI. Bula deſigning to make his New-embrac'd Religion triumphant, reſolv'd to ſend for a Chriſtian and a Muſſulman, and oblige them to a Conference with his Jewiſh Maſter. Each of them expos'd their Reaſons; but the King of Cozar having ſeparated them, ask'd the Chriſtian, Whether Judaiſm was not better than Mahomet's Religion? and he was oblig'd to acknowledge it. He then ask'd the Muſſulman, Whether Judaiſm was not better than the Chriſtian Religion? and upon his acknowledging it, determin'd that Judaiſm was the pureſt of all Religions. Hereupon he eſtabliſh'd it in all his Dominions. His Son Obadias built Synagogues and Temples, and appointed Salaries to many Profeſſors for explaining the Bible, the Talmud and Gemara, and would have his Civil Government reſemble the Inſtitution of Moſes.

XII. Coming in the next place to the Deſcription of his Kingdom; he ſaid, That it could not be travell'd round in a Months time; that it was ſituate near the Sea Gargan; that it was well furniſhed with Cities, Citadels, and Inhabitants; that many Neighbouring Nations, ſtretching as far as Conſtantinople, as the Inhabitants of Baſſa, Tanat, and Abalbua paid him Tribute. He had three principal Cities; one containing fifty Leagues, or Paraſanges, was the Reſidence of the Queen, his Wives and Eunuchs. In which the Chriſtians and Muſſulmen had Liberty of Conſcience. The Prince and his Council reſided in the third, which was much leſs than the others. He lived in it only in the Winter, retiring in the Month of March into the Country, as well as the Inhabitants, who had all their Fields and Lands to cultivate. He made the Tour of his Province, the Government whereof was ſo well regulated, that there was no Extortion, nor Law-ſuit, nor Diſpute. They have very ſeldom Rain, but abundance of Rivers well ſtor'd with Fiſh. The People cultivate Vineyards, and all ſorts of Fruit-Trees.

XIII. He ſpoke of the time in which the Meſſiah was to appear; and referr'd himſelf to the Doctors of Babylon and Jeruſalem. He had only learn'd, that this Calculation was very uncertain, becauſe God had retarded their Deliverance for the Sins of the People. He ardently wiſh'd an end might be put to this delay, and to ſee Chaſdai; aſſuring him, that if he came into his Kingdom, he would honour him as his Father; and that his Subjects ſhould kiſs his Mouth.

XIV. Thus it is they have pictur'd the King of Cozar and his Kingdom. They pretend, that what we have related, is extracted from the Cozarean and Jewiſh Annals: but ſtill the Misfortune is, that all the pains to find out this Kingdom are fruitleſs: In vain you have the Deſcription of it given by King Joſeph, ſince you can never trace it out; nor diſcover the Boundaries he denotes, nor the neighbouring Nations. Benjamin of Tudela, who travelled the World over in the twelfth Century, to find out the Remains of his Nation, found no Footſteps of this ſo famous Kingdom; and all ſucceeding Voyagers have been unable to get a ſight of it; which one thing is ſufficient to demonſtrate it chimerical; and that it is a meer Imagination, rais'd from the fond deſire of having a Kingdom governed by the Jews. No body knows who was this R. Sangari, who is ſaid to have diſcours'd with the King of Cozar. His Work was never heard of for two hundred and fifty Years; nor was it till the twelfth Century that it appear'd in Arabick. Judas Hallevy having tranſlated it into that Language, Judas the Son of Tysbon tranſlated it ſome Years after from Arabick into Hebrew. Some Rabbins are even of opinion, that it is a Fiction of Judas Hallevy, and that he is the firſt Author of it, and that he compos'd this Dialogue with the King of Cozar, in imitation of Cicero, and Plato, and a great many others. And indeed, when a Man examines this Piece, he eaſily obſerves, that he has not kept to probability. Not to ſay, that he rejects the Chriſtian Religion upon the moſt frivolous Objections, and yet in the very entrance on his Subject begins with a Miracle. He brings down Deus ex Machina. An Angel deſcends from Heaven, who prepares the Converſion of the Prince, without intimating the Religion he was to prefer before the reſt. The Angel, who had reveal'd, that King Bula's Intention was acceptable to God, ſhould have recompenc'd that good intention, with the Revelation of the Truth: but as ſoon as he had mov'd this Prince's Heart, he leaves him in the Hand of his own Council. Afterwards this Infidel Prince is introduc'd as one of the moſt Learned Men that can be found in Europe. Science is not the ordinary lot of Kings; and if it be ask'd from what Fountain this of Cozar drew his profound Knowledge, 'tis impoſſible to conjecture. And yet he reaſons upon Philoſophy: He enters into the ſubtileſt Queſtions of Judaiſm: It appears that he already underſtood what Caraiſm was, which ſo many knew nothing of: He deſcends to the minute particulars of Vowels and Points: He purſues his Notices even to the Cabbala and the Sephiroths, which were known in that Country. So much Knowledge abſurdly aſcrib'd to an Idolatrous Prince, ſufficiently diſcovers the Work to be a meer Fiction of a Doctor deſigning to divert himſelf. How could this Book have eſcaped Chaſdai's Knowledge, and the nice Enquiry he made into the Kingdom of Cozar? And yet we ſee by his Letter, that he never heard a Syllable of it, tho' it muſt have been in Spain; or rather, Chaſdai's Letter, and King Joſeph's Anſwer, are alſo ſuppoſititious. And indeed, I can't ſee to what purpoſe was the building of an Ark, a Tabernacle and Altars. There was no Ark in the ſecond Temple, why then muſt there be one in the Kingdom of Cozar? It was not lawful to offer Sacrifices out of Jeruſalem; to what uſe then were his Altars deſign'd? In pretending to erect a Church at Cozar, perfectly like the Temple of Jeruſalem, a Man betrays himſelf, and diſcovers the Vanity of this Fiction.

* An. 910. Manano. l. 7. c. 19. p. 312.

Chaſdai might have been miſled by his paſſionate Deſire to find the Kingdom he was in queſt of, and have written his Letter in ſincere earneſt: But the Forgery of the Anſwer is manifeſt, as well as the Falſity of the Narratives of ſo many People; who ought to have known where this Kingdom was, and who afterwards were not to be found when they were to be examin'd about it, or elſe built upon an uncertain Authority, without any manner of Proof to ſupport it. Let us return to the Jews in the Eaſt, and to the Tribes diſperſed there.

CHAP. II.

The Hiſtory of the Tribes diſperſed in the Eaſt, during the eighth and ninth Centuries of the Chriſtian Church.

I. Abdalmelec's Toleration. II. Omar's Diſcourſe with a Jew, who deſir'd his Daughter for a Wife. III. The Jews and Chriſtians perſecuted in Egypt. IV. The Caliphſhip tranſlated into the Houſe of the Abaſſides. Coufah is made their Capital City. V. That Houſe favourable to the Jews. Diviſions among them. VI. The Law of Giafar the Juſt againſt the Jews. VII. Almanſor a lover of Sciences. VIII. Hakem the Impoſtor, whether he deduced his Sect from Judaiſm. IX. Aaron loves the Jews. X. Charlemain's Embaſſy to this Prince by a Jew. The end of his Negotiation. XI. Whether Charlemain became Maſter of Judea by Donation or Conqueſt. XII. The Diſmiſſion of Iſaac the Jew to Aaron. XIII. Mamon calls the Rabbins to tranſlate their Books into Arabick. XIV. Diviſions in the Academies of Sora and Pandebita. XV. Motavakel perſecutes them: The Footſteps of his Perſecution are ſtill to be ſeen. XVI. Diviſions among the Excellents at Pandebita. XVII. Revolutions in the Houſe of the Caliphs. The Jews conſulted about a Monument. XVIII. Albumaſar an Arabian Jew; His Predictions falſe.

I. ABdalmelec held a Caliphſhip * in the beginning of the eighth Century. He had ſuch a ſtinking Breath as to kill Flies with it. His Avarice was ſo exorbitant, that nothing could content it; and he was ſo violent an Enemy to the Houſe of Aly, as not to bear to be commended by a Poet of that Sect. He puſh'd his Conqueſts as far as Spain, and triumph'd where-ever he carried the Terror of his Arms. In the heighth of his Victories he preſerv'd a great Moderation. He neither perſecuted the Jews nor Chriſtians of his Dominions. He allow'd the former their Academies and Priviledges, and would not take from the latter by force one of their Churches at Damaſcus which they had refus'd him, but left them in the peaceable Enjoyment of it.

II. Valid the eldeſt of ſixteen Sons ſucceeded || his Father; and tho' he reign'd but nine Years, yet he conquer'd a great many Provinces; Spain, Sardinia, the Iſlands Majorca and Minorca, were reduc'd to his Obedience; and his Troops penetrated even into the Narboneſe Gaul. He was ſo ignorant that he could never learn Arabick; and being ſhut up ſix Months in his Father's Life-time, he came out from his Retirement as ignorant as he went into it. He was a Bigot to his Law, and ſo had no Kindneſs for the Chriſtians. He erected a Moſch at Damaſcus upon the Ruins of a Church, and built another at Jeruſalem †. Soliman, that is Salomon his Brother, ſucceeded him, but continued not in his Sovereignty long. He was oblig'd to fortifie Rama in Paleſtine, to ſtop the Incurſions the Arabians made into the Holy Land. 'Tis ſaid he was ſo great an Eater, that after he had breakfaſted upon three roaſted Lambs, yet he dined in publick. 'Tis no wonder

* He began to reign in the Year 686 of the Heg. 65. and reigned 21 Years. || An. 705. † Abulph. p. 129,

then

then he died of Indigeſtion. Omar II. Abdalaſi's Son, was his Succeſſor, of whom they relate what a ſingular Diſcourſe he had with a Jew. This Man publickly demanded the Caliph's Daughter for his Wife. The Caliph anſwer'd, That could not be, becauſe he was of a different Religion from the Princeſs. The Jew reply'd, That Mahomet gave his Daughter to Aly, who was not of his own Opinion; and upon the Caliph's obſerving that Aly had been the Commander of the Faithful People, the Jew ask'd, Why then they curs'd him in the Moſchs? "If he "be the Head of your Religion you ought not to "curſe him; and if he was not of the ſame Faith, "the difference of Religions is no Impediment to "my marrying the Princeſs your Daughter. This Dialogue was, no doubt, concerted betwixt the Jew and the Caliph, who was willing to compaſs his Ends, and diminiſh his Subjects Hatred of Aly. However the Jews muſt needs have bore a conſiderable Rank at Court, to venture to act this part, and deceive the Mahometan Doctors who were preſent. And indeed the Caliph took this occaſion to aboliſh the Curſes that were pronounced againſt the Alides, and ſubſtituted theſe words full of Charity in their room: Pardon us, Lord, and pardon alſo our Brethren, who make Profeſſion of the ſame Faith with us. A certain Lord would have carried Omar II. farther, and have oblig'd him to Curſe the Ommiades inſtead of the Alides. He even rebelled againſt him the eaſier to obtain his Demands; but the Caliph ſent Deputies to deſire a Conference, in order to know whether his Deſign was to reform the Government or Religion; but ſignifying that he would never Curſe his Anceſtors and Relations, becauſe it was a great Sin to determine what relates to the other Life, and that God never gave command for the Curſing any Body: Even Pharaoh, ſaid he, who ſo impudently arrogated to himſelf a Ray of the Divinity, was never curſed. This Muſſulman Prince gave a Lecture to a great many Chriſtians, who decide of the eternal Deſtiny of their Enemies, with the ſame Authority, as if it were at their diſpoſal. He was ſo abſolutely perſwaded that nothing could retard the fatal Period of Life, that when he found himſelf attack'd with a Diſeaſe that was cauſed by Poiſon, and his Phyſician offer'd him a Remedy, he refus'd it, ſaying, If it were only to rub his Ear with a little Oil, he would not do it.

III. The Caliphſhip return'd, by his Death, into the Family of Abdalmelec, and was poſſeſs'd by his third Son call'd Jeſid II. Abulpharages ſays *, He was the tenth Caliph of the Houſe of the Merveranides; but he is miſtaken, for it was in the Houſe of the Ommiades he held this Dignity. He made himſelf famous by his Conqueſts, it being in his Reign that the Sarazens beſieged Toloſe and Narbonne; but he grew more ſo by his Amours. His Brother Soliman perceiving his exceſſive Inclination for a Slave, had her taken away from him. But when he became Caliph he found her out again, and grew ſo deſperately in love with her, that ſhe abſolutely govern'd him; and at laſt was the occaſion of his death. They went together into Judea upon the Banks of Jordan, where making a Collation in a Garden, Jeſid, by way of foolery, threw a Grape to his Miſtreſs, who going to eat it, was choak'd with it. This Accident threw the Caliph into deſpair. He would not ſuffer his dear Baabah to be remov'd from his ſight till ſhe ſtank; He had her taken from her Tomb to ſee her again, and his Melancholy proceeded to that degree as to dye of it, leaving the Caliphſhip to Heſcham, the fourth Son of Abdalmelec. The Chriſtians of Egypt † ſuffered ſo much in his Reign, that the King of Nubia, which lies betwixt Thebais and Æthiopia, came to their Succour with an hundred thouſand Men, and would not return till Heſcham ſent the Patriarch of Alexandria to aſſure him, he would not diſturb the Church. 'Tis probable the Jews had an hand in theſe violent Proceedings, ſince they were caus'd by the Avarice of the Egyptian Governours.

IV. The Houſe of the Ommiades ended a little after under Marvan. The Abbaſſides had already for ſome time meditated this Rebellion in Corazan; the Governour whereof wrote a Letter to his Maſter in theſe words, I ſee through the Aſhes, the Light of ſome Coals which will break out to your Confuſion: Fire is kindled with Wood, and War by Diſcourſe. I would know whether Ommi wakes or ſleeps. He anſwer'd but this, The Preſent ſee more than the Abſent; Cut off the Miſchief before it ſpreads farther. But as he ſtudied not how to remedy the Diſeaſe, the Abbaſſides who were not contended to talk, nor even to manifeſt their Pretentions to the Caliphſhip, as being Deſcendants of Haſchem Grandfather to Mahomet, broke out into a Rebellion in the Reign of Marvan ‖. This Prince was brave and unfortunate. The Chriſtians ſay, that being fond of an Egyptian Virgin, ſhe offer'd him a Water to render him invulnerable, upon condition he would ſpare her Virginity. She waſh'd her own Neck with this Water, when the Caliph, to make Experiment of the Power of the Secret, gave her a Blow with his Cutlas and cut off her Head; and ſo made her a * Martyr. Ab or Abbas Saffa, whom Elmacin calls Abulgebaſus, revolting againſt him, and being proclaim'd Caliph, the War prov'd cruel and fatal to Marvan by a particular Accident. For this Prince having drawn his Army in Battle Array, went aſide to make water. His Horſe, that he had left, took the Bit in his Teeth, and running to the Army, caſt it into a panick Fear, as believing the Caliph was kill'd, and without any further Information run away. Marvan made fruitleſs Attempts to rally his frightned Troops, and was forced to fly with them to Damaſcus, from whence, not thinking himſelf ſecure, he paſs'd into Egypt, where giving a freſh Battle he loſt his Life; and his Head was carried to his Enemy, who remain'd Maſter of the Caliphſhip. He uſed his Advantages ſo outragiouſly, that he had this Title given him, Saffa the Bloodſhedder; becauſe, beſides thoſe who were kill'd in the Battles, he put all the Houſe of the Ommiades to the Sword, of whom there eſcap'd but one Man, who paſs'd into Spain and reign'd there. Abdalla, the new Caliph's Uncle and General, having gather'd together fourſcore Princes of the Family of the Ommiades, cauſed them all to be knock'd in the Head with maſſy wooden Clubs; and having their Bodies cover'd with Tapeſtry, gave to all his Officers upon this Table a Dinner of a new Invention; and the Entertainment was carried on among the Sighs and Groans of the expiring Men. Afterwards he caus'd the Sepulchres of this Family to be open'd, and taking out the dead Bodies, hung them upon Gibbets †. Thus periſh'd that Houſe which had furniſh'd fourteen Caliphs. That of the Abaſſides ſucceeded, and reign'd above five hundred Years. But whereas the former Caliphs had their Seat at Damaſcus, theſe choſe the City Couſah for their Capital; a City ſituate upon the Banks of Euphrates, four days Journey from Bagded. They ſay that the Serpent which tempted Eve was baniſh'd to this place, becauſe its Inhabitants were Malicious and Seditious: 'Tis ſaid alſo, that here it was that Noah embark'd, and enter'd into the Ark. Which perhaps may be founded upon this,

* Abulph. p. 131. † An. 738. ‖ Vattier. l. 2. * Vattier. Hiſt. Mah. l. 2. † Bibl Or. p 629.

that

that the Euphrates in this place is broad, and ſo often overflows its Banks, that they call it Faidh; that is, the River that leaves its Bed. This City is decay'd long ſince, and conſiderable for nothing but the Sepulchre of Aly which is in its neighbourhood, and viſited by his Followers with a great deal of Devotion. The Abaſſides, when they chang'd the Seat of their Empire, brought their Capital nearer the Habitation of the Jews, who had ſtill their Academies on the Banks of Euphrates. Almanſor who ſucceeded his Brother, built alſo Bagded, for greater Security. He call'd it the City of Peace; but it retains the Name of the Hermit Bagded, who had his Cell in the Meadows where the City was built *. And it was in the Neighbourhood of the Tigris and Euphrates, that the Caliphs reſided ſince that time.

V. The Abaſſides treated the Jews favourably enough. In effect this Nation having ſuffer'd what was unavoidable, and common to all Subjects in the Revolutions of an Empire, reſumed their firſt Tranquility under Almanſor, who was a Man of Letters, and drew to his Court all the Learned of his time, without troubling himſelf about the difference of Religions. His firſt Phyſician was a Chriſtian. Almanſor, who loved him, was willing to make him a Turk; but George anſwer'd, that he would either be burnt or ſaved with his Anceſtors. The Prince laugh'd at the Anſwer, and diſmiſs'd him to dye in Peace at home. He took another of the ſame Religion, who was caſhier'd for oppreſſing the Chriſtians, and demanded the Church-Plate of the Primate of Niſibe. Almanſor, who delighted in Aſtronomy, had alſo ſome Men from Perſia well vers'd in that Science. He had eſpecially Jews in his attendance, who took advantage of that Circumſtance to bring their Academies into new repute. † R. Joſeph and Samuel * the Excellent, preſided in the Univerſity of Pundebita. Doræus ‖ another Excellent, Ananias and Malcha † ſucceeded them. There were likewiſe two famous Men at the Head of the Academy of Sora, who went both by the Name of Judah; one was the Son of Nachman, and the other of Outhrineus. Some aſſert that the firſt of theſe Profeſſors publiſh'd the Great Leſſons, which others attribute to Simeon Keiara, another learned Man, who was famous at this time in the Eaſt, tho' he be excluded from the number of the Excellents. This laſt Conjecture is better grounded than the other. His Book was ‖ receiv'd with ſo general an Applauſe, that Judah, who taught at Sorah, ſoon after made a ſort of an Abſtract of it. This Judah was blind: However he had the Title given him of the Great Light, becauſe the Jews thinking it an Affront to their learned Men to call them blind, conceal that Imperfection under an honourable Title. There was another Doctor in the ſame Century call'd R. Mari, whom they alſo ſtiled Light of the Eyes, becauſe he had loſt his ſight. Acha was another Doctor profoundly skill'd in the Precepts of the Law; upon which he compos'd a large Volume intitul'd Schealtot; but as he claſh'd with the Head of the Captivity, he could not arrive to the Quality of Sublime Doctor or Excellent; which Mortification was attended by another. Samuel the Head of the Captivity, when he died, nam'd another Prince to ſucceed him *; but ſo far from having any regard to the Reputation and Learning of this Doctor, he choſe his Servant to preſide over the Nation. Acha could not † digeſt this laſt Affront, but leaving the Academy went to dye in Judea, whilſt his Servant Nithroneus poſſeſs'd the Principality, which he enjoy'd for thirteen Years. Ananus ‖ had the ſame Misfortune as Acha. This Rabbin was a Man of parts, but could not be admitted to the number of the Excellents, becauſe his Doctrine was ſuſpected of ſome blemiſh. Which Suſpicion was well grounded, for he put himſelf at the Head of the Sadducees, which Sect was believ'd to be almoſt bury'd in the Ruins of Jeruſalem. They recover'd Strength, and under the Conduct of this famous Leader became formidable to their Enemies. Some Criticks conſider this Ananus as the Father of the Caraites rather than the Reſtorer of Sadduceiſm. But we have ſhewn, that the Caraites could not claim him for their Founder, becauſe they were of a more ancient Standing.

VI. Giafar ſurnamed the Juſt (Sadek) who lived at that time *, heavily afflicted the Jews of Arabia, and alſo of Perſia. He was the Sixth of the Imams. So the Muſſulmans ſtile their ſupream Pontiff, who preſides over the Moſchs. He has a Temporal as well as a Spiritual Authority. Such as caſt off their Subjection to him, are look'd upon as Atheiſts; becauſe his Authority proceeds immediately from God. Some ſay, notwithſtanding, that he may be depoſed, when he is guilty of any enormous Crime, becauſe he is oblig'd to be Holy. The Perſians have a particular Reverence for twelve of theſe Imams, the immediate Succeſſors of Aly; among whom Giafar is one of the moſt conſiderable. Rabbi Abrar affirms, that Imam Giafar was a Præadamite, becauſe he aſſerted that there were three Adams before him the Scripture ſpeaks of; and that there would be ſeventeen more of them, anſwering to the like number of mighty Revolutions that were to happen to the Univerſe. He ſaid likewiſe, that God will create new Men after this World is at an end, becauſe it would be indecent for the Kingdom of God to remain empty and his Power unactive. This Imam made an Order, that the Jews and Chriſtians who turn'd Muſſulmans, ſhould be ſole Heirs of their Family; and as this Law was exactly executed, it cauſed a great many Children to Apoſtatiſe, who by this means ſucceeded to the Eſtates which they could not obtain in a lawful way.

VII. Almanſor having reign'd two and twenty Years, died. Abdalla his Uncle had diſputed the Caliphſhip with him, which he pretended to be due to his Valour, and the Services he had done to Saffa. But being overcome, he was ſhut up in a Houſe ſupported by Stones of Rock Salt; Almanſor, by conveying a Water-ſtream under the Palace, diſſolv'd theſe Stones, threw down the Building, and buried Abdalla in the Ruins. The reſt of his Reign would have been very happy, had he not diſgraced it by his Avarice. Finding his Death approaching he ſent for Mohadi his Son and Heir, whom he commanded to honour his Relations, becauſe the Honour he did them reflected upon himſelf; and to treat his Freed-men kindly, becauſe they were Perſons who would ſerve him in time of need. He forbad him to build the City Bagded on the Eaſt ſide, and to admit Women into Affairs of State, after which he recommended him to God and died. Abulparages † affirms that he added, My Son, you will execute none of the things I command you, but you will do thoſe I forbid you; and that the Prediction was accompliſh'd. Mean time Hiſtorians give a quite different Character of this Prince. He was as Liberal as his Father was Covetous. He ſpent ſix Millions of gold Crowns in one Pilgrimage to Mecha, having convey'd thither Snow and Ice, which ſtrangely ſurpriz'd the Inhabitants, who had never ſeen any before.

* Valtier. Hiſt. Mah. l 2. † An. 740. * An. 750. ‖ An. 760. † An. 770. ‖ The Great Leſſons of Simeon Keiara Hilcot Gedalor, or Halacot, An. 500. i. e. 740 of our Lord. The decided Leſſons of R. Jehuda the Son of Nachman; or Halacoth Peſnecoth. An. 515. i. e. 755 of J. C. Bartolocci Bibl. Rabb. t. 3. p. 9 & 4. p. 57. * An. 747. † An. 760. Ganz Tzemach David p. 124, 125. ‖ An. 755. * An. 770. † Abulpharag. p. 142. v. Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 530.

before. He was ſo good-natur'd, that an Arabian, who ſaw him ready to begin Prayers in the Moſch, and intreating him to ſtay till he was waſh'd, that he might have the honour to pray with him, he waited patiently till the Man had finiſh'd his Oblation, tho' he was of the meaneſt of the People. Seeing a Tempeſt, he threw himſelf upon the Earth, crying to God, If it be me, Lord, whom thou requireſt, behold I am ready to undergo the Chaſtiſement I deſerve. But treat not thy Faithful as Enemies for my ſake. He held his Court of Juſtice, attended with the moſt able Muſſulmans, and ſhamed the unjuſt Judges. Laſtly, He oblig'd the Empreſs Irene to pay him a Tribute of Seventy thouſand gold Crowns, to be freed from the Incurſions of the Arabians, who incommoded her as far as Conſtantinople. He was an Enemy to the Jews, and would have them either imbrace his Religion, or wear a Badge to diſtinguiſh them from the Muſſulmans. He ſent Theſias, one of his Generals, to Emeſa with this Commiſſion, which he executed with great Severity. The Chriſtians boaſt, that they withſtood this General, and produce a long Catalogue of Martyrs who ſuffer'd on this occaſion. But whether the Jews, who invoke neither Saints nor Martyrs, were unconcern'd to tranſmit their Names to Poſterity, or whether they were guilty of a Weakneſs ſo common to them, (viz.) of yielding eaſily to avoid Perſecution, it does not appear by any of their Monuments, that they ſtop'd the Execution of Mohadi's Orders.

VIII. In the Reign of this Prince, appear'd the Impoſtor Hakem, ſurnam'd Burca, or Mask. 'Tis ſaid † he was a Jew by Birth, or at leaſt had borrow'd from this Nation the Schekinah, or Divinity which reſted upon the ancient Prophets, and the Tranſmigration of Souls. He taught, that God took an Humane Shape, by aſſuming the Perſon of Adam; for which reaſon he commanded the Angels to worſhip him; that he afterwards appear'd in the Perſons of the Prophets, and great Men that lived from time to time; that at laſt he deſcended upon Aboulem Prince of Corazzan, one of the great Generals of his time, whom Almanſor had murder'd in his Chamber, for fear of his revolting, and robbing him of the Caliphſhip. From thence the Divinity came and made his abode in him; giving out that he was God. With ſo fooliſh an Opinion he deceiv'd a great many Chriſtians and Idolaters, whom he caus'd to wear a white Habit, to diſtinguiſh them from Aly's Followers, who wore Black. Having loſt an Eye in a Battle, he wore a gold Mask on his Face to conceal its Deformity; but his Diſciples maintain'd, that he did it with the ſame deſign as Moſes, that he might not dazle Mens Eyes with the Majeſty of his Countenance. He had the Art every Night to produce a luminous Body like the Moon from the bottom of a Well, which diffuſed its Light to ſeveral Miles diſtance. Laſtly, As he was skilful in the Art of War, he went into the Field at the Head of an Army; but Mohadi purſuing him by one of his Generals, he retir'd into a Fortreſs that was almoſt inacceſſible. Finding himſelf beſieg'd, he poiſon'd all his Aſſociates and burnt them, and afterwards ‖ threw himſelf into a great Tub of Aqua fortis, preſuming that it would be believ'd that he was return'd to Heaven, becauſe his Body could not be found; but a Woman who had hid her ſelf to avoid Death, gave up the Place, diſcover'd the Secret, and in the Aqua fortis they found the Impoſtors Hairs unconſumed. Abulpharages * calls this Impoſtor Almokanneus. He ſays, that he caſt himſelf into a Funeral Pile, that totally conſumed him; and that having promiſed his Diſciples to appear again, that Sect, inſtead of being undeceiv'd by his Death, perſever'd in their Error, and expected him a long time. I know not whether the Jews are to be charg'd with the Diſgrace of ſo ſcandalous an Event; for the Tranſmigration of Souls, which was the Fundamental Point of this Impoſtor, was very common among the Perſians; and there's no need of going up as high as the Goſpel, to find Jewiſh Doctors that believ'd it. Moreover this Impoſtor did not teach that the Deity reſted upon him, as the Schekinah had done upon the Prophets; He imagin'd a ſtricter Union of the Divinity with Adam, and afterwards with himſelf. Laſtly, Abulpharages has not deriv'd the Origine of this Impoſtor from the Jews.

IX. Aaron, ſurnamed the Juſt, ſucceeded to the Caliphſhip after the Death of his Brother † in the Year 786, and was one of the greateſt of the Arabian Princes. He loved Men of Letters, but inſtead of giving them an implicit Belief, he exactly weigh'd whether their Deciſions comported with the good of the State: You are more learned than I, ſaid he, once, to one of his Caſuiſts, who would have put him upon a falſe Step, upon pretence of obſerving the Muſſulman Law: But I have more Prudence and Underſtanding than you.

X. Charlemagne thought it convenient to make an Alliance with this Prince: He believ'd it might be of uſe to him to make a Diverſion in the Empire of the Eaſt, that no body might think of diſputing with him the Conqueſts he made in the Weſt. He had, perhaps, vaſter Views, to which the Caliph's aſſiſtance was abſolutely neceſſary.

In order to render his Embaſſy more acceptable, he made choice of Iſaac a Jew, whom he ſent to Perſia, with the Counts Lancfrede and Sigiſmond. A French Hiſtorian ſays, ‖ that theſe three Embaſſadors were ſent to the Caliph, * whom Aventin calls Amaromurmulus. Both theſe Hiſtorians are miſtaken. Aventin's Error proceeds perhaps from this Caliph's taking the Title Emiralomara, Prince of the Faithful, which he has made a proper Name, as afterwards was done in Spain by that of Miramolin. Iſaac was ſent by Charlemagne, and was left with the Charge of the whole Commiſſion, becauſe the two other Embaſſadors died by the way. 'Tis admir'd that this Emperor ſhould chooſe a Jew for this Employ, when he had ſo many Subjects in his own Dominions qualified to diſcharge it. Iſaac doubtleſs was thought the propereſt Man to negotiate † with a Prince, who had great Commerce with his Nation diſperſed in his Dominions, and who hated the Chriſtians. Iſaac knew beſt the ſtile and ways of the Orientals, by means of his diſperſed Brethren, and who were in credit at Aaron's Court.

This Jew ſucceeded in his Negotiation, ‖ if the deſign of it was to kindle a War in the Eaſt; for whilſt Charlemagne aſſum'd the Title of Emperor of the Weſt at Rome, Aaron advanc'd upon the Frontiers of the Empire. Conſtantine ſet out likewiſe to withſtand him; but his Mother Irene, by a deteſtable Treaſon, cauſing him to return to Conſtantinople, deprived him of his Eyes and Life. Nicephorus afterwards broke the Peace with an high Hand, telling him, It was a Woman who had the Weakneſs to pay a Tribute, which by right ſhould have been exacted from him. Aaron wrote back to this Prince, I have receiv'd your Letter, you will underſtand the Anſwer before you are able to read it. And marching at the ſame time at the Head of his Army, he carried his Conqueſts to the very Gates of Conſtantinople. As he † Herbelot. p. 412. ‖ An. 779. * Abulp. p. 146. † He was called Moſes. ‖ Du Hailan Hiſt. de France, l. 4. p. 175.

* Aventinus Annal. Boior. l. 4. p. 224. † An. 797. ‖ An. 800.

burnt

burnt and plunder'd all Places where he pass'd, a Woman stopp'd him * by her Complaints: Don't you know, says he, what the Alcoran says, that a place where Princes pass in Arms, is always destroy'd? I know it, answer'd the afflicted Woman, but the Houses of Princes who ruin others are destroy'd, because of the Injustices they permit. The Caliph, touch'd with this Remonstrance, commanded † his Officers to repair the Loss the Woman had sustain'd by the passage of the Army. The War continued, and Nicephorus lost a Battle against the Caliph, who could not be induced to lay down his Arms after he had taken them up. The Historians who commend Charlemagne for his Moderation, and maintain that he might have conquer'd the Eastern Empire, had he made his Attack on Pannonia and Thrace, whilst Aaron march'd on the other side, will not easily be convinc'd that this was the true occasion of Isaac's Embassy. But not to examine whether Charlemagne contented himself with the Western Empire, or whether time has bereft us of the Circumstances which gave a check to the Passion of this Conqueror; it must be confess'd, that there can be no imaginable reason of State, which oblig'd this Prince to send Ambassadors to Persia, unless it was that of making a Diversion in the Empire of the Greeks, who were highly provok'd at the taking the West from them. Besides this Embassy was neither for Religion, since we are assur'd that Aaron continued making Martyrs; nor purely for Honour, since the Correspondence betwixt these two Princes was great, and of long continuance.

XI. 'Tis said the second Subject of the Embassy was the Possession of the Holy Land, which Charlemagne demanded of the Caliph. It was not proper for a Jew to demand Jerusalem and Judea for the Christians. Historians vary about this Matter. Some say that Charlemagne conquer'd it, which is evidently false. Others say, that Aaron, pleas'd with the Fineness of the Presents, and especially with the Hunting-Dogs which Charlemagne sent him, resolv'd to recompence him with the Cession of Judea. But, said he, he will not be able to defend it at such a distance; and if he approach it, the Provinces of France will revolt, therefore a Medium must be taken. I'll be the Defender of the Country, giving to him the Revenues, which I will punctually pay to his Ambassadors, when they come to make up Accounts with me. A French Annalist ‖ says also, that Zachary, when he sent to the East, return'd thence with two Monks, bringing Charlemagne the Keys of our Lord's Sepulchre, the Keys of the City and the Mountain, with a Standard. The Saxon Poet, who has sung Charlemagne's great Exploits, makes him also Master of Jerusalem.

*—— Persarum * denique princeps*
Hunc Aaron idem fuerat cui subditus, Indis
Exceptis, Oriens totus: curaverat ultro
Ejus amicitiæ se fœdere jungere firmo.
Nam gemmas, aurum, vestes, & aromata crebro
Ac reliquas Orientis opes direxerat illi.
Ascribique locum sanctum Hierosolymorum
Concessit propriæ Caroli semper ditioni.

But these Authors are not consistent: For the Monk of St. Gal † is the only Person that attributes Judea to Charlemagne; and besides, he makes Aaron argue pitifully, it being an unaccountable thing, for a Prince voluntarily to bestow an entire Province upon a Stranger, and then to make himself his Farmer to defend it, and deliver all the Revenues into his Hands. 2. The Annalist makes Zachary bring the Keys of Jerusalem. ‖ Mean time this Man was an Almoner, whom Charlemagne sent to the Patriarch of Jerusalem to carry some Offerings in acknowledgment for the Relicks which this Patriarch had sent him by a Monk. It was not in the Patriarch of Jerusalem's Power, to give up the Holy City, because it depended upon the Sarazens, who kept it in Slavery: Nor could Zachary bring the Keys, since that Office wholly belong'd to Isaac the Jew, who was Ambassador to Aaron, and return'd with the Presents of this Prince. 'Tis better therefore to limit the Caliph's Donation to the Keys of the Sepulchre as Eginhard does *, who was most likely to know it best. Aaron understanding Charlemagne's Devotion for the Messiah's Sepulchre, permitted his Envoys to enter in it, and to offer their Presents and Devotions, and sent Charlemagne the Keys of it, to signifie that he might enter it when he pleas'd. This was a Civility that had no Consequence. But the Poets and Historians have magnified the Present, by saying that Charlemagne became Master of the Holy Sepulchre, of the Mountain, of Jerusalem, and all Judea. Thus Historians amplifying upon one another, proceed from Absurdity to Absurdity.

XII. Lastly, The Caliph † loaded Isaac the Jew with magnificent Presents for Charlemagne, sending with him an Ambassador, who arriv'd with that of the Emir of Africa. These Presents consisted in an Elephant called Bubalas, of an extraordinary bulk. Historians have thought themselves oblig'd to notifie his Death in their Annals, as a considerable Event ‖. There were some Monkeys, a Clock, and some Garments. Isaac was oblig'd to wait in Africa till his Master sent him a Ship to convoy all this Equipage, and arriv'd not till the Emperor was at Aix la Chapelle; at which place he receiv'd Aaron's Ambassadors. They complain'd to Charlemagne of the ill Reception they had met with in all the places they had pass'd, and gave this Prince to understand, that his People were wanting in their Respect to him. He satisfied them by cashiering, as they say, all the Counts and Abbots who had used them ill. Isaac was sent back with them to Persia, which is a full Confirmation that this Jew succeeded in his first Commission, and that his Credit was great at the Caliph's Court.

The Learned of all Religions, and of every Profession, were well receiv'd at this Court. He carried an hundred Men of Wit with him in all his Journeys, which were frequent, because he had taken for his Device, Pilgrim and Warrior. 'Tis said of him, that one day reading these Verses of the Arabian Poet *, Where are the Kings? Where are the rest? They have gone the way that thou art going: O thou! that makest a great account of the World, tho' it be nothing, and thinkest those happy who possess its Glory; take immediately what thou hast a mind to take of it, for Death puts an end to all. He cried out, By God this Man seems to talk of me. He wept when he reflected upon the Frailty of Life, and died a little time after. He stain'd his Kingdom with Blood by the Death of the Children of Bermac, who had been his Viziers seventeen Years, and had merited this Elogy of a Poet, Children of Bermac, O! what good have you done the World! and how much more would you have done! The Earth was your Spouse, at present she is your Widow. He redoubled his Affection for the Christians, when a Physician of that Religion had saved his Life, by bleeding him in a ſit of Apoplexy; and the Patriarch of Alexandria, who was alſo a Phyſician, had cur'd a fine Egyptian Lady, with Water which he had brought from that Country. He reſtor'd to him the Churches, which the Jacobites had taken poſſeſſion of. Laſtly, The Eaſtern Jews enjoy'd a profound Tranquility in his Reign, and made their Synagogues and Academies flouriſh.

* An. 802. † An. 804. ‖ Annales Francor. Auctiores. p. 19. * Poetæ Saxonici Annal. de Gestis Caroli Magni. l. 4. An. 802. Ind. IX. p. 167. † Sangellensis de Gestis Caroli Mag. l. 2. apud Canis Lect. Ant. t. 1. p. 407. ‖ Annales Fuldenses An. 800. p. 539. * Eginhart Vita Caroli Magni. p. 7. † An. 801. Annales Rerum Gestarum a Carolo Magno. ‖ An. 810. Vita Caroli Magni & Monach. Engolism. p. 85. * Valtier. Hist. Mah. l. 2. p. 128.

Fit

XIII. His Son Amin ſucceeded him, in the beginning of the Ninth Century; but this Prince was ſo weak, and addicted to his Pleaſures, as to neglect State-Affairs. His Brother Mamoun, fearing to be aſſaſſinated, revolted againſt him, and cauſed his Generals to march even to Bagded. News was brought him, that the Enemy was at hand; they found him Angling, and receiv'd this for his Anſwer: Let me alone; for Kouter has already caught two great Fiſhes, and I have taken nothing. When they would oblige him to take Arms, to animate the Beſieged at Bagded, he gave them to underſtand, they were troubleſom, becauſe he was playing at Cheſs, and was ready to give the Checkmate. The Arabians relate, That being in the Caſtle of the Gold-gate, when Tahar march'd to beſiege him, he took a walk by Moon-ſhine, and ſent for a ſinging-woman, who chanted theſe Verſes: I am at the end of my Life; my Officers and Relations cry in blood. What Omen is this! ſaid he; Can't you ſing ſome other Air? The Songſter continu'd: Weep their departure; my Eyes, weep their departure: The loſs of Friends deſerves plenty of Tears. O God of reſt and motion, how ſpeedy are our Deſtinies, and how often do they ſurprize us! The Night and the Day, and the Revolutions of the Stars in the Spheres of Heaven never change; but Royalty leaves a King; tho' it be fix'd to the World, it rapidly paſſes from one to another. Great God! Thou alone poſſeſſeſt an immoveable Throne, for ever; without Succeſſor, and without Rival. The Caliph provok'd by theſe Songs, curs'd the Songſter; who retiring, broke a Glaſs that the Caliph was fond of. He took that for an ill Preſage: Don't you ſee, ſaid he to his Favourite, what this Girl has done, and how the Glaſs is broke! I believe my Buſineſs will be done in a few hours. He thought he heard a Voice replying from the Banks of the River: The Buſineſs you talk about is concluded: And indeed he was aſſaſſinated two days after.

Mamoun, on the contrary, was a Prince eminent for noble Actions. He was a Lover of Learning, and endeavour'd to bring it into the Eſteem of the Arabians, who had neglected it till that time; and in order to ſucceed in it, he caus'd all the good Books of the Jews to be tranſlated into that Language.

This created ſome troubles to this Prince from his Nation, which had already irkſomely beheld his endeavours to change their Black Habits into Green. They even rebell'd againſt him for this difference of Habits, becauſe Black is the Colour of the Abaſſides, and Green that of the Ommiades, the Succeſſors of Aly. The Introduction of foreign and ſpeculative Sciences, occaſion'd another † ſubject of diſcontent againſt him; but yet he always lov'd them. Maſhalla, a great Jewiſh Aſtronomer, appear'd at his Court with mighty Reputation. He had made himſelf known before to that of Almanſor. He had ſeen ſeven Caliphs on the Throne, and ſtill preſerv'd his Fame; but it was chiefly in the Reign of Mamoun that he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf. He was look'd upon as the Phœnix of his Age; and the Prince, who was much devoted to this Science, had a paſſionate love for him. 'Twas alſo in his Reign that the famous Impoſtor Mouſſa, the Son of Amram, appear'd: He aſſerted, That he was Moſes, the great Jewiſh Legiſlator, whom God had miraculouſly rais'd from the dead.

XIV. Laſtly, The Excellents continu'd to render famous the Academies of Sora and Pundelita. We have * a Catalogue of theſe Academical Heads; but as it contains only Names obſcure and little known, it would be uſeleſs to inſert them here. We only obſerve a Misfortune, that hapned in the beginning of the Ninth Century at Sora; in which there was no Profeſſor for two Years: which Diſorder was not cauſed by Perſecution, ſince Abumea taught publickly at that time at Pundelita. But theſe Doctors were divided, and theſe Diviſions, raiſed by Pride and Ambition, prevented the Election of a Head. Abumea ‖ ſent his Son, Cohen Tſedek, to Sora, where his Party carry'd it, and the Chair was filled. This Family preſerved its Intereſt in the Nation, after the death of its Head, ſince Abraham his Brother ſucceeded him at Pundelita; and ſo Father and Son, Unkle and Nephew, were for a long time Heads of the two Univerſities.

XV. Mamoun, when he dy'd, preferred his Brother Motaſſem before his own Son Abbas; and this Son, who at the inſtigation of ſome Lords, had at firſt a deſign to aſſume the Caliphſhip, yielding to his Unkle's Remonſtrances, not only took an Oath of Fidelity, but obliged all his Party to do the ſame. Motaſſem was the firſt, that added the Name of God to his own. As Chriſtian Princes call themſelves Kings, by the Grace of God; he would be called Motaſſem Billah, that is, a Prince preſerved by the Grace of God. Diſguſted with Bagded, by the frequent Seditions of its Inhabitants, he drew nearer to Syria, where he built Samarah, or Sermeurai, which became the Capital of theſe Caliphs. He governed his Dominions with a great deal of Juſtice, and won a Battel againſt the Emperor Theophilus, which coſt the Chriſtians above thirty thouſand Men. He alſo defeated Babek, that famous Impoſtor; who liking neither Judaiſm, nor Chriſtianity, nor any of the known Sects, had inſtituted a Religion of Pleaſure and Jollity. He was ſo powerful, that all the Forces of the Empire were employed againſt him.

Vathek * declared himſelf openly † againſt the Jews, for two Reaſons; one was, That they had managed the Revenues of his Predeceſſor; and being diſſatisfied with their Adminiſtration, he taxed them, and ſqueezed great Sums out of them. Moreover he perſecuted thoſe who did not receive the Alcoran, and even the Muſſulmans, who would not acknowledge the Creation of this Book. He was a paſſionate Lover of Women; but upon the ſenſe of approaching Death repented. Death, ſaid he, is common to all; it ſpares Kings no more than their Subjects. He commanded them to roll away his Quilt, and to lay him upon the Floor, and in that State of Humility, he cried, Great God, whoſe Kingdom laſts for ever, have pity upon a poor Prince whoſe time is at an end. They left him in this poſture, to inſtal his Succeſſor. Mean time, a Lizard that came out of the Garden eat his Eyes, which was not perceived, till they went to waſh his Body. The Defenders of the Traditions added to the Alcoran, formed an Inſurrection againſt him at Bagded, and the day was appointed to dethrone him; but he prevented them, and took off the Head of the Leader of this Rebellion, who would never acknowledge the Creation of the Alcoran. This Prince was a Lover of Learned Men, and particularly of † Ann. 831. Ann. 841. * R. Gane, Iſemach, David. ‖ Ann. 574. which is the Year 814. * He is alſo call'd Vathe Cobelle.

Aſtronomers, who deluded him concerning the duration of his Life; and he was ſo Charitable, that no Beggar was ſeen in his Capital, nor in the reſt of his Dominions in his Reign.

Motarakel * met with Oppoſition upon his Claim of the Caliphſhip, after the Death of his Brother; for there was a Deſign to ſet the Son of Vathek on the Throne: but it being repreſented, that it would be a Diſgrace to the Muſſulmans, to have a Perſon at the Head of them unqualify'd to ſay the Publick Prayers, becauſe Mohammed was too young; Motarakel was appointed Succeſſor. He rigorouſly treated the Followers of Aly, and forbad the Pilgrimages that were made to his Tomb.

He declar'd himſelf likewiſe † againſt the Jews: For he order'd, that all who were in his Empire ſhould were a Leathern Girdle, as a Mark of Diſtinction. He excluded them from all Offices of the Divan, and the Government, which is an Argument, that they were admitted in it till that time. He forbad them having Iron Stirrups to their Saddles, and to ride upon Horſes, permitting them only the uſe of Aſſes and Mules. This Prince not only degraded them ‖ of all the Honours they had enjoy'd, but ſtigmatiz'd them with Notes of Diſtinction and Infamy; and what was of worſt conſequence to them, Motarakel's Law ſpread it ſelf not only thro' his Empire, but into the Neighbouring Dominions. In fine, it has ſubſiſted: For it is obſerv'd at this day in moſt Places where the Turks command. 'Tis ſaid this Storm was rais'd by the Chriſtians. The Batiſhua, whoſe Name ſignifies the happineſs of Jeſus, or of the Chriſtians, were ſucceſſively from Father to Son the Caliphs Phyſicians. But the prodigious Wealth the Son had heap'd together, exciting either the Avarice, or the Jealouſie of Motarakel, he diſgrac'd him. The Fault of a private Perſon reflected upon the whole Body; and the Jews who had, it may be, ſome of their Nation over-rich at Court, were involv'd in the ſame Misfortune. It might alſo be ſaid, that Honain, the famous Interpreter of Syrian Books into Arabic, another of Motarakel's Phycians, was a Jew rather than a Chriſtian: He came from Hira, a ruin'd City, where different Tribes were retir'd, to have the freer Exerciſe of their Religion. Its certain, that if there were ſome Chriſtians in that place, there was alſo a prodigious number of Jews. Beſides, theſe People were call'd Ebaddi, that is, Servants of God, becauſe they only worſhipped the Creator of Heaven and Earth, in oppoſition to the other Sectaries, call'd Abdi, Servants of Men, becauſe they worſhipped Creatures. Honain went by the Title of Ebaddi; and indeed he was ſuch an Enemy to the worſhip of Creatures, that he ridicul'd thoſe that ſaluted an Image of Chriſt, and ſpat upon it. Laſtly, he was call'd Rabbin. 'Tis true, Abulpharages ſays, * that he was Excommunicated by the Chriſtians for having diſhonour'd an Image. But Motarakel was not ſo fond of theſe latter, as to give up his Phyſician to them. Abulpharages therefore might be miſtaken in this Circumſtance, and the Diſgrace both of the Jews and Chriſtians might proceed equally from the Phyſicians of their Religion, who were grown too potent.

XVI. They had another Misfortune in this Caliph's Reign. Faction † was re-kindled in one of their Academies. Menachem, the Son of Joſeph, was one of the Excellents, and ſaw himſelf ſole Preſident at Pumdebita, when the People went about to give him a Partner, called Matthatias: He could not bear this Competitor. Each made their Party. The Diſputes were violent, but at laſt Menachim carry'd it. He dy'd two Years after, and left the Place and Authority to Matthatias, who enjoy'd it a much longer time. Thus, we ſee, that Oppreſſion and Miſery can't hinder the Paſſions from playing their Game, and running their uſual lengths. Ambition never dies; it thrives and lives in the Souls of the Wretched, as well as in thoſe of Princes; and Men purſue little degrees of Honour, when they can't obtain ſhining Poſts.

XVII. Motarakel was kill'd by his Son. This cruel Prince had an Iron Stove, all pointed within, which he caus'd to be heated in proportion to the Puniſhment he deſign'd for the Offenders, and when the Sufferer cry'd, have pity on me, he anſwer'd, Pity is a meanneſs of Soul. His Vizier dy'd in this Stove, after forty days torture. He ſpared not his own Son Moutaſſer; who tir'd with theſe Hardſhips, caus'd him to be kill'd. He was not long a Gainer by his Parricide. Being tormented with cutting Remorſes, he thought he ſaw his Father reproaching him with his Crime. His Brother Mothas was as unfortunate as he; for the Turks and Egyptians which he had in pay, revolting againſt him, ‖ entred into his Palace, dragg'd him from his Throne by the Feet, expos'd him to the Sun, and beat him with their Battle-Axes, till he had ſign'd his Depoſition. They contriv'd his Death ſoon after; either by debarring him of Drink, or by giving him Poiſon with Water and Ice. Mothadi, who ſucceeded him, was quickly depos'd by Mothamed, a weak Man, addicted to his Pleaſures, who was abſolutely govern'd by his Brother and Nephew. 'Twas in his Reign that Egypt was diſmembred from the Caliphſhip. Akmed refuſing to depend upon him, was declar'd a Rebel, and order'd to be curs'd in all the Moſchs of the Empire. But this hindred not a new Dynaſty's being ſet up in Egypt, and the beginning of a Succeſſion of new Caliphs. 'Twas * in the ſame Reign too, that the Carmathian Sect aroſe, the Head whereof pretended, That Chriſt had appear'd to him, and taught him a great many things.

This Prince, who dy'd in the Year 891. ſent for Jewiſh Doctors, to conſult them upon an ancient Monument, which was diſcover'd on the Hill of the Lover mad with Love, a Place in Syria, There † were in this Tomb ſeven Bodies, amongſt which was that of a young Man, whoſe Face and Lips were as ruddy as if he had been alive. Near the Sepulchre was an Inſcription engraven upon a Stone, which could not be decypher'd. Mothamed, inquiſitive to know what it contain'd, offer'd it to the Jewiſh Doctors, who were oblig'd to confeſs their Ignorance. The Chriſtians and Arabians, which he ſent for afterwards, were equally unſucceſsful.

XVIII. Amongſt the Arabian Jews appear'd a Man, who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by his Predictions, call'd Albumanaſſer, who having long ſtudy'd the Courſe of the Stars, imagin'd that Events depended upon their Conjunction and Influences. He excepted not ſo much as the Law and Religion from this General Rule. He maintain'd, That the Jewiſh Church was born under the Conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn; and that the ſame Conjunction was to produce Anti-Chriſtianiſm. He particularly foretold, that the Year 1460. ſhould be fatal to the Chriſtian Religion, and that it ſhould periſh at that time. But the Event has given the lie to his Prophecy, and diſcover'd the Vanity of that Science. This Man dy'd in the Year 886.

* An. 846. † An. 853. ‖ Bibl. Orient p. 640. * Abulph. Dyn. IX. p. 171. † An. 861. ‖ An. 869. * Abulph. p. 175. † Chronicle of the Abaſſides, ad An. 276. of the Hegyra, 879. Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 638.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

The History of the Jews in the Empire, Italy, Spain, France and Germany, during the Eighth and Ninth Centuries.

I. The Controverſie about Images: Whether the Jews cauſed them to be pluck'd down. II. Abdalla cauſes them to be mark'd in the Hand. III. Nicephorus favours them. Whether the Attingans were Jews. IV. Michael the Stammerer was a Jew. V. An Edict of Death againſt the Jews, related by Photius. VI. Revolutions in Spain. A falſe Meſſiah. The Caliphs favourable to the Jews. VII. Toloſe beſieged by the Sarazens. VIII. Whether the Jews deliver'd up the City to them, and cauſed all the Chriſtians to be murder'd. IX. This Accuſation proved to be falſe. X. What there is of Truth in his Story. XI. The Credit of the Jews at Charlemagne's Court. The Jews ſell them their conſecrated Veſſels. XII. Sedecias the Magician. XIII. They flouriſh'd under Lewis the Debonnair. XIV. Agobard's reſiſtance of the Emperor's Commiſſioners. XV. This Biſhop's Remonſtrances inſignificant at Court. XVI. Their Authority under Charles the Bald, who was poiſon'd by Sedecias. XVII. Bourdeaux deliver'd up to the Normans by the Jews. The Faults of an Hiſtorian of this Province. XVIII. The Law Suit of the Jews and Chriſtians at Toloſe, concerning Boxes o'th' Ear. XIX. Obſervations upon the Truth and Falſhood of this Plea.

I. THE Queſtion about Images occaſion'd violent Commotions in the Empire. Not only the Divines engag'd in it; the Church divided; Councils were call'd, and made contrary Deciſions; but Perſecution alſo broke out; the People revolted, and flew to Arms, and the Controverſie drew after it Torrents of Blood. The Blame of all theſe Miſeries is caſt upon two Jews we have already mention'd, who after they had deceiv'd Yeſid in the Eaſt, came into Cilicia, and from thence into Iſauria, a Province of the Leſſer Aſia, over againſt the Iſle of Cyprus. Fatigued with their Journey, and the Heat of the day, they ſat down near a Fountain to reſt. * A young Man of the Country, who was leading an Aſs loaden with ſmall Wares, which he ſold in the neighbouring Villages, came and ſat down with them. The Jews having fix'd their Eyes upon him, foretold him that he ſhould one time or other be Emperor, and all the Recompence they requir'd for their Prediction was, that he would take away all the Images of the Chriſtians, becauſe they did not underſtand the Second Commandment of the Law, which only condems Idols, but ſays nothing of Images.

'Tis in vain to charge the Jews with this ſorrowful Event, it being evident they were no ways guilty of it, and moſt of the Facts upon which this Accuſation is built are falſe. One would think that Leo Iſauricus could not be ſuppoſed to conceive that there was any harm in worſhipping Images, unleſs he had learn'd it from the Enemies of Chriſtianity. 'Tis abſurd to accuſe theſe two Jews of not underſtanding the Second Commandment; as if it were not always believ'd in their Nation, that all Adoration paid to an Image is forbidden; or that the Prophets had diſtinguiſh'd between the Images of Saints that might be worſhipped, and the Idols of Heatheniſm that muſt be broken. 'Tis ſuppos'd farther, that theſe Aſtrologers and Diviners hated Images more than Chriſtianity it ſelf, and more than they loved Preferments and Dignities. 'Tis not the Character of Aſtrologers and Soothſayers to neglect their Fortune, or to ſacrifice it to an Article of a foreign Religion. It ſignified little to the Jews, whether the Chriſtians had Images, or broke them, ſince to them they are a Subject of Scandal, or rather of Triumph againſt Chriſtianity. 'Tis no wonder that they accuſe the Chriſtians of Idolatry, and impugn their Worſhip; but they are not much concern'd to have it aboliſh'd, whilſt all the Fundamental Articles of this Religion are ſtill remaining. But not to inſiſt upon theſe Reflections. Leo was not in Iſauria at the time theſe Jews muſt have ſought a retreat there; for though he was originally of this Country, Juſtinian had carried him into Thrace with his Family. He never uſed there the Trade of a Pedlar that goes from Village to Village, ſince he had left the Country before he was arriv'd to a fit Age for Traffick. It was not the Prediction of the Jews, but Juſtinian's Order that engag'd him in the Military Art; ſince this Prince put him in his Guards in the Year 705. † Laſtly, Leo having aſcended the Throne, commanded the Jews and Montagnards to embrace Chriſtianity. The Montagnards or Manichees choſe rather to be burnt with their Temples than to obey; but the Jews were Baptiz'd and receiv'd the Communion. As their Converſion was hypocritical, they endeavour'd to contradict the notorious Advances they had made towards Chriſtianity, by waſhing in common Water, and eating common Food immediately after the Sacrament. This is an odd Fancy; however it is enough to ſhew, that great Violence was uſed againſt the Jews of the Grecian Empire, and that Leo Iſauricus was of all the Emperors, the moſt cruel Enemy of that Nation; which is enough to diſſipate the Accuſation alledg'd againſt the Jews, of having overturn'd the Empire, by the Hatred its two Doctors had infuſed againſt Images. And indeed how is it probable, that Leo who had been ſo much oblig'd to the Jews, and muſt have remembred the Promiſe he had made them, ſhould be their Perſecutor in the very firſt Years of his Reign? Princes, I confeſs, eaſily forget the Services of their Inferiors: But how could theſe two Jews, who had foretold this Emperor of his Exaltation, forget likewiſe this piece of Service, eſpecially if they were oblig'd by his Laws to abandon their Religion as others did? Why would they permit their Nation to be perſecuted, and why would they ſuffer themſelves, for three Years together, before they preſented themſelves to the Emperor, and deſired the Performance of his Promiſe? This does not ſeem probable. The Jews then might be glad of an Event, that divided the Chriſtians upon a Point of their Law, but they ought not to be charg'd with the Event it ſelf. What I have ſaid is purely for the ſake of Truth; for it matters little whether Leo pull'd down Images by the advice of the Jews, or by his own Motion; but an Hiſtorian ought to ſeparate Truth from Falſhood.

* Theophan. An. 715. p. 336. Sigebert. An. 724. p. 545. Zonaras t. 3. p. 48. Cedren. Ann. in Leone. Maimb. Hiſtory of the Iconoclaſts, l. 1. † Theoph. An. 685. p. 327.

II. They found themſelves involv'd in the Deſolations of Jeruſalem and Syria. Abdalla the Son of Aly, whom moſt Authors metamorphoſe into a Caliph, though he was but his Nephew's General, traverſing Judea, commanded the Chriſtians to ſhave their Beards and wear long Caps. Arriving at Jeruſalem, he would have all the Jews, as well as Chriſtians, to be mark'd in the Hand, to diſtinguiſh them from Muſſulmans. Moſt of the Chriſtians ſo mark'd, being unable to bear this Diſgrace, or elſe fearing a more violent Perſecution, withdrew themſelves to the Territories of the Roman Empire. But the Jews, who were as much afraid of Leo Iſauricus as of the Caliphs, continued in the Lands ſubject to their Obedience. 'Tis even ſaid, that they enter'd into Abdalla's Train, that they might inrich themſelves with the Spoils of the Chriſtians. Indeed this General had always a conſiderable Number of them in his Army, to whom he ſold the Church-Plate and Furniture he had plunder'd. 'Tis ſaid too that they violently exaſperated him againſt the Monks, which he hated to the laſt degree. They were miſerable every where; for Leo's Officers were not much more favourable to them; and eſpecially the Governour of Thracia made it his Paſtime to burn their long Beards, cauſing Pitch to be ſtuck to them and ſet on fire. Theophanes has || placed this Event in the Reign of Leo IV. and at the time of his marrying Irene: But he ſhould have fix'd it ten Years later than he has done *.

III. Nicephorus aſcended the Throne in the beginning of the Ninth Century; and finding himſelf overwhelm'd with important Affairs, and ſtreſs'd by Bardanes, who was in Rebellion againſt him, 'tis ſaid that he forſook God, to confide in the Devil; that he called the Manichees and Attingans, famous Magicians, to his Court, making an advantageous uſe of them to ſtrengthen himſelf on the Throne, ſince it was by their means that Bardanes was beaten. Theſe Attingans were Jews, if we will credit the generality of Chriſtians, who charge this unhappy Nation with a new Crime. But Nicephorus declaring againſt Images, was ſufficient to draw ſeveral black Calumnies from the Pens of Writers bigotted to this Worſhip. Theſe Hiſtorians are guilty of want of Judgment; for by conſtantly ſetting the Jews at the Head of the Enemies of Image-worſhip, they put us in mind how ſeverely it is forbidden by the Law. 'Tis, withal, giving too much Efficacy to Magicians, and Power to the Devil, to make him Arbiter of the Fate of Empires, and Succeſs of Battles. And in reality, the Attingans, who are but little known, were neither Jews nor Magicians. Some maintain that they adminiſter'd the Sacraments with theſe words, Take, eat, and I am the living Water. 'Tis not eaſily conjectur'd in what their Error conſiſted; for the Words of Conſecration of the Bread and Water, were never uniform in the ancient Church. Zonaras † aſſerts, that the Attingans profeſſed Sooth-ſaying, and that one of them promiſed the Empire to Michael the Bald: But he diſtinguiſhes them from the Jews; and Paul the Deacon with greater Exactneſs ſays, that they were Manichees ||. So that they can't be confounded with the Jews. 'Tis only true that Nicephorus protected them, and that they were unmoleſted in his Reign.

IV. Michael the Stammerer was ſtill more favourable to them than Nicephorus *. 'Tis even ſaid, that he was half a Jew. This Prince came from Amorium a City of Phrygia, in which a great variety of Sects and Sectaries had taken Sanctuary. 'Tis pretended, that Michael borrow'd ſomething from all theſe Sects, which he had known and ſtudied in his Youth; That he had taken Baptiſm from the Chriſtians, which he ſubſtituted in the room of Circumciſion; but otherwiſe, he generally obſerv'd all the Jewiſh Ceremonies; for which reaſon Zonaras calls him, The Common-ſhore of all Religions. But there is no great ſtreſs to be laid on the Characters Hiſtorians give us of this Prince. One ſingle paſſage will ſuffice to diſcover the reigning Paſſion of that time. Theodore Studite, whom they have made a Saint, who perform'd Miracles, ſaw Michael make his way to the Throne by a Murder, and a villainous Outrage upon the Emperor's Perſon; and yet he cry'd him up for a Joſias and a David, as long as he had hopes of this Uſurper's countenancing Image-worſhip; but when he ſaw them fail, he made a Monſter of him. Who can chooſe but deplore the Inconſtancy of Man's Mind, that is ſo often perverted by Intereſt, that inſtead of blaming Vice, or praiſing Vertue, colours the one and blackens the other, according to its Hopes or Fears? Thus Michael the Stammerer's Toleration of different Sects, and particularly of the Jews, has cauſed him to be call'd the Common-ſhore of Religions, tho' he publickly profeſs'd Chriſtianity; never ſeparated from the Orthodox, and his Indulgence was rather an Argument of his Equity, than of his Irreligion.

V. Photius † ſays, there was a Law in his time, that ſentenced the Jews to death, when they uſurp'd the Goods of the Church. If that be true, their Condition was quickly changed, after Nicephorus and Michael's death, who had treated them ſo kindly. Balſamon, who has commented this paſſage of Photius, denies that there were any ſuch Law, becauſe it is not found in the Baſiliques. 'Tis certain, that Conſtantius forbad the Jews, upon pain of Death, to marry a Chriſtian; and Theodoſius the younger menaced them with the ſame Puniſhment, if they circumciſed their Chriſtian Slaves. 'Tis therefore true, that there was a capital Puniſhment decreed againſt them long before the ninth Century, and theſe Laws are to be met with in the Theodoſian Code ||. Moreover new ones might have been made in Theodoſius's time, relating to the Jews Incroachments upon the Goods of the Church. 'Tis alſo highly probable, that the Empereſs Theodora, when ſhe eſtabliſh'd the Worſhip of Images, and puniſh'd with the utmoſt Cruelty all that refuſed to adore them, might extend her Violence to all that abominated this Worſhip. The Jews could not be left out in this Perſecution, and the Penal Laws relating to them were ſtretch'd, to give a Pretence to puniſh them.

VI. 'Tis not known what they did in Italy; and Spain furniſhes but a very ſlender account. The Sarazens had entred and reduced it to their Obedience. Moſes, or Muſa, the Governour of Africa, upon the Invitation of the Chriſtians, ſent one of his Generals, named Tarck, into Spain, who making his deſcent at the foot of the Mountain Caſpe, gave it its name; hence it is call'd Gibal Tar at this day, or the Mountain of Tarck. Roderick loſt his Life and Crown that was given him in the Year 712. Moſes, taking that advantage, paſſes his Army into Spain, and puſh'd his Conqueſts not only to Toledo, but beyond Saragoſſa. But as he depended upon Ulic the Caliph of Damaſcus, he was recalled ſome time

|| Theoph. An. 759. p. 376. * An. 769. † Zonar. t. 3. p. 103. || Paul Diac. l. 22. p. 552. * An. 820. † Phot. Nomocan. Tit. 9. p. 123 & 124. || Cod. Theodoſ. l. 16. Tit. 8. l. 6. An. 339. & Tit. 9. l. 4. p. 249.

time after. Conſtantine Porphyrogenites aſſerts, that * Muſa, Moavius the Caliph of Syna's Nephew, having conquer'd Spain, made it a particular Principality, which he tranſmitted to his Succeſſors, and that the Sarazens of this Country were call'd Mabiates. This Remark is manifeſtly falſe; For Spain was not made a Particular Kingdom, nor was it an Hereditary Government; and it was wreſted from the Houſe of Moſes, by the Murder of his Son Abdaloiſis. The Governour of Spain was nominated but for three Years. The Governour of Africa had the Right of this Nomination, perhaps, becauſe he had made the Conqueſt of it; but this Governour himſelf depended on the Caliph of Damaſcus. Laſtly, He is miſtaken about the Origine of the Name which the Sarazens brought into Spain, for they did not derive it from Moſes, but Moaviah, the Son of Heſcham, who took Sanctuary in Spain, when the Ommiades were maſſacred in the Eaſt, and he laid the Foundations of a particular Monarchy with his Son Abderame. Mr. de Marca thinks † the opprobrious Name of Maranes came from hence, which is given the Spaniards, and ſignifies Mahometans. His Conjecture is much more reaſonable than that of Mariana and Baronius, who have taken this Name from Maranatha, known in the Jewiſh Church. But 'tis ſtill more probable, that the Sarazens were called Marvenites or Maranites from Marvan II. who reign'd at Damaſcus in the Year 745, and gave many Governours to Spain.

A Jew was reſolv'd to take Advantage ‖ of this Revolution, and of the Wars the new Governours made upon the French in Languedoc; he * was call'd Serenus, and pretended to be the Meſſiah. He found in Spain abundance of People diſpos'd to believe him, and to follow him into the Holy Land, where he was to eſtabliſh his Empire. Ambiſa, who was then Governour, made advantage of this Deſertion, and ſeized all the Eſtates they had vacated by their Extravagance. 'Tis not ſaid how far Serenus carried theſe credulous Souls, but it is moſt probable that ſome died by the way, and that the reſt return'd into their Country, to bewail the loſs of their Eſtates, which they had too lightly quitted.

The Houſe of the Ommiades, which enjoy'd the Caliphſhip in the Eaſt, ſent Governours and Troops hither to confirm their ancient Conqueſts, and to make new ones. This Family was ruin'd by that of the Abaſſides, which made a general Maſſacre of all that belong'd to it. Abdalrahman, whom we call Abderaine, who muſt not be confounded with a General of the ſame Name, who was defeated by Charles Martel, had the good Fortune to eſcape into Spain with his Father. Moavius acknowledg'd him Caliph in all the Weſt †. He reigned there a long time, and began to build the famous Moſch ‖ of Cordua, which his Son finiſh'd by the help of the Chriſtians, which he order'd from Narboneſe Gaul, to work upon the ſumptuous Temple of his Prophet. In the Reign of this Caliph *, appear'd R. Jüda, who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in his Nation by his Learning. As he had ſtudied Philoſophy, he ſought the cauſes that hinder'd the Sea from overflowing the Land, and he publiſh'd a Treatiſe of it, which got him a great Reputation. He publiſh'd alſo an Arabian Dictionary, and tranſlated many Books of that Language into Hebrew; which ſhews not only that this Man was learned, and that the Sciences flouriſh'd then in the Spaniſh Synagogues, but alſo that theſe firſt Caliphs were more favourable to them than to the Chriſtians, who were forced to labour upon the Building of a Moſch, after having taken the Materials from them.

VII. As Languedoc was added to Spain ever ſince the Viſigoths were Maſters of it, that Province was the firſt expos'd to the Incurſions of the Arabians, who had defeated the Viſigoths. In the firſt Years of their Conqueſts, they made themſelves Maſters of Narbonne, and came and beſieg'd Toloſe. 'Tis aſſerted that the Jews, who had made a particular Treaty with them, aſſiſted them, upon condition that all the Chriſtians ſhould be murther'd, that were in the Town after it was taken; but this Fact deſerves to be examin'd.

VIII. 'Tis ſaid, that the Jews of Toloſe were weary of the Tyranny of the preſent Biſhop. As the miraculous St. Sylvin died in the Year 715, we cannot conjecture the Name of his Succeſſor, who by his Tyranny reduced the Jews of his Dioceſs to ſo great Extremies. 'Tis pretended that they call'd in the Sarazens from Spain, and promiſed to deliver up the City, upon condition, that having maſſacred all the Chriſtians upon their entrance, the Traitors ſhould be permitted to enjoy ſeveral Priviledges, and an entire Liberty. The Sarazens took Narbonne in their March, and advanced as far as Lions, deſtroying all that fell into their hands. Vaifier, Duke of Aquitaine, vainly endeavour'd to oppoſe their paſſage; he was defeated and loſt his Life. After his Death, the Victor beſieg'd Toloſe, took it, and put all the Inhabitants to the Sword, except the Jews, to whom he religiouſly perform'd the Promiſe he had made them. But Charlemagne having won three Battles over Abderame, and retaken the City of Toloſe, was reſolv'd to puniſh the Traitors for their Baſeneſs, and all the Blood they had caus'd to be ſpilt. They were condemn'd to Death, and the Inſtruments of their Puniſhment were already prepared, when the Cries and Groans of ſo many poor Wretches mov'd Charlemagne, and oblig'd him to commute the Puniſhment. Inſtead of a general Execution, he was contented with the Heads of the Principals in the Treaſon, and to order for the future, that all the Jews living at Toloſe, ſhould receive a box of the Ear thrice a Year at the Gate of a Church, that ſhould be appointed by the Biſhop, and pay for ever a Fine of thirteen Pounds of Wax.

One would think there was no conteſting a Fact related by a great many Hiſtorians, and ſupported by ſenſible Monuments. Beſides, they alledge three Proofs of the Truth of this Event. The Patent of Charlemagne, produced by Theodard in the Reign of Charles the Bald, when the Jews, who deſir'd to be freed from ſo ſcandalous a Puniſhment, pleaded not guilty to the Accuſation of Treachery enter'd againſt them. Beſides Folcrand Biſhop of Toloſe, in the Year 1181, gave a Sentence about the Weight of 44 Pounds of Wax, which the Jews were oblig'd to pay by vertue of Charlemagne's Order. Laſtly, Another Biſhop of Toloſe gave the Canons of St. Sernin the Fine, which the Jews paid, to exempt themſelves from being box'd three times a Year; and the Inſtrument of that Donation, taken from the Archives of St. Sernin, ſeems indiſputable.

But notwithſtanding all theſe Proofs, we find much Difficulty in admitting this Event; for the Hiſtorians don't acknowledge that Toloſe was taken by the Sarazens. Iſidore de Badajos, who lived a little after this Siege, and who writ the Chronicle of the Sarazens in Spain, aſſerts, that the Inhabitants of Toloſe, having call'd in Eudes Duke of Aquitain, he beat the Enemy, kill'd Zema their Leader, and forced

* Καὶ ὁποωιάξας, &c. vide Copy. † Marca Hiſt. of Bearn. l. 2. c. 2. p. 137. ‖ An. 724. * Marca. ibid. p. 138. In the Year of Chriſt 756, of the Hegira 139. ‖ An. 788. * An. 763.

forced the reſt of his Troops to make a ſcandalous Retreat. Beſides we ſee a Manuſcript Chronicle † of the Abbey of Moiſſac, which relates the Defeat of the Sarazens that beſieged Toloſe; and if the taking of Toloſe be falſe, the Jews can no longer be accus'd of ſurrend'ring it to the Infidels; in order to the cruel and barbarous Pleaſure of having the Chriſtians Throats cut, and becoming Maſters of a City by a general Maſſacre.

IX. It were eaſie to demonſtrate more perſpicuouſly the Falſhood of this pretended Treachery, in ſpite of all the Monuments that remain of it. But I will only inſiſt upon two Obſervations, 1. 'Tis ſaid that Abderame who commanded the Infidels, beat the Army of Vaifier Duke of Aquitaine, that he kill'd him, and afterwards, finding his Children in Toloſe, put them to death. In the mean time it is known, that Count Eudes, who is ſuſpected to have invited the Sarazens, was then Duke of Aquitaine, and that he was in the Battle which Charles Martel gave them many Years after the Siege. Vaifier lived not till a long time after, and was kill'd by Pepin at Perigueux, or by his own Soldiers, as he fled from this Prince. His Children as well as his Widow were found in Xaintes, where Pepin put them under a ſtrict Confinement. How ſhall we reconcile what all the Hiſtorians relate of Vaifier, with his death, happening after his Defeat by Abderame, Jeſid's General of the Sarazens, in the Year 720?

Secondly, 'Tis ſaid that Charlemagne having retaken Toloſe, was contented to puniſh the chief of the Traitors, and commuted the Puniſhment of the reſt, which is evidently falſe and impoſſible. And indeed they fix the taking of Toloſe to the Year 715, or ten Years later. Catel is miſtaken, for Jeſid was Caliph in Syria, when one of his Generals enter'd Aquitaine, and this Prince came not to the Throne till after the Death of Omar, which was in the Year 101 of the Hegyra, and 719 of Jeſus Chriſt, and he died in the Year 723. It can't then be ſaid, that Toloſe was beſieg'd in the Year 715 or ten Years after, but in the Year 720 of our Lord. Whatever way we reckon the Years and Conqueſts of this Caliph, it is impoſſible that the Jews, who had betray'd the City in the beginning of the eighth Century, ſhould be alive, when Charlemagne made War againſt the Sarazens fifty Years after, and that he ſhould then go about to puniſh the Authors of the Conſpiracy. Beſides it is falſe, that Toloſe continued ſo long in the Sarazens hands. Hunoud was Duke of Aquitaine when Charlemagne came into it, and oblig'd him to fly into Gaſcoyne.

X. There are but two things true in this Story; One, that Toloſe was beſieg'd by the Sarazens. 'Tis believ'd alſo, that to ſtreſs it the more, they built the Caſtle of Caltelmoron, the Footſteps whereof appear at this day; but they were oblig'd to raiſe the Siege. Secondly, The Jews were ill uſed at Toloſe, and buffetted in the Perſon of their Syndick; but this was done in hatred to the Nation, and without their being guilty of the imputed Crime of betraying the City, in order to maſſacre all its Inhabitants. They have feign'd the Treaſon, the better to authorize the Puniſhment and the Infamy.

XI. Charlemagne had great Conſideration for them. They boaſted in his Reign the having the Liberty of purchaſing the Sacred Veſſels, and whatever was moſt pretious in the Treaſures of the Churches and Abbies. Charlemagne underſtood with Scandal, that the Biſhops and Abbeſſes gave grounds to theſe Accuſations, and ſeverely prohibited his Clergy from running into ſuch a criminal Exceſs; but he did not exact any Reſtitution on the Jews, nor reſtrain'd them in their Commerce; nor indeed was it juſt, that they ſhould bear the Puniſhment of the Avarice and Profanation of the Biſhops, who voluntarily made theſe Sacrilegious Sales, to conſecrate the Money to their Pleaſures.

XII. They had ſtill greater Intereſt at the Court of Lewis the Debonnaire. He had ‖ Sedecias for his Phyſician, the moſt famous of all Magicians. For which reaſon * a modern Author fails not to cite him, to prove the Effects of Magick to be not only poſſible, but alſo true and real. Pharaoh's Magicians were but Apprentices in compariſon of this Jew; for he diverted Lewis the Debonnaire, and all his Court, by ſwallowing a Man, whoſe Hands and Feet he had cut off, and afterwards reſtored him alive again. The Hiſtorian † ſays, that he one day eat in preſence of the Court a Load of Hay, with the Carter and Horſes. He flew in the Air like Simon Magus, and ſhew'd an hundred Tricks of this nature; which are admir'd by thoſe that believe every thing, and who ſcruple to admit a Grain of Scepticiſm in all the Facts, where the Devil is concern'd.

XIII. 'Tis only true, that the Jews had frequent Audience of the Emperor, and ſo great an Acceſs to his Perſon, that the Courtiers and the Princes of the Blood liberally preſented them, and ſent their Wives rich Dreſſes to ſollicit their Protection. The Emperor gave them liberty to build new Synagogues, and granted them very advantagious Edicts. So powerful a Protection bred Jealouſie, and great Diſorders in the Church of Lions.

Agobard, ‖ who was Biſhop of it, had forbidden his Flock to ſell Chriſtian Slaves to the Jews to be carried into Spain, and to keep the Sabbath. On the contrary, he commanded them to reſt on Sunday. It can't be doubted, but this great Biſhop had a Power to make ſuch Laws as theſe for the Government of the People which God had put under his Care; but he did what is uſual with able Men, when inveſted with Authority; he thought he had liberty to exceed the Bounds of his Juriſdiction, or to give it a greater Extent than it had; for he forbid the Chriſtians to buy Wine of the Jews, and to eat with them during Lent, under Pretence, that when the Wines the Vintners ſold was ſpoil'd, or made unclean by falling to the Ground, they carefully took it up, and kept it for the uſe of the Chriſtians. They ſold them alſo what Meat they thought not good for themſelves, either becauſe the Gall was wanting, or the Lungs grew to the ſides of the Beaſt. I don't know how ſo ingenious a Man as Agobard, came to take ſuch vain Pretences, he that was at other times ſo moderate, as to be unwilling to prejudice the Life and Health, or even Riches of the Circumciſed who lived in his Dioceſs. They complain'd of theſe Laws to Lewis the Debonnaire, who being provok'd againſt Agobard, and the Citizens of Lions, ſent three Commiſſaries to take Informations. The Biſhop was much ſurpriz'd to ſee them arrive at his Houſe. Some Inhabitants, who probably were guilty of more capital Oppreſſions, betook themſelves to flight. The Biſhop having more Authority, waited the Conſequences of the Inqueſt, which was not to his Advantage, ſince the Jews were reſtor'd to the Poſſeſſion of their Priviledges, and the Market of Saturday was changed to another day of the Week, that the neceſſity of Trading that day might not oblige them to violate the Sabbath. The Emperor had in his turn the Power of making Regulations relating to the Polity. In the mean time Agobard was enflam'd; he queſtion'd whether theſe were the true Orders of the Emperor; though he could not doubt of it, ſince his Seal was put to 'em. He accus'd his Miniſters of Corruption: He charged the Jews with ſtealing frequently Chriſtian Children, in order to ſell 'em; and of doing things which it was not lawful for him to ſpeak. He related this upon the declaration of a Fugitive of Corduba, who ſaid, that they had ſold him in his Youth.

† Catel. Hiſt. of Languedoc. ‖ An. 815. * Dandini de ſuſpectis de Hæreſi. † Chronicon Hirſaugienſe. ‖ Agobardus de Inſolentia Judæor.

gulations

XIV. Theſe * Accuſations were not believ'd at Court, and his Remonſtrances had no effect. Evrard, the Emperor's Commiſſary, continu'd to protect the Jews, and to mortifie the Archbiſhop of Lyons, who omitted nothing to ſupport what he had done. He wrote a ſecond time to the Emperor, and ſent him a Treatiſe of the Jewiſh Superſtitions, ſign'd by two Biſhops he had joyn'd with him, to give greater Weight and Authority to his Book. He endeavour'd to prove in this Piece, that we ought to have no Commerce with Hereticks; and particularly with the Jews, beeauſe there is no Sectary, but what has ſome Article of Faith in common with the Church. If the former have Errors, they have alſo a mixture of Truth; whereas, if the Jews believe that Jeſus Chriſt was crucify'd, they deſtroy the Effect of his Death, and deny it. He impertinently alledg'd the Example of St. Paul, who entred not the Synagogues, ſave in the firſt Years of his Apoſtleſhip; but who abſolutely ſeparated from them afterwards, to lodge with Silas among the Faithful: For it ſuffices, that St. Paul did not break off all, even Eccleſiaſtical Commerce with the Synagogue the very firſt day, to conclude from thence, that we may have Correſpondence with them. Beſides, the Fact is evidently falſe; ſince this ſame Apoſtle, when in the laſt Years of his Life he was Priſoner at Rome, had the complaiſance to ſend for the Jews of this great City, to give them an account of his Conduct, and to juſtifie himſelf to them, upon the Complaints that might have been ſent againſt him from Jeruſalem. Laſtly, Agobard cited the Example of St. Peter, who would not receive Clement to his Table, becauſe he was not Baptiz'd. He confeſs'd, that this Example, tho' taken from an Apocryphal Book, nevertheleſs to him appear'd good, becauſe the Ancient Doctors ſometimes made uſe of theſe Recognitions of St. Clement. He afterwards attack'd certain Doctrines, or rather Allegorical Expreſſions of the Rabbins, which aſcrib'd to God a Body, and ſtiff and inflexible Fingers, becauſe he never acts with the Hand. They made him inhabit a Palace ſeated upon a Throne, ſupported by four Beaſts. They attributed to him a thouſand Thoughts, which became ſo many Devils, becauſe they could not have their Effect. He accuſes them of maintaining, that the Letters of their Alphabet were eternal, and that the Law was written many Years before the Creation of the World; but it muſt not be imagin'd that they were ſo ſtupid. The Jews at that time ſaid, that Jeſus Chriſt was a young Man, educated in John Baptiſt's School, who made many Diſciples; one of which had a Head ſo hard, as to be call'd Peter, a Stone: That his Diſciples gather'd together upon a Feaſt day, went to meet him, made him a kind of a King, and cried Hoſanna; but that afterwards Tiberius condemned him to perpetual Impriſonment, becauſe he had ly'd, in promiſing, that his Daughter, who was a Virgin, ſhould lie in, and ſhe only brought forth a Stone. As it was perceiv'd in the Priſon that this Jeſus was a Magician, he was condemn'd to the Gibbet, and his Head was cut off with a Stone: His Enemies committed him to the cuſtody of a Jew, who bury'd him near a Current of Water; the Water roſe in the Night, and carry'd away the dead Body, which could not be found again, tho' it was ſought after almoſt a Year. Pilate being convinc'd that he was riſen from the dead, commanded all the Jews to worſhip him upon pain of Damnation in Hell. Here you have a new Imagination concerning Jeſus Chriſt; which under all its Falſhood and Diſguiſe, would be ſomewhat more advantageous than the reſt, ſince it confeſſes the Reſurrection of the Meſſiah, and that he was worſhipped by Publick Authority, from the firſt Year after his Death. Pilate alſo accus'd the Jews of having kill'd him purely out of jealouſie, which deſtroys the Accuſation of Magick: But there is no neceſſity of going to the bottom of this Matter.

XV. Agobard * made a Journey to Court, either being ſent for, or that he was willing to ſollicite more effectually againſt the Jews, whom he look'd upon as his Perſonal Enemies. He had Audience of the Emperor, but it was only an Audience of Leave; being permitted to return to his Dioceſe without giving him any Satisfaction. The fruitleſneſs of this Journey redoubled his Grief. He was afraid of provoking the Court, by Baptizing of Heathens, who were in the Service of the Jews, and who ſometimes took Refuge in the Churches, to turn Chriſtians. One would think that there was no difficulty in this. The Seal of Chriſtianity can't be deny'd him who underſtands and believes it; and there is nothing more immediately belonging to a Biſhop, than the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm. The only Difficulty that could raiſe the Outcries of the Jews, and oblige the Courtiers to maintain them, was the Price of Slaves, which was loſt by their embracing of Chriſtianity; but Agobard remov'd this, by offering to pay them the Price of the Purchaſe. However, this Biſhop, who was already mortify'd, and afraid to bring new Troubles upon his hands, durſt not undertake it without advertiſing the Court. We don't know what Anſwer he receiv'd, but we have reaſon to conclude, it was not acceptable, ſince the Letter he wrote to Nebudius Biſhop of Narbonne, the Pillar and Firmament of the Church, was a very Splenetick Epiſtle.

He exclaims in it againſt his Enemies; maintaining, that all thoſe who ſtill liv'd under the Law, are cloathed with a Curſe as with a Garment; that the Malediction enters into their Bones, their Marrow, and their Bowels, as Water and Oil flow into Human Bodies. He ſaid that the Jews "were "curs'd both in City and Country, at the begin- "ning and the end of their Life; that their Flocks, "the Meats they eat, their Granaries, their Cel- "lars, and Magazines are curs'd". What Choler poſſeſſes the Souls of Holy Biſhops! Let us deplore the Weakneſs of the greateſt Men. They tranſgreſs the Bounds of their Juriſdiction, without thinking of it, and afterwards are provok'd with the reſiſtance that is made to 'em: They grow hot with Paſſion, which the jealouſie of their deſpis'd Authority irritates: By this means they incapacitate themſelves for the Diſcharge of the Duties of their Place, and loſe their Credit both with their Princes and the People.

The Protection the Jews found at Lewis's Court, againſt one of the moſt Learned Biſhops of his Age, made them flouriſh in France. 'Twas ſaid openly at Court, that the Poſterity of Abraham and the Patriarchs ought to be reſpected. Even ſome Chriſti-

* Id. Ep. Bernardi & Eaoſ. Ep. de Judaicis Superſtitionis. † Agobardi conſultatio ad Proceres de Baptiſmo Judaico.

ans

ans neglected Sunday, and religiously observ'd Saturday, because God had signify'd it to be the Day of his Rest. People chose rather to go and hear the Sermons of the Rabbins, than those of the Curates and Monks; who being at that time ignorant and blockish, gave little Edification. Lastly, a Deacon of the Palace, nam'd Putho, or Paudo, quitted his Post in the Christian Church, to enter into the Synagogue.

XVI. The Jews being thus Potent at the Court of Lewis, maintain'd themselves in that of Charles the Bald. Sedecias, that famous Impostor beforemention'd, was his Physician: It was he that poison'd him. Charles was infinitely hated, and Sedecias, say they, meant to deliver the Kingdom and Empire of him. But these Ideas of the Publick Good have not usually so great an Influence, as the Presents or Sollicitation of a particular Person, that conspires against the Life of his Prince. In effect, its known, that Boson (tho' Charles's Brother-in-law) and a great many of the Lords, corrupted Sedecias, and oblig'd him to shorten his Life by Poison.

XVII. 'Twas in this Prince's Reign, that the Normans began their Incursions, and ravag'd the Goasts of France; and the Jews, who were potent in Aquitaine, are accus'd of countenancing them, and traiterously surrendring Bourdeaux. The Jews, says an Historian, * an Infidel Nation, that hates nothing so much as the Christians, even when they receive 'em into their Cities, gave up the City of Bourges to the Normans, which was plunder'd, and burnt with the Village of Metulle. The City Perigeux run the same fortune at the same time, and the Aquitains gave these Plunderers leisure to return home, loaden with inestimable Booty. This Historian has committed three considerable Faults in his Narration: For, 1. He places this Event under the Reign of Lewis the Debonnaire, tho' it hapned not till the Year 848. when Charles the Bald, his Son, govern'd France. 2. He makes the City Bourges, the Capital of Berry, to be deliver'd to the Normans, instead of that of Bourdeaux, which is in Aquitaine. An ancient Historian found in the Charter-house of Montdieu, whom the Historian of Normandy has pretended to Copy by, translating him, says in expres terms, That Bourdeaux was taken by the Normans, because the Jews in it deliver'd it up. This Translators Fault is the more sensible, in that he complains, that the Aquitains suffer'd the Normans to reimbark and load their Vessels with their Spoils. 3. Lastly, He insinuates, that the City Perigeux was also betray'd by the Jews, notwithstanding they had no hand in its Misfortune. There are some, who would have much ado to believe 'em guilty of the loss of Bourdeaux, upon the Testimony of a single unknown Writer †; for in the Chronicle of St. Vandrille ‖, where the taking of Bourdeaux, and its Duke William, is observ'd, there is no mention of the Treason of the Jews.

XVIII. We have said, that they were accus'd of delivering Tolose to the Sarazens, when they besieg'd it; and that, as a Punishment for this Crime, they were box'd three times a year. The Punishment was more scandalous and ridiculous than cruel. Nevertheless, they complain'd of it, and demanded of Charles the Bald a re-hearing of the Trial. The King nam'd for Revisors, Richard Duke of Aquitaine, and Sisebode Archbishop of Narbonne, who call'd a Provincial Council. The Bishops were only Witnesses. There was not one Person found to plead the Cause of the Christians, and to answer the Plea of the Jews: But the Bishop of Tolose making a Sign to a young Lad, who was afterwards Archbishop of Narbonne; this Youth, nam'd Theodard, produc'd the Charters of Charlemagne and Lewis the Debonnaire against the Jews. They reply'd, That the Punishment of the Fathers ought not to descend upon the Children; and that as those who were present had no hand in the Crime, they ought to have no share in the Scandal. To their Reasons they join'd Humiliation and Entreaty, which caus'd the Decision to be put off. A formal Process only was form'd, and sent to the Emperor. Whether he dy'd at this time, the Affair was not determin'd; at least they continu'd to box the Syndic of the Jews a long time after.

XIX. A pretty ancient Author, has thought the Plea of Theodard a genuine piece, and inserted it into his Life. In the mean time, we are oblig'd to observe three things; one, That Richard, who was made President of this Assembly, was not Duke of Aquitaine: For Ranulph was Governour of this Province, and Richard, who assisted at the Council of Pavia, and at Charles's Coronation, had only the Title of Count. Again, Bernard Bishop of Tolose is not known from any ancient Monument; and those that speak of him, have recourse to the Story of the Plea which he put young Theodard upon. It can't be imagin'd, what the Bishops conven'd from all the Province did there; since the Council was not Judge, and the Emperor had referr'd the Information and Decision to two Commissioners; one whereof was a Layman, and the other an Ecclesiastick. Lastly, * There is no probability that the Jews, who were powerful at Lewis the Debonnaire's Court, would not have obtain'd a Revocation of Charlemagne's Order; or that this Prince would have granted a new Charter for their Buffeting. This is related in the Life of Theodard, Archbishop of Narbonne; but it was not written till long after his Death, upon uncertain Reports, and was found so full of Contradictions, that no body has ventur'd to print it: Only an Extract has been made of it in the particular Office of the Feasts of the Diocese of Montaubon, where Theodard was born. We need only observe Pope Stephen's Decree, to give us a very wretched Notion of this Life. Indeed this Pope says, that he went to the Council of Troies by Order of King Odon. Whereas the Council of Troies was not call'd by Stephen, but by Pope John VIII. Nor was it King Odon, but Lewis that assisted in it. Lastly, Theodard, mention'd by the same Decree, was not then Bishop of Narbonne, but Sisebode, the same Prelate who had been Judge of the Jews, therefore no great weight is to be laid upon Theodard's Life. The Jews were box'd at Tolose: They attempted to make use of Sedecia's Credit with Charles the Bald, to be exempted from this Disgrace; but they could not obtain it: For this Custom subsisted in the following Ages, as appears by the Sentence of Folcrand, given in the twelfth Century. The Author of Theodard's Life, who saw it done, has stuffed his Narrative with a great many Fabulous Circumstances, as thinking to embellish it; and 'tis this which discovers its Falshood. The Christians were Apish thus to box every year the Syndic of the Jews; and 'tis not conceivable, that a long Succession of Bishops religiously observ'd so ridiculous a Pastime: But that alters not the Truth of a Fact, and a Custom supported by Publick Monuments. We know too, that at Beziers they had a Custom to throw Stones at the Jews, from the Eve of Palm-Sunday, to the last Feast of Easter; and they were forc'd to redeem themselves by a Tribute, which they pay to the Bishop. Lastly, 'Tis no wonder, that the Jews, tho' potent at Court, should be obnoxious to the effects of Popular Hatred in particular Cities.

* Du Moulin's Hist. of Normandy, p. 38. † Incertus Author de Gest. Norman. apud du Chêne, p. 2. ‖ Fontanellensi Chronici Fragmentum, p. 388. * Catel's Hist. of Languedoc, l. 3. p. 519.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

The State of the Jews in the Eaſt, during the tenth and eleventh Centuries; in which their Academies were ſhut up, and the Princes of the Captivity aboliſhed.

I. A General Idea of the State of the Jews, during the tenth Century. II. David the Head of the Captivity. His Reign and Pride. The Tranſmigration of Souls believ'd. III. The Heads of the Academy and of the Captivity equal in Power. IV. A Man might exerciſe both theſe Offices at the ſame time. V. They were Elected and Depos'd by Plurality of Votes. VI. The Number and Proſperity of the Jews at Pheruts Schibbur. VII. Hay, a Deſcendant of David. His Works. VIII. Cader's Perſecution of the Jews. IX. Ezechias the Head of the Captivity. X. The Schiſm of Aaron and Moſes in his Reign. XI. The time in which they liv'd. XII. Capel's Conjectures about Aaron. XIII. The Caliph's harmleſs: The Sultan's Perſecutors. The Ruin of the Nation in the Eaſt. XIV. This Event related by Salomon the Son of the Rod. XV. The Confutation of his Relation. XVI. Sultan Gela le Doullat deſtroys 'em. XVII. Heads of the Captivity after this Perſecution. XVIII. A Conſequence drawn from hence for the Explication of Jacob's Oracle. XIX. The Falſity of this Conſequence. XX. The Religion of the Druſes unknown. XXI. Their Head a Perſecutor of the Jews in Egypt.

I. THE Tenth Century, which is in ſuch Diſcredit with the Chriſtians, was not ſo unreputable to the Jews. Inſtead of deploring the groſs Ignorance that overſpread Chriſtianity at that time; they boaſt, that they never had ſuch Excellent Doctors as then. They erected a new Academy in the Eaſt; becauſe thoſe which had ſubſiſted for many Ages, were not ſufficient to contain the numbers of Profeſſors and Scholars. The Arabians apply'd themſelves to ſtudy, in ſpight of the Oppreſſion, which deſtroy'd the Authority of the Caliphs. There appear'd amongſt 'em able Phyſicians, and ſubtle Logicians; and notwithſtanding they had experimented the Vanity of Aſtronomical Predictions, yet they ſtudiouſly cultivated this Science, that was uſeful at Court. The Jews imitated the Arabians: An Inclination and Genius for Learning, which had been extinct, reviv'd among them: However, their Quiet was interrupted, by the Diviſions that aroſe between the Profeſſors and Heads of the Captivity. They even ſaw theſe Academies tumble down; and the whole Nation being expell'd the Eaſt, was forc'd to ſeek a new Refuge in Spain and France. They underwent freſh Misfortunes thro' the Zeal of the Cruſaders; who made it a piece of Devotion to Maſſacre all the Jews, before they proceeded to the Conqueſt of Judea: Which is the Subject we are going to relate.

II. David was the Prince of the Captivity: A haughty Man, who govern'd his Nation with the Authority of a King. The Jewiſh Hiſtorians * complain'd, that his Predeceſſors buckl'd under the Caliphs, and paid them Tribute; but that David recover'd all his Privileges, and inforc'd them like a King. There were two things that might contribute to this Exaltation: The long Reign of David, who was Head of his Nation above thirty Years, and the Weakneſs of the Caliph Moctader, who then rul'd. He was not only Young, but depended ſo upon his Officers, that they depos'd him twice; and he had been abſolutely depriv'd, but that they could not find any Perſon in the Family of the Abaſſides to ſubſtitute in his Room. The Weakneſs of the Government, gave David opportunity to raiſe himſelf, and affect a ſtately Pride. He caſt Troubles and Diviſions into the Academy of Pundebita, by carrying his Authority too high. The Jews had elected Misbiſcher, and made him Preſident of their College: David choſe another; and the jealouſie of theſe two Profeſſors, who had different Privileges, encreas'd the Diſorder. The Diviſion was violent for five Years, and there was no way to appeaſe it, but by forming two different Schools in the ſame Place.

That of Sora was ſo fall'n from its ancient Luſtre, that no body could be found, either willing or able to teach in in. David ſent for one nam'd Jom Tob; but he being no ingenious Man, inſtead of raiſing the drooping Academy, left it as empty as he found it. They were then forc'd to ſeek out the Rabbi Saadias, to fill the Vacancy, and draw Scholars to the Place. Saadias at firſt diſcharg'd his Poſt with great Succeſs. One of his principal Cares, was to cure his Nation of the Error about the Tranſmigration of Souls, that had been diſpers'd among the Perſians for a great many Ages; and was ſtill preſerv'd in the Eaſt, notwithſtanding the frequent Revolutions that happen'd there, both in the Empire and Religion. The Jews, who believ'd it in our Saviour's time, were ſtill as fond of it as the Arabians; and Saadias found it very difficult to reclaim them: However, he made ſome progreſs; but the Prince of the Captivity deſiring him to ſign a Regulation he had made againſt the Laws, the Doctor refus'd him ſo unjuſt a Demand. This Refuſal, which David did not expect, incens'd him very much: He upbraided Saadias with his Ingratitude, and ſent his Son to threaten him with the loſs of his Head, if he did not obey his Orders; but the Rabbi advertiſing his Scholars of this Inſult, they mutiny'd againſt David, and attacking him in a Body, beat him ſoundly. The Nation divided after the Example of its Heads; and every one engag'd in a Party. Saadias's Faction ſo far prevail'd at firſt, as to get David depos'd, and Joſeph his Brother proclaim'd Prince of the Captivity; but his Authority laſted not long. David, ſupported by his Creatures, reſum'd the Government; Saadias was conſtrain'd to fly, and ſeek a place of Retirement; in which he continu'd ſeven Years: 'Twas in this Sanctuary, that he compos'd moſt of the Works which have perpetuated his Name after his Death. He came out of it at laſt to be reconcil'd with his Prince; but he had the happineſs to ſurvive him, aud to have the peaceable Poſſeſſion of the Academy.

III. We may learn from this Event, that the Power of the Heads of the Academy, was almoſt equal to that of the Princes; ſince the latter could not enact any Laws, but what were ſign'd by the Profeſſor. Moreover, there hath been frequent

* Ganz Tſemach David, p. 130.

Inſurrections againſt each other. Saadias, tho' a Stranger in the Eaſt, withſtood David, the haughtieſt and moſt potent Prince the Nation had ſeen for many Ages.

IV. Theſe Heads of the Academy, might at the ſame time be Princes of the Captivity, though this did not always happen. And indeed Hay, one of the Sublimes, was at the ſame time Head of the Academy, and Prince of the Nation. Beſides, the Title of Prince is often given to the others. They ſay, * that ſuch a one reign'd alone in the Academy; and that the Empire of Raf Nehemiah, Head of Pundebita, in the middle of the tenth Century, laſted eight Years: The Titles of Reign and Empire only relating to their Inſtruction. Laſtly, We commonly find in the Jewiſh Chronicles, the Names of theſe Heads of the Academy, whilſt we ſee no Prince of the Nation. Will you ſay, that the Doctors being more ſollicitous for the Chain of the Cabala, and the Succeſſion of Perſons, who have preſerv'd Tradition, than for the remembrance of an Authority ſo long ſince aboliſh'd, have preferr'd the Names of the Profeſſors, before thoſe of the Princes? This Conjecture may have ſome Solidity in it; but yet it removes not the difficulty which ariſes from the ſo frequent ſilence of the Hiſtorians, as to the Princes of the Captivity; for no body can ever accuſe the Jewiſh Nation, of voluntarily forgetting any thing that might be ſerviceable to its Glory.

V. The Princes of the Nation, and the Heads of the Academy, were Elected by a Majority of Votes. The Example of David, depos'd by Saadias's Intrigues, proves, that the Power of the Princes, was neither Abſolute, nor Independant on the People. Beſides, the Government was not Hereditary in a Family; and tho' the Son ſometimes ſucceeded the Father, yet this rarely happen'd. The ſame thing muſt be ſaid of the Heads of the Academy: The Prince contributed to their Election, by his Authority in the Nation; but the Doctors gave their Votes: The Vote alſo and Inclination of the People was heard, tho' not always. We find an Inſtance of it in the tenth Century; when there was a Profeſſor wanting at Pundebita. A very rich Merchant offer'd himſelf as a Candidate for the Place; part of the People were for Nehemia, others declar'd for the Merchant, named Aaron; and this laſt was choſen. But the other ſucceeded him † ſeventeen Years after.

VI. The Nation was in ſo flouriſhing a Condition at that time, that nine hundred thouſand Jews were reckon'd in the City of Pheruts Schibbur. This Name ſignifies the rupture of Sapor; and according to this Etymology, Sapor ſhould be acknowledg'd for the Founder of this City; and amongſt many Kings of Perſia of this Name, it might be attributed to Sapor II. who took Valerian Priſoner, and treated him ſo cruelly: For this Prince not only enlarg'd his Kingdom by many Conqueſts, but alſo built a great many Cities in them, and call'd them by his Name. Some give this honour to a Rabbin, ‖ call'd Schiabbour, or Sapor, who founded the Academy. In the mean time it was not the Academy, but the City it ſtood in, that bore this Name. It was ſituated five Miles from Babylon; and if it had nine hundred thouſand Jews in it, it muſt have been vaſtly Peopled by that Nation, and alſo of prodigious Extent; for there are very few Cities in the World that contain within their Walls ſo many Inhabitants. Perhaps 'tis an Hyperbole of the Hiſtorians *. Scherira, who was made Preſident of this School, kept it flouriſhing † for thirty Years together. He was a mortal Enemy of the Chriſtians, and particularly of the Monks, whom he wrote againſt, and call'd them Forgers. He was the more acceptable for it to his Diſciples, who commonly look upon theſe Outrages, as ſo many Acts of Zeal. Scherira finding himſelf overloaden with Years, reſign'd his Place to his Son Hay, the moſt Excellent of all the Excellents.

VII. 'Tis pretended, that this Doctor deſcended in a direct Line from David the Prophet, and King of Judea. For a Proof of it, they affirm, that he had a Lion in his Scutcheon, which was alſo in the Arms of the ancient Kings of Judea. But his principal Glory did not accrue from ſo Illuſtrious a Birth: He diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in his Nation by a great many very different Works, which he Publiſh'd upon Purchaſes, and Sales, and Wages. He has one upon the Interpretation of Dreams ‖. Another contains his Anſwers upon the Book of Jetſira, or the Formation; in which we find the way they formerly wrote the Name of Jehovah at Jeruſalem; which being ſingular I will here inſert.

The Chriſtians ſay, that each Circle repreſents the Light, and that as three of them are found in all the parts, Hay meant to explain by them the Trinity of Perſons; each of which may be conſider'd as a Circle of Light; for the Son is the Light that enlightens every Man that comes into the World. Hay was a Poet, and ſome of his Verſes are ſtill remaining; in which * he inſtructs a Man in the Duties of Piety. Laſtly, he was a Cabbaliſt; and not only explain'd the Terms and Art of the Cabbala, but his Treatiſe concerning the Voice of God in Power, is alſo full of Cabbaliſtick Principles. He had ſo great a Reputation, that they came from the Eaſt and Weſt to conſult him. He became Head of the Academy of Pundebita, as well as of Pheruts Schibbur; in which he had been Profeſſor from nine and twenty years of Age. It ſeems too that he was elected Prince of the Captivity. But happening to draw upon him the jealouſie of his own Nation, both he and his Father fell into deſperate Diſgrace.

VIII. The Caliph, who then reign'd, was call'd Cader. Tho' he was of the Houſe of the Abaſſides, he liv'd privately with a † Neighbouring Prince, who reign'd in the Marſhes, that are form'd by the Waters of the Tygris and Euphrates. But the Sultan having depos'd Thai, ſet him upon the Throne. He quickly ſhew'd himſelf worthy of the Empire he was rais'd to. He reform'd the Abuſes that were crept into the State; and extended his Care as far as Egypt; where he prov'd to the Fathemites, that reign'd there, that they were not Aly's Family, as they boaſted. Cader, who liv'd eighty one Years, and reign'd above forty, reſolv'd alſo to give a check to the Jews, who had made too great Advantage of the precedent Troubles, and uſurp'd an undue Authority. Scherira and Hay were accus'd to him as Men of Wealth and Power, who govern'd the Nation; they were put in Priſon. The Caliph fleec'd 'em of all their Wealth, and caus'd Scherira to be hang'd, who muſt have been above a hundred Years old. Hay had the good fortune to escape this Violence. He went on with his Lectures in the Academy, and taught there till 1037. This was the last of the Excellents.

* An. 959. † An. 959. ‖ U. Bibl. Oriental. at the Title Schiabbour, p. 763. * Ganz Tſemach David, p 129. † An. 997. ‖ It was Printed at Venice with other like Pieces of Salomon Jarki, &c. Bart. B. R. t. 2. p. 387. * Eruditio intellect. ex Prov. C. 3. edit. Conſtantinop. An. 1532. U. Bart. ibid. † Babacdulla.

eſcape

IX. After Hay's Death, Ezechias was elected Prince of the Captivity, but his Reign was short and miserable *, for when he had reigned two Years, the Caliph arrested him with all his Family, and put them to death, except two Sons that fled into Spain. The Academies were shut up, and the Learned oblig'd to seek a Sanctuary in the West, whither the persecuted People follow'd them.

X. 'Twas in the Reign of Ezechias that the Schism † arose between the Children of Asher and Nepthali, who are thought to be the first Masoreths. At least, they are the first Grammarians who applied themselves to review and correct the Scripture. Father Simon, well vers'd in this Subject, who saw Aaron's Manuscript and printed Corrections, has no esteem for them, believing them to be later than the Masora, and pretty modern. We ought not to judge of them by the Noise or Schism these two Masters raised in the Nation; for People often divide in the Schools upon Niceties of Grammar. But if their Corrections be trifling, the Authority of the Hebrew Text is the greater for it; for 'tis a Proof that the original Text had so long preserv'd its Integrity, and stood in need of no great Correction.

XI. Aaron and Moses must needs have lived || in the Eleventh Century; for they not only taught in Babylon, whose Academies were shut up, but Maimonides, who lived in Egypt in the following Century, drew his Plan upon that of Ben-Asher; he lived therefore many Years before Maimonides, since his Corrections had already been approved in Egypt; and if we make these Revisors ancienter than the Eleventh Century, we have still less reason to upbraid them with their Novelty. Tho' they are call'd the Children of Asher and Nephthali, it is not to be imagin'd they took their Name from their Parents, but from the Tribes they pretended to be of, whose Remains were preserv'd in the East.

XII. Capel was of opinion *, that Aaron was of Tiberias, which being the place of his Birth, and the Academy where he taught, it took his part against the Eastern Jews, who preferr'd Moses's revision. But we can't conjecture which was his Country; and the Jewish Historians only insinuate that he taught in the East under Ezechias the Prince of the Nation. He retir'd perhaps to Tiberias, upon account of their Persecution in the East, and then it was that the Tiberias Doctors gave him the Preference above Moses, as he had preferr'd their Academy and City before all the rest he might have fled to. 'Tis evident that the Dispute was not about the Points, as Capel thought, but about the Words of the Law.

XIII. The Persecution, which continued in the East, intirely ruin'd the Affairs of this Nation. We can't absolutely charge this Persecution upon the Caliphs; for Cajem, who then reigned, was too great a Lover of Literature and Learned Men, to ruin flourishing Academies, out of which were frequently drawn Physicians, Astrologers, and Interpreters of Dreams. But there had happen'd above a Century before, a considerable Change in this Monarchy; for the House of the Buides had usurp'd the Supreme Authority. Buia, the Head of this House, pretended to descend from Cosroes an antient King of Persia; yet he was very poor, when he dream'd that a great Fire issued from his Belly, which having cover'd a great Country, flew up to Heaven, and divided it self into three Fires, which the Nations of the Earth adored. An Astrologer predicted to him, that these three Fires were his three Children which should reign one after another; and he confirm'd his Prediction when he had examin'd the Scheme of their Nativity. These three Sons of Buia, after several turns of Fortune, enter'd in Mardavige's Service, who made War upon the Caliph Moctader †, wherein they signaliz'd themselves, and obtain'd many Victories over him. Mardavige being kill'd in the Bagnio, and leaving no Children to succeed him, Aly the eldest of Buia's Sons seeing himself at the Head of a victorious Army, push'd on his Fortune, conquer'd Persia, and laid the Foundations of a new Dynasty, which lasted One hundred twenty seven Years ||. These new Sultans grew so despotical at Bagdet, that nothing was done but by their order. The Caliphs absolutely depended on them, whom they raised to the Throne, and deposed as they thought fit. One of these Caliphs was deposed by them in the Year 945. Mothi, who succeded the depriv'd Caliph, is hardly known, because he was not so much as allow'd to have a Visier, being oblig'd to be content with a Secretary, who took the Accounts of his Revenues. Thay his Son, to whom he left the Caliphship, after a voluntary Abdication, was depriv'd by the Sultan Baha Aldoulat, who entring his Chamber upon pretence of paying his Respects to him, afterwards had him dragg'd from his Throne by suborn'd People, who kept him Prisoner till they had carry'd off the Treasures of the Palace. He had the Misfortune to survive his Grandure † a long time, and to be oblig'd to lead a private Life, seeing another reign under his Nose. One of these Caliphs depos'd by the Sultans, and by the Emir Al Omera, or Generalissimo of the Troops, who was like the Maires du Palais in France, was reduc'd to so miserable a Condition, as to beg his Bread at the Gates of the Moschs, and to desire them that pass'd by, to remember that he had been their Caliph. The House of the Abassides which had always favour'd the Jews, being sunk from its Authority, the Sultan Gela le Doulat, who reign'd by the Name of Cajem, resolv'd to extirpate them; and to that purpose shut up their Academies, which have never been open'd since. He banish'd the Professors, or oblig'd them to banish themselves, and to translate their Academies into the West. He kill'd the Prince of the Captivity with his Family. The People also suffer'd extreamly in this Persecution, which in all appearance was so bloody, as to reduce the Jews to a handful of Men; to disperse them into the Desarts of Arabia, and to drive them into the Western World.

XIV. The Jewish Historians say *, that the Babylonish Lords, being jealous of the Grandeur wherewith the Prince of the Captivity appear'd among them, began to fear the Exaltation of some one of David's Family, who should seize upon the Government and the Crown. They gave out, that it would be scandalous for the Masters to be oblig'd to obey their Slaves, and resolv'd to kill him; which Resolution they executed as he pass'd with the Princes of the Academies. The News of it was immediately brought to Court, which sent a Detachment of Guards to wrest the Prince of the Captivity out of the Mutineers hands. But they arriv'd too late, and could rescue but a very few People. However the Nation laid hold of this Accident, and resolv'd to have no Prince for the future, that they might no more excite the Jealouſies of Potentates, and to wait till God ſhould pleaſe to ſend them a Prince, who might give them an intire Deliverance.

* Ganx An. 797. p. 131. † An. 1037. || An. 1037. * Capell Arcanum Punctuationis. † An. 930. || An. 932 and ended in 1056. † 69 Years. * Salomon Ben Virgæ Schevet Juda, p. 307.

XV. I queſtion whether the thing happen'd as it is related by this Hiſtorian. 'Tis true there were then at Babylon three different Factions, that of the Abaſſides, who held the Caliphſhip, and ought to have been Maſters, but who daſtardly ſubmitted to the General of their Troops. The Houſe of the Buides made a ſecond Party; the Generaliſſimo was of this Houſe, and govern'd with a more abſolute Authority. Laſtly, The Selgiucides made a third, which was a Family of Turks that came from the Banks of the Caſpian Sea, who having paſs'd the Gehon, came and ſettled at Chorazin, where they grew ſo formidable, as to ruin the Houſe of the Buides, and make themſelves Maſters of the Caliphſhip.

Whatever way we turn our Thoughts, we can't ſee how the Prince of the Captivity could have provok'd the Jealouſie of theſe Factions, or theſe Heads of them. We have already ſaid, that the Caliph Cajem came of a Family that lov'd the Jews. He honour'd Men of Learning, and during a Reign of 45 Years, he ſtill ſtoop'd under his Generals, and was even a Priſoner ſome time. Togrul came to take him out to conduct him pompouſly to the Palace upon his Mule, whilſt he march'd on foot, with his hands ſometimes upon the Stirrup, and ſometimes upon the Bridle, which oblig'd Cajem to give him the Title of Pillar, and to ſay to him, Mount on Horſe-back, you that are the ſtrongeſt Support of Religion. But notwithſtanding all theſe Appearances of Reſpect and Submiſſion he kept him under.

XVI. The Sultan Gela le Doullat, the Head of the ſecond Faction, had nothing to apprehend from the Jews: What could they do to this General, who had always great Armies ready to march under his command, and who govern'd ſo happily, that there was no likelihood of a Revolution during his Life? And yet it was he that put to death the Heads of the Captivity, and baniſh'd the Jews; for the Selgiucides came not to Bagdet to the aſſiſtance of the Caliph Cajem till the Year 1055, above fifty Years after the Ruin of the Academies. It might be imagin'd, that the frequent Troubles that happen'd at that time in Bagdet, which was plunder'd, and taken and retaken ſeveral times, gave occaſion to fear, leſt the Jews ſhould take ſome advantage of them. But without examining the Condition of this Nation, whoſe Power in the Eaſt doth not ſeem formidable enough to have raiſed theſe Suſpicions, this Conjecture can't be advanc'd, ſince the Troubles did not begin till after their Ruin and Diſperſion.

If the Prince of the Captivity had been kill'd alone upon a tranſient Commotion, and the Guards ſent to his aſſiſtance had ſtop'd it, the Academies would ſtill have ſubſiſted after his death, and we might have ſeen ſome Excellents in the Eaſt, as before. But the Academies being ruin'd, their Heads baniſh'd, and the People diſpers'd, 'tis ridiculous to ſay, that the Princes Dignity was aboliſh'd upon deliberation, in order to ſecure themſelves from the fatal Effects of Jealouſie.

XVII. 'Tis here they put an end to the Heads of the Captivity, and the Eaſtern Academies; but I queſtion whether they be not miſtaken, for Benjamin de Tudela, who travelled in the following Century into the Eaſt, to pay a Viſit to his Brethren, ſtill found a Prince of the Captivity among them. Petachia, who went from Ratisbonne, with the ſame Deſign, and in the ſame Century, found a Prince of the diſpers'd Nation at Bagdet in Perſia. His Name was Samuel, and he aſſerts that he traced his Genealogy as high as the Prophet of that Name. For a Proof of it, he produced a genealogical Book he had. From hence we infer two things; Firſt, That the Heads of the Captivity were not of David's Family, as is ſuppoſed, ſince the Prophet Samuel was of the Tribe of Ephraim. Secondly, That the Princes of the Captivity were not abſolutely aboliſh'd in the Eleventh Century. Notwithſtanding the Perſecution which the Jews then ſuffer'd at Bagdet, and in the neighbouring Provinces was ſo violent, that the Nation had much ado to rear its Head again. The Princes of the Captivity were rarely ſeen afterwards, and preſerv'd only the Name without Authority. They might have ſome School in the Thirteenth Century, which they ſtyl'd an Academy; but thoſe of Sora and Pundebita, and all the reſt which had made a Figure, were abſolutely ruin'd in the Year 1039.

XVIII. Great Advantage is taken from this Misfortune. The Chriſtians conclude from it againſt the Talmudiſts, that the Meſſiah is come. The truth is, Jacob having foretold, that the Scepter ſhould not depart from Judah, nor the Law-giver from betwixt his Feet, till Shiloh came; the Talmudiſts have eluded this Propheſie, by ſaying, that the Scepter ſignified the Authority of the Princes of the Captivity at Babylon, and by the Law-giver was meant, the Children, or Hillel, or the Heads of the Academies which taught the Law. The Rod or the Scepter denotes the ſupreme Authority, and the Law-giver the inferior Power, that was obtain'd from the Kings of Perſia. But the Heads of the Academies being aboliſh'd, and the Power given by the Caliphs to the Prince of the Captivity, extinct in the Perſon of Zacharias the Son of David * in the Year 1039, it can no longer be ſaid, that the Jewiſh Nation have either Head or Law-giver remaining; and if the Meſſiah was to appear after the Abolition of theſe Heads, he muſt have been come a great many Centuries before.

XIX. There is ſome reaſon for taxing the Talmudiſts with their Error. As they lived at a time wherein their Nation enjoy'd ſome Proſperity in the Eaſt, and foreſaw not their Declenſion, nor the Ruin that happen'd a long time after; they thought to ſtop the Chriſtians mouths by boaſting of their Heads of the Captivity, to whom they gave the Title of Prince (with greater Pomp than reality) as well as to their Profeſſors, as if they had been the Legiſlators of Iſrael. We have reaſon to inſult their Admirers upon the Falſhood of this Anſwer. But that is the only conſequence that can be drawn from this Revolution; for at the bottom there is no probability, that Jacob deſign'd to ſpeak of the Kings of his Poſterity when it was in Bondage, nor of Princes, who only had the Name and ſhadow of Authority over a Fugitive People. They liv'd in Subjection to the Infidels, paid them Tribute, and bought their Liberty. Is this to hold the Scepter or Rod in their hands? And can it be ſaid, that it was always a Man of the Tribe of Judah that govern'd, whilſt the other Tribes carried away by Salmanaſſar were much more numerous and potent than this?

XX. The Jews underwent a freſh Perſecution in Egypt in the Reign of Hakim, the third Caliph of the Houſe of the Fathimites. His Father had left him young in the Hands of a Tutor in the Year 996. He was a Man of a weak Head, who ſuffer'd

* V. Bartol. B. R. t. 2. p. 385.

himſelf

himſelf to be won by D. Arar an Impoſtor, who was kill'd notwithſtanding his Intereſt with the Caliph. After his Death another Impoſtor named Hamzah ſucceeded him, and perſwaded Hakim that he was God. There has even been a Catalogue made of ſixteen thouſand Perſons who acknowledg'd him for the Supreme Deity: And from hence was form'd the Religion of the Druſes or † Dararіah, which remains to this day, though it be ſo little known, that they were believ'd, not long ſince, to be deſcended from the Druides, or a Count of Dreux, and other French-men, who follow'd Godfrey of Bouillon to the Conqueſt of Jeruſalem. The Affair ſtands thus.

Hakim could not own Aly's Predeceſſors as lawful Caliphs; and therefore he caus'd them to be excommunicated. His Maſter Hamzah afterwards put it into his Head to aboliſh Mahometiſm, and ſet up a new Religion, whereof himſelf ſhould be the Head: He perſwaded this extravagant Prince that he was the great God, who had taken the Figure of a King, to manifeſt himſelf to Men. He feign'd that this God, whom he call'd Albar ||, had created the World, mingled with young and old: Some imagin'd they were the Fathers of others, and ſhew'd the Tombs of their Anceſtors. Some were found created in Veſſels upon the Sea, carrying Merchandiſes from one Shore to another. Men being created, God gave them Adam the Purified for their Law-giver, who was otherwiſe call'd Chantil. He preach'd 120 Years, and reduc'd the Nations, particularly the Arabians, to the Faith of the Unity. But God having oblig'd the Devil, call'd Arath, to follow this Religion, and to reſpect Adam as his High Prieſt, the Devil made a Schiſm with part of Mankind. Adam, to ſupport himſelf, took Enoch to his aſſiſtance, call'd Adam the Criminal, and Seth ſurnamed Adam the Forgetful, and Material. But however the World forſook the Unitarian Religion, and follow'd the Devil. God being provok'd, ſent Noah, who took poſſeſſion of the High Prieſthood, and taught the Adoration of nothing. His Religion laſted till Abraham, who made a new one, which ſubſiſted till Moſes, who taught Men to worſhip what was inviſible. Jeſus came afterwards, who attempted to reunite all Men to his Religion. He reign'd till Mahomet, who ſet himſelf againſt all Religions to eſtabliſh his own, and made Men worſhip a Lye; but at laſt Hakim, or the great God, came into the World to procure the Adoration of all the Earth, to which purpoſe he had brought back the firſt Adam, who was the Impoſtor Hamzah, who compoſed a very polite Arabian Book, in which he included his Syſtem. He gave himſelf the Name of Supreme Legiſlator, the Cauſe of Cauſes, the Word, God, Immediate Collector. He permitted all Inceſtuous Marriages, and ſuppreſs'd ſome Feaſts; the Faſt of Rhamadhan, and the Pilgrimage to Mecha. The better to act his part, Hakim went every Morning upon the Mountain Moccatam, where he boaſted to have ſecret Conferences with God. There it was that his Siſter, fearing the Conſequences of his Extravagance, caus'd him to be kill'd. But as the Murther was ſecret, Hamzah made uſe of that Circumſtance to publiſh, that this Deity had diſappear'd, and was retir'd behind the Wall of Alexandria, from whence he ſhould hereafter return again; and the Druſes, who are at this day Maſters of Mount Libanon, Berithos, and ſome Maritime Cities of Syria, wait for him, as the Jews do for the Meſſiah.

XXI. Hakim declar'd himſelf an Enemy both to the Jews and Chriſtians. He order'd the former to wear a Mark, by which they might be known: He caus'd their Synagogues to be demoliſh'd, forc'd them by Baſtinado's to quit their Religion and to turn Druſes. But being unconſtant, he quickly chang'd his Opinion, and permitted them to return to their old Religion. This Prince dyed in the Year 1026 in Egypt where he reign'd.

† Mr. Harbelot in his Bibl. Orientale, calls this Sect Dararіah, p. 418. but Mr. de la Goix, in his Tranſlation of the Kitab Almakaid, calls them Druzes. || Kitab Almakaid.

CHAP. V.

The State of the Jews in the Weſt, during the Tenth and Eleventh Centuries. The Perſecutions in Spain.

I. A general Account of the Government of the Caliphs in Spain. II. Of the State of the Chriſtians. III. That of the Jews. The Hiſtory of Moſes clad with a Sack. IV. The Talmud tranſlated into Arabick. The Diviſion of the Synagogues. Magnificence of the Rabbins. V. Revolutions in the Caliphſhip. VI. The Arrival of the Marabethons in Spain; their Original. VII. Their great Intereſt at Court. VIII. Ended by a Maſſacre. IX. A new Maſſacre by the Chriſtians, ſtop'd by the Biſhops and Pope. X. Their Tranquility in the Reign of Alphonſo. XI. Peter I. oppoſes the Violence that was deſign'd them at the time of the Cruſadoes. XII. Learned Men numerous among them. Cophni a famous Rabbin. XIII. The five Iſaacs; The Diſputes of two Iſaacs. XIV. The Diſputes about the Study of the Sciences formerly condemn'd. XV. The Anathema's againſt that Study taken off. XVI. Gerſciom the Light of the Captivity of France. XVII. His Diſciple Jacob the Son of Zecar. XVIII. Judas Albarcellonita writ upon the Times. XIX. Moſes the Preacher. The Original of the Jewiſh Sermons.

I. THE Diviſions and Wars that troubled Spain during the Tenth Century, gave the Jews of this Country a great deal of Reſt and Tranquility. Abdalla, who was Caliph there, had the Mortification † to ſee his Uncle rebel againſt him, and make powerful Efforts to wreſt the Empire out of his Hands. But being defeated, he was oblig'd to take Sanctuary among the Chriſtians, where he caus'd himſelf to be baptiz'd, purchaſing his Quiet and his Life by a feign'd Converſion. Abderame III. often enter'd the Territories of Chriſtian Kings, and fought many bloody Battles, which were not advantagious to either Party, becauſe each claim'd the Victory; re-aſſembling their Forces, ſoon after began the War again with new Vigour. This Prince, whoſe Reign laſted above fifty Years, had at laſt ſo reduc'd the Number of his Enemies, that they could find no Soldiers. They propos'd to purchaſe a Truce, or to retire before his Army, which was eighty thouſand ſtrong. But the boldeſt Counſel having prevail'd, the Chriſtians, who were but a handful of Men, encounter'd them with that Courage, that the Arabians betook themſelves to flight, leaving the Field of Battle with their their Spoils. His Son Hakim * renew'd the War again, † and beſieg'd the City of Leon; but the Inhabitants defended themſelves ſo vigorouſly that he was forced to raiſe the Siege. ‖ Heſcham had the famous Almanſor for his General, who had this Title given him upon account of the great Victories he had obtain'd both over the Spaniards and Arabians. Theſe latter, though the Caliph's Subjects often rebell'd againſt him, one of his Officers had the Inſolence to give out that he was dead; cauſing a Body to be bury'd in the Tomb of his Anceſtors, in order to cheat the People. He uſurp'd his Place, and reign'd, till a Faction being convinc'd that their old Caliph was alive, drew him out of his Priſon, and reſtor'd him to the Throne. But he fell from it a ſecond time by a new Commotion, that happen'd at Toledo and Corduba: He quitted Spain, and went to live in Africa after a Reign of thirty three Years. Such was the Condition of the Arabians in Spain, who were continually at War with the Chriſtians; and who, beſides theſe Wars, were divided, and in frequent Rebellions againſt their Caliph.

† An. 954.

II. Neither were the Chriſtians more at reſt: Ordoin King of Leon had ſo exaſperated Caſtile *, that it reſolv'd, after his death, to form it ſelf into a Republick. And it actually divided the Government between two Perſons, one whereof took care of the Civil Policy, and the other had the Command of Military Affairs. Froila the Cruel drew upon him the Hatred of the People by the Barbarity of his Reign, which laſted not above fourteen Months. Diviſion enter'd into the Family of Chriſtan Princes, as well as into that of the Arabians. Sanctius, who pretended to the Crown, was oblig'd to take Sanctuary with Abderame, where he took Phyſick to bring down the Protuberance of his Belly, the exceſſive bigneſs whereof, ſeem'd an Obſtacle to the pleaſing of the People, and the re-aſcending the Throne. Abderame bringing him back afterwards with a potent Army, oblig'd his Competitor to go off by a ſhameful Flight. In the Reign of Ramides a new Diviſion happen'd, which forced him to give up part of Caſtile to his Uncle, and the City Compoſtella for his Capital. He preſently nam'd a Perſon of Quality to be the Biſhop of it: But his ſcandalous Debaucheries, at a time when the World was hardly ſcandaliz'd at any thing, cauſing his Expulſion, his Father call'd the Arabians to reſtore him. This kindled a Civil War; Compoſtella was often taken and re-taken. At laſt the Chriſtian Clergy, which might have given a good Example to the Jews, help'd to ſcandalize them by their conduct. So that they confirm'd themſelves the more in their Infidelity, becauſe they had no external Succor to get out of it.

III. Beſides, the Faith of this People was ſupported by the Authority and Number of Rabbins, which was conſiderable at that time †. Beſides, thoſe who were Natives of Spain, Providence furniſh'd them with a famous one, viz. Moſes Clad with a Sack. This Man having left the Eaſt, and being taken by Privateers, and carry'd with his Son upon the Coaſts of Spain, was ranſom'd by the Jews of Corduba. This was done out of Charity, without any knowledge of his Merit. But putting himſelf in the corner of a School, as a Lay-man, and a Beggar, who had no other Habit than a Sack, wherewith he wrap'd himſelf up to cover his Nakedneſs, he argued ſo profoundly upon all the Queſtions that were propos'd, that the Preſident of the School, full of Admiration, yielded his place to him. He was created Judge of the Nation with a good Salary. But yet having a greater Inclination to dye in his Country, he reſolv'd to return thither; but the Caliph would not ſuffer him for a reaſon of State. The Talmud was then very little known in Spain, and when any Controverſie aroſe, the Synagogues ſent their Deputies to Bagdet to have it decided. This is ſo true, that the Prayer which the Spaniſh Synagogues recited in the Days of Affliction, and particularly on that of Expiations, were compos'd by Armiſſim Head of one of the Academies of Babylon. Hakim, who was Caliph in Spain, and did not like his Subjects paſſing frequently into the Eaſt, where the Abaſſides, the Enemies of his Houſe, reign'd, and who had deſtroy'd it, was overjoy'd at Moſes Clad with a Sack, teaching the Talmud to the Spaniards. He retain'd him in order to ſtop the courſe of theſe Deputations, which gave him perhaps ſome Suſpicion. Moſes Clad with a Sack reign'd a long time, and Enoch his Son ‖ aſcended his Throne.

Thus it is the Hiſtorians change a judicial Seat into a Throne, the Authority whereof extended but over ſome Fugitives, and was purely precarious.

IV. Haſchem II. King of Corduba, whom the Jews call Aſchaſez, did a great deal more than his Father; for he order'd the Talmud to be tranſlated into Arabick; whether he had the Curioſity to learn what was in a Book ſo cry'd up by the Jews; or whether he meant to make it more common in the Nation, in order to prevent the Pilgrimages to Bagdet and Jeruſalem.

R. Joſeph, Moſes's Diſciple, undertook this great Work *, and very ſucceſsfully accompliſh'd it; but he grew ſo haughty upon it, that he could no longer bear, that Enoch ſhould be preferr'd to him to be Judge of the Nation. He quarrell'd and broke with him; their Diviſion made a Noiſe; the Synagogues engag'd in it; but Enoch had the more numerous Party. 'Tis even ſaid, that ſeven hundred Men came out daily mounted on ſeven hundred Chariots, ſumptuouſly cloath'd after the Faſhion of the Arabian Lords, to accompany Nathan the Son of Enoch, and Grandſon of Moſes. Joſeph was excommunicated by this Aſſembly; he appeal'd to the King; but Haſchem would not meddle with this Affair, either out of Policy, or becauſe living in dependence upon his Hageb or grand Chamberlain, he was not at liberty to protect his Favourites. Joſeph, depriv'd of the Protection he expected from Court, left Spain, and took the Road of Bagdet, where he thought to find a Retreat near the famous Hay; but he gave him to underſtand, that he could not receive him, becauſe he was excommunicated by the Spaniſh Synagogues. He remain'd therefore at Damaſcus, where he died without being able to obtain a Revocation of the Sentence which had been pronounc'd againſt him.

V. The Diviſions of the Sarazens increas'd more and more in Spain during the Eleventh Century. There had been a long time a Deſign to dethrone that Branch of the Ommiades which reign'd there. Their Weakneſs had ſo diſguſted the People, that after they had chang'd their Maſter, they ſwore never to admit any Man more of this Family. The Uſurpers were not much more ſucceſsful, for the People were quickly involv'd in a new Search of a Sovereign. One of the Ommiades, who ſurviv'd the Ruin of his Houſe, offer'd himſelf to them. They repreſented to him, that by attempting to aſcend the Throne, he incurr'd a certain Death. But Ambition got the better of the love of Life; Kill me to morrow, ſaid he, provided you make me this day a King.

* Mariana calls him Alaca. † An. 965. ‖ An. 976. * An. 1006. † An. 967. ‖ An. 997. * Canz Tſemach David. p. 130.

Love

VI. The greateſt Revolution happen'd by the Family of the Morabethons, whom Mariana calls Almoravides. We have ſpoken of the Homerites, who were originally Jews, and who embrac'd Chriſtianity in Juſtinian's Reign. The Morabethons were Deſcendants of theſe Arabian Homerites: Their frequent Commerce with the Muſſulmans, gave them an inclination that way, rather than to the old Religions they had profeſs'd. But as their inclination to rob was their predominant Paſſion, they preſerv'd but ſome faint Footſteps of Religion and Mahometiſm. One of theſe Barbarians having made a Pilgrimage to Mecca, brought with him a Doctor who reform'd them to a certain degree; but when he came to forbid them Murder, Robbery, and Adultery, the majority rejected him. This diviſion caus'd a War. The Alchoran was cited, which commands the putting to the Sword all that refuſed to receive it. Abubecre being choſen General, ſubjected Mauritania: His Nephew Joſeph built Morocco, extended his Conqueſts into Spain, whereof he made himſelf Maſter, and his Family reign'd there till the twelfth Century.

Alphonſo VI. King of Caſtile, conſented to the calling this Moor into Spain. He did not come thither himſelf, but ſent one of his Generals; who quickly broke with the King of Seville, who, tho' a Muſſulman, was Alphonſo's Father-in-law. The War broke out betwixt theſe Muſſulmans. The Africans defeated theſe Spaniards, and ſeized their Cities, after the Death of their King, who was kill'd in the Fight. Aly their Head, * declar'd himſelf Prince of the Faithful, or Emir Alomara, from which they have coin'd the word Miramolim. The Moors, Alphonſo's Vaſſals, in hopes of great Aſſiſtance from this new Prince, refus'd to pay their uſual Homages and Tributes. Alphonſo then repented that he had brought over ſuch troubleſome Gueſts, who invaded his Territories, and kindled ſo dreadful a War, that Chriſtianity was within a hairs-breadth of being ruin'd. But Alphonſo by his undaunted Courage, retriev'd it from the Precipice. Let us ſee what the Jews did during all theſe Revolutions.

VII. The beginnings of them were advantageous to this Nation; for R. Samuel Levi became † Secretary and Miniſter of State to the King of Granada, who afterwards made him Prince of his Nation, and he employ'd his Credit at Court, in protecting it. He even ſcatter'd his Bounties among Foreigners: For the African, Egyptian and Babylonian Doctors, were his Penſioners. The Jews had the ſatisfaction to ſee his Son || ſucceed him in his Poſts; and the only thing which moderated their joy, was the Haughtineſs of this young Man, whom his Riches had rendred Proud; whereas his Father had preſerv'd his Humility in his greateſt Exaltation.

VIII. An unexpected turn of Affairs diſturb'd the Repoſe and Tranquility they enjoy'd. Joſeph Hallevy, * one of the Learned Men of that Age, ſet up for a Converter of the Muſſulmans. The Tranſlation of the Thalmud into Arabick, which was made ſome Years paſt, facilitated this deſign; but it miſcarry'd. The King of Granada could not bear this Inſult of a tolerated Religion againſt the Eſtabliſhed. The Converter was put in Priſon, and hang'd. The Perſecution began by the King's Order; in which fifteen hundred Families in this one Kingdom ſuffer'd very much. This Calamity was the more ſenſibly felt, becauſe Proſperity had made them Rich and Powerful: he † who has not heard of the Glory, the Splendor and Proſperity in which they liv'd, is ignorant of what is moſt notorious. They were apprehenſive, leſt the Neighbouring Kings ſhould imitate ſo dreadful an Example: But the Violence was quickly ſtopp'd, and went no farther than the Kingdom of Granada. The Jews believe, that God had caus'd them to lament this Revolution beforehand; becauſe they had for a long time faſted in the Spaniſh Synagogues, the ninth of December, on which day the Perſecution began.

IX. They ſuffer'd from the Chriſtians another Revolution; which would have been fatal to them, if the Biſhops and Pope had not help'd them. Ferdinand declar'd War with the Sarazens, incited by his Wife, who was a devout Woman, and deſirous to enlarge the Bounds of Chriſtianity: He attack'd them in ſpight of the Infirmities of his great Age, and return'd victorious. As Devotion was the greateſt Ingredient in this War, it was reſolv'd, before the Chriſtians march'd againſt the Infidels, to put the Jews of the Kingdom to the Sword; but the Biſhops made a vigorous oppoſition, and by their Remonſtrances, allay'd the impetuoſity of the People, the Army, and the Queen. Pope Alexander, who then || held the Roman See, and was re-cogniz'd and preferr'd in Spain, to Honorius, who likewiſe boaſted of being the true Pope, wrote to theſe Biſhops to commend them for what they had done. What we have heard related of you, is much to our ſatisfaction; which is, that you have defended the Jews, who live amongſt you, againſt the violence of thoſe who deſign'd to kill them, as a Prelude to their War with the Sarazens. Theſe People, hurry'd by a blind Paſſion, would rob thoſe of their Lives, on whom God perhaps will beſtow Salvation and Immortality. He alledg'd to them the Example of Gregory the Great *, who repreſs'd ſuch an unbecoming Zeal, and hinder'd the pulling down of the Synagogue. Laſtly, he repreſented to them the difference betwixt the Sarazens and the Jews; whereof the former perſecuted the Chriſtians, and baniſh'd them out of the Cities whereof they were Maſters: Whereas the others were always ready to ſerve them as their Slaves. It has been doubted, whether this Letter was addreſs'd to the Biſhops of France or Spain; but the frequent Wars of the latter with the Sarazens, are a ſufficient Evidence, that Alexander II. writ to the Spaniſh Prelates.

X. The Revolution, which happen'd by the Moors of Africa, of which we have already ſpoken, compleated their recovery from their Confuſions. The Neceſſities of the State, which was inveſted on all ſides, permitted not Alphonſo to oppreſs the Jews; being oblig'd to cultivate, and grant them ſome Privileges, to procure their Money and Aſſiſtance. He put them in Offices, and allow'd them to be Judges of the Chriſtians. Gregory VII. † who extended his Juriſdiction and Privileges over all Kingdoms, did not approve of this Conduct of Alphonſo. This Prince had ſent to the Pope, a Preſent worthy of the Giver, and of St. Peter, to whom it was offer'd: But notwithſtanding this Teſtimony of his Devotion, he was cenſur'd, for having ſubjected the Chriſtians to the Jews, who are their Maſters; for having oppreſs'd the Church, exalted || the Synagogue of the Devil, and deſpiſed Jeſus Chriſt by pleaſing his Enemies. Alphonſo did not execute the Pope's Orders; being too much engag'd with the Moors, to think of drawing new Enemies upon his hands. 'Tis even ſaid, that he * loſt the Battle and his Life, near

---

* An. 1091. † An. 1027. || An. 1055. * An. 1064. † Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 8. || An. 1064. * Alexand. II. Ep. 34. p. 1138. † Greg. VII. p. 1. l. 9. p. 2. p. 277. || An. 1080. * In the Year of the Hegyra 479, of Jeſus Chriſt 1086. Herbelot Bibl. Orient. Tit. Morabethoun.

Badajox;

Badajox; where he was defeated by Joseph, who had pass'd from Africa into Spain, to revenge the Treachery of his General Aly. Christian Authors give him a much longer Life; making him reign to the beginning of the twelfth Century. He survived Sancho his Eldest Son, whom the Sarazens killed at the Siege of Yvosco: But during his Reign he permitted the Jews quietly to enjoy their Privileges, without hearkning to the Remonstrances of Gregory VII. against them.

XI. Peter I. his Grandson, had not more regard to the Exhortations of Nicolas of Valencia. The Crusado being publish'd in Spain, as in other Christian Kingdoms, Peter resolv'd to engage in this War against the Infidels. Nicolas represented * to his King, that it was in vain to go in quest of Foreign Enemies so far, when he had so many at home. He represented to him, that the Jews had such an inveterate hatred to the Christians, that they would not salute them save by a middle Salutation. This is an obscure Term, the Mystery whereof is this: When a Jew saw a Christian at a distance, he said, † The Gods and Goddesses destroy thee; when he was near, he wish'd him a long Life, and great Prosperity; but when he was out of reach of being heard, he resum'd his Malediction, praying God to open the Earth under his Feet, to swallow him up alive, like Corah, or to drown him in the Sea, like Pharaoh. There is something ridiculous in this Discourse of Nicolas, who brings a Jew invoking the Gods and Goddesses: He added, that this Nation was hideously infatuated; and to prove it, produc'd an Oration in Hebrew, made at the Walls of Jerusalem, in the Name of Joseph, who would oblige the Besieg'd not to hold out to the last Extremity. The King maintain'd, that Violence ought never to be us'd, because People return to their Error, the very moment their Fear is remov'd. Cast, said he, a Stone into the Air, with an Engine, and it will fall again, as soon as the force of the Machine is spent. Violence, which throws the Mind out of its Centre, whether it will or no, can have no lasting Effect. A Rabbin, whom he consulted, confirm'd him in his Design, by the Parable of a Father, who taking a Journy, gave two precious Stones to his two Sons: "They "disputed, said the Rabbin, concerning the value "of each, and came to consult me; I referr'd 'em "to the Judgment of their Father, since no body "could better understand their true worth and pre-"ference than he, and yet they affronted me". The King expressing his resentment of this Insult, which he thought to be real; the Rabbin told him smiling, Esau and Jacob are Brothers, and have each a Religion, which they highly esteem; let us refer the Judgment to God, who knows their Excellence. The King believ'd him, and Nicolas found himself oblig'd to give the Prince an Elogy of that Nation, and its Learning. However, the Crusaders kill'd the Jews in several Parts of Spain.

XII. This Country had abundance of Jewish Doctors in the eleventh Century. Samuel Cophni, born at Corduba, publish'd a Commentary upon the Pentateuch, the Manuscript whereof is in the Vatican-Library: Those that have read it, esteem it as a fine piece, but confess it has a great many Allegories. He had a Dispute with a Divine of his Nation, and dy'd in the Contest, in the Year 1034.

XIII. At that time appear'd the five Isaacs. There has been a long time a talk of three Henries, three Bishops, accus'd of Jansenism; whose Catechism made a great noise in France, in the last Century. But here were five Doctors of the same Name in Spain, who were all famous for their Works. One of them was call'd Isaac Alphesi, as coming out of Africa, from the Kingdom of Fez, into Spain; and I doubt not but he came with the Morabethons, who had made their irruption some Years before, and reign'd then over the Arabians. He pass'd for one of the most Learned Men of his time, and became Prince of the Exile in Spain. His Epitaph, written in Spondaic Verse, which shews, that at that time they observ'd Quantity, after the manner of the Greeks and Latins, was a most noble one: Engrave, said the Author ‖, upon this Stone, that the Light of the World is extinct: say, that in this Monument rests the source of Wisdom: Come ye Daughters of Sion, and lament; the World is bury'd, and faln into blindness: Weep and groan, for the Ark and Tables of the Law are broken with this Doctor. The second of the Isaacs was the Son of Baruch. He deriv'd his Genealogy from the ancient Baruch, Jeremy's Secretary; and pretended, that his Family, which came into Spain in Titus's time, had subsisted there till then. He understood Latin, Greek and Arabick. He had study'd the Mathematicks, and was so eminent in this Science, that the King of Granada, call'd the Mathematician, for his passionate love of it, sent for him to Court, to be instructed by him. He was receiv'd there with such Applause, and liv'd with such Satisfaction with the African Sarazens, that he forgot his Country, and continu'd there to his Death, which happen'd in the Year 1004. He had a violent Quarrel with the first of the Isaacs, surnam'd Alphesi. They could not be reconcil'd, whilst they liv'd; but at the hour of Death, one of them gave an Example of Repentance, and the other of Charity. Isaac, the Son of Baruch, dy'd first; and finding himself ill, he sent his Son to beg his Enemy's Pardon, and to throw himself into his Arms, as into those of a Patron and a faithful Friend: The Son obey'd; Alphesi receiv'd him into his House, treated him as his Child, and continu'd teaching him, to his Death, the Mysteries of the Law. These are edifying returns, which comfort those they have scandaliz'd; but never repair the Mischief, and unlucky Impressions made by a notorious Rupture.

XIV. Another more general Division arose: It seeming to be the Fate of flourishing Academies, to beget and breed Disputes. There are never more Contests and Controversies, than where there are many Learned Men. The Scandal of these Disputes are often causelessly cast upon their Religions: There is not one but would have its Doctors united in opposing the Enemy; but this is the common method of Human Understanding. The ignorant, who follow the common Road, and make no new Discoveries, occasion no Disturbance; but bold Wits, by penetrating into Mysteries, and endeavouring to discover hidden Truths, open an unknown Track, and thereby stir up the Spleen, Jealousie, and Resistance of others. The Learned Rabbins multiplying in Spain, in the eleventh Century, gave Birth to many Controversies; that we speak of, respected the Study of the Sciences, whereof the Talmudists design'd to rob their Scholars, to oblige them to an implicit Submission to their Principles. They maintain'd, that the Study of Languages, and Human Sciences, was condemn'd from the Emperor Titus's time, lest the People, dispers'd among the Nations, should be drawn into their Idolatry, by the Charms of the Politeness of their Writings. The Postille, annex'd to the Text of the Misnah, contains a Malediction, pronounced against him who keeps a Hog, or teaches his Son Greek; as if it was equally impure to feed an un-

* An. 1096. † Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 73. ‖ Apud Ganz Tsemach David, p. 134.

clean

clean Beaſt, and to give Men a good Education.

XV. Theſe Laws were not always religiouſly obſerv'd. It was impoſſible for the Jews, who dwelt in Egypt, not to ſpeak Greek; for thoſe of Rome, not to underſtand Latin; and for the Spaniards, mingled with the Sarazens, not to make a continual uſe of Arabick. R. Salomon, who taught at Barcelona, in the eleventh Century, prevail'd ſo far, as to have theſe rigorous Decrees of the Fathers temper'd, but he durſt not aboliſh them. He pronounc'd an Anathema, and a Sentence of Excommunication, againſt all that began to ſtudy Greek before twenty Years of Age. The Bounds being once remov'd, R. Nar ſet himſelf above the Anathema, which Salomon had decreed againſt the young Students, and reſtor'd them to a full liberty. They apply'd themſelves therefore to the Languages and Mathematicks, and other Sciences, which produc'd a conſiderable number of great Men.

XVI. France was not ſo fruitful in famous Rabbins as Spain; and we might even complain of its Barrenneſs, during all the Centuries which we have examin'd; there being not above five or ſix Doctors to be found, who were of any Note. The moſt famous was R. Gerſon *, whom ſome will have to be born in Germany at Ments. However, he was a Frenchman, or at leaſt, publiſh'd his Book of Conſtitutions there. 'Tis probable, he had leſs reſpect paid him in his Life-time than after his Death; for they heſitated a long time about the Reception of his Collection of Laws †, which began not to be in vogue, till the middle of the thirteenth Century. He was afterwards call'd the Light of the French Captivity. Thoſe who make him live in the beginning of the ninth Century, are manifeſtly miſtaken; for tho' it be not agreed about the Year of his Death, which happen'd, according to ſome, in 1028, and, according to others, forty Years later; yet, at leaſt, it is indiſputable, that he liv'd in the eleventh Century.

XVII. One of his chief Diſciples, was Jacob, the Son of Jekar; a great Muſician, and who deeply ſtudy'd Caſes of Conſcience. The ſucceeding Doctors ‖ conſtantly quote his Deciſions with Approbation; and they are receiv'd as Laws that can't be tranſgreſs'd without Sin. 'Tis ſaid, he dy'd the ſame Year as his Maſter. Salomon, who had ſtudied under theſe two great Maſters, made ſome Figure. Chronologers are not agreed however upon this Article; for ſome make him ſtudy in the Year 1140. in the middle of the twelfth Century; and others make him die thirty five Years before.

XVIII. He had another famous Diſciple, whom the Lawyers call Albarcellonita. This was Judas, a Barcelona Doctor, who writ a Treatiſe upon the Privileges of Women. He publiſh'd another upon the Times; wherein he Hiſtorically recounted the different ways the Jews had reckon'd the times. Their firſt Epocha, was that of their departure from Egypt. They * began another at the Creation of a King, becauſe the Form of the Government was then chang'd. There was a third upon Alexander the Great's entring into Jeruſalem; which was follow'd to the tenth Century of the Chriſtian Church: For Scherira, who liv'd at that time, oblig'd his Nation to calculate the Years from the Creation of the World. He alſo publiſh'd Sermons.

XIX. Moſes Hadarſcian, that is to ſay, the Preacher, was alſo one of Gerſon's Diſciples. They began at that time to make Sermons in the Synagogues, which had been much neglected hitherto; and perhaps Gerſon introduc'd this Cuſtom, ſince we find two of his Diſciples, who became famous by their Preaching. Moſes, who came from Narbonne, was doubtleſs the moſt eloquent; having the Title of Preacher given him by way of Excellency. They have multiply'd this Doctor into three; for, beſides him we ſpeak of, they have imagin'd † two others of the ſame Name, and attributed to them the ſame Work under the ſame Title of Bereſchit Rabba. The difficulty ariſes from Galatin's having cited many Paſſages of this Book, as favouring the Chriſtians, which are not at preſent to be found in it. But there is no neceſſity of multiplying Authors of one and the ſame Book. It ſuffices to obſerve, that Galatin, who has quoted the Paſſages of Bereſchit Rabba, was a Plagiary, who copy'd a more ancient Author, call'd Raimond. And it was no wonder for the Jews, who were gravell'd with the Objections drawn from this Book, to have expung'd them out, whilſt Galatin, who conſulted not the Originals, knew nothing of it. This Man liv'd in the middle of the eleventh Century, and dy'd in the Year 1070. with the Glory of leaving the famous Salomon the Lunatick his Diſciple.

* Or Gerſcium. † An. 1240. ‖ V. Ganz. * Plantavit apud Bart. Bibl. Rabb. t. 3. p. 41. † Bart. ib. t. 4. p. 69.

CHAP. VI.

Criticiſms upon the Suppoſititious Joſeph. The Wars and Maſſacres of the Jews in England.

1. Joſeph the Hiſtorian was a Frenchman, and liv'd in the eleventh Century. II. The advantageous deſcription he makes of himſelf. III. The Praiſes that the Doctors give him. IV. The Chriſtians divided in their Opinions. V. Fables concerning the erection of the Cæſarſhip and Empire at Rome. VI. The time in which Joſeph muſt have liv'd. VII. His Family, Brethren and Works. VIII. The time in which his Work was known. IX. The Actions of Alexander, copy'd from an ancient Book. An Extract of theſe two Books. X. The Birth of Alexander the Great. Nectanebor was his Father. XI. His firſt Eſſays in the Army. The Death of his Father. XII. His Conqueſts in Africa and Aſia. XIII. The Prodigies he diſcovers: Birds that ſpeak Greek: Men without a Head. XIV. Whether Joſeph tranſcrib'd the Deeds of Alexander. XV. Errors about the Family of the Herods. XVI. Falſhoods concerning the Roman Hiſtory. XVII. Concerning Judea. XVIII. Blunders concerning his own Age. XIX. An enquiry concerning this Author. XX. His Country: He was of Bretany. XXI. Whence this Province took its Name. XXII Proofs of the Impoſture. XXIII. The Coronation of the falſe Veſpaſian. XXIV. 'Tis that of Otho I, or II. XXV. The time in which Joſeph liv'd. XXVI. The Motives of his Work. XXVII. The Jews numerous in Germany. The Prodigies of that time. XXVIII. Gotheſcalk makes War againſt them. XXIX. A Maſſacre upon the account of the Cruiſadoes. XXX. The Emperor's and St Bernard's oppoſition. XXXI. The time when this Maſſacre was perpetrated. A Reconciliation of the Arabian, Jewiſh and Chriſtian Hiſtorians. XXXII. A general Perſecution.

I. Joseph the Historian, the Son of Gorian, is one of the Doctors that France brought forth in the Synagogue in the Eleventh Century. 'Tis indeed degrading him to make him born in France, and depriving him of a venerable Antiquity to place him so late, since he pretends to have lived at the time of the Siege of Jerusalem. But before we give the Reasons of our Conjecture, let us examine his Character and Works.

II. In order to prepossess his Nation in his behalf, he represents himself "as a Prince, a King, "a Priest; God had re-united the Priesthood and "Empire in his Person to carry on the War. I am, said he, * that Priest who has received an Unction for the War; that Joseph full of the Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding; of the Spirit of Counsel and Might; of the Spirit of Science, and of the fear of God; he that gave his Life for the People of God, for his Sanctuary, and for his Nation.

One of his Soldiers cried out to him one day; Thou art the Man of God; blessed be Jehovah the God of Israel, who has created the Soul which thou beareſt, and has filled it with Wisdom: And when he was taken, they wept in the Enemies Army, as they enquir'd of one another, Is this that Man so formidable among the Jews, and to the Romans? How was he taken, who alone cast Terror into our Army, and has filled the Universe with the Fame of his Valour?

Titus did him the same Justice as the Army; he highly commended him, and after the taking of Jerusalem, exalted him above all the Priests and Levites of his Nation.

III. 'Tis no wonder for a Man to crown himself with his own hands; but the Publick seldom praises these Self-Commenders. But yet Joseph has had the good Fortune, or the Art, to impose upon his Nation. R. Tham, † who publish'd his History of the Jews ||, says, that all the Words of Joseph Gorionides are Righteousness and Truth; There is not one single Falshood in his Writings; he comes nearer to the ancient Prophets, than to any Writer that has appear'd. The Hand of the Lord rested upon him, whilst he composed his Work, and his words are almost the words of a Man of God. The Rabbins, who quote him, mention him with an Elogy; and tho' it is own'd that he committed a Fault, by making himself * above two hundred Years old when he wrote the History of the Siege of Jerusalem, yet they cry up his Birth, the noble Actions he perform'd, as General of his Nation, against the Romans; his Wisdom, his Prudence, the Uprightness of his Mind, and his Heart, and his Fidelity in History. If he sometimes contradicts the Talmudists, the Doctors are charged with the Care of reconciling them, rather than so useful a Work should be rejected.

IV. Some Christians have also been dazled by these Elogies, and have mutilated the piece, for fear the Faults of it should be discover'd. Others reject it as spurious. Let us illustrate a Fact, which divides Men even in Christianity; and to do it with the greater Exactness, let us give an account of this Work so little known at present; because the Hebrew Original was very scarce, and the Version which Munsterus made of it, was curtail'd above half, or rather was only a very imperfect Abridgment †.

V. Joseph Gorionides says, || That he lived when Julius Cesar seiz'd upon the Empire the third time. "Alexander the Great had extended his Conquests "over Italy, and taken Rome. Imperius the Son of "Ptolomeus Philadelphus King of Egypt seiz'd on it "long after, and there establish'd his Cesarship, "or his Empire; and this Government lasted till "Antoninus, or Antony, Cleopatra's Gallant, infringed "the Rights of the People which rebelled. Having "expell'd Antony, they bound themselves in an "Oath, as they had done in Tarquin's time, the "first of the Cesars, never to suffer any more Cesars. "In the mean time Julius having obtain'd of the "Senate, the Command of the Armies in the West, "as Pompey had of those of the East, this young "Hero, at nineteen Years of Age, beat the French "and the Britains, and in four Years subdued all "the Kings of the West; he return'd to Rome "proud of his Victories, and intimated to the "Senate, that he had a mind to be made Cesar. "The Senate oppos'd him, by a long Oration re-"lated by Joseph; but Cesar recurred to Violence, "threaten'd all the Senators with the loss of their "Heads, vanquish'd Pompey, and reign'd.

VI. Joseph * was already very old, when this Revolution happen'd in the Republick; for he was born 134 Years after the Cesarship, which the Greeks call Imperiosia †, had been instituted among the Romans, and he was 51 Years old when Julius Cesar was born. I have seen, says he, this Julius, who is the first King whom the Latins call Imperius, or the first Cesar, he that restored the Cesarship a third time among the Romans ||. He was also contemporary with Jesus the Son of Sirach, a Prince among the Jews. A Man ought to know the time in which he lived, and this distinctly specifies it: He was 51 Years old when Julius Cesar, the first of the Emperors, came into the World.

VII. And yet his Father, whose Name was Gorion, was also very old; for he surviv'd the Destruction of Jerusalem, and came out of it when Titus had taken it. We must not therefore confound this Priest, the Historians Father, with another Gorion, whom the Zealots kill'd at the beginning of the Siege of Jerusalem. Joseph, who foresaw that this was a likely Fault to be committed, has added two Letters to this Martyr's Name, calling him Gorinion. His Mother, the discreetest of all Women, had had twenty Boys, of which the Romans and the Assassins kill'd eighteen. Bonias, who was the nineteenth, was left by Titus at Jerusalem, where God did great matters by his means. The Talmudists ascribe Miracles to him, but they change his Name, and call him Nicodemus the Son of Gorion. Joseph was a Priest, but however consecrated himself to the War; nevertheless he apply'd himself to study, and composed a great many Books in Julius Cesar's time. At the request of the Senate, he publish'd a great Book, intituled, Joseph *. This was a Chronicle, or Roman History, giving a particular account of Transactions, whilst the Consuls govern'd the Republick; and not content with relating past Events, he carried his Views to Futurity, and foretold to this great City, what should happen till its total Ruin. He did not pretend to be a Prophet, but related what he had learn'd from the Wise Men, who had lived near the Prophets and Heathens, who are true and faithful in their Conjectures.

This Work † was follow'd with that Wisdom, in which he spoke only of the Wise Men and Doctors, who had preceded him.

He made || the Apology of his Nation and Family against the Heathens, as the Greek Josephus has done in his Books against Appion.

---

* Josippon sive Josephi Ben Gorionis, Historiæ Judaicæ libri sex, p. 309,346. † Tham Præfat. Ed. Constant. præfixa. p. 4. || At Constantinople in the Year 1540. * Ganz Tsemach David An. 4757. p. 85 & 95. † V. Gagnier præf. in Josippon. || Josippon l. 6. c. 43. p. 189, 190, 191. * Ibid. 189. & l. 3. c. 15. p. 97. † ראוסיא אמס Imperiosia. Ibid. l. 3. c. 15. p. 100. || The first time by Tarquin, the second by Ptolomy King of Egypt, whom he also calls Imperius, and the third by Julius Cesar. * Id. c. 36. p. 171. & Tham pref. † Page 237. || Page 243.

Lastly,

Laſtly, He publiſh'd the Hiſtory we ſpeak of, which is ſo much the more conſiderable, that it may be look'd upon as a Chronicle † of what was done in the time of the ſecond Temple. The Author was perſwaded, that he ſhould be look'd upon for the future as the Prince of Hiſtorians; and be immediately rank'd after the Sacred Writers. He ſet himſelf above Livy, who has confounded the Times by ſpeaking of Eupator, before Antiochus his Father, and who advances ſeveral things he could not prove. He produced the Teſtimonies of a great number of Authors he had read; Beſides "Livy, Trogus Pompeius, Strabo, Porophius ||, that is "Oroſius, or Porphyry; he had ſeen the Book of Cai- "nan, the Son of Enos, thoſe of the Medes, the "Macedonians and Perſians; the Letters Alexander "the Great writ to Ariſtotle during his Expedition "to the Indies: The Books of the Greeks, that of "the Alliances of the Romans; a Work of Kirker or "Cicero, who had been an Eye-witneſs of what "Pompey caus'd the Prieſts to ſuffer at the Taking "of Jeruſalem. He had before him the Calendar, "which Julius Ceſar compos'd for the uſe of the Greeks "and Nazarenes: The Chronicle of the Roman "Ceſars; the Collection of Roman Priviledges, which "Veſpaſian kiſs'd the day of his Coronation in pre-"ſence of Gorionides. Great Information might be drawn from all theſe Works, which are moſt of them loſt!

VIII. As important and excellent as this Hiſtory was, being written upon ſuch fine Memoirs, the World was unbleſs'd with it for a long time. The Author of the Midraſchim, or Commentaries upon the Chronicles, is the firſt that ſeems to have quoted it: But this Author, whoſe Name was Mattanot, the Son of Niſſim, and who wrote at Toledo, is not very ancient. Saadias, one of the Excellents of the * Tenth Century, ſeems alſo to have known it; but both theſe Teſtimonies are obſcure and doubtful. 'Twas in the Twelfth Century that Garchi †, Aben Ezra ||, and ſome others, * produced Joſeph and this Work, which had remain'd unknown for the ſpace of a thouſand Years. We ſhall eaſily diſcover the Reaſons of it in the ſequel.

IX. One of the moſt remarkable parts of this piece, proceeds upon the Birth and Conqueſts of Alexander the Great. Joſeph Gorionides pretends to have taken them from this Prince's Genealogy, written by the Egyptian Magi, the Year immediately after his death.

There is indeed a Book entitled The Actions of Alexander. But this Work which Joſeph Gorionides ſeems to have copy'd, ſince theſe two Authors agree in moſt of the Facts, is in Latin, and could not have been written by the Egyptian Magi, immediately after Alexander's death. Beſides this Book continued buried in the Engliſh Libraries, whence Mr. Gagnier procured it to collate it with his Tranſlation of Joſeph: An unknown Work, and that lay ſo long neglected, ought to have no great Authority with the Learned. But however, let us ſee what account it gives us of this Prince, whoſe Actions are ſo famous; by that we ſhall be able to judge of the Character of theſe two Writers.

X. Alexander was not the Son of Philip, but of Nectanebor King of Egypt. This Prince finding Artaxerxes going to declare War againſt him, choſe rather to conſult the Devils, than to raiſe an Army. He learnt by Magick, wherein he was extraordinarily vers'd, that he ſhould be defeated: To prevent this Misfortune, he left Peluſium and came ſecretly to Antioch, where he chang'd his Habit, and equipp'd himſelf like a great Babyloniſh Lord. Being thus diſguis'd, he went into Macedon, the Capital of the Kingdom of that Name. Here he fell in love with Olympias, who ſolaced her ſelf with him in Philip's abſence, who was at the Head of his Army. He crept into her Bed, in the form of a Serpent, having firſt perſwaded her that a God would make her a Viſit to ask that Favour. Leſt her great Belly ſhould be ſuſpected by Philip, Nectanebor, by the help of certain Herbs, ſent this Prince a Dream, informing him of the Conception, and of the Victories of the Child that was to be born of Olympias. He wrought a ſecond Miracle; for a Serpent hinder'd the Inhabitants of the City, beſieg'd by Philip, from making their defence; and ſo he took it without the loſs of his Soldiers. There was an Earthquake, and ſeveral other Prodigies at this Prince's Birth, in order to breed a Terror in Philip's Breaſt, who could not be cured of his jealous Suſpicions, and was doubly provok'd, when he perceiv'd that the Child reſembled neither Father nor Mother. However Nectanebor was made Preceptor to young Alexander, who was willing to grow a Magician like his Maſter. To this end he was to leave the City, and contemplate the Stars in a ſolitary place. 'Tis not known upon what Provocation, but Alexander threw his Tutor into a Ditch, inſulting him upon his Art. Nectanebor maintain'd that he foreknew he was to dye by the Hand of his Son, and diſcover'd to Alexander how that he was his Father. His filial Affection was rouſed too late, and had no other Effect, than to hoiſt Nectanebor's Corps upon his Shoulders, and † carry it to Olympias, who order'd it to be buried.

XI. Alexander was of a vigorous Conſtitution; his Hair was like a Lions Main; one of his Eyes was black and the other blue; his Teeth were very acuminous; his Voice reſembled Thunder; and he was a Lion in his ſtrength. When he had broke Bucephalus, he deſir'd of his Father the Command of an Army, with which he went to fight Nicholas, a King of a Province of Peloponneſus, which Joſeph calls Andrias. He kill'd the King in a Battle, enter'd his capital City, and return'd to Macedon, where he found his Father going to divorce Olympias, to marry another Wife; but he oppos'd it. Armenia and Chorazan, two neighbouring Provinces of Macedonia, being revolted, Philip ſent his Son to reduce them to their Obedience; in which he was ſucceſsful; but at the ſame time Cabronius King of Britany, appear'd at the Head of a numerous Army to take the City of Macedon; and to carry away Nebiaras Alexander's Mother, with whom he had been long in love. Philip was reſolv'd to repel the Enemy; but Oſanias King of Agania, giving Battle, Philip ſounded a Retreat; they purſued him almoſt to Macedon, where he was routed, loſt his capital City, and was wounded in the Head. Alexander || ſpeeded to his aſſiſtance and kill'd Oſanias, having firſt beaten his victorious Army. From thence he paſs'd into the Field, where his Father remain'd after his Wound, and acquainted him that he had reveng'd him. Philip died full of comfort, after the News of his Son's Victory, who had reveng'd him on his Enemies.

XII. After Philip's death, Alexander ſeeing himſelf King of all Greece, form'd the greater Deſigns:

† He calls the firſt and the laſt of theſe Works חיבים דברי Divre Hajammim, the Commentaries of days. || פורופיוס Porophius, Joſippon, p. 27, 57, 75, 76, 92, 94, 100, 104, 106, 182. * Saadias Gaon Comment. in Danielem, An. 936. † 1140. || An. 1156. in Daniel. * Abraham Ben Dior. in Cabbala. An. 1161. Conath printed it at Conſtantinople in 1490, and 'tis this Edition that Munſter had. Tham did it afterwards. It is now publiſh'd entire יוסיפון Joſippon ex Hebræo Latine, vertit Præfatione & notis illuſtravit Johannes Gagnier. † Cap. 7. p. 54. || Cap. 8. p. 58, 59.

To this end he ſummon'd his Council, and exhorted his Subjects not to truſt in Humane Force, but to confide ſolely in the bleſſed God, * who would overthrow his Enemies. The Council oppos'd his Deſign of marching againſt the Barbarians, but Alexander gave no ear to their Remonſtrances. He paſs'd into Sicily, and from thence into Italy. He was receiv'd at Rome with great Acclamations, as a Lord and Maſter. Being acknowledg'd Emperor he paſs'd into Africa, which he conquer'd in a little time. Lybia and Barbary ſubmitted to him; From thence he went to Media, croſs'd Euphrates, and ſubdued Bactriana. Darius thought to ſtop him by menacing Letters; but Alexander gave him Battle, in which he loſt an hundred and nine thouſand Foot; But he kill'd an hundred and twenty thouſand of the Enemy, and took four thouſand Princes. He advanc'd next to the River Aſtargan, whoſe Ice was ſo ſtrong that the Chariots paſs'd over it. Here Alexander diſguis'd himſelf, and went to Darius's Court as Alexander's Ambaſſador. Darius entertain'd him at Table; but as he was perceiv'd to pocket all the golden Cups his Liquor was filled in, they were going to arreſt him; but he anſwer'd in an haughty ſtrain, that his Maſter preſented thoſe who ate at his Houſe with all the Veſſels they made uſe of. His deſign was to make his eſcape, and with this Preſent to Bribe the Porter, who would have prevented it; his Plot took effect; and when too late, they underſtood † that it was Alexander. He repaſs'd the River upon the Ice, which thaw'd immediately after; ſo that the Horſe ſent after him could not take him. A Battle was fought ſoon after, which Darius loſt; one part of his Army going to paſs the River which was frozen, was drown'd, by the Ice's diſſolving in an unexpected manner. The Officers kill'd their King, who expir'd in Alexander's Arms.

XIII. Alexander, having conquer'd ‖ all the Earth, paſs'd into the Deſarts beyond Media, where he found Men, call'd by the Greeks פיתיקיש Pithæcos, or Apes. He diſcover'd further in a Forreſt, Giants of an extraordinary Figure. Theſe were wild Aſſes which the Author turns into Men, and calls Peraim *. Fire was ſet to the Forreſt, and the Aſſes ſcamper'd away. Going on further, they perceiv'd Trees that began to ſhoot up from the Earth at Sun-riſing, and continued their growth for ſix Hours, but then ſunk into the Earth again. The Perſians uſe them for Perfumes, to honour their Gods, when they conſult them. Alexander order'd his Soldiers to cut off ſome of them; but thoſe who attempted it were cruelly beaten, without diſcovering the Hand that ſtruck them. Theſe were Cocks that vomited Fire againſt thoſe that went to take them: Theſe were Birds that ſpoke Greek, and Men without Heads †. He enter'd Acarmania, where he found People ſo wiſe, that all that they beg'd of him was Eternal Life. I can't give it you, anſwer'd Alexander, and I ſhould be happy could I procure it for my ſelf. Well! reply'd theſe Barbarians, You'll plunder, burn and depopulate the Univerſe, and afterwards dye without knowing the Heir that ſhall poſſeſs it. What Extravagance is this! We, ‖ ſaid Alexander, are only God's Miniſters, Executors of his Decrees; and as the Leaf of a Tree does not move without the breath of the Wind, ſo we can do nothing without God. Laſtly, Alexander went to the Indies, where he ſaw ſpeaking Trees. He diſguis'd himſelf like a Merchant, and appear'd in this Habit at Porus's Court, where he learnt that Elephants could not be conquer'd but by Fire. He immediately caus'd brazen Statues to be made that were hollow; they were heated within, and then driven by Engines towards the Elephants, who took them for Men, and burnt their Mouths and Teeth in going to devour them. There are a multitude of other Prodigies, which Alexander gives an exact account of to his Maſter Ariſtotle in the Letters he wrote to him, whereof Joſeph * pretends here to give a Copy. From hence he march'd into the Country of Women, or Amazons. He meant to ſoar up to the Clouds, and to deſcend into the abyſſes of the Sea; but being return'd to Babylon, Antipater poiſon'd him.

XIV. Joſeph ſeems to have copied a Latin † Author whoſe Manuſcript is diſcover'd; but we can't be aſſur'd that the Latin Hiſtorian is more ancient than the Hebrew Joſeph. They both boaſt of extracting their Hiſtory from the Egyptian Magi; However they are the only Perſons who have known theſe Actions of Alexander written by Magi. The Latin Author wrote in the Age of barbarous Latin, and without determining which is the others Tranſcribing; 'tis certain they lived after the Saxons had driven the Britains out of England, ſince they bring Alexander into Britain. Tho' the Latin Author is not quite ſo ſtuff'd with fabulous and ridiculous Stories, yet he introduces ſpeaking Trees. The Sun-tree began his Diſcourſe in Indian Language, and ended it in Greek. The Moon-tree did the contrary, for it ſpoke Greek in the beginning, and concluded her Harangue in Indian. The Jews apologize for their Joſeph, ſaying, That theſe Stories are not found in the German Edition: And no wonder ſince Munſter mutilated it. 'Tis ſufficient that theſe Fabies are found in the Original printed at Conſtantinople, which ‖ has been tranſlated much more faithfully than by Munſter.

XV. This Author is more exact, when he copies the true Joſephus * in the Wars of the Lord, as he calls his laſt Book, which contains the Hiſtory of the Rebellion againſt the Romans, and the Deſolation of Jeruſalem; but yet he loſes his way ſometimes.

In the firſt place, he did not know the Hiſtory of the Herods, and their Succeſſion. In effect, he ſays, that Herod the Great, conferr'd the High-Prieſthood on Ariſtobulus his Brother-in-Law, only becauſe Marc Antony demanded this Youth of him, being charm'd with his beauty. He even menaced him with a † terrible War, unleſs he conſented to the quenching this his criminal Flame. Herod, to prevent the Crime, and Conſequences of his refuſal, depoſed Ananetus, and ſubſtituted Ariſtobulus in his room. He wrote afterwards to Marc Antony, that an High-Prieſt could not leave the Province, without cauſing a Sedition among the People, and that the Senate had already oppoſed his demand; which ſatisfied Antony. We can't imagine where the Hebrew Joſeph had this Romance; for it was not the Love of Vertue, but the Fear of the People, that oblig'd Herod to beſtow the firſt Dignity of the Church upon Ariſtobulus. This Hiſtorian introduces the Deputies of Judea pleading againſt Archelaus before Auguſtus, and maintaining that he ought not to reign over them, becauſe the People had not elected him: As if Judea, ſubjected to the Romans, had been an elective Kingdom, and the Election belong'd to the People. They added, ‖ That he had loſt his Senſes; That he was a Fool and a Madman; and that it was eaſily obſerved in his Eyes. But notwithſtanding this,

---

* The Author of the Actions of Alexander, does not ſpeak of this truſt in God alone; 'tis Gorionides who put this Harangue into Alexander's Mouth, p. 60. † Cap. 9. p. 64, 65, 66. ‖ Cap. 10. p. 69. * פראים. † צכסיים Acarmania, p. 74. ‖ Cap. 11. p. 75. * Cap. 13. p. 92. † Ex M. S. Bodleiano N. E. D. 2. 8. Incipit liber de Geſtis Alexandri. Mr. Gagnier has printed this Manuſcript on the ſide of Joſeph Gorionides, p. 40. ‖ By Gagnier. * Lib. 6. p. 189. † See Antony's Letters, Lib. 6. c. 51. p. 217. ‖ Joſip. Lib. 6. c. 61. p. 270.

he

he reign'd nine Years in Tranquility; but he was * impriſoned, conducted to Rome loaden with ſteel Chains, and died there. Whereas Archelaus, it is certain, did not dye at Rome. He adds, that his Brother Antipater, ſurnamed Herod, ſucceeded him; that he reign'd ten Years in Peace; but afterwards he went and conquer'd Spain, † becauſe the King of that Country had ſtolen away his Brother's Wife. This Conqueſt is chimerical, and the occaſion of it ſeems ſo much the falſer, becauſe it is ridiculous to make Herod leave Judea to revenge the Rape of a Siſter-in-Law in Spain, ſince he himſelf had carry'd off his Brother Philip's Wife. His Son Agrippa is made to ſucceed him in Judea, ‖ and twenty three Years after Agrippa II. in whoſe Reign happen'd the War and Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. This latter ſerved ſome time in Veſpaſian's Army; but the Emperor going for Rome, oblig'd Agrippa to follow him, with his Son Monbas, upon pretence, that he countenanced the Rebellion of his Nation. Veſpaſian was no ſooner crown'd, but he cauſed Agrippa and his Son to be put to death: Our Hiſtorian, who was preſent at the Execution, complain'd to Veſpaſian of the Injuſtice of it; but the Emperor anſwer'd him, That when the Army was deliberating about making him Emperor, Agrippa went to all the Colonels to cry him down as a Perſon unfit to command; and his Calumnies made ſuch Impreſſion upon his Officers, that they waited upon the Patron, before whom they accuſed him of ſeveral Crimes he had never committed. One would think there was no gainſaying an Evidence * who relates the Diſcourſe he had with Veſpaſian: Yet we know that Agrippa II. was not Herod Antipater's Son, and Agrippa II. was never married, and Monbas is an imaginary Son. Beſides the holy Father פחרון Patron, is abſurdly introduced in this event, ſince the Pope had nothing to do in the Election of Emperors. Laſtly, Agrippa, always faithful to the Romans, and to Veſpaſian as well as Titus, never oppoſed their Elevation. He lived quietly in their Reign, inſtead of dying a violent Death; and the Medals we have produced are a demonſtrative Proof, that he prolong'd his Life till Domitian's Reign.

XVI. His Ignorance in the Hiſtory of the Roman Emperors, is ſtill more manifeſt: For he gives Ceſar the Right of the Ceſariate, and Imperioſia, or ſupreme Authority, which Imperius the Son of Ptolomy, the King of Egypt, had poſſeſs'd at Rome: He makes him to be kill'd in the Temple of Jupiter †, whilſt he was ſedately ſaying his Prayers. However nothing is more notorious, than that Ceſar was murder'd in the Senate. He makes Marc Antony Emperor and Collegue of Auguſtus. Nero, according to him, was not aſſaſſinated; but ‖ the Fire of the Lord fell upon him, whilſt he was hunting with ſome Perſons of his Court, and kill'd him. Vitellius was a Fool, wicked, cruel, and given to Drunkenneſs. The Romans complain'd of this Belial's being made their Maſter. Veſpaſian * ſent two of his Generals to expel him; the Battle was fought in the midſt of Rome, and Vitellius was kill'd there with fourſcore thouſand brave and choice Romans. Here is a heap of Falſhoods put together; for Ptolomy had not eſtabliſh'd the Imperioſia at Rome. Marc Antony was one of the Triumvirs, but is never reckon'd among the Emperors. Nero was not ſo happy as to meet with an unexpected and eaſie Death; He complain'd that he had neither Friend nor Enemy that would kill him: 'Tis true an Earthquake, and Thunder and Lightning, aſtoniſh'd him in his Flight, but he was not ſtruck by it, and he fell w th his own Hand. Vitellius † died not in a Battle with fourſcore thouſand choice Men. That Tragedy has no Foundation in Hiſtory; and eſpecially it is ridiculous to make the Romans call him Belial, who never made uſe of this word, which was conſecrated by the Orientals to the Honour of their Gods.

XVII. The Hiſtorian farther ſays a great many things relating to his Nation and himſelf, that ſhock all Probability. How many Conjectures and Blunders has he about the Name of Jeruſalem? "It was formerly, ſays he, called Tſedek, Juſtice, "from whence one of its Kings, named Jehuram, "took the Title of Melchiſedec. Abraham changed "this Name, and called the Place of the Sanctuary "Jeruſalem, or God ſhall ſee it. He ſhall ſee Salem ‖, "that is, a perfect place. 'Tis moreover call'd Jeru- "ſalem, becauſe the Erroneous * שלי find there the "Doctrine which the holy Angels teach them. "This Name was given it, becauſe of the Sins of "Error it committed; it being better for it to be "puniſh'd for Sins of Error, than thoſe committed "through Pride. Laſtly, The Lovers of the Law "ought to enjoy Tranquility; and the Tranquility "of the World † have their Habitation therein. This is the Original of its Name.

He produces Auguſtus's Complaints to the Jews, about Macedonia's concealing Brutus, and wrapping his Iniquity, as an Adultereſs hides her Lover under her Veil. We here alſo find the Letters of the Refugees of Aſia, aſſerting, that Auguſtus, and Antony his Collegue, had given Order as far as Britain ‖, which is ſituate upon the Coaſts of the Ocean, and beyond the Indian Sea, to releaſe all the Jewiſh Slaves of both Sexes, and to take their Ranſom out of the Emperor's Treaſures. This pretented Joſeph * has exaggerated what he had heard of the Freed-men of his Nation, of whom we have already ſaid enough.

He maintains, that he was call'd Joſippon by an honorary Appellation, as being anointed with a Military Unction, to command in Galilee. He boaſts, that a Soldier came up to the Wall to kill him with a poiſon'd Arrow; but being terrrified by his Voice, they caſt upon him a Bucket of boiling Oil, which ſcalded off his Skin: However he run away without his Skin, crying out, and weeping in the midſt of the Roman Army, till he died. It would be a new ſort of ſight to ſee a Man running full ſpeed without his Skin.

XVIII. Laſtly, It ſeems the Hiſtorian was not acquainted with himſelf; he actually ſays, he was born 134 Years after the Ceſarſhip, called by the Greeks Imperioſia, was eſtabliſh'd at Rome; and that he was fifty one Years old when Julius Ceſar was born, in the 188th Year of the Ceſareat: His Chronology is bad, for he muſt have been fifty four Years old. But a Miſtake of three Years ought to be indulged in ſo extravagant a Calculation, as that we are going to make. Julius Ceſar became Emperor at twenty three Years of Age, and Joſeph † was then ſeventy four Years old. Ceſar reign'd four Years and ſome Months. He was therefore kill'd in Jupiter's Temple, before he was compleat eight and twenty: Auguſtus reign'd fifty ſix Years; and thus Joſeph was at Auguſtus's death an hundred thirty four Years and five Months old. Here is a Man already advanced to a great Age, and yet he ſurvived the Ruin of his Country, which happen'd not till fifty five or ſix Years after. 'Tis true he paſſes over all the Succeſſors of Auguſtus till Nero,

---

* Cap 65. p. 288. † ספלר Sepharad, that is, Spain. Ibid. ‖ Ibid. * Lib. 6. c. 77. p. 343. † נוביס Jovis l. 6. c. 46. p. 200. ‖ Lib. 6. c. 75. p. 333. * Cap. 77. p. 340. † Suet. l. 7. in Vitellio, p. 168. Joſippon, p. 333. ‖ ארישלם Videbit Salem ſeu perfectum. * ירושלם This word being divided, makes שלי errans qui invenit in te חוראה doctrinam. † צולם שולי ישליו Tranquilli Mundi. ‖ Lib. 11. c. 27. p. 204. * Cap. 67. p. 293. † Lib. 6. c. 82. p. 362.

as

as if there was no vacuum to be fill'd up. But nevertheleſs, he makes Herod Antipater reign eleven Years, Agrippa I. twenty three, and Agrippa II. twenty; and this laſt dy'd after the taking of Jeruſalem. He was therefore above an hundred eighty ſix years of Age when he made War, and couragiouſly ſuſtain'd Sieges in Galilee. He was carry'd Priſoner to Rome, where he liv'd many Years.

His * Father was an hundred and three years old at the Siege of Jeruſalem, and his Mother eighty five. My Father, ſaid he to the Beſieg'd of Jeruſalem, and my Mother are among you; the former is an hundred and three Years of Age, and my Mother is fourſcore and five. Here then is a Son, that came into the World an hundred Years before his Mother. This is not all; for having forgotten his own Age, as well as his Father's, he makes himſelf then but ſixty Years old, tho' he was born fifty four Years before Julius Cæſar.

XIX. An Hiſtorian of this Character, deſerves not perhaps to be ſo long inſiſted upon, to ſhew what he is: Yet ſince he is rank'd immediately after the Prophets, it will not be amiſs to enquire into theſe three things. 1. What Country he was of. 2. What time he liv'd in. And 3. What induc'd him to this Impoſture.

XX. Scaliger † thought, that Joſeph Gorionides was a Native of Tours, becauſe he often mentions the Loire, Amboiſe and Chinon, Cities of Touraine; which went not by theſe Names, till after the ſixth Century ‖. 'Tis certain he was a Frenchman; and therefore, as the true Joſeph makes the Galatians attending Herod I. his Funeral Pomp; this Author introduces his Countrymen the Franks: But he ſpeaks ſo often of Britany, that I am perſuaded he was of this Province. In effect, he carries the Original of the Britans up to Japhet; for * the Children of Riphat are the Britains that inhabit Britany by the Loire; whoſe Waters, as well as thoſe of the Seine, fall into the Ocean, which is the great Sea. The affectation of giving ſo venerable an Antiquity to the Inhabitants of a particular Province of France, before the reſt, gives reaſon to ſuſpect it was his Birth-place. In deſcribing the Extent of the Roman Empire, he always ſpeaks of Britany, as if it were of conſiderable Conſequence in that vaſt Monarchy, of which it was but a very inſignificant Part: He marches twenty thouſand Britains to the Siege of Jeruſalem, under the Command of Titus: He might know the Loir, Amboiſe and Chinon, as well as Normandy, which were in his Neighbourhood: He might alſo know the Engliſh, whom he deduces from Thiras, and praiſes their Country, Courage and Strength; as alſo that of the Scots. 'Tis no wonder that he was a Britain, ſince the Jews were potent in that Province; which ſome time after was ſo horribly burthen'd with them; that they ruin'd the Nobles, the Merchants, and all the meaner ſort of People, by the Uſuries permitted them; which oblig'd the States to meet and petition Duke John to expel them.

XXI. 'Tis ſaid indeed †, that this Province took its Name from a King of the Gauls, call'd Britannus, a Co-temporary with Abimelec and Hercules; who entertain'd this Hero in his way to Spain to fight Gerion, and gave him his Daughter Celte, from whom came the Celtes; but this is carrying us to the Fabulous times, and giving us Romances for Truth. Britany receiv'd not its Name till after the Saxons Conqueſt of Great Britain. This Iſle then chang'd its Name, and its Inhabitants took that of Engliſh, whom the ſpurious Joſeph ridiculouſly deduces from Thiras ‖ the Son of Japhet.

Thoſe who were able to croſs the Sea, gave the Name of their Country to the Place of their Refuge; and 'twas in the Year 690, that this Province was call'd Britany. So that the falſe Joſeph could not have liv'd before the end of the ſeventh Century. There is moreover an Ordinance produced of Alain the Long, made the preceding Year, in which he entitles himſelf King of the Britains, and complains, that Juſtice was ill-exercis'd in his Kingdom of Britany. But whatever Antiquity this Charter may pretend to, it carries ſo many marks of Forgery, that it is impoſſible to attribute it to Alain the Long; and the ſigning of it by nine Biſhops of that Province, is a ſufficient Proof of its Falſity.

XXII. Moreover the Counterfeit Joſeph * ſpeaks of the Bourguignions, the Bulgarians, and the Inhabitants of Cracovia, which furniſh new Arguments for the Impoſture of his Piece. He introduces in it the Kingdom of Choſar, whoſe Inhabitants deſcended from Thogarma: In the mean time we have ſeen, that this is an imaginary Kingdom. Laſtly, he ſpeaks of the Coronation of the German Emperours, which he deſcribes, as if that Ceremony had been obſerv'd for Veſpaſian.

XXIII. " This Prince (ſays he) † being arriv'd " at Rome, aſſembled all the Senators to Elect an " Emperour, according to cuſtom. Joſeph, whom " Veſpaſian had impriſon'd, procured leave of his " Guards to ſee the Pomp; of which he obſerved " all the following Circumſtances. The Senators " went to take Veſpaſian in the Temple of God, and " conducted him with Drums and Trumpets to the " Palace-Royal, which is in the Suburbs, towards " the Sea; and this little Suburbs is capable of " containing in its Court a hundred thouſand " Troopers. Seven Kings, choſen by the Roman " Senate, carrying the Crown, which they receiv" ved from the Emperor, marched before him. " Two of theſe Princes preſented him a white " Horſe: Two others held a Ladder of pure Gold, " which he made uſe of to mount his Horſe: Two " others went by the Emperor's ſides; and the ſe" venth walked on Foot before him, carrying his " Sword. This laſt King having commanded ſi" lence, order'd Veſpaſian to be acknowledg'd Cæ" ſar, becauſe it was the great God Jehovah who had " eſtabliſh'd him. They pray'd God to main" tain the Right of the Cæſarſhip, to ſtrengthen the " preſent Cæſar, and the People anſwer'd, Amen. " The Emperour ſpoke afterwards, the People an" ſwering a ſecond time, Amen. Two Horſemen " ſcatter'd handfuls of Flowers of Gold, that is to " ſay, of Florins. Two Perſons were choſen, one " whereof held the firſt place after the Emperor, " and the ſecond was Generaliſſimo of the Troops. " When they came into the Suburbs, where the " Palace ſtands, the Emperor ſet his Foot upon " the Ground, reſting upon the Shoulders of ſe" ven Princes. They plac'd him upon a riſing " ground: They preſented him the Book of the " Roman Privileges; he kiſs'd all the Pages of it; " laid the Book upon his Head, and ſwore to ob" ſerve thoſe Privileges, without violating one of " them. They ſhut up the entrance of the Sub" urbs, till he had ſworn the Obſervation of the " Privileges, which were peculiar to him; after" wards they open'd the Gates. All the preſent " Kings preceded him, or followed him on Foot, " till he was ſeated on a Throne, erected in the " Palace. There the Kings came to kiſs his " Feet. The ſeven Principal Officers of the Em" pire

* Cap. 85. p. 383. † Scal. in Etench. Trihær. Serar. c. 4. ‖ Ambaſia Kainan. * Joſippon l. 1. c 1. p. 1. † Argentré Hiſt de Bretagne, l. 1. p. 7. ‖ Thiras inſunt אנגלים Angleſi p. 2. * Ib. p. 1. † Lib. VI. c. 77.

" pire appear'd next: Each of theſe had twenty " four Lieutenants; each of theſe Lieutenants had " an hundred and twenty Sub-Lieutenants; and " each of theſe hundred and twenty Sub-Lieute- " nants had under him four hundred Subaltern " Officers. Above all theſe Officers is the Father, " whom the Greeks call Patron, who preſents to " the Emperor a Sceptre of gilt Wood, and lays " on his Head a Bag of Duſt: He puts on his Fin- " ger a Ring made of a Dead Man's Bone, and " in his left Hand a gilded Globe: He crowns " him, and eſtabliſhes him King; the Emperour " kiſſes the Patron's Hand, and receives of him " the Diadem, added to the Crown, as a Mark " of the Empire. The Patron cries, Long live the " King, our Lord, our Cæſar; the People anſwer, " Amen: The Patron kiſſes the Emperor's Mouth, " ſits at his right Hand, entertains him at Supper " with the ſeven Princes, and the ſeven Officers, " who made him Emperour."

XXIV. Theſe Ceremonies were not obſerv'd at Veſpaſian's Coronation; nor did the Author deſign to deſcribe the Coronation of Charlemagne, as is commonly believ'd; for the Empire was not Elective whilſt poſſeſs'd by his Poſterity. Beſides, there was not at that time the Form which Joſeph gives; who ſpeaks of ſeven Kings ſerving the Emperour, and being his Principal Officers, who took upon them the Right of Elections. 2. The Normans, whom Joſeph knew began not to ravage the Coaſts and Provinces of France, till the time of Charles the Bald; nor was it till the tenth Century, that Province took the Name of its Conquerours. 3. The Cravates, or Croatia, was not known in Veſpaſian's or Charlemagne's time; and Cedrenus, who wrote in the eleventh Century, is the firſt that mentions it. 4. Laſtly, Gold Florins were not in uſe in Charlemagne's time. Villani affirms, that they were coin'd at Florence but in the thirteenth Century; but as ſome of them have been diſcover'd of the Year 1067. we muſt neceſſarily believe them of a more ancient date. All theſe Characters are a ſufficient Evidence, that the Hebrew Joſeph liv'd not till the end of the tenth, or rather in the eleventh Century; and that the Coronation of the Emperour, he has given a Deſcription of, is that of Otho I. or of his Son Otho II. The firſt of theſe Princes was crown'd at Rome, at the end of the tenth Century, with a great deal of Pomp. || The Princes, and the principal Officers of the Empire, who follow'd him, appear'd at his Coronation. As it was the Nobility, and the Repreſentatives of the People, and of the Cities, who then elected the Emperours, he had ſome reaſon to make thoſe ſubordinations of ſeven Princes, Prefects, Lieutenants, and other Perſons. Otho receiving the Imperial Diadem, ſwore to preſerve the Privileges of the Church of Rome, and alſo to reſtore what had been taken from her. The Pope performed the Ceremony of the Coronation; and this Conſent of the Patron has been thought ſo neceſſary, that Baronius, and ſome other Hiſtorians, begin to reckon from thence the Years of Otho's Empire, tho' he poſſeſs'd it a long time before. Otho II. was crown'd ſome time after with the ſame Ceremony. All this agrees with Joſeph's Account, who betrays himſelf, by making the Heathen Romans ſpeak like Jews and Chriſtians: In effect, they demanded the Benediction of the Supreme God, and Joſeph makes the Idolatrous People anſwer Amen.

XXV. In fine, we have already obſerv'd, that Salomon Jarchi is the firſt that has cited the Hebrew Joſeph. This Rabbin writ in the Year 1140. Aben-Ezra and Abraham Ben Dior, who gave vogue to his Work, liv'd in the ſame Century. 'Twould be a Miracle for this Book to have remain'd three or four hundred Years unknown to a Nation, for whom it was written. But if it was not finiſh'd till towards the end of the tenth Century, or rather in the beginning of the eleventh, 'tis no wonder it began not to be known till an hundred Years after.

XXVI. The Motive of this Impoſtor is eaſie to be diſcover'd: For having found the Hiſtory of his Nation well wrote, and little known to thoſe it was compos'd for, he reſolv'd to publiſh one like it in Hebrew, under his Name. Little Credit would have been given to a Modern Writer, ſo far remov'd from the Events which he related; and therefore he took the Name of Joſeph, calling himſelf the Author of a Book, of which he was little more than the Tranſlator. In the mean time, that he might not be confounded with the Greek Hiſtorian, whoſe Name he took, he made himſelf the Son of another Father; taking the Name Gorionides, which was an Illuſtrious Family. He was a Plagiary of the true Joſeph, even to the Name of the Family which he deſign'd to counterfeit. This Artifice ſucceeded; for as his Work was written in Hebrew, it has bury'd the other Joſeph; who is neglected in his Nation, and conſider'd as a Foreigner, becauſe he wrote in Greek; whilſt this Impoſtor is extoll'd to the Skies, and even the Chriſtians are deceiv'd by him. We thought it neceſſary to give an exacter Account of the Author and his Book, becauſe he is often cited. Let us return to the Body of the Nation.

XXVII. It was extremely multiply'd in Germany; it had even built Synagogues in moſt of the conſiderable Cities, particularly in Triers, Cologne and Ments. It had penetrated even to Franconia. This People paſs'd from thence into Bohemia; where, in the eleventh Century, they perform'd ſuch conſiderable Services to the Chriſtians, againſt the irruptions of the Barbarians, that they were allow'd the Privilege of a Synagogue. They enter'd into Hungary. 'Tis ſaid, they were terrify'd by abundance of Prodigies, which happen'd at the beginning of the eleventh Century; and fearing that the end of the World was at hand, they deſpair'd of ſeeing the Meſſiah arrive, and turn'd Chriſtians. 'Tis certain, that that Age was very much infatuated with Prodigies, and that the People and Hiſtorians themſelves relate a great number of them. The Dead return'd every Night, and the Voyage from the other World to ours, was not ſo rare nor ſo difficult as is ſaid. Pope Benedict XII. return'd from thence mounted on a black Horſe, and acquainted a Biſhop, that he was in miſerable torture, becauſe all his Alms-deeds had been only the fruits of his Extortions; and that to repair them, he ought to oblige his Brother to diſtribute the Money, in a Cheſt he had in reſerve. The Nuns undertook to make Drawers, which no body could wear, without being in love with them; and the Biſhop of Triers found a Monaſtery of his Dioceſe, where all the Nuns were employ'd in making theſe Drawers. Such was the Genius of that time. They believ'd things that were moſt incredible; they vented a thouſand Prodigies that happen'd in the Heaven and Earth, which threatned the World with abſolute Deſtruction. Whether the Jews were terrify'd and converted by them, as is ſaid, is more than I know. Here follows ſomething that is more certain.

• An. 962.

XXVIII. A Prieſt * nam'd Goteſcal, who liv'd in the eleventh Century, put himſelf at the head of fifteen thouſand Robbers, he had gotten together in Germany, and declar'd War againſt the Jews. So Pious a pretence, procur'd him the Veneration of the People, and the Protection of Kings. He run over Franconia in a little time; from whence he paſs'd into Hungary, where he had at firſt an entire liberty to exerciſe his Cruelties; but when it was perceiv'd, that under the pretence of Religion, this Army plunder'd and raviſh'd the Wives of the Chriſtians. they ſurpriz'd them in their Debaucheries, and Goteſcal was kill'd, with the beſt part of his Troops. So tragical an end hinder'd not the Count of Linenguen from making the ſame Attempt. He ravag'd a part of Germany, by declaring himſelf a Perſecutor of the Jews; but attempting to paſs into Hungary, he found the Paſſage ſtopp'd: Being reſolv'd to force it, he vigorouſly attack'd thoſe that kept it, and puffed up with the happy Succeſs, he already divided the Kingdom with his Conſpirators; when the Hungarians attacking them unexpectedly, as they were deliberating, put 'em to the rout. The Emperour Henry, who was then at Ratisbonne, declar'd himſelf in favour of the Jews, reſtor'd them to the Places from whence they had been expell'd, and made their Plunderers refund. But this was a freſh Source of Injuſtices; for the Innocent were accus'd of being enrich'd with the Spoils, in order to have the pleaſure of fleecing them. The Hiſtorian of the Jews is miſtaken, in attributing this act of Clemency to Henry V. for they were indebted to his Father for it, who had then ſuch mighty Diſputes with Gregory VII. about Inveſtitures.

XXIX. The Cruſades † rekindled a freſh Zeal againſt the Jews. They complain, that theſe Votaries paſſing to Cologne, Ments, Wormes and Spiers, committed a Maſſacre, from the Month of April till July, in which were ſtab'd and drown'd five thouſand Perſons; and that the number of thoſe, who were forc'd to abjure the Religion of their Fathers, can't be reckon'd. They don't exaggerate the matter; on the contrary, the Hiſtorians ‖ amplifie the number, with the addition of hideous Circumſtances. They aſſert, that fourteen hundred of them were burnt at Ments; and as in all likelihood, there was Reſiſtance and Diſorder, half the City was reduc'd to Aſhes. Thoſe of Wormes at firſt retir'd to the Biſhop, but he would not receive them, unleſs they turn'd Chriſtians; the People ſuffer'd them not to deliberate long: Some embrac'd Chriſtianity, which they abjur'd as ſoon as the Form was over; others kill'd themſelves. Something like this happen'd at Triers. * The Women ſeeing the Cruſaders coming, took Knives, and run them thro' their Childrens Bellies, ſaying, It were better to ſend them thus into Abraham's Boſom, than to abandon them to the Chriſtians. Others loaden with Stones threw themſelves into the River, and were drown'd; ſome fled to the Biſhop's Caſtle: Egilbert, who was in it, preach'd them a Sermon, by which they were converted; but the Year following, all of them, except one, return'd to the Judaiſm they had deſerted. The Biſhop of Spire had more Humanity; for he not only receiv'd the Fugitives to his Houſe, but caus'd ſome of their Perſecutors to be hang'd. The Miſchief went ſo far, that the Bavarian Annaliſts † reckon twelve thouſand that dy'd in that Country; and others affirm, that the number of thoſe who periſh'd in Germany, was almoſt incredible.

XXX. This was only the firſt Croiſade. Another was made fifty Years after ‖. Rodolphus *, who was commiſſion'd to Preach it upon the Banks of the Rhine, did it with great Succeſs. As it was one of the Articles of his Religion and his Preachments, that the Enemies of Chriſtianity were firſt to be taken off, and thoſe ſtab'd who were near at hand, before they went to ſeek 'em in Foreign Lands; the People edify'd by his Exhortations: But the Miſchief was not ſo great, becauſe part of 'em took their flight betimes, and retir'd to Nurimberg, and other Cities depending upon the Emperor, under whoſe Protection they found more Security. We muſt even do juſtice to St. Bernard †, and acknowledge, that Rodolph's Doctrine did not pleaſe him. He wrote ‖ to the Archbiſhop of Ments, whom this Hermit had enflam'd by his Preaching, to prove to him, that he ought to look upon the Perſecution of the Jews as inhumane, and that the Hermit ſpoke without having any Vocation, either from God or Man; and therefore he advis'd, that he might be ſent back to his Deſart.

XXXI. It is not agreed about the time, when the firſt of theſe Croiſades happen'd, which deſtroy'd ſuch a vaſt number of the Circumcis'd. Our Authors place it in the laſt Year of the eleventh Century, and the Jews in the Year 1096. or according to their calculation, in the Year 856. They even find a great Myſtery in it; for they maintain, ‖ that the Word they have conſum'd or deſtroy'd, ſignifies a number of 56, and that multiplying it by tens, it makes 856; ſo that God had mark'd out this Year for the Deſtruction of his People in Spain. The Arabians alſo ſay, that their Aſtrologers had foretold a great Deluge for the Year 492 of the Hegyra. This Deluge never happen'd; but the Chriſtians overflow'd Judea, under the Caliph Moſtadhaher, who had but the name of it, becauſe the Sultan Selgiuſides govern'd him; and this Year of the Hegyra is the 1098. of the Chriſtian Church. But its eaſie to reconcile all theſe Hiſtorians, tho' different in their Calculations. The Jews are in the right, for 'twas after the Council held at Clermont, in November, 1095, that the Croiſading Confederacy was made. They aſſembled their Troops the next Year, and made a general Maſſacre of the Jews, in all the Places where theſe Aſſemblies were form'd. Nor are the Arabians deceiv'd; for tho' Tancred and Godefroy de Bouillon, had form'd the Siege of Nice, in the Year 1097, 'twas not till the Year following that Judea was depopulated, and Jeruſalem was not taken till 1099, as our Hiſtorians ſay.

XXXII. This Perſecution, kindled by the Croiſades, was univerſal. It was felt not only in Germany, but in England, France, Spain, and Italy. The publick Cry was; Come, let us maſſacre them in ſuch a manner, that the Name of Iſrael ſhall be no more remembred. The Chriſtians kill'd great numbers of them; but they were ſtill more; who being driven to deſpair, by the Violence that was done them, kill'd themſelves: And with theſe Executions ended the eleventh Century. Thus it is that R. Ganz concludes the account of the Perſecutions his Nation ſuffer'd, becauſe the Odour of all theſe Sufferings is too bad.

---

* Mutius Chronicon German. l.xv. & l.xvi. p. 123. & 126. Piſtor. Hiſt. Germ. t. 3. An. 1089. † An. Mund. 4856. Chriſt. 1096. Schialſchelet Hakkabala, p. 110. ‖ Additiones ad Lambert Schafnaburgenſem. Hiſt. Germ. Piſt. t. 11. p. 253. An. 1096. Bertholdi Conſtantienſis Appendix ad Herm. apud Vurſtil. t. 1. p. 375. * Hiſtoria Treverenſis apud Dachery Spic. t. XII. p. 236. † Aventinus Annal. Boior. l. v. p. 361. ‖ An. 1144. * Otto de geſtis Friderici I. l. 1. c. 37. apud Vurſtil. t. I. p. 428. † D. Bernard Ep. 133. t. I. p. 133. ‖ An. 1146. ‖ בדל Ganz Tſemach David, p. 133.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

A General Account of the Nation in the Eaſt and Weſt, during the twelfth Century; taken from Benjamin of Tudela's Voyage to all the Synagogues.

I. The Deſign of Benjamin and of this Chapter. II. Pethora upon the Banks of Euphrates. The City of Balaam. III. The Synagogue of Eſdras in Meſopotamia. IV. The State of the Jews at Nineveh. V. The Academy of Pundebita ruin'd. VI. Antiquity of Bagdet. VII. The Caliphs Power in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs. VIII. The Name of the Caliph that then reign'd there. Benjamin confuted. IX. The Protection the Caliph Moſtanged gave the Jews. X. The Heads of the Captivity in the twelfth Century, and their Power. XI. He had not the Power of Life and Death at Bagdet. XII. The Jews numerous near ancient Babylon. XIII. Ezekiel's Tomb, and Peoples Devotion for that Monument. XIV. Jechoniah's Tomb at Coufa. XV. The State of the Jews in Egypt. XVI. Whether there was a Rebellion there. XVII. That matter explain'd. XVIII. Benjamin confuted. XIX. The terrible Declenſion of the Jews in that Country. XX. The Deſcription of Judea. The ſmall number of Jews at Jeruſalem. XXI. Their Superſtition for that City. XXII. The true Situation of Scunem. Its Deſcription. XXIII. The State of the Jews at Aſcalon. XXIV. In the upper Galilee, and the decay of Tiberias. XXV. The Deſcription Aben-Ezra gives of it examin'd. XXVI. Mount Parnaſſus till'd by the Jews. XXVII. Of the City Thebes. XXVIII. Whether Benjamin could paſs thro' Valachia. Why he ſpeaks of it. XXIX. Jehiel Superintendant of the Pope's Finances. XXX. The Prince of the Nation at Capua. XXXI. The Fabulous Original of ſome Cities of Italy. Jews that dwelt in them. XXXII. The German Jews very charitable. Bohemia the new Canaan. XXXIII. The Deſcription of ſome Cities of France, and of the Jews that were in them. XXXIV. A general Reflection upon theſe Travels.

I. BEnjamin of Tudela, a Native of the Kingdom of Navarre, in which that City ſtands, liv'd in the twelfth Century. He travell'd into all the Places, where he thought there were Synagogues, to inform himſelf about the State of his Nation. As he was very fond of it, he omits nothing, that can any ways raiſe its Luſtre and Reputation. He ſometimes deviates from the known Geographers and Hiſtorians. He has even imagin'd new Countries: But for all this, he is a very proper Perſon to give a general Account of the Sate of the Jews, both in the Eaſt and Weſt, during the twelfth Century. We ſhall not follow him in the Road he has taken, that we may not change our Method; but ſhall begin with the Banks of Euphrates and the Eaſt, before we examine what he ſays of the Weſt, whence he ſet out.

II. Upon the Banks of Euphrates, was the City Pethora, famous for the Seat of Balaam. Indeed, the Scripture ſays, That he had his Habitation upon Euphrates, and was ſent for ſo far to Curſe the People of God. Benjamin * imagin'd, he ſaw in this City, a Tower which Balaam had built, which anſwer'd to all the Hours of the Day; becauſe he fancy'd, that Balaam was a Magician, an Aſtrologer like the antient Chaldeans: Whereas the Scripture deſcribes him as a Man that knew the Deity, and receiv'd Inſpirations from it. Beſides, good Senſe might have dictated, that a Magical Tower, built ſo many Ages ago, could not have ſubſiſted till his own.

III. He paſs'd into Meſopotamia, where he ſaw a Synagogue, which Eſdras had built, when he left Babylon, to return to Jeruſalem; which is ridiculous. For to what end ſhould this Holy Man, who had no other Thoughts in his Head, than of bringing back the People to their Country, have attempted to confirm theſe People in Chaldea, by building a new Temple, when he was upon his return, and was taken up with the Thoughts of gathering Money for the re-building Jeruſalem, and its Temple? Benjamin found the Place where Abraham dwelt deſerted; there being only ſome Muſſulmans, who came ſometimes to perform their Devotions there. From thence he went into an Iſland, made by the Tigris; where there is a fine City built by Omar, the Son of Abdallec, one of the firſt and happieſt Caliphs: Since in his Reign, which laſted but ten Years and an half, the Muſſulmans took thirty ſix thouſand Cities, or Caſtles, and built fourteen hundred Moſchs. Benjamin ſays, the City was ſituate at the Foot of Mount Ararat, four Miles from the Place where the Ark reſted. The Remains whereof Omar took to re-build a Moſch. Here was another Synagogue of Eſdras, and 4000 Jews inhabited the Iſle of Tigris. 'Tis not to be conteſted, that there was there a City, and neighbouring Synagogue, and 4000 Jews. It muſt only be obſerv'd that the City which Omar built, was not ſituate at the Foot of Ararat, but at the Mouth of the Tigris, to hinder the Perſians from going to the Indies by the Perſian Gulph, which City was call'd Baſſorah. Beſides, tho' it could be ſuppos'd, that the Ark ſtill remain'd to the twelfth Century of the Church, could its rotten Planks be fit to build a Moſch with? Let us content our ſelves therefore with believing, that there were Jews, and a Synagogue there, becauſe they enjoy'd an entire Liberty of Conſcience.

IV. He found another 7000 at Almozal, which anſwers to the ancient Nineveh; the one having been built from the Ruins of the other, upon the oppoſite Bank of the Tigris, and being only ſeparated by a Bridge. There was Zaccheus, a Deſcendant of the Houſe of David; there was alſo a famous Aſtronomer, call'd Beren Alpherec, who ſerv'd as a Chaplain to King Zin-Aldin. 'Tis not eaſie to be conjectur'd, how a Jew could officiate to a Muſſulman; for Zin-Aldin was of that Religion, and Brother to Noraldin † King of Syria; whom the Muſſulmans reverence, not only as one of their moſt Illuſtrious Conquerours, but as one of their greateſt Saints, becauſe he had an ardent Zeal for his Religion; and 'twas he who firſt ſet up a Chamber of Juſtice againſt the Violences of the great Lords. But perhaps this Jewiſh Aſtronomer, did not ſcrupulouſly weigh the difference of Religions, but conform'd his own to that of the Prince he ſerv'd.

V. Benjamin ||, before he arriv'd at Bagdet, paſt thro' Rohobod, where he found 2000 Perſons of his Nation. Carchemis, famous for the defeat of Pha- raoh Necho, and ſituate upon the Banks of Euphrates, contain'd five hundred of them. Pundebita was but two days journey from hence. But this City, ſo well known, had chang'd its Name, being then call'd Aliobari, or Alnebar. He diſcover'd here ſome Footſteps of the Grandeur of his Nation; for there was the Tomb of Boſtenay, that Prince of the Captivity, who had marry'd a Daughter of the King of Perſia. He obſerv'd alſo thoſe of two Illuſtrious Doctors, with the Synagogues they had built before their Death; but it was no longer that flouriſhing Academy, peopled with a vaſt number of Scholars, whoſe Heads had made ſuch a Noiſe in former Ages: There were only 2000 Jews in it, ſome whereof apply'd themſelves to the Study of the Law. There were alſo ſome Schools, but empty.

* Benjam. Itinerar. p. 159. † He ſucceeded his Father in the Year, 1149. || Benjam. p 62.

The ſame thing had befel that of Sora; of which the Author * is contented to revive the Remembrance, and to call to mind, that many Heads of the Captivity, deſcended from the Houſe of David, had made their Reſidence there. Laſtly, He only celebrates the City and Academy of Nahardea, by the Superſtition its Inhabitants had to build the Synagogue of the Earth, and Stones they had brought from Jeruſalem. But the Academies were entirely deſtroy'd.

Nunc ſeges eſt ubi Troja fuit.

The great Men were no more in this Country, and the Law ſeem'd to have been fled for Sanctuary to the Weſt. If there were afterwards any Doctors, their Names are ſcarce known, nor their Authority reſpected. The Sciences have a Fugitive Habitation, like Men: They not only retire with them when they are expell'd; but diſappear in certain places and times, whilſt the Nations which poſſeſs'd them, make no change in their Abode. People fall into Ignorance and Barbarity.

Sed revocare gradum ſuperaſque evadere ad auras,
Hoc opus hic labor eſt.

The Authors of the Talmud, and the Excellent Doctors, were no longer found at Sora and Pundebita, in Benjamin's time; nor even in other Places, where there were ſtill a great many Jews: And indeed he found 10000 at Obkera, the Foundation whereof he aſcribes to Jechonias; tho' a Captive King was not in a Condition to build a City; he paſs'd from thence to Bagdet, the Capital of the Sovereigns.

VI. The Perſians aſcribe a great Antiquity to this Capital City of Babylonian Irack, which was formerly Chaldea. They pretend, it was built by the Perſian Kings of the firſt Dynaſty; tho' it be indiſputable, that Almanſor laid its Foundations: It was afterwards the Reſidence of the ſucceeding Caliphs. Benjamin makes a magnificent Deſcription of their Palace and City. The Reigning Caliph was inveſted with a Supreme, and even Deſpotical Authority. He kept his Brothers chain'd in their reſpective Palaces, becauſe they had conſpir'd againſt him: His Subjects hardly ever ſaw him, tho' he was extraordinary civil to others: The Pilgrims, that paſs'd that way, earneſtly deſir'd a Look of him; but inſtead of ſhewing himſelf, he caus'd a Skirt of his Robe to be hung upon the Window, that every body might ſee it, and a Lord of his Court came out crying to theſe Pilgrims, Go in Peace, for our Lord, the Light of the Iſhmaelites, is favourable to you; which fill'd them with joy.

VII. He was Supreme, in Eccleſiaſtical as well as Civil Authority. The People believ'd him almoſt equal to Mahomet; and he held the ſame Rank among the Muſſulmans, as the Pope has among the Chriſtians. At the Faſt of Ramadan, he came out of his Palace, clad with ſumptuous Habits; having among theſe Ornaments, a piece of black Cloth upon his Head, to ſignifie, that all his Glory was only Vanity, and that Joy is quickly chang'd into Sorrow: He was attended by all the great Lords of his Court, and a vaſt multitude of People, which came that day from far to have the Satisfaction of ſeeing him: When he arriv'd to an Oratory near the Gate of the City, and had receiv'd the Acclamations of the People, he kiſs'd his Robe to give a Bleſſing, and aſcending into a Lobby of the Chappel, preach'd the Mahometan Law to them; he kill'd a Camel, pieces of which he diſtributed to his Principal Officers, who look'd upon it as an extraordinary Favour. Benjamin † calls this the Muſſulmans Paſſover, but this Word muſt not be taken in a ſtrict Senſe; for the Muſſulmans do not celebrate the Feaſt of the Jews; and it muſt not be wonder'd at, that the Caliph cut the Throat of a Camel, for the Head of his Sect us'd to eat the Fleſh of this Animal. The Ceremony being over, the Caliph return'd alone to his Palace, by the Banks of the Tigris, which was cover'd with thouſands of Barks, and the Ground he had trod was ſo conſecrated, that no body durſt walk in the Place where he had ſet the Sole of his Foot.

VIII. The Caliph, tho' thus inveſted with the Political and Sacred Power, nevertheleſs, earn'd his Livelihood by his Labour. The Arabian Authors, ſpeaking of the Auſterity of theſe Princes, ſay ſuch things as would put Chriſtian Monks to the Bluſh, and ſhew, that we are very remote from what is call'd Repentance and Mortification. He that Benjamin ſpeaks of, work'd in a Palace enrich'd with Columns of Silver, Gold and precious Stones; and made Coverlets, which were ſold at the Market, with his Seal upon them: He maintain'd his Houſe with the Money that he got by his Labour. However, Benjamin is miſtaken in the Name of the Prince who then reign'd, ſince he calls him Achmed; or rather, we muſt ſay, it is a Fault of the Tranſcriber ‖; for he could not be ignorant of the Name of him that reign'd at Bagdet, when he travell'd thither. However, it was neither Achmed, nor Caphits, nor Muctbephi, as is ſaid, who had then the Caliphſhip. Muctbephi, who is probably the ſame with Mettaki, dy'd in the Year 1159. Moſtanged, his Son, reign'd till 1170. which was probably the Year that our Traveller arriv'd at Bagdet. Two things ſtrengthen this Conjecture: One, that Moſtanged was in reality a worthy Man, who lov'd Juſtice, and could not be prevail'd upon by Gold or Silver, to ſhew favour to Criminals, and eſpecially to Calumniators; becauſe he was reſolved to purge his Kingdom of that Peſt; which agrees with the Praiſes that Benjamin beſtows upon the Probity of the reigning Caliph. Moreover, this Prince's Brother and Mother conſpir'd againſt him, and ſuborn'd ſome Women to aſſaſſinate him; but the Conſpiracy being diſcover'd, he caus'd the Women that were to commit the Murder, to be thrown into the Tigris, and confin'd the Prince and Princeſs. Benjamin relates * the ſame thing, except that he gives him many Brothers, who conſpir'd againſt him, whereas he had only one.

IX. 'Twas under the Protection of Moſtanged, who reign'd ten Years, that the Jews then liv'd

* Benjam. p. 81. Suria. † Benjam. Itin. p. 68. L'Empereur Not. in Benjam. p. 187. ‖ Abr. Zachutus in Juchaſin f. 149. Conſt. L'Empereur Not. p. 185. Herbelot Bibl. Orient. Title of the Abaſſides. * Benjam. Itin. p. 72. &c.

peace-

peaceably at Bagdet. He lov'd them, and had many of them in his Serviee; he perfectly underſtood their Language and wrote it; and had alſo ſome knowledge of their Law. There were but a thouſand Inhabitants of this Nation, and the Error of Iſaac the Son of Arama, which makes him ſay, there were many thouſand Jews, would be a groſs one, were we not accuſtomed to ſee theſe Gentlemen magnifie whatever contributes to the Glory of the Synagogue. There were few Inhabitants, but yet twenty eight Synagogues, and ten Tribunals or Councils, at the head whereof were ten eminent Perſons employ'd only upon the Affairs of the Nation, and called the ten Otioſi. Above theſe ten was the Head of the Captivity. He that had then that Poſt, was a Deſcendant of David, and his Name was Daniel. The Jews gave him the Title of Lord, and the Mahometans that of Lord, the Son of David. His Authority extended over all the Jews, which were in the Dominions of the Caliph, the Prince of the Faithful; and from Syria to the Iron Gates and the Indies. The Author repreſents this Prince of the Captivity, as a kind of Sovereign, for the Mahometans were oblig'd to reſpect him, as well as the Jews; and he that meeting him on the Road, refuſed to riſe and ſalute him, received a hundred Stripes. A hundred Guards march'd before him when he paid a Viſit to the Caliph, crying, Prepare the way for the Lord, the Son of David. The Nation was oblig'd to have their Preachers and Doctors from him, who gave theſe Impoſition of Hands. That he might ſupport his Dignity, the Merchants of his Nation raiſed an Impoſt in the Fairs, and paid him a kind of Tribute: Some Proviſions were alſo ſent him from the remote Provinces. Daniel, beſides this, had his Patrimony and Lands that were given him. He kept a Table, and had Hoſpitals where he maintain'd the Poor. But he was forced to buy this Grandeur and Liberty, by a Tribute paid to the Caliph, and by rich Preſents to the principal Officers of his Court. I queſton whether the Dignity of the Prince of the Captivity was ſo conſiderable at that time, as Benjamin makes it ||. He has perhaps repreſented it in its ancient Luſtre; but as his Nation was reduced very low by the Perſecution of the preceding Century, which ruin'd the Academies, and diſpers'd the principal Inhabitants out of Perſia into the Weſt, there is no probability that this Prince was then ſo conſiderable.

X. This Obſervation is of great moment, not only becauſe it ſhews that there was ſtill a Prince of the Captivity in the Twelfth Century, tho' they had been aboliſh'd a hundred Years before; but farther we learn *, that this Head of the Captivity had only a Power borrow'd from the Caliphs, which he did not exerciſe till he had receiv'd Impoſition of Hands from the Infidel Prince, as the Popes could not enter upon the Poſſeſſion of their Dignity, till they had ask'd the Conſent and Approbation of the Arrian Princes, on whom they depended for their Chair and See.

The Rabbins will by no means have their Head ſubjected to the Eaſtern Princes; maintaining that we abſurdly diſpute them the Power of Life and Death, which they have ever enjoy'd in this Country. They ſay † that there are Laws in the Talmud, that ſerve for a Rule to the Judges of Babylon. They reckon a great many Witneſſes among the Rabbins that confirm this matter. They quote Strabo, who affirms, that the Egyptian Jews poſſeſſed a large part of Alexandria, where they judged of the Differences of the Nation, and annull'd or confirm'd Contracts; and exerciſed the ſame Authority as in an abſolutely free Commonwealth. Why ſhould not the ſame thing be done at Babylon? For Origen ‖ ſaid long ſince, that the Kings of Aſſyria, contented to have ſubjected ſo numerous a Nation, left them the liberty of inflicting Death upon ſuch as deſerved it. He proved it by the Example of the Roman Empire, wherein, after the Ruin of the ſecond Temple, they ſtill continued to judge according to their Law; and tho' the Dead Warrants were executed in ſecret, yet the Emperor was ſtill acquainted with them; and by this he proved the Truth of the Romance of Suſanna, which Africanus conteſted with him. Sulpitius Severus * ſays the ſame thing; and if the Princes of the Captivity had the Power to raiſe an Impoſt upon all the Oriental Nation, Why ſhould any body attempt to diveſt them of that of puniſhing Malefactors with Death? Laſtly, † Modern Chriſtians commonly eſpouſe their Intereſts, and with Origen maintain, that this Right belong'd to them.

XI. The Priviledge given to the Jews, and of which they boaſt, would be extraordinary, if they had poſſeſs'd it; for it was never heard, that a Victorious Nation ſhould give the niceſt part of Supreme Authority to thoſe they have vanquiſh'd, and ſtill retain among them, that they may keep them in ſubjection and low. A Nation is often ſuffer'd to live by its own Laws, as to Civil Rights, without allowing it one of the Rays of Soveraignty. The Jews had a particular reaſon to inſiſt upon this Liberty for the Civil Government, becauſe his Religion was concern'd in moſt of the Suits and Queſtions that happen'd, and this Religion was only known by its Profeſſors. But when this kind of Liberty is allow'd a People, the Rebels and Criminals are ſubject to the Sword of the uſual Magiſtrate, who alone has a right to puniſh them. The Caliphs and the Eaſtern Kings are no leſs jealous of their Sovereignty than Chriſtian Princes, who whilſt they allow the tolerated Jews ſome Judges to decide the Differences of private Perſons, have always deprived them of the Power of Life and Death. Strabo, who aſſigns a particular Magiſtrate to the Jews of Alexandria, only grants him the Power of cancelling or ratifying Contracts. Africanus reaſoned conformably to the common Practice of Kings, when he denied that the Captive Jews in Babylon had a Right of inflicting Death on thoſe that were brought before the Tribunal. At leaſt he was ignorant of this Priviledge, and Origen mentions it but as it were trembling, and by the aſſiſtance of an ill-grounded Conſequence. He confeſſes, that if the Jews of Egypt, ſubject to the Romans, ſometimes paſſed Sentences of Death, it was only done in ſecret and huggermugger, and that they had not an entire Liberty in this particular. If the Jews had only a purchas'd Toleration, and puniſh'd Malefactors only in ſecret, it cannot be hence concluded, that they had a Power of Life and Death. Beſides it does not follow, that if this Priviledge was purchas'd in Egypt, that they could do the ſame thing at Babylon; and tho' the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who paid Tribute to the Romans, might have had this Right, thoſe the Aſſyrians had carried into their Land might not have enjoy'd it. But the Romans did not permit the Jews the Power of Life and Death, either at Rome, or in their own Country; and therefore they cry'd in our Saviour's time, It is not lawful for us to put any Man to death: And the Toleration that a Governour bribed by ‖ Benjam. p. 74. * Ibid. p. 72. † Joſeph. Ant. l. 14. c. 12. p. 478. ‖ Origen. Ep. ad African. p. 144. * Sulpit. Sever. Hiſt. l. 11. c. 2. † Dru. Not. p. 179.

Money, and winking upon a ſecret Uſurpation, might have given, proves not that they had an eſtabliſh'd Right in Aſſyria, as Origen pretends. Laſtly, The Import which the Prince of the Captivity levied upon his Nation, was rather a Mark of Submiſſion than of Supreme Authority, ſince it was to pay the Tribute due to the Caliph and his Miniſters, and but a ſmall part of it went to ſupport the Dignity of his Office, and to maintain the Poor who travelled there.

The honeſt Jews acknowledge this want of Power, and Benjamin, who had travelled in this Country, confeſſes that his Nation was Tributary, that the Synagogues were kept up but by vertue of a Patent, which the Caliph gave at his Promotion, and that the Prince of the Captivity received his Power from him by Impoſition of Hands. Maimonides maintains, that it was one of the Fundamental Precepts of the Law, that they could not inflict the Puniſhment of Blood, either at Babylon, or any other place, except in the Land of Iſrael. In reality the Doctors imagine, that it would have been a Violation of the Law, and a Hardſhip upon them, for the Caliph to have oblig'd them to exerciſe this Right of Life and Death, ſince it is a ſtanding Maxim among them, that Death cannot be inflicted, nor a Sovereign Tribunal erected, ſave in the Holy Land: Juſtice is not exerciſed out of the Land, and there is no Judgment where there is no Prieſt.

David Kimki, deploring the Miſeries of his Nation foretold by the Prophet Hoſea, cries out, That he ſaw in his time the Accompliſhment of the Oracle, and thoſe days of Exile, in which there was neither Prince nor King of the Houſe of David; but on the contrary, they were ſubject to the Nations, and lived under their Obedience.

Laſtly, Abravanel obſerves, that Iſaiah ſpeaks of a new Misfortune that was to befal them, (viz.) That they ſhould have neither Kingdom, nor Sovereignty, nor judicial Sceptre, which is ſufficient to prove, that ſince the Conqueſt of Judea by the Romans, the Jews, deprived of Juriſdiction in their own Country, had no greater in the Eaſt. But to reſume the road of Benjamin ||.

XII. Leaving the Province of Bagdet, Benjamin paſſed through Reſen, where he found near five thouſand Jews, who perform'd their Devotions in a great Synagogue. He proceeded towards the ancient Babylon, where was Nebuchodonozor's Palace, grown the Habitation of Owls and Reptiles. But ſome Leagues from thence were a thouſand Jews, who ſaid their Prayers in the open Air, or in the Chamber which Daniel built for his Oratory. There was ſtill to be ſeen the Fiery Furnace, into which Nebuchodonozor caſt the three Hebrew Children. Hila is but five Miles from it, where there are four Synagogues and ten thouſand Jews. A little farther are diſcover'd the Foundations of the ancient Tower of Babel, built immediately after the Flood. Laſtly, You come to the Tomb of Ezekiel upon the Banks of the River Chobar; where there are ſixty Towers with a Synagogue in each of them. Near this place is another Edifice built by Jeconias when Evil-merodach gave him his Liberty. This Palace fronts Euphrates on one ſide, and has the Chobar on the other. Thirty five thouſand Jews were employ'd in this great Work for the Service of their Prince: His Picture was ſtill ſeen in the Roof, and thoſe of all the Officers who accompanied him, and Ezekiel brings up the rear. This Prophet's Tomb, which was preſerv'd, drew People from all parts. The Heads of the Captivity viſited it every Year with a numerous Train. 'Twas a Place of Devotion not only for the Jews but for the Perſians, the Medes and abundance of Muſſulmans, who came to bring their Preſents, and pay their Vows to the Synagogue. They reverence it as a ſacred thing, and therefore the Armies, whether vanquiſh'd or victorious, never touch it. A Lamp burnt night and day upon this Tomb, and the Head of the Captivity and of the Counſels of Bagdet furniſh'd Oil. There is a rich Library, and all that die Childleſs, augment it by ſending their Books. Here was alſo ſeen the Original of Ezekiel's Prophecies written by his own Hand.

XIII. The Hiſtory of the Prophet * is ſo little known, that it is hard to diſcover what is true from what is falſe in this Relation. He had his Viſions upon the Banks of the River Chobar, and a pretty ancient Author affirms, that he was kill'd by the Governour of his Nation, being provoked with his Cenſure of him, and was buried in the ſame Cave with Abraham's Anceſtors. He adds, that the People came there in ſuch Swarms to pay their Devotion, that the Chaldeans fearing ſome Revolt, reſolved to fall upon them and maſſacre them. But the dead Prophet wrought a Miracle by dividing the Waters of Chobar, and ſupplying the People that had paſs'd it with Proviſions, leſt they ſhould periſh with Hunger. This Narrative is ſomewhat different from Benjamin's, for inſtead of the Devotion which Jeconias ought to have had for the Prophet, he finds that he was martyr'd by his own Nation, and by his Prince's order. Beſides, this lofty Building, raiſed by the ſame Jeconias upon this Prophet's Tomb, vaniſh'd, and dwindles into two Caves; and if there was no Palace, nor Library, when this Author (whoſe Work is confounded with that of Epiphanius) writ, it cannot be aſcribed to Jeconias, nor can they ſpeak of his Pictures, which the Air and Time would have worn out many hundred Years ago, nor of the Original of Ezekiel's Prophecies. An Author, who lived in Conſtantine's time, inſtead of burying Ezekiel on the Banks of Chobar, has placed his Tomb in Bethlehem among thoſe of Jeſſe, and David, and Salomon, but this is a falſe Account. 'Tis true then, that Ezekiel was buried upon the Banks of Chobar, and that the Jews have always had a great Veneration for his Tomb. They have even preſerv'd it to this day, there being ſtill fifteen Leagues from Bagdet, a place where Ezekiel is ſaid to be buried, whither the Remains of the Jewiſh Nation go in Pilgrimage.

XIV. Couſa had for ſome time been the Capital City of the Caliphs; but they had changed their Reſidence. However Benjamin † coming there, found near ſeven thouſand Jews, who had but one Synagogue: He imagin'd he alſo ſaw there the ſtately Tomb of Jeconias; but 'tis to be feared, that he took the Sepulchre of ſome Muſſulman Lord, for that of a Captive King, as it often happens at Rome, where they draw the Relicks of ſome Heathen Idolater from his Tomb, and recommend them to be worſhipped by the People for thoſe of a Saint. He paſs'd from thence to Thema, where the Rechabites lived, to whom he aſſigns the Sovereignty of a great and ſpacious Country. But we have ſufficiently confuted this Fiction.

XV. Egypt is one of the places where the Jews have ſubſiſted longeſt; they were numerous in the Twelfth Century, and Benjamin || paid them a Viſit. He computes thirty thouſand of them in one ſingle City upon the Frontiers of Ethiopia, which he calls Chuts. He ſaw two thouſand Jews, and two Synagogues at Miſraim, at preſent Grand Cairo. There was ſome Diviſion among thoſe who inhabited

|| Benjamin. Itin. p. 78, 80, &c. * Epiphan. de Viris Prophetar. t. 11. p. 241. † Benjam. p. 81, 82. || Ibid. p. 114, &c.

inhabited it. The occaſion was frivolous, for ſome who came from Judea, dividing each Section of the Law, finiſh the reading of it but once in three Years, whilſt the other ancient Inhabitants of Egypt read it all in one; as was done in Spain and other places. Here reſided the Head of all the Synagogues of the Country, who created the Doctors, and ſupported the Intereſt of the Nation with the Caliph.

Our Traveller was far from forgetting the Land of Goſhen, where the Iſraelites dwelt ſo long. He thought he could obſerve ſome Tracts of their ancient Buildings; many Jews were retir'd thither; two hundred were in one place, five hundred in another, and near three thouſand in the City of Goſhen; as many at Alexandria, and very few at Damiette.

XVI. This Author * ſays, that Aly the Son of Abitaleb, reign'd then in Egypt, whoſe Subjects were all Rebels, as having thrown off the Yoke of the Abaſſides. An ingenious Commentator had already obſerv'd, that there was then no Aly in Egypt; and according to his Calculation Alphez or Faiez, the Son of Hafer, reign'd at that time. He builds upon the Teſtimony of another Jewiſh Hiſtorian, who has given a Catalogue of all the Egyptian Caliphs from the Year 1116, to the Year 1177. The Liſt this Author gives is very exact, but the Commentator's Calculation is not ſo; he forgot that the Years of the Arabians, and their Heigra, are Lunary; and in granting that Alphez died in the Year 556 of the Heigra, he ſhould have made his Son ſucceed him in the Year 1160 of our Lord; and thus it was impoſſible he ſhould reign, when Benjamin came into Egypt. This Caliph was Adhed, with whom the Family was extinct. It's neceſſary therefore to explain this matter.

XVII. The Fathimites, who pretended to deſcend from Fathima, the Daughter of Mahomet, and Aly her Husband led Egypt into Rebellion, uſurp'd it from the Family of the Abaſſides, which reign'd at Bagdet, and founded a new Dynaſty. 'Twas properly in the Year 972 that Moſes entred Egypt, and that they abſolutely caſt off Allegiance to the Caliphs of Bagdet, but four of his Predeceſſors had already conquer'd Africa and Sardinia. They enjoy'd the Caliphſhip till the Year 567 of the Hegira, that is, till the Year 1171 of the Chriſtian Æra. Indeed, in the Reign of Adhed the Son of Alphez or Faiez, the Franks or the Cruſaders having ſeiz'd Grand Cairo, ſome Lords wrote to the Sultan Norandin, who was then Maſter of Syria, to ſend them Succours. He put Scirgouch, the beſt of his Generals, at the Head of fourſcore thouſand Horſe, and expell'd the Franks. This General dying two Months after this Defeat, Saladin his Nephew ſucceeded to his Poſt of prime Miniſter and General of the Army. He made uſe of this Authority to call a Synod of Muſſulman Doctors againſt Adhed the Caliph of Egypt. Theſe Doctors declaim'd againſt the Vices of the Aliades, and pronounced Adhed unfit to reign. Immediately † his Name was expung'd from the publick Prayers; for 'tis the Cuſtom to pray for the Emperor and his Succeſſor in the Friday's Devotions, and in the Khotbath, which is a kind of Homily, or Sermon, which the Iman makes to the People. The Muſſulman-Service was eſtabliſh'd after the Mode of the Abaſſides. Money was coin'd in the Name of Muſtadi, Caliph of Bagdet, who was of that Houſe. Adhed knew nothing of his Fall, becauſe he was ſeiz'd with a Diſtemper of which he died, before he could be inform'd of what was done againſt him. Abulpharages || adds to this Event many different Circumſtances, but which alter not what is eſſential to it. He owns that Faiez died in the Year 556 of the Hegira, and Adhed, his Son, in the Year 567, that is, in 1171.

XVIII. According to all theſe Hiſtorians, we cannot juſtifie Benjamin of Tudela; for if he came into Egypt in 1171, Aly did not then reign. Adhed was ſtill Caliph, at leaſt he muſt have been a Witneſs of the Revolution, which then happen'd in favour of the Houſe of the Abaſſides, and of the Caliph of Bagdet. If he came the Year following, his Error is ſtill more groſs, for then there was no Rebellion. The Egyptians were already return'd to the Obedience of their ancient Maſters, and the Families of the Aliades or Fathimites was extinct, in the Perſon of Adhed lately dead. This Ignorance is the more manifeſt, becauſe it was a hard thing not to know, at that time, the Hiſtory of the famous Saladine, who having conquer'd Egypt, made himſelf Maſter of Syria, won the Battle of Tiberias over the Chriſtians, and retook Jeruſalem. It ſtill grows more apparent, becauſe this Traveller makes Aly the Son of Abitaleb to reign in his time in Egypt. This Aly was Son-in-Law to Mahomet, and Husband to Fathima, and never reign'd in Egypt. His Deſcendants did not eſtabliſh themſelves there till the 362d Year of the Hegira, or Mahomet's flight, many Ages after his death.

This is not the only Fault to be cenſur'd in this Deſcription of Egypt, for Benjamin * places the Land of Goſhen, and a City of the ſame Name, pretty near to Alexandria; whereas the Scripture gives it another Situation. He finds thirty thouſand Jews in an unheard of City, which he calls Kouts. He is no more to be believ'd, when he affirms he ſaw Joſeph's Granaries at Miſraiim, Ariſtotle's Academy of a ſumptuous Structure at Alexandria, round which were twenty Schools, becauſe People came from all corners of the World to hear this Philoſopher; and yet Joſeph's Granaries were long ſince deſtroy'd; and Ariſtotle ſet up no Academy in Egypt, for it was at Athens in the Lycæum that a great Concourſe of Scholars appear'd, which render'd Greece ſo famous.

XIX. Moreover Benjamin does not mention Avi-Joſeph, a famous Rabbin of Alexandria, who wrote a Treatiſe concerning the Intelligences, which moved the Heavens, and the Judgment of the Stars. And yet he flouriſh'd in the Year 1150, and perhaps at the very time of Benjamin's Travels. Nor does he ſpeak of Maimonides, who lived at that time, and whoſe long ſtay at Cairo, gave him the Name of Moſes the Egyptian, yet there have been few Men more famous than he. He had alſo a mighty Intereſt in this Country, and contributed greatly to the Glory of his Nation, which had loſt much of its ancient Luſtre; for whereas formerly near a hundred thouſand Jews were reckon'd in the City of Alexandria, there was in the Twelfth Century but a very ſmall number diſpers'd in the Provinces of Egypt.

§. A Continuation of Benjamin's Travels.

XX. It is time to come into Judea. The Author went to Tyre, where he found four hundred Perſons of his Nation, moſt whereof were Glaſs-makers; this was a gainful Trade, becauſe the Tyrian Glaſs was then in great vogue, and tranſported far and near by the Sea-fairing Jews. However there were ſome that were learned, particularly in the Talmud, and an Egyptian call'd R. Ephraim was the moſt Eminent.

The Samaritans had abandon'd their Capital City, but there were two hundred at Ceſarea, and a hundred at Sichem, which they made the See of their Religion. They had Priests descended of Aaron's Family, who never match'd into other Families, that they might more certainly preserve the Succession of the Priesthood. They offer Sacrifices upon Mount Gerizim in all their Solemn Feasts, and affirm, that their Altar was built with the Stones the Tribes plac'd in the Jordan, when they pass'd this River under Joshua's Conduct. They are very Superstitious about Washings, and the choice of their Cloaths: They religiously preserve those which they wear to the Synagogue, and never put them on on other days. The Author pretends, that they are distinguish'd from the rest of the Israelites, by their wanting three Letters in their Alphabet, and in the Names of Abraham, Isaac * and Jacob. But Scaliger affirms, that it is a Calumny; that the Samaritan Alphabet is as compleat as that of the Jews, and that he had seen the Names of the Patriarchs written with all their Characters. Indeed, it can't be conjectur'd for what reason they should leave out these three Letters; and 'tis a very poor Advantage, which the Jews, who hate them, endeavour to have over 'em.

* Benjam. p. 115. † Bibl. Orient. p. 342. || Abulphar. Dynaſt. 9. p. 262 & 266. * Benjam. p. 121.

XXI. 'Tis an astonishing thing, that Jerusalem, where God had put his Temple and Name, and which the Jews ought to consider as his Habitation, is almost entirely abandon'd by that Nation. Our Author found not above two hundred Persons, who were for the most part Diers of Wool, and who every Year purchas'd the Privilege of the Monopoly of that Trade. They liv'd all together under David's Tower, and made there a very little Figure. The Wonder increases, when we consider, what remains of Superstition they have for that Sacred City; for, upon a wrong Notion, that there was one of the Walls of the most Holy Place remaining, they went to make their Prayers before that Wall, as if the Place was more Holy than another.

Benjamin, and the Jews guilty of this Superstition, are ignorant of their own History, and that of the Romans, who made War with them; for they might have learn'd, that there was nothing remaining of that ancient Wall of the Temple, since it was raz'd to the Foundations. The Author is mistaken, when he fancy'd, that he saw the Canal, near which they kill'd the Sacrifices; 'twas another ridiculous Superstition to go and write his Name there: He also impos'd upon himself, in thinking, that he observ'd the Stables of Solomon, and affirming, that the Universe had not a Building like 'em. David's Tomb, found fifteen Years before this Voyage upon Mount Sion, is another Chimera: They tell, that the Workmen upon this Mountain, cunningly separating from their Comrades, discover'd a Palace supported with Pillars, cover'd with Gold and Silver; they saw a Sceptre and Crown of gold, which was that of David; on the left hand was Solomon's Tomb: They had a great desire to enter into it, but a furious Wind laid the Workmen upon the Ground, at the Gate of this Palace. The Patriarch of Jerusalem consulted a Pharisee, nam'd Abraham, who inform'd him, that these were the Tombs of the Kings of Judah; as if the Patriarch could not have imagin'd it as well as a Pharisee, who is brought into the Story, only to give it a little more probability; because Benjamin pretends to have had it from his own Mouth. The greatest Wonder is, that the Patriarch, instead of taking the Treasure from the Tomb, order'd it to be walled up; because the two Workmen who had discover'd it, fell sick, which induc'd him to believe, that God was not willing, that any one shou'd move the Ashes of these Kings, nor enrich himself with their Spoils. But this is evidently false; for the Tomb of the Kings of Juda were discover'd long before, and Treasures so often drawn from it, that it was in vain to search after them in the twelfth Century. It is not even probable, that the Romans, who had min'd every where when they took Jerusalem, to get out those who were hid in these Subterranean Vaults, should have been ignorant of the place of the Kings Tombs; and that the Soldiers knowing it, should have been so Superstitious, as not to enrich themselves with the Spoils of a Jewish King, who was dead long before: Nor do we see, how such a Scruple could be fastned upon the Patriarch of Jerusalem; and therefore Benjamin is oblig'd to introduce a Miracle.

XXII. If Jerusalem had so few Jews in it, the rest of the Holy Land was still more depopulate. Benjamin found two of them in one City, twenty in another, most whereof were Diers. He says, that Schunem was one of the Cities that had the greatest number, wherein he reckon'd three hundred: But he seems not to have known its Situation; for he places it in the Neighbourhood of Jerusalem, tho' it was very far from it, near the Mountain Gilboa and Kison. There was no need of going into this City, to be acquainted with it; for from hence it was the fair Shunemite was taken, and given to David to revive him in his old Age. Here it was Elisha found that charitable Woman, who lodg'd him, and whose Charity was so happily recompenc'd, by the Preservation of all her Estate, which had been confiscated to the Princes Demesnes. This first Fault of Benjamin draws another after it; for he places Shilo and Ramah near Shunem, tho' these two Cities are remote from it. These Faults of the Traveller, proceeded, no doubt, from his not marking upon the Spot, the Situation of the Cities where he was; and that trusting to his Memory, and composing his Relation perhaps at his leisure, after his Return, was often deceiv'd by it. However, we are oblig'd to criticise all these things, for the Information of the Readers, who might be misled by his Authority.

XXIII. Ascalon, built some Leagues from that whereof the Holy Scripture often speaks, and which belong'd to the Philistines, contain'd five hundred and fifty three Persons; the greatest number was made up of Samaritans, the least of the Caraites who rejected Traditions, and the rest were Rabbanists.

XXIV. 'Twas in Upper Galilee, that the Nation was in greatest Repute, after the Ruin of Jerusalem. The Scripture calls it, Galilee of the Gentiles; and 'tis a pretty common Error to believe, that this Name was given it, because the Gentiles there, were confounded with the Jews. For could this Province have been the Theatre of our Saviour's Miracles, and have been preferr'd before the rest, for the Preaching of the Gospel, if it had been full of Idolaters, when he would hardly suffer his Disciples to go to Samaria; and who knew that the Hour appointed for the calling of the Gentiles was not yet come? 'Tis still a more manifest mistake, to think it had this Name from its beginning very populous, and that the Word Gentiles signifies, the multitude of its Inhabitants. But it was in the Neighbourhood of the Gentiles; they border'd upon it, and it lay in the way from Judea to their Territories. Thus there was at Jerusalem a Gate of Ephraim, which you was to pass thro' to go to that Tribe. 'Twas into Galilee that the Jews retir'd, after the Destruction of the Holy City. The Academy of Tiberias grew Famous by the Doctors that profeſs'd there, and there the Jeruſalem Talmud was compos'd: Tho' it was much decay'd from its Luſtre in the fourth Century, yet St. Jerome procured an ingenious Man from thence, with whom he worked upon the Tranſlation of the Chronicles. A great many other Changes happened in it from that time to the twelfth Century, for Benjamin found hardly any Jews in Galilee of the Gentiles. He ſaw at Tiberias but fifty Perſons of his Nation, a Synagogue, and ſome ancient Tombs. In fine, he only celebrates it for its excellent Waters and hot Baths. 'Tis ſaid, that the Well, which opened at the Prayer of Miriam, the Siſter of Moſes, in the Deſart, ſhut up when ſhe died, and was miraculouſly conveyed to Tiberias. The Waters of this Well ſtop every Saturday; but the moment that the Sabbath is ended they renew their Courſe, and run and mingle themſelves with the Rivulets, that flow naturally in this place; and thoſe that have the good Fortune to draw the Water in the moment of the mixture, reap ſurprizing Advantages from it, ſince it cures Ulcers, and many Diſtempers: 'Tis certain, the Hot Baths of Tiberias are very wholſom. It may be ſeen in another place, what we have ſaid of the Jews Superſtition for theſe Waters on the Sabbath-day.

* צחה.

by

XXV. Aben-Ezra gives a different Account of Tiberias than Benjamin de Tudela: For having travell'd there twenty five, or thirty Years after him, he ſays, that he conſulted the Doctors that were in it. So conſiderable a Change could not have happen'd to this City in ſo little a time, to reſtore an Academy, and get Doctors together; and it is not probable, that Benjamin, who on all occaſions does ſo much Honour to his Nation, deſign'd to leſſen the Luſtre of Tiberias.

Theſe two Travellers may be reconcil'd, by obſerving, that there was a Synagogue, and by conſequence, ſome Rabbins who manag'd it; and theſe perhaps were the Doctors Aben-Ezra conſulted in his Travels. This City having loſt its Walls, continu'd a long time expos'd to the perpetual Excurſions of the Arabians, who often pillag'd it; till Solyman wall'd it in. This Advantage made it more Populous. The Author of a Letter, entitl'd, the Genealogies of the Righteous of the Land of Iſrael; and who is pretty modern, ſays, There were in his time two kinds of Academies, ſituate without the Gates of Tiberias, one ſmall, and the other very mean. In effect, Rabbi Juda Zona, who from a Jew turn'd Chriſtian, and dy'd at Rome in the middle of the laſt Century, perform'd his Studies in one of the Academies of Tiberias. There was another much more famous Academy at Sapheta; but Benjamin does not mention it, which makes it reaſonable to believe, it was not yet erected.

XXVI. Benjamin paſs'd thro' Greece, and found Mount Parnaſſus (which had been ſo long the Manſion of Apollo and the Muſes) inhabited by two hundred Jews; who cultivated it, and ſow'd Pulſe upon it. They had ſome Rabbies, over them, who are rarely Poets; and I queſtion whether their living upon that Mountain ever inſpir'd them with a deſire to Verſifie. Poverty drove them thence, or perhaps they were guilty of ſome Sedition upon this Sacred Place, which prevents their living upon it; for they dare not at preſent ſettle themſelves, but at ſome Leagues diſtance from it.

XXVII. There were three hundred Jews at Corinth. Thebes, ſo well known in Antiquity, but infinitely decay'd in the twelfth Century, fed two thouſand Jews, Silk-workers and Diers. The Rabbins there were ſo learned, that none but thoſe of Conſtantinople, came up to them. I queſtion, however, whether this be true; for we ſhall produce in the Weſt abundance of Learned Men, of greater Merit than thoſe of Thebes, who are little known by their Works. Two of the moſt Ingenious were Samaritans; but 'tis a queſtion, whether they had not renounc'd their Schiſm and Opinion, to engage in the Study of Traditions, ſince they taught the Rabbaniſts. As deſolate as the City of Thebes then was, yet it was more deſolate afterwards: It has at preſent but four thouſand Chriſtians and Muſſulmans in its Precincts; and the Jews have diſappear'd long ago. There were ſome at Patras, at Lepanto, and in moſt of the Cities of the Empire, but their number was inconſiderable, there being reckon'd but fifty in one, and twenty in another.

XXVIII. Benjamin leaving * Greece, arriv'd at Ægriphon, a great City, ſituate on the Sea-Coaſt, where Merchants rendezvous'd from all Parts of the World, and wherein were two hundred Jews. 'Tis ſuppos'd, this was the ancient Chalcis, in the Neighbourhood of Negrepont. From thence he went to Fabaſteriſa, another ſtately City, containing a hundred Jews: There were as many at Robenica, which is but a days Journey remote from it, and about a half from the River of Dogs, Cunopotamus; thro' which he entred into Valachia, in his way to Conſtantinople. We can't well underſtand this Road; for Valachia does not border upon Greece, nor is in the Road to Conſtantinople. But he has not perhaps related his Travels as he made them, and he would not loſe the opportunity of ſpeaking of a Place, whoſe Inhabitants ſeem'd ſo many Jews; becauſe they took the like Names, and had more Humanity for this Nation, than the reſt; for theſe Barbarians unmercifully kill'd the Greeks, but only rob'd the Jews that fell into their hands. This is not the only difficulty; for the Cities of Jabaſteriſa and Robenicas are unknown: Nor was Seleucia in the Neighbourhood of Conſtantinople; if there was in his time a City of this Name, he is to blame to confound it with that built by Seleucus, Alexander's Succeſſor; and he ought to ſeek it a great way farther off in Aſia. However, the Jews liv'd quietly at Seleucia, under the Dominion of Manuel Commenes, who allow'd them a Head of their Nation, depending immediately upon him; which was the thing that drew a great many Perſons to this Place; but they were only Labourers and Artiſts, who ſhelter'd themſelves under the Shadow of this Authority. Laſtly, Benjamin arriv'd at Conſtantinople. This City is too well known to talk of his Deſcription of it, and of the Palaces, which had no need of Torches and Lights, becauſe the Luſtre of the precious Stones, wherewith certain Apartments were adorn'd, was ſufficient to illuminate them. Inſtead of confuting ſuch like Stories, we muſt inſiſt only upon what he ſays of his Nation. He obſerves, that there were there about two thouſand Jews, Silk-Weavers and Merchants. Beſides this, there were five hundred Caraites, who liv'd peaceably with the other Jews; but however, were ſeparated from them by a Wall, to prevent their Communication. They were all plac'd in the Suburbs of Galata, or Pera, upon the Banks of the Streights; which Habitation had been long ago aſſigned them by Theodoſias; for which reaſon, theſe Suburbs were called by the Frenchmen, Jury. They had thitherto preſerved † the Privilege of depending only upon the Governour of the Suburbs; but Manuel deprived them of this Privilege, and ſubmitted them to the common Judges. Tis even probable, that this Prince had already done it, when Benjamin came there; ſince he repreſents his Nation as very odious in his Reign, tho' his Phyſician, who was a Jew, did all he cou'd to protect them. It was not only unlawful for 'em to ride on Horſeback into the City; but the Greeks would riſe in Crouds to uſe them ill, and beat them when they were there: They broke open their Doors; they defil'd their Waters; they pelted 'em with Mire and Dirt; which makes him ſay, that they were under a moſt ſcandalous and ſevere Slavery: Yet they have continu'd there ever ſince that time.

* Benjam. p. 19, 20, 22. † An. 1171.

already

XXIX. Benjamin paſs'd into Italy: He obſerv'd, that at that time, the Genoeſe enrich'd themſelves by the Pirates they ſent to Sea. The Burghers being divided one againſt another, had almoſt all of them Towers in their Houſes, from whence they made War: They reckon'd ten thouſand of theſe Towers in Piſa, deſign'd for the ſame uſe. Theſe two Cities had but very few Jews in them. He came to Rome, which he repreſents as the Capital of the Edomites, and the Pope, as the Head of their Religion, whom he makes a great Prince. We ſhall not relate all he ſays of this City, which is ſo well known: His Relation is mingl'd with ſo many Fables, that we can't tell how to copy them; let us only obſerve, that there were a great many learned Rabbies that did Honour to their Nation, and that R. Jehiel was Intendant of the Pope's Finances.

XXX. There were Jews alſo at Capua, * where reſided the Prince of the Nation. There were Doctors wiſe and famous over all the Univerſe; and yet there were but three hundred Inhabitants of this Nation. 'Tis a wonder, there ſhould be a Prince to ſuch a handful of Jews at Capua; for it does not appear, that the reſt of Italy acknowledg'd him for their Head; and tho' he ſhould have rul'd over all that part of the Nation diſpers'd there, his Empire would not have been very large. We may learn from hence, that we muſt not be dazzled, when we find in theſe Gentlemens Writings the faſtuous Titles of Prince and Ruler, Throne and Empire. Benjamin is miſtaken in making Capua to be built by King Capys: For beſides that the Origin of this ancient City is uncertain, we muſt know, that that which bears the Name at preſent, was built by the Lombards, upon the Banks of Vulturnus, at ſome diſtance from the other.

XXXI. He gives a much more Fabulous Origin to the City of Puzzuolo, and has committed three or four Faults in ſpeaking of this City and its Neighbourhood; for he confounds it with Safrento, as if theſe two Cities made but one before. He pretends, that Puzzuolo was built by Hadar Ezer, who fled before David. This Prince of Tzoba was beaten by the King of Iſrael: But 'tis making him fly like Lightning, to ſend him from Syria and the Banks of Euphrates, into Italy, to ſeek a Retreat, and to build a City. Laſtly, proceeding from one Blunder to another, he aſſerts, That it was Romulus that made the Subterranean way beyond Puzzuolo, when this Founder of ancient Rome was apprehenſive of David and Joab's Purſuit of him. Could Romulus be afraid of David, who was dead 300 Years before; and make him a Sanctuary againſt Joab's Army, who not only was not in being, but had carry'd his Arms into Italy? He ariv'd at Naples, where he found five hundred Inhabitants of his Nation: There were a hundred more of them at Salerno; amongſt whom the Prieſt Solomon, the Greek Elias, and the R. Abraham of Narbonne, were of the greateſt eminence. There were Jews alſo at Malfi, Benevento, Aſcoli, and Trani, in the Kingdom of Naples; which is the Rendezvous of thoſe who embark for the Pilgrimage of Jeruſalem. He only found one at Corfu; but the number was greater in Sicily: He reckon'd two hundred at Meſſina, five hundred at Palermo; and in all theſe Places they paid no Tribute.

XXXII. Benjamin alſo run thro' Germany; where the Jews were diſpers'd in all the great Cities: He found them Civil, and Obliging, and Zealous for their Religion: They receiv'd Strangers, and invited them to drink with them; they rais'd themſelves to a pitch of Mirth at their Tables, as hoping their Deliverance would come in the twinkling of an eye. They believ'd, that their Miſtruſts and Sollicitudes about the delay of it, ſerv'd only to retard it. Laſtly, they exhorted one another to remain conſtant to the Law, to weep over the Ruin of Sion, and to wait patiently till the voice of the Turtle ſhould recal them. They mean, by this Expreſſion taken from the Canticles, that God ſhall call them to appear at Jeruſalem, but thoſe who are unconcern'd for the re-eſtabliſhment of the People, ſhall never ſee the Deliverance, nor riſe again with Iſrael. He penetrated into Bohemia, which was call'd the new Canaan, becauſe its Inhabitants ſold their Children to all the Neighbouring Nations.

XXXIII. Laſtly, This Traveller viſited the Synagogues of France; of which we muſt alſo give an Account in few words. He entred this Kingdom by way of Barcelona; which he repreſents as a little City, where yet Greek and Egyptian Merchants met for Traffick. The number of the Jews was inconſiderable here, as well as at Gironne; but there were three hundred at Narbonne; at the Head of which was the Rabbi Calonymus, deſcended in a right line from David; Rich and Potent, eſpecially in Lands, which had been given him by the Lords of the Country, in recompence for the Services he and his Anceſtors had done. This City was look'd upon as the Centre of the Nation and the Law.

Montpelier was then full of Mahometans, Greeks, Chriſtians and Jews; which ſhews, that this City had at that time a great Commerce with the remoteſt People. In the Neighbourhood was Lunel, where the Holy Aſſembly ſtudy'd the Law Day and Night. Meſchullum, the Preſident of it, had five Sons, all of good Abilities; and one of them profoundly vers'd in the Study of the Talmud, faſted often. The Strangers, who came to ſtudy there, were maintain'd. Beaucayre had alſo its Profeſſors; one of which, call'd Abraham, diſburs'd out of his own Pocket, all that was neceſſary to maintain ſix poor Scholars, for fear that Poverty ſhould diſturb their Application. Laſtly, there were in the twelfth Century Synagogues at Arles, Marſelles, and not only in Cities, but even in Burroughs. The Author † concludes with Paris, where Lewis reign'd. There was alſo an Aſſembly much addicted to the Law, and abounding in Charity, for it receiv'd all the Jews that came there, as ſo many Brothers.

XXXIV. There is no need of enlarging in reflections upon theſe Travels, which perhaps are already grown too long. We will only obſerve, that the Jews were very low in the Eaſt, in the twelfth Century; that they had not been able to reſtore themſelves, ſince the Miſery that befel 'em above a hundred Years before: For they were found only in a ſmall number, upon the Banks of Euphrates, and in the ancient Cities; where ſometimes there were reckon'd nine hundred thouſand. The Cruſaders did not ſuffer them to ſettle again in Judea. Thus they were miſerable in all the places where they had appear'd with greater Luſtre,

* Benjam. p. 14. † P. 130.

and

and particularly in the Holy Land. 'Tis true, they were at the ſame time ſcatter'd over all the Weſt, but they were not numerous in each City. Thoſe who dwelt upon the Banks of the Rhine, were uneaſie at that time, that the Meſſiah did not appear, and Benjamin gives us ſufficiently to underſtand, that he was not able to comfort them upon that Article, by all that he had related to them, concerning the State of their Nation in the Eaſt. The Uneaſineſs and Sollicitudes muſt have been much more greater ſince that time: The Delays are long enough to deprive them of all hope, and to conquer the Incredulity of the hardeſt Hearts. But the time of their Vocation is not yet arriv'd; and God is pleaſed to let us ſee, that nothing but his Grace alone can conquer the Infatuation of the Mind: It reſiſts and repels the livelieſt Notices, till God is pleaſed to touch it. The Jews had then abundance of Doctors, who by ſtudying the Scripture, and the meaning of the Divine Oracles, might eaſily diſcover that the Meſſiah was come long before. But on the contrary, this long Succeſſion of the Learned, ſerved only to ſtrengthen the People in their Error, as we ſhall ſee in the Sequel.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the great Men that flouriſh'd among the Jews in the Twelfth Century.

I. An account of the Learned Rabbins. II. The Elogy of thoſe of the Twelfth Century. III. Aben-Ezra, in what time he lived. IV. His Character. V. The Controverſie about Traditions diſcuſs'd under Alphonſo. VI. Abraham Hallevy, whether he was hang'd. Three learned Men of that Name. VII. Maimonides his Fidelity to his Maſter. VIII. His Flight and Intereſt in Egypt. IX. His Skill in Phyſick. X. His Academy. A Miracle of his dead Body. XI. His Works. XII. The Diviſion they cauſed. The Judgment that ought to be made of them. XIII. The Schiſm between the Synagogues of Spain and France. XIV. Moſes Kimki was a Spaniard. XV. David Kimki his Son. XVI. Salomon Jarki was not of Lunel. An Academy in this place. XVII. His Knowledge and his Works. XVIII. Jacob of Orleans; an Abbreviation of the Rabbins Names, Examples. XIX. Rabbins famous in all Sciences. XX. The Daughter of the Prince of the Captivity in the Eaſt, very learned. XXI. Jews Generals of the Army. XXII. Aſmouil turns Muſſulman; writes againſt his Nation.

I. THE Twelfth Century was very fruitful in able Doctors: Perhaps no body will care to ſee their Catalogue, becauſe thoſe who are reckon'd Oracles in the Synagogues, often appear but very ſlender Genius's to ſuch as read them without Prejudice. The Chriſtians require too much of the Rabbins, and the Rabbins perform too little for the Chriſtians. Theſe ſeldom read Books compoſed by a Jew, without being prepoſſeſs'd in his behalf; They imagine that they muſt needs find in him, an exact Knowledge of the ancient Ceremonies and obſcure Events; in a word, that he will bring the Solution of all the Difficulties of Scripture. But why all this? becauſe a Man is a Jew, does it follow that he knows the Hiſtory of his Nation better than the Chriſtians, when there are no other aſſiſtances than the Bible, and the Hiſtory of Joſephus, which the Jews hardly ever read? To imagine that this Nation has certain concealed Books, which do not come to our notice, and that theſe Gentlemen have read them, is to deceive ones ſelf, for they quote no Monument that is ancienter than Chriſtianity. To ſuppoſe their Tradition is more faithfully preſerved among them, is to feed our ſelves with Fancies: For how was that Tradition likely to be convey'd from Place to Place, and from Mouth to Mouth, for ſo many Ages and frequent Diſperſions? We need only read a Rabbin, to know his violent Fondneſs for his Nation, and how he diſguiſes Matters of Fact, to accommodate them to his Prejudices. On the other hand the Rabbins give us much leſs than they might do; they have too great Advantages over us, for being Maſters of the Sacred Language from their Birth, they might be able to furniſh us with Notices for the Explication of the obſcure Terms of Scripture; and as they are oblig'd to practice certain Ceremonies of the Law, they might thereby teach us the meaning of the ancient ones. They do it ſometimes; but often inſtead of ſearching for the literal Senſe of the Scriptures, they hunt after myſtical Meanings, which make us loſe the ſight of the drift of the Writer, and the Intention of the Holy Ghoſt. Beſides they fall into an exceſſive Particularization of Ceremonies, for the ſake of which they have buried the Spirit of the Law.

II. Were we to make a choice out of theſe Doctors, thoſe of the Twelfth Century ought to be preferr'd before the reſt; for they were not only ingenious, but have furniſh'd us with great helps for the underſtanding of the Old Teſtament. In this number may be reckon'd Nathan, Head of the Academy at Rome in the beginning of the Twelfth Century, who * has explain'd all the Terms of the Talmud, and ſo exhauſted the Subject, that thoſe who came after him, were oblig'd to be his Plagiaries; even the great Buxtorf is blam'd for not quoting him often, though he made great uſe of his Obſervations. There is a Diſpute about the Name of his Family, and the time he lived in; but 'tis almoſt certain that he died at Rome in the Year 1106.

The Hiſtory of the Nation being for the moſt part connected with that of theſe learned Men, 'tis neceſſary to make them known: We ſhall not here produce barren Names, the knowledge whereof is inſignificant, but ſhall confine our ſelves to Perſons and Facts that deſerve our notice.

III. Aben-Ezra † is call'd the Wiſe by way of Excellency: Genebrard, who makes him live in the Year 1240, is palpably miſtaken. Neither do I ſee, that the Hebrew Chronologers and Bartolocci, who follow'd them, do notifie the time of his Life with ſufficient Exactneſs; for they bring him into the World in the Year 1070 or ten Years later. Whereas he died in the Year 1174, being Seventy five Years old. He intimates as much himſelf, when foreſeeing his Death, he ſaid, That as Abraham left Charan, being 75 Years of Age, he alſo at the ſame time departed from Charon, or from the Fire of the Anger of the Age. He changed but one Letter in the word Charran to make this ‖ Alluſion. He muſt therefore have been born in the Year 1099. He travelled, as believing that was neceſſary to be a great Proficient in Learning: He died at Rhodes, and order'd his Bones to be carried into the Holy Land.

* His Books are call'd Aarùch. † Ganz Tſemach David, p. 132 & 138. ‖ Inſtead of reading Mecharan from Charran, he read Mecharon from the Fire of the Anger, and added the word Hagnolam, the Anger of the Age.

IV. This was one of the greateſt Men of his Age and Nation; as he was a good Aſtronomer, he made ſuch happy Diſcoveries in that Science, that the ableſt Mathematicians made no ſcruple to eſpouſe them. He excell'd in Phyſick: But he eſpecially diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by his Explications of Scripture. Inſtead of following the vulgar Method of his Predeceſſors, he ſtuck to the Grammatical and Literal Senſe of Holy Writ, which he explain'd with ſo much Penetration and Judgment, that the Chriſtians themſelves prefer him to moſt of their Interpreters: He led the way to our Modern Criticks, who affirm that the People of Iſrael did not paſs through the Red Sea, but made a Circuit at low Water, that Pharaoh might follow them and be drowned; but this is not one of his beſt Conjectures. He durſt not abſolutely reject the Cabbala, tho' he knew its Weakneſs, becauſe he was afraid of embroiling himſelf with the Authors of his time * who were very fond of it, and even with the People, who look'd upon the Book of Zohar, ſtuff'd with theſe ſorts of Explications as an excellent Work: He only declar'd, that that Method of interpreting Scripture was not certain, and that if we reſpected the Cabbala of the Ancients, yet we ought not to add new Explications to them, nor proſtitute the Scripture to the Caprices of Humane Wit.

V. Notwithſtanding all his Caution and Reſerve, he could not forbear embarking deeply in the Queſtion of Traditions, which was diſcuſs'd with a great deal of Heat, in the Reign of Alphonſo ſurnamed the Fighter, becauſe he had been preſent at fifty Battles. Aben-Ezra calls thoſe Sadduces, who then impugn'd the uſe of Traditions, but 'tis believed they were the Karaites which he confounded with theſe ancient Hereticks, becauſe they had the ſame Opinion upon this Controverſie. Aben-Ezra did not run the length of the Traditioniſts Exceſs, but he upbraided the Karaites with rejecting them, deſpiſing Authority, and allowing too much to Reaſon like the Chriſtians. Theſe words have drawn a Cenſure upon him, for one ſays †, that he did not underſtand the Karaites Opinion, who only rejected falſe Traditions, whilſt they follow'd the true; and that this Rabbin inſinuated, that Chriſt ought not to have innovated in Point of Religion, but was oblig'd to follow the Tradition of the preceding Fathers.

The Queſtion, then in debate, is changed; for when a Man ſays, that the Karaites rejected falſe Traditions, and embraced the true, he touches not the head of the Difficulty: For no body is ſo fooliſh, as to reject what he believes to be true, and to believe what is evidently falſe. But the Diſpute turned upon three things, 1. The Karaites would have no new Precepts added to the written Law, vented under the Title of the Oral Law, and Traditions which Moſes had confided to the Doctors, as the Proteſtants would have no certain Worſhips and new Laws tack'd to the Goſpel, upon Pretence that the Apoſtles had deliver'd them to their Favourites by word of Mouth, without daring to write them. 2. From this firſt Principle aroſe another; for Aben-Ezra and his Party objected to their Adverſaries the Authority of the Fathers, by the Succeſſion and Mouths of whom Tradition was handed down; and 'twas doubtleſs to defend this Principle with greater ſucceſs, that Abraham Hallevy Ben Dior, a Doctor at Peſcara, compos'd at that time the Book of the Cabbala, in which he inſerted the Names of all the Doctors, who had receiv'd Tradition and preſerv'd it thitherto, which many others in imitation of him || have continued. This ſecond Principle drawn from the Succeſſion of Perſons, and the Authority of the Fathers, was oppos'd. And for this reaſon Aben-Ezra charg'd the Karaites with the Contempt of Authority. The Proteſtants meet with the ſame Reproach, when they refuſe to ſubmit to the Authority of the Fathers. 3. As the Principles of the Karaites hung well together, they ſaid that a Man's own Reaſon ought to be conſulted for the underſtanding of the Scripture, inſtead of blindly following that of others; and Aben-Ezra, upon the account of this third Principle, taxes them with giving too much to Reaſon. The Fault of this Doctor then conſiſted not in imputing to the Karaites ſome Opinions which they had not; but in oppoſing juſt and reaſonable Opinions. Mr. Simon, who would not have the Karaites to be like the Proteſtants, is oblig'd to change their Principles, and at the ſame time he breaks their Chain and Connexion; whereas we repreſent this Controverſie in its natural State. There were doubtleſs, at that time, Chriſtians that reaſoned like the Karaites. They muſt eſpecially have rejected the Succeſſion of Perſons, when they diſputed with the Jews, who ſhewed them a Chain of Doctors which had never been interrupted: It was, particularly, the Principle of the firſt Chriſtians, who would not have Religion depend upon the Succeſſion of Perſons, and the Tradition of Doctors.

VI. Aben-Ezra was not the only Perſon who maintain'd this Controverſie. Abraham Hallevy before mention'd, was one of the moſt zealous Rabbaniſts. There were three learned Men of this Name at that time. Judas Hallevy, a Native of Cologne, who after many Conferences with Rupert, embraced Chriſtianity, and taught Latin a long time in his Country, under the Name of Herman. Another Judas Hallevy, a good Poet, who compoſed the Dialogue with the King of Cozar, whom ſome make the Father-in-Law, others the Coſin-german of Aben-Ezra. Laſtly, Abraham Hallevy * put himſelf at the Head of the Rabbaniſt and Traditioniſt Party, and maintain'd it with greater Heat and Cunning, than Ingenuity: For perceiving himſelf unable to anſwer the Reaſons of the Karaites, he employ'd the Credit he had with Alphonſo VII. the Fighter, to whom he had done great Services, and asked for all his Recompence, that Silence might be impoſed upon his Adverſaries, which he eaſily obtain'd; and the Controverſie ended by the Sovereign's Injunction.

I don't know whether Hallevy exhauſted his Intereſt with the King by this Requeſt, but † an Hiſtorian of his Nation affirms, that Alphonſo being provok'd againſt him, threaten'd to hang him unleſs he turn'd Chriſtian, and that perſevering in his Religion, he was hanged. Bartolocci || ſays that this Fact is falſe, perhaps out of Indignation, that a zealous Hero for Traditions, and whom he had highly characteriz'd, ſhould be hang'd. But the Argument he alledges againſt this Event is weak, for he maintains, that the King of Spain never forced

* Skinner's Letters. Uſher's Lett. 105. An. 1625. † Simon Crit. of the Old Teſtament. || Hallevy Ben Dior made the Book, or Sepher Hakkabala, which began at Adam. Ghedalia made the Chain of the Cabbala. Schalſchelet Hakkabala. Abraham Zacuth wrote the Juchaſin, or the Treatiſe of Families. David Ganz publiſh'd the Tſemach David, the Branch or Poſterity of David, which contains alſo the Rabbins Names. * He was born in the Year 1090, and died in the Year 1140. † Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 7. || Bartol. B. R. t. 1. p. 21.

forced the Jews to turn Chriſtians, with the Menaces of capital Puniſhment, which was ordain'd only againſt relaps'd. But without examining the Matter, Alphonſo might have arreſted Hallevy for ſome particular Crime, and refuſed afterwards to give him his Life, unleſs he abjured his Religion. At leaſt we ought not to deny, what an Hiſtorian advances only upon ſo general a Proof.

VII. Maimonides * appear'd in the ſame Century. Scaliger aſſerted, that he was the firſt of the Jewiſh Doctors, that left off playing the Fool like Diodorus among the Greeks. And indeed he found a great deal of Folly in the Study of the Gemara. He regretted that mis-ſpent time, and applying himſelf to more ſolid Studies, had dwelt much upon the Scripture. He underſtood Greek, had read the Philoſopers, and particularly Ariſtotle, whom he often quotes. He occaſion'd ſuch violent Commotions in the Synagogues, that thoſe of France and Spain excommunicated one another on his account. He was born at Corduba in the Year 1131. He boaſted of his deſcent from the Houſe of David, as did moſt of the Spaniſh Jews. Maimon, his Father, and Judge of his Nation in Spain, reckon'd a long Train of Perſons among his Anceſtors, who had ſucceſſively enjoy'd this Poſt. 'Tis ſaid he was admoniſh'd in a Dream, to break his Reſolution of a ſingle Life, and to marry a Butcher's Daughter who was his Neighbour. Maimon feign'd perhaps a Dream, to cover a ſcandalous Love Intrigue, and introduced a Miracle to colour his Infirmity. The Mother died in Child-bed with Moſes, and Maimon married again. I do not know whether the ſecond Wife, who had many Children, hated young Moſes, or whether he had in his Youth, a cloudy and heavy Genius, as is ſaid. But his Father upbraided him with his Birth, beat him often, and at laſt turned him out of doors. 'Tis ſaid, that finding no other Lodging than the Covert of a Synagogue, he ſpent the Night in it, and when he wak'd, found himſelf a Man of Senſe, quite different from what he was before. He put himſelf under the Diſcipline of Joſeph the Levite, the Son of Megas, where he made great Progreſs in a little time. He had a deſire of ſeeing his Country again; but when he returned to Corduba, inſtead of entering his Father's Houſe, he taught publickly in the Synagogue, to the great Aſtoniſhment of the Hearers: His Father, who own'd him, went and embraced him, and took him home. Some Hiſtorians will have this Event to be falſe, becauſe Joſeph the Son of Megas was but ten Years older than Moſes; but that is a childiſh Reaſon, for a Maſter of thirty Years old, may tutor a Scholar that is but twenty. But it is much more probable, that Maimon inſtructed his Son himſelf, and afterwards ſent him to ſtudy under Averroes, who was then in great Reputation with the Arabians. This Diſciple had an exemplary Devotion and Fidelity for his Maſter. Averroes loſt his Intereſt through a new Revolution that happen'd among the Moors in Spain: Abdi Amoumen, a Captain of a Troop of Banditti, who pretended to deſcend in a direct Line from Houſſain the Son of Aly, dethron'd the Marabouts in Africa, and afterwards entered Spain in the Year 1144, and in a little time made himſelf Maſter of this Kingdom. He cauſed Search to be made after Averroes, whom he ſuſpected for the great Credit he had at the Marabouts Court. This Doctor took Sanctuary among the Jews, and truſted the Secret of his Retreat to Maimonides, who choſe rather to ſuffer all, than to expoſe his Maſter's Life, by diſcovering the place where he was conceal'd. Abulpharages ſays alſo, that Maimonides changed his Religion and turned Muſſulman, inſomuch that having ſettled his Affairs, he paſſed into Egypt to live at liberty. His Friends have denied the Matter, but Averroes, who would have his Soul to be with the Philoſophers, becauſe Mahometiſm was the Religion of Hogs, Judaiſm that of Children, and Chriſtianity impoſſible to be kept, had inſpired his Diſciple with no great Zeal for the Law. Beſides, a Spaniard, who went to perſecute this Doctor in Egypt, even to the end of his Life, ſo highly upbraided him with this Weakneſs, that the Affair was brought before the Sultan, who adjudged, that whatever is done involuntarily, and by violence, in matter of Religion, ought to go for nothing; from whence he concluded, that Maimonides never was a Muſſulman. Nevertheleſs it was condemning him, and deciding againſt him, at the ſame time that he ſeemed to acquit him; For he declared the Abjuration was true, but innocent, becauſe the Will had nothing to do in it. Laſtly, We have reaſon to ſuſpect, that Maimonides forſook his Religion from his looſe Morals upon this ſubject, for he not only permits the Noachides to relapſe into Idolatry, if neceſſity require, becauſe they have receiv'd no command to ſanctifie the Name of God; but he alſo maintains, that it is no Sin to Sacrifice to Idols, and to renounce a Man's Religion, provided he do it not before ten Perſons; for then he was to dye rather than renounce the Law; but Maimonides † believed this ceaſed to be a Sin, when it was committed in ſecret. This Maxim is very odd, it being no longer Religion, that we are to love and defend at the peril of our Lives, but the preſence of ten Iſraelites, that ought to be feared, and which only makes it Criminal. There is reaſon to ſuſpect, that Intereſt had dictated to Maimonides ſo extravagant a Maxim, and that having abjured Judaiſm in ſecret, he thought to pacifie his Conſcience, and to skreen himſelf under this Diſtinction. However it muſt be own'd, that moſt of the Doctors are not nice in this particular, ſince R. Simeon ‖ determines, "That if the Idolaters pro-
" miſe you Life, on condition you'll commit an Act
" of Idolatry, you ought to accept the Condition " and the Life; ſince the Law does not ſay, you
" ſhall dye for theſe Laws, but you ſhall live by " them.

VIII. However it be, Maimonides left Spain and retired into Egypt, where he remain'd the reſt of his days, which has given him the Name of Moſes the Egyptian. He continued a long time without employ, ſo that he was reduced to the Trade of a Jeweller. Nevertheleſs he ceaſed not to Study, and he then compleated his Commentary upon the Miſnah, which he had begun in Spain at 23 Years of Age. Alphadel, the Son of Saladin, being returned to Egypt, after he had been expell'd thence by his Brother, underſtood Maimonides's Merit, and choſe him for his Phyſician: He gave him a Penſion. Maimonides affirms, that this Employ abſolutely took him up, for he was oblig'd to go every day to Court, and to ſtay there a long time if any Body was Sick. When he return'd home, he found abundance of People who came to conſult him. However he ceaſed not to labour for his Benefactor, for he tranſlated Avicenna, which Work is ſtill to be ſeen at Bologna, made by Alphadel's order in the Year 1194. It is entituled, Abenſara, tranſlated by our Maſter Moſes the Son of Maimon, whoſe Memory

* He was called Moſes, and was Maimon's Son, but he is more known by the Name of his Father. He is called Maimonides. He is alſo called Ramban. This is an Abbreviation of theſe four words, מיימון בן משה רבי Rabbi Moſes, Ben Maimon. Some make him born in 1133. † Maim. Fundam. Leg. c. 5. §. 2, 3, 6. p. 54, 58. ‖ Havoda Zara, Fol. 27.

be bleſſed. The three Letters אל"ף put at the end of his Book, puzzle the Criticks: One of them * conjectures, that they ſignifie, for this reaſon let Amen be ſaid. But why ſhould not Amen be clearly expreſs'd, without ſuch a long Periphraſis? 'Tis better to read, La-Jehovah Adonai, to the Lord our God.

IX. It gave the Egyptians jealouſie to ſee Maimonides ſo Potent at Court. To rout him from thence, the Egyptians demanded an Experiment of his Art: In order to this, they preſented him with a Glaſs of Poiſon; which he drank, without fearing the Effect, becauſe he had the Antidote; but having oblig'd ten Phyſicians to make Trial of his Poiſon, they all dy'd, becauſe they had not the Specifick Antidote. 'Tis ſaid alſo, that other Phyſicians ſet a Glaſs of Poiſon by the Sultan's Bed, to perſuade him, that Maimonides had a deſign upon his Life, and that he oblig'd him to cut his Veins, as Nero did Seneca. But he had learn'd, that there was in Human Body, a Vein which the Phyſicians did not know, which being not cut, the whole Maſs of Blood could not be diſcharg'd: He ſav'd himſelf by this unknown Vein, and his Diſciples carry'd him away, when he was thought dead, and conceal'd him; and 'twas in this Retreat that he compos'd the greateſt part of his Works. This Circumſtance does not agree with the Hiſtory of his Life.

X. The truth is, he not only protected his Nation at the Court of the new Sultans, who eſtabliſh'd themſelves upon the Ruin of the Aliades, but he founded an Academy at Alexandria, whither many Diſciples came from Egypt, Syria and Judea, to ſtudy under him. There had been a great many more, if a new Perſecution which hapned in the Eaſt, had not prevented Strangers from coming there: It was ſo violent, that part of the Jews were oblig'd to turn Mahometans, to eſcape it; and Maimonides, who could not inſpire them with Conſtancy, found himſelf reduc'd, like a great many others, to turn falſe Prophet, and to promiſe his Religioniſts a Deliverance, which did not come. He † dy'd in the beginning of the thirteenth Century, and order'd, that he ſhould be bury'd at Tiberias, where his Anceſtors had their Sepulchres. A vaſt Company of Egyptians and Jews ſwell'd up the Funeral Pomp, as far as the Holy Land, but being attack'd by Robbers, they left the dead Body, and made their Eſcape. The ſame thing happen'd to it, as to Boniface, Biſhop of Ments, and many other miraculous Saints; for the Robbers attempting to lift this dead Body, to throw it into the Sea, found it ſo heavy, that they could not move it from the Earth, and thirty Men in vain endeavour'd it.

XI. This Doctor compos'd a great many Works. He Commented the Miſnah: He made one call'd the Strong Hand ‖, and the Doctor of doubtful Queſtions. 'Tis pretended, he wrote in Phyſick as well as Divinity, and in Greek as well as Arabick; but that theſe Books, which bear his Name, are very rare, or loſt. He tranſcrib'd with his own Hand, the Pentateuch, upon a very correct Copy, which had been preſerv'd at Jeruſalem, even before its Deſtruction. He adds, that the Spirit of God mov'd him to go into France, to Challons in Burgunay, where, he had underſtood, he ſhould find a Copy of the Law, written by the Hand of Eſdras: He was not diſappointed in his Expectations: He collated this Copy with that at Jeruſalem, and found, that they perfectly agreed; he drew another by it, which he deliver'd to his Diſciples to tranſcribe, and ſpread abroad. But tho' this Narrative be attributed to Maimonides, yet R. Azarias looks upon it as ſuſpected, becauſe Maimonides mentions not this Journey, nor the collating of theſe two ancient Copies, in a Work where he could not have omitted it. Will any one ſay, that this Journey was undertaken after the compoſing of the *Halachot * Siphre Thorah?*

He is accus'd of having deſpis'd the Cabbala to his old Age; but they ſay, that finding at that time at Jeruſalem a Perſon well skill'd in this Science, he apply'd himſelf diligently to that Study. R. Chaiim affirms, he ſaw a † Letter of Maimonides, expreſſing his regret, that he had not penetrated further into the Myſteries of the Law; but 'tis believ'd, that the Cabbaliſts have forg'd this Letter, that they might not ſeem to have been deſpis'd by a Man whom they call the Light of the Eaſt and Weſt: He had ſome knowledge of theſe Matters, ſeeing he ſpeaks of the Mercava, or Chariot, and of Bereſchit, and that he ſubmitted himſelf to the Law of the Myſticks, of not explaining theſe Works ‖, except in the preſence of a few: But if he had ſtudy'd theſe Matters, 'tis manifeſt enough, that he did not love them, ſince he never went to the bottom of them, and contents himſelf with drawing a Drop from the Sea. He dy'd at ſeventy Years of Age, either in Egypt, or the upper Galilee, where he was buried: He was lamented by the Egyptians as well as the Jews, and the time of his Death was call'd a Year of Lamentation. However, he was ſuſpected by the Doctors of his Nation for two Works, which we have already mention'd; the Hand, or his Repetition of the Law, upon which he had labour'd for twelve Years; and the Doctor of doubtful, or confus'd Queſtions, Moreh * Nevochim, which he compos'd when he was fifty Years old. There was a great deal of Oſtentation in this laſt Title; for he alluded to a Saying of Pharaoh, who ſeeing the Iſraelites, who had the Red-Sea before them, the high Mountains on their ſides, and his Army purſuing them in the Rear, cry'd out, Nevochim Hem, they are entangled; and he fancy'd, that as the ancient Moſes had deliver'd the People from this Perplexity, ſo he who bore the ſame Name, ſhould deliver the ſame People from the Confuſion and Labyrinth, that was occaſion'd by ſeveral Paſſages of the Law, which they did not underſtand. This was a good Piece; for the Author does not implicitly follow the Doctors +, and inſiſting principally on the literal Senſe of Scripture, he has often hit upon the right. He was not ſo rais'd above Prejudices (tho' he impos'd it on himſelf as a Duty, and a kind of neceſſity) as not to have inſerted in his Work, a great many things obnoxious to the Cenſure of exact Criticks; but 'tis ſo difficult for a Man abſolutely to diveſt himſelf of the Notions he has ſuck'd in with his Milk, and which ſeem eſſentially connected with the Religion he profeſſes,

---

* Apud Montfaucon Diar. Ital. c. 27. p. 402. † In the Year of the Hegyra, 605. of J. Chriſt, 1208. Others ſay he dy'd in 1205? and others much ſooner in 1201, and yet he liv'd Seventy Years. ‖ He calls this Book, יד חוקה Jad Hazzakah, Manus fortis: But Vorſtius obſerves, that the Word יד makes the Number Fourteen, being compos'd of Four Books. 'Twas Printed at Venice in the Year 334, or 1574. There is another Book, entitled, יד יוסף Jad Joſeph, which is a Commentary upon the Pentateuch, Printed by Athias. * היכה This Word ſignifies way, but the Talmudiſts take it in a Metaphorical Senſe, for the Conſtitutions or Deciſion of the Book of the Law; and the firſt of theſe Treatiſes is call'd The Grounds of the Law, Vorſt. Præf. ad eum lib. יבורי חחורה † Clavering Præfat. ad Maim. ‖ Maimon. Fundam. leg. c. 4. § 17. p. 49. 23. * מורה נבובים Doctor Perplexorum, a Buxtorf. Latin. redditus. † Solus nugari deſiit. Plin. de Diod. Sicul.

that

that we ought to admire the good Senſe and Equity of thoſe who make part of the Sacrifice, and pardon them what is wanting to make it perfect.

XII. Theſe Works were receiv'd with mighty Applauſe by a great many Doctors. Judah Alcharisi, who liv'd at that time, and was a great Poet, undertook the Tranſlation of his Commentaries upon the Miſnah, at the Requeſt of the Rabbins of Marſeilles, who did not underſtand Arabick. He alſo turn'd the Doctor of doubtful Queſtions into Hebrew; but Maimonides was not ſatisfy'd with the Verſion, and diſapprov'd it: However, by this we ſee, that his Works were in great Requeſt, which caus'd him afterwards to be call'd the Glory of the Eaſt, and the Light of the Weſt. Thoſe of Montpellier cenſur'd him with a great deal of Bitterneſs and Violence. Salomon, who preſided over that Synagogue, obſerv'd three things. 1. That Maimonides having ſtudy'd under the famous Averroes, had embrac'd the Principles of the Peripatetick Philoſophy, and frequently introduc'd it in his Works; which did not agree with the Religion of the Cabbaliſts, who would not be oblig'd to reaſon juſtly, and have bounds preſcrib'd to their Imagination. 2. As he diſtinctly ſpecify'd the end of the Rights and Ceremonies of the Law, he gave a great Advantage to the Chriſtians; becauſe he ſhew'd thereby, that the end of this Inſtitution having ceas'd, the Laws were to be aboliſh'd. Laſtly, He treated of the Operations of God, in a manner well enough adapted to the Scholaſtick Divinity; and therefore the Dominicans have thought it their Intereſt to give vogue to this Work, inſtead of condemning and burning it. A learned * Engliſhman, who has lately publiſh'd two Treatiſes of this Author, compares him to Thomas Aquinas, and Abravanel to Scotus. The latter over-ſubtilly ſought for Arguments in every thing, and often tires his Reader inſtead of convincing him; but Maimonides, who is more ſolid, more nervous and ſtrong, is contented to produce a ſmall number of convincing Reaſons.

It muſt be confeſs'd, that he had commonly very abſtruſe Ideas; and having ſtudy'd Metaphyſicks, made too great a uſe of them. He maintain'd, that all the Faculties were Angels, and fancy'd, that he explain'd more clearly hereby the Operations of God, and the Expreſſions of Scripture. It is not ſtrange, ſaid he, to admit what ſome Doctors ſay, That an Angel enters into the Mother's Womb, to form the Embryo (though theſe ſame Doctors declare an Angel to be a conſuming Fire) inſtead of acknowledging rather, that the Generative Faculty is an Angel? 'Tis for this reaſon that God ſpeaks often in Scripture, and ſays, Let us make Man after our Image: Becauſe ſome Rabbins had concluded from this Paſſage, that God had a Body, tho' infinitely more perfect than ours; he maintains, that Image ſignifies the Eſſential Form, which conſtitutes a thing in its Being: All this is very ſubtle, but doth not remove the difficulty, nor diſcover the true meaning of the Words of God. He believ'd, that the Stars were animated, and that the Spheres of the Heavens liv'd. He ſaid, that God never repented but of one thing, which was the confounding the Good with the Wicked in the Ruin of the firſt Temple. He was perſuaded, † that the Promiſes of the Law, which ſhall always laſt, reſpect only a Temporal Felicity, and ſhall be accompliſh'd in the Meſſiah's Reign. He maintains, that the Kingdom of Juda was reſtor'd to the Poſterity of Jeconias, in the Perſon of Salathiel; tho' St. Luke ‖ poſitively aſſerts, that Salathiel was not the Son of Jeconias, but of Neri.

XIII. Salomon diſſembled, till ſuch time as the Doctor of doubtful Queſtions came out: But he and the Rabbins of Montpellier loſt all patience, when they ſaw him explaining himſelf ſtill more preciſely than he had done in the Strong Hand. They ſet up for Defenders of the Talmud, which Maimonides evidently deſerted. The Rabbins David and Jonah, who ſtudy'd then at Montpellier, in ſtrict Confederacy with their Maſter, ſet themſelves to oppoſe his Doctrine. They omitted nothing that might diſcredit the Author, and render him ſuſpected: They burnt his Books, and Excommunicated thoſe that read them, and addicted themſelves to the Study of Philoſophy. This was a Declaration of War, in which every body engag'd. The Rabbins of Narbonne were the firſt that entred the Liſts for Maimonides. They Excommunicated their Brethren of Montpellier. Theſe being exaſperated, and fearing to be overwhelm'd by a greater Authority than their own, engag'd the Synagogues of France in their Intereſts, and oblig'd them to anathematize the Synagogues of Languedoc. The Spaniſh Doctors came into the Aſſiſtance of their Countrymen. The famous Kimki, who was at the Head of them, becauſe his Native Narbonne depended then upon Spain, labour'd vehemently to ſupport Maimonides's Reputation, and to make Peace; but he found Reſiſtance. The two Abrahams, who taught then at Peſcara, a little City of old Caſtile, appear'd among Maimonides's Enemies. One ſaid contemptuouſly, that he was a Young Man; the other, call'd Harravad, writ ſo ſtrongly, that his Adverſary was forc'd to own his Defeat. This is the only Man that has conquer'd me, ſaid Maimonides; but at the ſame time in a Prophetick manner, he gave him notice, that he ſhould not finiſh his Work; and he actually dy'd the ſame Year. Judas, a Phyſician, and Head of the Synagogue at Toledo, choſe alſo rather to engage in the Intereſts of the French Rabbins, than in thoſe of his own Nation. His Zeal for the Talmud, permitted not any one to give him a blow. He wrote violently againſt Kimki, who defended Maimonides; but the latter manag'd his Intrigue ſo well in Arragon and Catalonia, as to have the better of his Enemies; and oblig'd the Synagogues of that Country, to Excommunicate thoſe of France. The Rabbins of France thunder-ſtruck with this unexpected blow, buckl'd, and revok'd the Excommunications they had fulminated againſt the Synagogues of Spain. All that was done at Monipellier was annull'd. They conſented even to cancel the Epitaph which was engraven upon Maimonides's Tomb, becauſe it was there declar'd, that he was Excommunicated. This War among theſe Divines laſted forty Years; and even then was not perfectly extinguiſh'd, ſince ſome Doctors a great while after ſet themſelves againſt Maimonides, cenſur'd his Works, and confuted his Opinions. But the Schiſm they had raiſed, expir'd in the Year 1232.

XIV. We have ſpoken of Kimki, one of the zealous Defenders of Maimonides; but 'twas not that which gave him his greateſt Luſtre and Reputation. His Father, Joſeph Kimki, was a violent Enemy to the Chriſtians, and frequently exclaim'd againſt them in the Battles of the Lord; in the Treatiſes of Faith and Alliance againſt the Hereticks, for ſo he calls the Chriſtians. 'Tis diſputed, whether he was a Spaniard, or a Frenchman, becauſe his Son Radak, that is, R. David Kimki, is call'd a Provincial living at Narbonne, and that that City is in the Kingdom of France. Bartolocci * removes the difficulty, * Clavering Præf. ad Moſis Maimon. Tract. duos. † Skinner's Lett. 102. ‖ Luke 3. 27. * Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 4.

by

by saying, that Kimki might have liv'd some time at Marseilles, but that he was originally a Spaniard, since there were always Persons of that Name and Family, at the Head of the Synagogues of Arragon and Castile. It were easier to remark, that this Doctor, tho' living at Narbonne, was nevertheless a Spaniard, since this City was subject to the Kings of Castile, and join'd to Spain. In effect, * Pedro de Lara, Count of Narbonne, was in Alphonso VIII's Train, as one of his Vassals; and 'twas he that resolutely withstood that Prince's Design of imposing a Tribute on the Nobility of his Country; who were so affected with that Act of Courage, that they engag'd themselves by an Indenture, to give Peter and his Children a Breakfast every Year.

XV. David, the Son of Joseph Kimki, was a greater Man than his Father. The Jews alluding to his Name, which signifies a Miller, or full of Meal, say, there is no Meal without a Miller; that is, there is no true Science without Kimki. He apply'd himself much to the Study of Grammar; and tho' he borrow'd Part of his Grammatical Observations from an Arabian, call'd Abud Valid Marum, who had written before him on the same Subject; yet he so embellish'd his Work, as to make it appear a new one. He did not inherit his Father's Hatred to the Christians, at least he speaks of them with greater Moderation. Genebrard took the pains in a particular Treatise, to answer all that was found in Kimki's Commentary on the Psalms, prejudicial to Religion; but these Observations were neither important nor necessary. This most useful Commentary, for the understanding of the Royal Prophet, has been translated, and Christian Divines have a high Esteem for all the Products of his Pen; for which reason, most of his Commentaries have been inserted into the Bibles of Venice and Basil. His Brother Moses, who was also a learned Man, compos'd † The Garden of Pleasure, wherein he treated of the Estate of the Souls; but it was never Printed, and the Manuscript is only to be seen in the Vatican Library.

XVI. There has not been a Family more fruitful in Learned Men, than that of Salomon Jarki, or the Lunatick ||. Bartolocci * says, that this famous Man was born at Lunir, a City of Aquitaine, where, according to Gregory the Great †, the Jews had settled themselves. He adds, that others will have him to be born at Treves, or Troies, Cities of Provence and Languedoc. Here are as many Faults as Words, as we have already observ'd. For, 1. There is no City in Languedoc call'd Lunir; and the Author meant Lunel, where the Jews had at that time an Academy, which Salomon Jarki made more famous. 2. The Jews were not settled in this Country in Gregory the Great's time; and this Pope wrote not to the Bishop of Lunel, since that was never an Episcopal See, but to the Bishop of Luna, a City of Italy, which was often headed by Illustrious Prelates. Verecundus, who follow'd Pope Vigilius in his Voyage to Constantinople, was Bishop of Luna; and Victor, Bishop of the same Place, assisted at the Council of Rome, which was held under Symmachus. 3. Salomon was born at Troies; but 'tis absurd to place this City, or that of Treves, in Languedoc and Provence, where they never were.

XVII. This famous Rabbin was of Champagne, and liv'd in the twelfth Century. He left his Country to travel to the Holy Land and Persia. He particularly dedicated himself to the Study of the Talmud. His Method of Teaching was particular. He made a Collection of abundance of Difficulties he had heard decided in his Travels; upon his return to Europe, he entred into all the Academies, and disputed against the Professors upon the Questions they handled, and afterwards threw upon the Floor a Sheet of his Collections, where the Controversie was decided without the Name of the Author. 'Tis pretended, that a Collection was made of these loose Sheets, scatter'd in innumerable Places, and that the Glos on the Talmud was compos'd from them. His Commentary upon the Gemara has been thought so full of Learning, that he was call'd the Prince of Commentators. His Notes upon Scripture are crowded with Fables, and Talmudical Visions, which makes him esteem'd by some and despis'd by others. He marry'd his three Daughters to three Learned Men. R. Meir, the first of his Sons-in-law, had three Sons, every one Illustrious; one whereof wrote upon the Glos of the Talmud, and the Collection of his Grandfather's loose Papers. Salomon || dy'd at Triers, Seventy five Years old, and his Body was carry'd to Prague, where he has his Tomb.

XVIII. France moreover produc'd at that time Jacob of Orleans, commonly call'd Rath. 'Twas the peculiar Custom of the twelfth Century, to abridge the Names of the Doctors, and to compose another of them, commonly of the initial Letters of the true Name. The R. was always in the Front, to denote the Title Rabbin: Thus Maimonides was called Ramban; David Kimki, Radak; Salomon Jarki, Raschi; his Son-in-law R. Juda, Son of Nachan, Rivan; his Grandson Samson, Risbam.

Tham, another of his Grandsons, who writ upon the Glos of the Talmud, and dy'd in Champagne, was call'd Rath; which same Name was given to Jacob of Orleans, because he is commonly confounded with him; whilst we can't guess at the reason, unless it were, that they both compos'd the same Work. The latter was kill'd in the Year 1190. and his Writings perish'd with him.

XIX. The Jews therefore had Men in this Century, who distinguish'd themselves in all the Sciences. They had excellent Grammarians, as Kimki: They had famous Poets, as Juda Alcharisi, Hallevy, Joseph Hadaiian of Gorduba: They had Astronomers, Abraham Chiia, Abraham Nasi, and the great Aben-Ezra: They had * famous Professors, and the French especially boast of Isaac the Old, Hazzescen; who had sixty Disciples, so vers'd in the Gemara, that they could dispute upon all Subjects propos'd to them, and draw Arguments out of it against it self. Juda of Paris, who made much Noise in the following Century, was one of his Disciples. Lastly, besides common Divines, they had some Cabbalists.

XX. The Synagogue likewise brought forth learned Women in the twelfth Century. The fondness for long Pilgrimages was a reigning Distemper at that time with the Jews as well as the Christians. Petachia † made one to all the Synagogues of his Nation; who relates, that he knew Samuel, the Head of the Captivity in the East, who had a Daughter very learned in the Law, and in the Talmud. She had a great number of Disciples, to whom she read Publick Lectures; but lest any one of her Scholars should fall in love with her, she made her Lectures at a Window, behind the Lattice, so that she was heard, but not seen.

XXI. They had Generals, as well as Learned Men; for Dom Salomon, the Son of Jechaia, flou-

---

* Catel Hist. of Languedoc. l. 4. p. 595. † Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. || Father Simon would have him call'd Isaaci, the Son of Isaac; but he is better known by the Name Jarki. He is also call'd Raschi. * Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. p. 178. † Gregor. I. Ep. l. 3. Ep. 21. || An. 1180. * V. Ganz Tsamach David, p. 134, 138.

rish'd,

riſh'd then in Portugal. He was a Philoſopher, but at the ſame time acquir'd ſo great a Reputation by his Valour, that the King made him Lieutenant-General of the Army, the firſt Poſt in the Camp. He diſcharg'd the Truſt repos'd in him very happily, and commanded the Army with great Succeſs. The Grandees of the Kingdom grew jealous of his Proſperity, and endeavour'd to render him ſuſpected to the Prince; but he eluded their Calumnies by an exemplary Modeſty. Not content to practiſe it himſelf, † he infus'd it into his Nation by his Example and Laws; for he oblig'd them not to appear in the Streets on Horſeback, becauſe that Pomp offended the People; and he forbad the uſe of Silk Garments.

XXII. Laſtly, They had * alſo famous Deſerters: For Aſmouil, or Samuel Ben Jehoadah, a Spaniard by Birth, and a Phyſician by Profeſſion, quitted the Synagogue, wherein he was born, and threw himſelf among Muſſulmans. To prove the Sincerity of his Converſion to the Religion of his Maſter, he wrote againſt the Jews, in the Year 1174. He accus'd them of having corrupted the Law of Moſes. This Accuſation was receiv'd with Applauſe by the Muſſulmans; who continue it againſt the Jews, and are ſo convinc'd of the Truth of it, as to forbid tranſlating or citing any Paſſage of Moſes Law from Jewiſh and Chriſtian Copies. They complain eſpecially, that there is no place in theſe Copies, where mention is made of the Reſurrection of the Dead and the Life to come, Alms and Prayer. Theſe Accuſations might have been furniſh'd them by Samuel, who invented them out of Hatred to a Nation he had deſerted. But 'tis much more probable, that the Alterations of the Law he complain'd of, reſpected the falſe Interpretations of the Talmudiſts.

† An. 1190. ‖ Scholſchelet Hakkabala, p. 55. * Hebelot Bibl. Orient

CHAP. IX.

Of the falſe Meſſiahs that appear'd in the Eaſt and Weſt, in the Twelfth Century.

I. The Falſe Meſſiahs numerous. II. A falſe Meſſiah in France, in the Year 1137. III. In Perſia. Open War. IV. In Spain, authoriz'd by a Doctor. V. A Forerunner of the Meſſiah in the Kingdom of Fez. VI. An Artifice of an Arabian, who promiſes to riſe from the dead. VII. A Leper cur'd pretends to be the Meſſiah. VIII. A Perſecution in Perſia. IX. An inviſible Impoſtor in Moravia. X. An unknown Meſſiah. XI. Eldavid; at what time he liv'd. XII. His Birth, his Actions, his Inviſibility. XIII. His Father-in-law betrays him, and delivers up his Head. A Perſecution againſt the Jews in Perſia. XIV. A Story like it in Spain enquir'd into. 'Tis the ſame with the foregoing.

I. THeſe flouriſhing great Men, prevented not the appearance of ſeveral Impoſtors; and if the Nation acquir'd ſome Glory by the Learning and Merit of its Doctors, it alſo diſgrac'd it ſelf by its Credulity for eight or nine Falſe Meſſiahs, who all found Followers and Abetters. 'Tis true, if we ſtrictly enquire into moſt of thoſe Men, whom the Chriſtians admir'd in the twelfth Century, and which they have reverenc'd ſince like Saints, we might apply to them, what Maimonides ſaid of a falſe Meſſiah, that if they had Sincerity, they wanted Judgment; and if they feared God, they had no Prudence *. Hiſtorians have preſerv'd the remembrance of a Mad-man, who for ten Years ran in the Fields and Foreſts; having no other Cover than the Canopy of Heaven, no other Garment than his Skin, nor other Food than that of the Beaſts. He reckon'd it one of his greateſt Temptations, that being bury'd in the Snow, a Hare came to warm himſelf by his Breath: He was tempted to catch this Hare and careſs her, but by the Grace of God he ſurmounted the Temptation. St. Bernard and the People admir'd this Anchoret, becauſe he ſaid he lov'd God, tho he was a Madman. All have their Follies, tho' of different kinds; and whilſt a Man laughs at thoſe of others, he makes no Reflection upon his own. Let us ſpeak of the Jews Infatuation, for the falſe Meſſiahs in the twelfth Century.

II. The firſt appear'd in France, in the Year 1137. but there is no mention of the Place of his Manifeſtation, nor of its Succeſs; but yet it can't be doubted, but that he engag'd the Jews which follow'd him to make unlawful Aſſemblies; ſince Lewis the Young, who then reign'd, had the Synagogues pull'd down, and ill-treated the Saints of Iſrael. Maimonides †, who liv'd thirty Years after this Impoſtor, affirms, That the French, into whoſe hands he fell, kill'd him. But the Execution did not ſtop there; for with him they maſſacred the Holy Aſſembly: And another ‖ Jewiſh Hiſtorian complains, that For this Impoſtor's Fault, they had levell'd a great many Synagogues in France, where he appear'd.

III. The Year following *, another Impoſtor appeared in Perſia. The Army that follow'd him was ſo numerous, as to venture to march in Battalia againſt the King. This Prince † oblig'd the Jews in his Dominions, to ſummon their Meſſiah to lay down his Arms. In vain they ſollicited this falſe Meſſiah, and demanded Proofs of his Vocation. He was reſolv'd to offer no other than the Succeſs of his Deſigns, of which he appear'd too confident to lay them aſide. He pretended to be moved at the ſight of the Children which the Mothers brought to him, half ſtarv'd, and who look'd upon him as the Cauſe of their Deſtruction, and of all thoſe little Creatures. He propos'd to the King of Perſia, to pay the Charges of the War, and to permit him to march back his Troops in ſafety. The Jews, who made theſe Propoſals to the Prince, were amaz'd that he accepted them. The Money which this falſe Meſſiah demanded, was

* Alber trium Fontium Chron. An. 1135. p. 274. † Maimon. Ep. de Auſtali Regione apud Vorſtium Not. in Tſemach. p. 293. ‖ Salomon Ben Virgæ Schevet Juda, p. 169. * An. 1138. † Salomonis fil. Virgæ Tribus Juda, ſive Hiſtoria Judaicæ gentis, p. 169. & Lent de Pſeudo-Meſſ. Judæor. p. 36.

was paid, and his Troops diſmiſſed; but the King, who had nothing farther to fear, oblig'd the diſarm'd Jews to pay it him again: 'Tis ſaid alſo, that this Impoſtor loſt his Head.

IV. Maimonides ſpeaks of a third Meſſiah, who he ſays, appear'd * ten Years after. He was a Spaniard, born at Corduba, who drew upon his Nation a Perſecution in all that Country in the Year 1157. The Credulity of the Spaniſh Jews was more excuſable than that of others; becauſe they had one of their famous Doctors, who authoriz'd the Whims, wherewith they fed themſelves about the coming of the Meſſiah. He wrote a Book on purpoſe to prove that it was at hand. He proved it by the Motion of the Stars. Maimonides ſays, that the Juſt and the Wiſe of his Nation, look'd upon him as a Madman; But the Juſt and Wiſe are always the ſmalleſt number. This Man muſt have had ſome Reputation, tho' he loſt it by the Event. We commonly believe thoſe who flatter our hopes, when they are Men of parts.

V. Ten Years after another proclaim'd the coming of the Meſſiah, and declared that he would appear at the Years end. The Prediction proved falſe, and was a new ſource of Miſeries and Perſecutions to the credulous People. It might however be ſaid, there were two Impoſtors then, who acted in conſort, one whereof called himſelf the Fore-runner, and the other the Meſſiah. At leaſt Salomon † the Son of the Rod obſerves, that there was a Man that Year, in the Kingdom of Fez, where the Fore-runner had preach'd, who call'd himſelf the Meſſiah. However, as Maimonides, then living, mention'd only one Impoſtor, it is better to follow him, and to ſay, that the Spaniſh Phyſician has ill expreſs'd his thought.

VI. The ſame Year 1167, an Arabian perſwaded the Jews, that he was ſent by the Meſſiah to call them together, and to lead them to him. Come along with me, ſaid he, let us go all together to meet the Meſſiah, for he hath ſent me, that I may ſhew you the way. Maimonides aſſerts, That he feared God, but that he wanted Prudence. That Man rather wanted Judgment than Honeſty ‖. He pretended to work Miracles, and Miracle-makers commonly conceal the Fraud under the Mask of I know not what natural or affected Simplicity, but they are never the leſs Rogues for it.

The Jews doting upon this Man, conſulted Maimonides to know what they were to do. He foretold them what Miſeries this Impoſture would bring upon the Nation, and adviſed them to reduce the weak Man to a ſober Senſe; but his Counſels were not regarded. The Impoſtor was follow'd by great Crouds of People, and taken at the Years end. The King asking him what were the Motives of his Impoſture? he boldly maintain'd, that what he did was by the Order of God; and declar'd, that if they cut off his Head, they ſhould quickly ſee him riſe again. The King, amaz'd at his Confidence, was reſolv'd to make the trial. They took off his Head, and found that this was an Artifice of this Cheat, who preferr'd an eaſie Death before the cruel Torture they would have put him to. The Nation ſuffer'd for his Wickedneſs, for his Followers were perſecuted, and all the Nation ſeverely fined. Nevertheleſs the Infatuation was too ſtrong to be cured, and a great many remain'd perſwaded, that this Man would come from his Grave, and riſe again as he had promiſed, which never happen'd. Maimonides *, according to the Maxim of the Jews, who believe Death to be a Satisfaction paid to God, pray'd that this Impoſtor's Death might be a Propitiatory Sacrifice for him and for all Iſrael.

VII. A little after, a Leper, who in one Nights time was cured, going to Bed all over Leprous at Night, and riſing found in the Morning, by this Miracle wrought on his Perſon, grew into an Opinion, that he was the Meſſiah. He publiſh'd it to the Jews, who liv'd beyond Euphrates, gain'd credit, and drew Multitudes after him. The wiſe Men of the Nation, who were ſenſible that this Cure, as miraculous as it was, was not ſufficient to point out the Meſſiah, undeceived him, and oblig'd him to renounce ſo vain an Imagination. However this ſtir about nothing exaſperated the People, and the Jews were perſecuted afreſh: And one of their † Hiſtorians affirm, that ten thouſand, over-born with the Miſeries they ſuffer'd on this pretended Meſſiah's account, forſook the Law, which has made his Memory odious.

VIII. The Perſecution alſo broke out again in Perſia, upon the ſcore of a ſeventh Meſſiah, who had ſeduced ſome of the People in the Year 1174. But he was afterwards look'd upon as a Magician or a Devil.

IX. An eighth Impoſtor was ſeen in Moravia: This Man, called David Almuſſer, boaſted to have the Power of diſappearing to the Eyes of Men, and making himſelf inviſible when he thought fit. Multitudes follow'd this miraculous Man, who had doubtleſs ſome Art to deceive the People, and ſteal out of their ſight. His Life was offer'd him, provided he would ſurrender himſelf to the Prince, who was willing to ſecure his Perſon, to put a ſtop to the Commotions he had raiſed; but this Promiſe was broke, and when he arriv'd he was ſhut up in Priſon. The Hiſtorians ſay, that he eſcaped by the help of his Art. It was in vain to follow him, and impoſſible to ſeize him, being inviſible in the places where he was. The King's Eyes, who march'd in Perſon, were open for ſome moments, and he had the Mortification to ſee the Man he had deceived, without being able to ſeize him. They were tired with ſuch a fruitleſs Purſuit, and the Nation, which was then numerous in Moravia, was commanded to exhibit their Head. Driven by Fear and Intereſt, the Jews found means to arreſt this inviſible Man. He was impriſon'd, and then whether he had loſt or exhauſted his Art, he could not fly, nor eſcape the Hand of the Hangman.

X. There was in the ſame Century a new Impoſtor, whoſe Country and Family, Name and Actions, are unknown. But yet Maimonides and Salomon Son of the Rod have mentioned him, and ſay, he lived in the time of Salomon the Son of Adrettus.

XI. But the moſt Famous of all Impoſtors of the Twelfth Century was David Alroi, or Eldavid. He is commonly placed in the Year 1199 or 1200. But Benjamin of Tudela, who travelled in the year 1173, having mention'd him as a Man that appear'd ten Years before, it cannot be doubted but that he was ſomewhat elder.

XII. This Impoſtor was born in a City call'd Amaria, in which were reckon'd a thouſand Jewiſh Families that paid Tribute to the King of Perſia. He addicted himſelf at firſt to the Prince of the Captivity, and to the Head of the Synagogue at Bagdet, who was a famous Man, well verſed not only in the Study of the Talmud, but in the Know-

---

* Maimon. Ep. de Regione Auſtrali apud Vorſtium, p. 293. Judæos in Maſſilia agentes apud Vorſt. in Ganz Tſemach, p. 292. Regione, p. 293. Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 169.

† Salomon Schevet Jehuda, p. 169. ‖ Maim. Ep. ad

* Maimonid. ibid. † Maimonides Ep. de Auſtrali

ledge

ledge of Magick, ſo common among the Chaldeans. When he had learn'd ſome Secrets, he gain'd the Jews, the Inhabitants of a Mountain called Haphtan, and excited them to take up Arms, and to that purpoſe deluded them with the ſhew of ſome falſe Miracles. The King of Perſia being inform'd of this Inſurrection, and the Conqueſts Eldavid made, was afraid of him, and ſummon'd him to appear immediately at Court, with a Promiſe, that if he could prove himſelf the Meſſiah, he would ſubmit to him, and acknowledge him to be a King ſent from Heaven. Eldavid, contrary to all Expectation, preſented himſelf, and maintain'd to the King that he was the Meſſiah. He was put in Priſon, and they waited to find him miraculouſly eſcap'd out of it. The thing ſo happen'd, as the King was deliberating about the nature of the Puniſhment to be inflicted on him, news was brought that Eldavid was eſcap'd; Couriers were immediately diſpatch'd after him, who related that they had heard his Voice, without ſeeing him, or being able to take him. The King, who believ'd that his Guards had been corrupted, march'd at the Head of his Army as far as the Banks of the River Gozan; there he heard Eldavid's Voice, who cried O Fools, but no body could ſee him: He was perceiv'd a moment after, dividing with his Cloak the Waters of the River, and paſſing over it. The Prince's Faith was ſtagger'd; he was afraid it was the Meſſiah; but his Officers re-aſſur'd him, by perſwading him it was all Legerdemain. The Army paſſed the River without finding the Criminal.

XIII. The King wrote immediately to all the principal Jews in his Kingdom, to oblige them to deliver up Eldavid, upon pain of being maſſacred without Mercy, if they did not do it. Zacheus the Prince of the Captivity, wrote to him to ſave the Nation, by ſurrendring himſelf; but he laugh'd at this requeſt, and would not make himſelf a Sacrifice for the People. He continued his Diſorders, till his Father-in-Law, tempted by the Promiſe which Zaid Alladin made him, of ten thouſand gold Crowns, invited his Son-in-Law to Supper, made him Drunk, and cut off his Head, which was ſent to the King of Perſia. This Prince did not ſtand to his word, but demanded that all Eldavid's Followers ſhould be deliver'd up; and upon their refuſal, which was grounded upon the Impoſſibility of the thing, he order'd abundance of Jews to be murder'd in his Kingdom *.

XIV. I know not whether we ought to confound this David with another, the Son of David mention'd in an ancient Chronicle. This latter was a Perſian as the other, and appear'd † in the beginning of the Thirteenth Century. The Jews looked upon him as their King, and formed a great Army under his command; but the Hiſtorian ‖ aſcribes to this Army ſuch an extravagant Deſign, that I queſtion the Truth of the Narrative. They meant, ſays he, to march from Perſia to Cologne, to take three Magicians of the Nation who were to be there. They had already run over ſome neighbouring Provinces of Perſia, when they were oblig'd to return home, and no body knows what became of thoſe Men, who were ſaid to be of a prodigious Stature, nor what they had done. 'Tis only ſaid, that they flatter'd themſelves extreamly with the hopes of their approaching Liberty; and for this reaſon they choſe a King. This Story to me ſeems fabulous, or rather it was taken from the Reports ſpread in the Weſt, concerning the Conqueſts which the falſe Meſſiah Eldavid had already made in Perſia. The Jews in Germany, who credulouſly believ'd his pretended Miracles, imagin'd perhaps, and gave out, that this Deliverer ſhould march with an Army from the Heart of Perſia to the Weſt, to deliver them from the Yoke of the Chriſtians; and the German Hiſtorian has eſpouſed this Tradition. 'Tis very probable therefore, that this laſt Meſſiah muſt be one and the ſame with the former called David.

* Salomon Ben Virgæ Hiſt. Judaic. p. 62. † An. 1222. ‖ Fragm. Hiſtor. incerti Auth. An. 1222. apud Vorſt. Hiſt. Germ. t 2. p. 89.

CHAP. X.

Divers Events that befel the Jews in the Twelfth Century in the East and Weſt.

I. The Converſion of Herman lately diſcover'd. II. St. Bernard Protector of the Jews. A Roll of the Law preſented by the Jews to the Pope. The Original of this Cuſtom. III. Alexander III. protects them. IV. Alphonſo the Good being over-reach'd perſecutes them. V. His Fondneſs for a Jeweſs. VI. Their number in Andaluſia. Whether the Law ought to be written. VII. The Sect of the Speakers explain'd. Maimonides miſtake about their Origine. VIII. The Subtilty of the Chriſtians againſt the Philoſophers. IX. Their Principles. X. The Sect of the Motazales. XI. What the Jews borrowed from them. XII. Philoſophers preferred. XIII. Perſecution in the Kingdom of Leon. Conjectures about Hillel's Manuſcript. XIV. And about the expunging two Verſes from the Book of Joſhua. XV. A ſingular Treaty of the Jews with the Biſhop of Beziers. XVI. Philip Auguſtus expels them out of France. XVII. He recals them. The Reaſons of this. XVIII. They obtain Burying-places in England. XIX. They are forbidden to be preſent at Richard's Coronation. The Outrages committed againſt them. XX. A Maſſacre in many Cities: Their Deſpair at York.

I. ONE of the firſt Events we are to take notice of in the Twelfth * Century, is the Converſion of a Jew of Cologne, the Reaſons and Motives whereof have been lately diſcover'd. This Man lived in the Reign of Henry V. and, like the Doctors of his Nation, was highly conceited with the Allegorical Senſe of Scripture, and blindly follow'd the Tradition of the Fathers: When he was ſtagger'd by a Dream, which he look'd upon as Divine, he imagin'd he ſaw the Emperor, who had given him a white Horſe, and a golden Girdle, ſeating him at his Table. Theſe imaginary Honours made ſuch an Impreſſion upon his Brain, that he went to conſult a famous Doctor of Cologne, whoſe Name was Iſaac: This Rabbin told him, that the white Horſe ſignified a handſom Woman he was to marry; that the Gold Girdle was an Emblem of the Wealth he was to acquire in a ſhort time; and his Treatment at the Emperor's Table, promiſed him great Reputation and Honour in the Synagogue. The Jew interpreted his myſterious Dream quite another way; for he diſcover'd in it the Honour that God did him, in communicating his Grace, and calling him to his Communion. But this is probably what determined him without reference to his Vision. He had lent Money to the Bishop of Munster, which oblig'd him to wait upon him in his Bishoprick. He found a Man there, who offer'd to prove the Truth of the Christian Religion, by handling a hot Iron, without receiving any damage; but the Bishop being more judicious, would not exercise the Iron, nor permit his Official to make so doubtful a Proof. But Herman enter'd into Conference with Rupert Abbot of Tuy; being shock'd by his Instructions, he fasted after the Christian and Jewish manner, he eat no Flesh, like the Christians; and continued his Fast till Night, like the Jews. In the mean time Grace delay'd its coming, and even when it arriv'd, he was desirous to retire secretly, and carry away his Brother, but he wander'd about, and could never find the Gates of Ments to go out of the City, till he had cross'd himself, which gave him the Prospect of a very large and wide Cross. He was baptized, but in his Baptism the Devil laid new Ambuscades for him. Herman † was minded to come out of the Bath the first time of his Immersion, because it was very cold, and he did not yet understand the three Immersions for the three Divine Persons. He attempted the same thing again upon the second Immersion, and thought it was the Devil who went to hinder the Consummation of the Ceremony. This rather proves, that he did not yet know the Trinity, nor the Ceremonies of Baptism. However this Conversion went for a voluntary one, and Herman not only continued in the Christian Religion, but entered into the Order of the Regular Canons of St. Austin.

* An. 1106.

II. St. Bernard not tolerating and persecuting the Albigeois, at the same time took the Jews part, and not only would not have them prosecuted; but repressed the violent Zeal of some Persons bent upon their Destruction, and justified their Excess of Usuries, which they demanded of the Christians. He grounded his Behaviour upon the words of a Psalm, where God speaking of the Jews, forbids killing them. He ‖ farther alledg'd, that their future Conversion render'd the present Toleration of them absolutely necessary; and that in reality, if their Usuries were complain'd of, there were a great many baptized Jews and Christians, who were guilty of a more scandalous Extortion. This Letter of St. Bernard was of the greater Importance, because it was sent into all Nations *. It was read in the Assembly of Princes at Spires, where they were debating about the Croisades. It was read also in another Assembly held in Bavaria. Lastly, There are Manuscripts of it, importing, that it was written to the English; which gives reason to conjecture, that it was sent to the English Bishops. Thus the Abbot of Clairvaux extended his pious Concern for the Jews to the remotest places; and by a Whim, or rather by an unexcusable Fault of Judgment, (tho' it was common enough) protected some of the Erroneous, whilst at the same time he authoriz'd the greatest Violences against others; as if the latter could not have been converted by Lenity, and that the Recal was reserved only for the Jews, who had continued so long in their Obduration. 'Tis said it was the same St. Bernard that byass'd Pope Innocent II. in their Favour; for as he was very serviceable to this Pope, who was oblig'd to fly into France, 'tis thought that he inspir'd him with those Sentiments of Gentleness and Equity, which was so much the more necessary, because he found himself in a foreign Kingdom, where he had need of Toleration and Assistance. The Jews got him wholly in their Interests, when † he made his entry into Paris, for they mingled themselves with those that walked solemnly to meet him, ordering a Roll of the Law to be carried before them, which they presented him with a great deal of Respect. The Pope courteously receiv'd them, praying God to remove the Vail that cover'd them, and hindered them from perceiving the Truth which the Law contain'd. I do not know whether this Ceremony produced so advantagious an Effect to the Jews, as to oblige those of Rome to observe it; or whether the Pope took Pleasure in seeing the Enemies of Christianity pay him their Respects. But 'tis one of the Ceremonies of the Installation of the Popes, which has long continued. The Jews of Rome are oblig'd to wait for him in the way to St. John de Lateran, and to present him with a Copy of the Law. We read the Form of the Answer which he ought to make. ‖ I reverence the Law which you have receiv'd of God by Moses, but I condemn your Explications of it, because you wait for the Messiah, which the Apostolical Church believes to be Jesus Christ our Lord, who lives and reigns with his Father and the Holy Ghost.

III. Some time after they had occasion for Pope Alexander the Third's Protection, who granted it them so much the easier, because the Rabbin Jehiel was Superintendent of his House and Finances. The People of Italy bastinadoed the Jews in several places, and hinder'd them with Stones from celebrating their Feasts. They made their Complaints to the Pope, who granted them his Protection *, prohibiting any from taking away their Synagogues, and disturbing them with Insults, as they celebrated their Sabbaths, or exercised their Religion. But at the same time he order'd, that they should not have the Privilege to cite Church-men before a Civil Tribunal, nor take Possession of the Churches by vertue of Pawn or Sale. The Corruption must have been prodigious, when the Christians pawn'd or sold their Churches and Temples to the Jews.

Under so advantagious a Protection, the Circumcis'd flourish'd in Italy, till the end of this, and even in the following Century. † Cossi a little Borough of the Milanese, grew famous by a multitude of Illustrious Rabbins it sent out of it. Monza, the City where the Kings took the Iron Crown, produced many others. Ricina Nova, in the March of Ancona, had the same Honour.

IV. The beginnings of Alphonso the Eighth's Reign in Spain, were not to their Advantage. ‖ He was yet a Child, when his Father Sanchez the Desired was kill'd by the Sarazens: He ascended the Throne young. Moreover, as he was good, he was easily over-reach'd. Joseph the Jew was his first Minister * of State, who grew so potent, as to have his Coach and Guards: The Lords of his Court were often his Officers. Gonzales, an Officer under him, having committed some Fault that deserved that he should be disgraced for it, resolved to destroy his Benefactor and his Master. He declared to the King, he had the Secret of procuring him vast Sums; in order to which he demanded of this Prince eight Heads of the Jews at his own choice, which were granted him. Hereby he found an Expedient at once to satisfie two Passions, his Avarice, and Hatred of the Nation. He chose eight considerable Persons, whose Heads he lopp'd † Hermanni Opusculum de sui Conversione Carpzovio editum. ‖ Bern. Ep. 222. t. 1. p. 133. Not. p. 41. * An. 1155.

† An. 1146. ‖ Pontif. Rom. p. 47. * Concil. Lateran. III. Append. Pars 20. c. 1. p. 1640. † V. Bartol. Bibl. R.
‖ Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 98. * An. 1170.

off

off, and confiſcated their Eſtates to his own Profit; he made himſelf an advantagious Amends for what he had given to the King: He thought it a good Market, and therefore offer'd a more conſiderable Sum, upon condition of having a greater number of Heads given up to him. But this Offer was not accepted, becauſe the King choſe rather to reap the Profit without the Effuſion of Blood, by obliging the richeſt of the Synagogue to ranſom their Lives. They did not ſtop there, for * it was debated in Council, whether they ſhould all be expell'd the Kingdom, and their Effects ſeiz'd on, wherewithal to ſupply the Charges of the War, without burthening the People with new Impoſitions. The Opinions were divided in Council, which gave the Jews time to deliberate among themſelves, and to offer a conſiderable Sum of Money. They pretend this Deliverance was owing to their Piety, and the Vehemence of their Prayers. No doubt they were very urgent in ſo imminent a Danger; but their Money was more efficacious than their Faſts and Prayers. They were at the higheſt pitch of Joy, when they ſaw Gonzales fall into Diſgrace with the King, who cauſed him to be arreſted Priſoner, notwithſtanding his great Services and Victories he had won; for his Priſon and his Fall eſtabliſh'd their Tranquility.

V. Moreover, Alphonſo grew ſo deſperately in Love † with a beautiful Jewiſh Woman, as to Sacrifice his Glory, and the Intereſts of his Kingdom, to her. The Lords of his Court, ſcandaliz'd at it, uſed both Friendſhip and Violence to diſſipate the Charm. They kill'd the Miſtreſs, and made a Repreſentation of a kind of Apparition to the Gallant, that preach'd Chaſtity and Repentance to him: They even ſay, that God concern'd himſelf in it, and that the Victory which the Moors obtain'd over Alphonſo, was an exemplary Judgment of Heaven, to revenge a deſpiſed Bride.

Quicquid peccant Atridæ plectuntur Achivi.

The Jews took advantage of this happy Juncture, and grew ſo potent, that R. Eliakim, who then lived, and wrote at that time a Ritual of the Ceremonies obſerved in all the Synagogues, and which is call'd the Cuſtom of the Univerſe, reckon'd twelve thouſand Perſons of his Religion in the City of Toledo.

VI. They were alſo very numerous in Andaluſia, where they very much apply'd themſelves to Learning: But Study ſerved only to diſturb the Union of the Divines, who were then divided into three different Sects, which ‖ Maimonides, who then lived, has diſtinguiſh'd, and which he look'd upon as an unhappy Conſequence of the Deſtruction of the Sanhedrim.

Indeed, whilſt that Tribunal remain'd, the Oral Law was not written, by which they avoided the Diverſity of Opinions, the Difficulties and Errors that ariſe from the Text of a Book, or from the different Readings of the Copiers. They were contented then to whiſper in the Ear of the Wiſe, whatever was great and ſublime in Religion, and the thing depended abſolutely upon the Sanhedrim. 'Tis thus Men reaſon, who would be wiſer than God, or that prefer their Imaginations before the Precepts of the Law. For did not God ordain, that his Law, which contain'd all that was eſſential in the old Religion, ſhould be written? And if he had reveal'd Myſteries, why would he have them conceal'd?

Beſides Maimonides does not diſſemble, that this Precaution occaſion'd a great Miſchief; for the Tenets of Religion wear out of the Memory of Men when they are not written, and leave only ſome faint Tracks behind not eaſie to be diſcover'd. Something of it, ſaid he, is found in the Talmud and the Midraſchot, but this is ſo wrapp'd up, that 'tis impoſſible to penetrate them; and moſt Men, wearied with the Labour of this Purſuit, imagine there is no Soul nor Kernel in the Stone which they cannot break; this not only occaſion'd Ignorance, but alſo diverſity of Opinions and Parties, when they argued about the Nature and Perfections of God, or the Creation of the World.

VII. In effect the Caraites, and part of the Excellents, follow'd the Sect of the Speakers. They had imagined, ſays Maimonides, the Wiſdom of Words דברם Devarim, whence they had the Title given them of Meddaberim the Speakers. Maimonides is guilty of two Miſtakes about the Origine of this Sect. 1. 'Twas not the Chriſtians that invented this Wiſdom of Words to confute the Philoſophers; the Glory of it ſhould wholly redound to the Iſhmaelites. 2. The Truth is, Giahed a famous Muſſulman Doctor, who lived at Bagdet * in the middle of the Ninth Century, after he had read the Greek Philoſophers, and drawn all that he thought good out of them, compoſed a Book, which the Arabians call Elma Al Kelam, The Science of Words: And 'twas doubtleſs from the Title of this Arabick Book, written by one of the moſt eloquent Writers of that Nation, that the Name of Speakers was taken, with whom the Chriſtians are impertinently confounded.

VIII. Maimonides pretends that the Chriſtians, who were ſpread over Greece, eaſily perceiv'd that their Religion was overturn'd by the Principles of the old Philoſophy, which was admir'd in that Country; and that to remedy ſo great a Miſchief, they imagin'd other Principles to prop up their Faith, and to overturn Philoſophy. The Chriſtians, and the Iſhmaelites their Imitators, were leſs concern'd, ſays he, to examine Nature and Truth, than to ſupport their Opinions. They imagin'd what beſt ſuited with their Religion, and afterwards determin'd that the thing was ſo; and as they proteſted they had nothing in view but the Search of Truth, they deceiv'd their Poſterity by theſe Proteſtations, who believ'd them upon their Word without Examination. The Iſhmaelites, who prided themſelves in Learning, and who cauſed the Writings of the Philoſophers and Chriſtians to be tranſlated, took from one and the other what beſt ſerved their turn, without troubling their Heads, whether theſe Principles had been confuted.

IX. Maimonides † enters into the Particulars of theſe Principles, and he ſays, that the Speakers maintain'd, that the World was compos'd of Atoms, from whence they concluded there was a Vacuum. Thus Epicurus's Philoſophy, which Gaſſendus has follow'd, had a mighty Vogue among the Arabians: They ſaid alſo, that there was nothing in the Univerſe, but Subſtance and Accidents, and that Subſtantial Forms are Accidents; that as Subſtance cannot be without Accidents, Accidents could not ſubſiſt without Subſtance. 'Tis no wonder that Maimonides, who was much devoted to Ariſtotle's Sentiments, ſhould reject theſe Principles; but he ought not from thence to conclude, as he does, that the Chriſtians invented them through Intereſt, ſince the Philoſophers had maintain'd them before. Nor ought he to affirm, that the Followers of theſe Principles did not prove God's Unity and Per-

* Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 98. Pars 1. c. 71. p. 133, 134, 138.
† Mariana de Reb. Hiſp. l. 11. c. 18, 19. p. 481, &c.
‖ Maimonides more Nevochim.
* He died there in the Year of the Hegira 255, of the Chriſtian Æra 868.
† C. 123. p. 148.

fections, the Novelty of the World, and the manner of its Production. For the Christians reason juster than he. But it was easie to make it criminal to the Caraites, who deviating from Tradition, and other receiv'd Principles of the Jews, reason like the Christians, upon the Nature of God and his Perfections.

X. There was a second Division in the Nation; for most of the Doctors follow'd the Principles of the Motazales, which were opposite to those of the Assarians.

The Motazales were Separatists among the Mussulmans; wherefore this Name has often been given to the Pharisees; but 'tis doing them an Injury: For whereas they separated from the rest of Men for Devotion, the Motazales were Schismaticks; Vassel their Founder having separated from his Master in the Year * 723, upon some diversity of Opinion.

First, The Motazales maintain'd, That the Attributes of the Divine Essence ought not to be separated. "God, said they, does not know by a "Science distinct from himself, nor act by a Power "separate from his Essence; but he knows and acts "by his Essence:" Whereas the Assarians ascribe to God a Knowledge, a Power, and Life. Some † even took literally what they read in the Alchoran and Scripture, that God sees and hears, that he rises and sits, and has created all things by his hand. And they might defend themselves by the Testimony of some Jews, who ascrib'd to God Tears, and the roaring of a Lion.

Secondly, The Motazales believ'd with all the Sect of Aly, that the Alchoran was created, and consequently was not eternal. They said also, that the Arabians could make as good a Book, if they apply'd themselves to it. This Controversie caus'd violent Motions, because the Abassides cruelly persecuted those, who deny'd the Production of this Work.

Lastly, They disputed, like the Christians, about the impossibility of losing Faith. The Chagians maintain'd, That Faith was destroy'd by the great Sins the Mussulmans committed. The Assarians believ'd on the other hand, That a Man always preserv'd the Character of Faithful, in the midst of the greatest Disorders; and the Motazales held a Medium; teaching, That Faith was not lost, but yet the Title of Faithful could not be given to him, who commits a gross Sin. Lastly, they had a very hot dispute, about the manner of God's operating, and over-ruling the Actions of Men. The Motazales are persuaded, that God ‖ has only a general Influence over Action; that he leaves Man an entire Liberty, by which he deserves either Recompence or Punishment. The Sonnites, who are reckon'd Orthodox, said on the contrary, that God was the Author of Good and Evil. Some believe, it is making God the Author of Sin, to attribute to him any thing farther than the direction of Events, which they call Equity; and others fancy, that by confining God to this direction, they rob him of his Power. Hence Hamadani, Head * of the Motazales, seeing a Sonnite Professor enter, cry'd out to him, Praise be given to him, who is remote and separate from all Evil by his Holiness; that is, who partakes not in Wicked Actions: And the other reply'd to him, Praise be given to him who permits nothing to be done in his Kingdom without his Order. Hereby he exalted the Power of God, without which nothing is done in the World.

XI. It is not probable that the Jews concerned themselves about the Creation of the Alchoran; but they adopted and followed the Sentiments of Motazales, about the Nature of God, his Perfections and Attributes; and believed with these Separatists, that God had left Man a full Liberty in all his Actions, and had only a general Influence over Events. Thus doubtless, we are to explain what Maimonides said of it; who was so far from looking upon those who took this side, as Schismaticks, that he treats them as Friends and Companions.

XII. In the mean time there was a third Party, who followed the old Philosophers, in all things that were not directly contrary to Religion; and Maimonides, who had carefully read Aristotle, was one of these.

XIII. Besides this Division, they underwent a Persecution at the end of that Century, † in the Kingdom of Leon. Vorstius is mistaken, in saying, that it was ‖ in the Kingdom of Lyons in France, that Hillel's twenty four sacred Books appear'd: For the dispersion of these Books was caus'd by the Persecution; and the Jews were so far from being persecuted at Lyons, that there is no Kingdom of Lyons in France. The Learned * have a great value for the the Manuscript of the Bible, which goes by Hillel's Name. Some Christians make the Author of it live at the return from the Babylonish Captivity; others plac'd him sixty Years before Christ †. The Jews add, that this Copy was preserv'd in the Kingdom of Leon, and that the Persecuted People drew it out, and occsion'd its Dispersion. It wants two Verses of Joshua ‖; and if this Manuscript had an Antiquity of nine hundred Years, which is given it, there would be room to justifie the Massora, which has not reckon'd them; and to confess, that these two Verses ought to be expung'd from the Hebrew and Latin Copies of the Christians. Cunæus concludes on the contrary, that we are much oblig'd to the Jews, because being absolute Masters of this Copy, at a time when the Christians understood not a word of Hebrew, it were easie for 'em to have alter'd all the Passages that were against 'em; but yet they have not done it.

XIV. But these Observations are not so important as is believ'd; for these two Verses, which they would have blotted out of Joshua upon Hillel's Authority, only teaches us, that Cities of Refuge were given out of the Tribe of Reuben, Bezer with her Suburbs, and Jahazah with her Suburbs, Kedemoth with her Suburbs, and Mephaath with her Suburbs, four Cities. The Fact reported by Joshua is certain, since it is read in the Chronicles, from whence Grotius thinks it was convey'd into the Book of Joshua. Not only the Septuagint, or at least the Authors of a Greek Version much ancienter than Hillel's Manuscripts, have related this Division; but have explained it, by observing, that these Cities were Places of Refuge, situate on this side Jordan, on the Coasts of Jericho. 'Tis reasonable therefore to believe, that this is the more ancient Reading; which Conjecture is the better confirm'd, in that the Tribe of Reuben must have had its Cities of Refuge; and having them, it is not probable they would have been omitted by Joshua, in the Catalogue he gives of them. But tho' these two Verses were wanting, yet it were absurd to accuse the Jews of suppressing them with an ill design; for this is one of the inevitable Faults of Copyers, when a Manuscript is successively transcrib'd by many Persons. Indeed Hillel's Copy is no longer in being, but only the

* Of the Hegyra 125. † Abulpharag. Dyn. IX. p. 105. Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 684. ‖ Abulpharag. p. 105. * Herbelot. Hamadani. † An. 1496. ‖ Ganz Tsemach David An. 956. p. 139. Vorst. ibid. * V. Leusden Præf. ad B. Heb. † Cunæus de Rep. Hebr. l. 1. c. 18. p. 116. ‖ Joshua 22. 36, 37.

Trans-

Tranſcripts, which were taken from it in the Year 1140. as Ganz affirms. And therefore we have reaſon to ſay, that they have but an Antiquity of five hundred Years: On the other hand, there is no reaſon to commend the Jews for their Honeſty; for the diverſity of Copies would have created new Difficulties, and 'tis to their Advantage to have no difference betwixt their Copies and ours. But, in reality, tho' they ſhould have corrupted Hillel's Copy in Spain, ſhould we have been oblig'd to believe them at a time that the Copies of the Bible were diſpers'd into all Places and Languages? And wou'd Hillel's Manuſcript have carry'd it above all the reſt?

XV. Their Fortune in France was pretty much diverſify'd. They were accus'd at † Paris for murdering St. William; and for their Puniſhment, they were ſentenc'd to the Fire. Indeed they deſerved Death, if they were guilty of that Crime; and if no Innocent Perſon was involv'd in the Fate of the Guilty, they had nothing to complain of, but of their ſelves and their own Cruelty.

They were very hardly dealt with at Beziers. On Palm-Sunday, every Year, commenc'd a certain Paſtime which pleas'd the People, who were careful to renew it. This People flock'd out at Night, ſcoured the Streets, broke the Jews Windows, and ſtoned all thoſe that fell in their way. The Biſhop having often ſeen this inhumane Proceeding, which was their Preparation for the Eaſter Communion, treated with the Jews, and oblig'd them to buy off this Inſult by paying him a Tribute. The Treaty is very ſingular; for the Biſhop ‖ engaged himſelf and his Succeſſors to preſerve the Jews from Inſults, from War, and Lapidation, by day and by night, all the time betwixt Palm-Sunday and Eaſter; declaring, that he would ſhut the Doors of the Church againſt whomſoever, that ſhould break open thoſe of the Jews; and on their part, he obliged them to pay annually to the Biſhop two hundred Sols de Melgeuil, which might amount at that time to four Marks in Silver. They paid moreover above four Silver Marks to the Church of St. Nazarus, to purchaſe Ornaments. This Treaty was concluded at Beziers, in the Year 1160. and this made them pretty eaſie, till they were expell'd under Philip Auguſtus.

XVI. This Prince, * at the beginning of his Reign, aſſuming Airs of Devotion, baniſh'd the Jews out of his Kingdom, confiſcated their Eſtates, and only permitted them to ſell their Moveables, and to carry away the Money, which was reducing 'em to the laſt Extremity; ſince the People taking advantage of this Circumſtance, refus'd to purchaſe, or to pay. Hiſtorians even complain, † that they rob'd the Fugitives of their Money, and brought them to ſo great Straits, that a great many had much ado to bear it. Some loſt their Lives, as Jacob of Orleans, who was knock'd on the Head in the City that gave him his Birth and his Name.

Rigord, ‖ who wrote the Life of Philip Auguſtus, ſays, that by this Exile he revenged the Death of a young Man, nam'd Richard, whom the Jews had Crucify'd at Paris; and that he was convinc'd by this Example, of what he had often heard the young Princes ſay, that were Educated with him, that the Jews every Year committed ſuch a Murder. This Accuſation often recurs, and all Nations charge this Crime upon the Jews, whilſt no body can conjecture the Original of this Imputation. Hiſtorians vary about this Matter *: Du Mont, who continu'd Sigebert's Chronicle, and liv'd at the time of this Murder at Bec, from whence he was taken with twelve others, to be preferr'd to an Abbey, aſſerts, that it was not at Paris, but at Pontoiſe that Richard was kill'd; whereas I don't believe there were Jews enough then at Pontoiſe to make a Synagogue, and to venture upon ſuch a Murder. The Author of Faſciculus Temporum has plac'd this Event in the Year 1166. in which Philip Auguſtus was not yet King.

Mille decem decies, ſex decies quoque ſeni.

However, Richard was look'd upon as a Martyr. He was bury'd in the Church-yard of the little Fields, which ſtill preſerves its Name. He was afterwards remov'd to Innocents Church; from whence the Engliſh carry'd away his Body, in Charles V. Reign, leaving only his Head in the Church, where it performed Miracles. This was the Ground of the Pretence to fall upon the Jews. They were ſeiz'd in all the Synagogues, plunder'd of every thing that was moſt valuable, and at laſt expell'd the Kingdom. Nauclerus †, who alſo relates, that the Jews aſſembled ſecretly on Maunday-Thurſday, and every Year, in hatred to the Chriſtian Religion, they ſacrific'd a Child, aſſigns another more probable Cauſe of this Baniſhment: for it was repreſented to the King, that the Jews were ſo Rich and Potent, that they poſſeſs'd one half of Paris, and oblig'd the Chriſtian Slaves to Judaize: Thoſe that temporiz'd, and embrac'd Chriſtianity, continu'd the peaceable Poſſeſſion of their Eſtates; but the others left the Kingdom, and their Synagogues were turn'd into Churches.

XVII. Philip did not always remain an Enemy to this Nation: Whether he had only made the Decree of Baniſhment, at the ſollicitation of the Cardinal de Champagne, Brother to the Queen Mother, and firſt Miniſter of State, who was reſolv'd to purge the Kingdom of a Peſt ſo prejudicial to the State; or was willing to revenge himſelf on Pope Innocent III. who had a mind to oblige him to take again the Princeſs Hembruge, and caus'd the Interdict to be executed ſo ‖ rigorouſly in the Kingdom, that the Dead continu'd a Week unbury'd, and the Living without Divine Service; or whether, Laſtly, he was ſenſible that the State ſuffer'd too much by loſing ſuch a multitude of rich Merchants and ingenious Artiſts, he recall'd them from their Baniſhment. The Zealots blam'd this Recal of the Enemies of Chriſtianity; the People murmur'd, and only excus'd the Prince upon the Notion of a Fourth Motive that induc'd him to it; which was, to draw Money out of them for the Cruſade; as if it were lawful to do Evil, upon the view of an imaginary Good. However it was, the exil'd Jews return'd *; but for no long time.

XVIII. They were expell'd out of England in the beginning of the eleventh Century †, which was one of the great Exiles they complain of, becauſe they were great Sufferers in it. But for all this ‖ they had ſettled again in that Kingdom; and were ſo numerous in Henry II. Reign, as to preſent a Petition to him for new Burying-places. They had only one at London, whither they were forc'd to carry the ſtinking Corpſes from the remote Countries, or to leave them without Burial. Henry, convinc'd of the reaſonableneſe of their Requeſt, * aſſign'd them places to bury their Dead, in all the Cities where they were ſettled.

† Rob de Monte App. ad Chron. Sigeb. An. 1177. p. 661. ‖ Catel. Mem. du Lang. l. 3. p. 523. * Ste. Marth. Hiſt. of the Houſe of France, l. VI. p 344. † Al. 1179. al. 1182. An. 1186. Ganz Tſemach, David p 139. ‖ Rigord de Geſtis Phil. Aug. Hiſt. Franc. t. V. p. 61. * Rob. de Monte Append. ad Chr. Sigeb. An. 1180. Piſtor. Hiſt. Germ. t. 2. Faſciculus Temp. lb. t. 3. p. 78. † Naucl. Chron. Genar. 40. t. 2. p. 862. An. 1182. ‖ Spond. An. 1198. n. 9. p. 3. * Ganz Tſemach p. 140. † An. 1020. ‖ Polyd. Virg. l. 13. p. 236. * An. 1179.

XIX. But

XIX. But they ſuffer'd * much under Richard, becauſe the Court and People were prepoſſeſs'd with a Notion, that the Jews were all Conjurers; and might commit ſome Witchcraft upon the King, if they were preſent at his Coronation. Severe † Injunctions were given to all the Jews, not to appear at it. Some who came from far and near at a great Expence, to ſee the Ceremony, were reſolv'd not to loſe their Labor nor Money. They flatter'd themſelves they ſhould not be known, becauſe they were Strangers in the City; but they were miſtaken. The Officers having diſcover'd ſome of them at Weſtminſter, fell upon them with Staves. They dragg'd them out of the Church half dead; but the noiſe of this Execution being ſpread in the City, ſet the People in an uproar; who broke open the Houſes of the Jews, and kill'd thoſe they met with. Happy were they that found faithful Friends to ſhelter them. The Tumult ſpread from London into the Country; from the Capital to the Counties, where great numbers were ſlain. The day after the Coronation, Orders were given to ſtop theſe violent Proceedings; but whether they were ill executed, or that it was impoſſible to put ſuch a ſudden check to the Fury of the People, the Perſecution laſted almoſt all the Year, which was that of the Jubilee. Trivet ‖ places this Event in the Year 1190. and ſo does Genebrard.

XX. A greater Calamity ſtill befel them when Richard Cruſaded. The Jews thought they had purchaſed this Prince's Favour, by the great Sums they had brought into his Treaſury, to ſupport his Expence; but the People reſolv'd to make a general Maſſacre of them. This was perform'd at Norwich, where they began. Many of them dy'd at Stamford and St. Edmonds. The Miſchief was more terrible at York; where fifteen hundred had ſeiz'd on the City to defend themſelves; but being beſieged they offer'd * to capitulate, and to ranſom their Lives with Money. The Offer being refuſed, one of them cry'd in Deſpair, That it was better † to die couragiouſly for the Law, than to fall into the hands of the Chriſtians. Every one immediately took his Knife and ſtab'd his Wife and Children. The Men afterwards retir'd into the King's Palace, which they ſet on fire, in which they conſumed themſelves with the Palace and Furniture. The People with ſatisfaction entred the deſolate Houſes, loaded themſelves with Plunder, diſcharg'd all their Debts, by burning the Notes they had given to the Bankers. The King with grief beheld the Slaughter, which could not be ſtop'd; and ſo ended the twelfth Century.

* An. 1188. † Matt. Paris, p. 108. ‖ Triveti Chronicon Spicel. Dacher. t. 8. p. 498. * An. 1196 † Matt. Paris p. 111. Polyd. Virgil. l. 14. p. 248.

CHAP. XI.

The Reaſons of the Chriſtians making ſevere and ignominious Laws againſt the Jews.

I. The Deſign of this Chapter. II. The Jews of Zeal and Affection diſtinguiſh'd from the reſt. III. The Church ought to perſecute. IV. Violence is call'd Gentleneſs; the common uſe of Words chang'd. V. The neceſſity of repreſenting the Jews as they are. The Erroneous are neither Murderers nor Poiſoners. VI. A juſt Idea of Puniſhments; Exile is no Indulgence. VII. A Confutation of Thomaſſin concerning the Example of Avitus. VIII. Baptiſm is no Grace to the incredulous Jew. IX. The Inquiſition is not a reſtoring of the ancient Pennance. X. Different Accuſations againſt the Jews, occaſion the making of Laws. XI. Their Hatred to the Chriſtians. XII. Juſtin Martyr of old accus'd them of it. XIII. Their Apology. XIV. Whether they Crucified the Chriſtians. XV. The Danger they expos'd themſelves to. XVI. At what time this Accuſation began. XVII. Cruelties purſuant to theſe Accuſations. XVIII. Peter de Blois excuſes the Jews. XIX. Miracles wrought by crucify'd Children ſuſpected. XX. The piercing of the Hoſt. XXI. This matter diſcuſs'd. XXII. Miracles examined. XXIII. Rejected by exact Hiſtorians. XXIV. Bleeding Images. XXV. A Tempeſt rais'd at Rome by one of theſe Images. XXVI. The Jews Rebellions. XXVII. The Treaſons they are accus'd of.

I. SInce we are entred upon the Ages, in which the Jews were expos'd to cruel Perſecutions; either from the Fury of the People, who accus'd them of ſeveral Crimes, that they might have a pretence to puniſh them; or from the Authority of Princes, who fancy'd they ought to deſtroy that Nation, whoſe Anceſtors had crucify'd the Meſſiah; and to Violence, added a multitude of Edicts and Declarations, to repeal their Privileges, and to render them odious and infamous: We have thought it proper to make a Collection of theſe Edicts, that the Reader may at one view, take in all the different Methods that have been employ'd in all times, to diſgrace a Nation they deſign'd to deſtroy. Theſe Edicts, had they been diſpers'd through the Body of this Hiſtory, had been loſt and bury'd in it, and it would have been an hard matter to have found them. But as I have endeavour'd ſo to digeſt all the Subjects of this Collection, as that the Reader might, upon occaſion, eaſily recur to them; I thought it neceſſary to make one Chapter by it ſelf, of the Decrees, and Councils, and Declarations, which Princes have publiſh'd in all Ages againſt the Jews. And in order to render it leſs tedious, I ſhall rank them under certain Heads, becauſe the ſame thing has been decreed at different times, but in a different manner. But the better to determin about the juſtice or injuſtice of theſe Decrees, we ſhall briefly examine, whether it be reaſonable to perſecute the Jews. They ſay, that God has diſpers'd them, becauſe he would * have Witneſſes of his Unity in all Idolatrous Nations. The Chriſtians maintain, that they have deſerv'd Baniſhment, and other Puniſhments, for their Cruelty in crucifying Jeſus Chriſt, and their Obſtinacy againſt him. But more equitable People could wiſh they were more humanly treated. Let us conſider this diverſity of Opinions.

II. † Some think the Jews ought to be paid in the ſame Coin they lent to the Idolatrous Nations. They had a publick Hatred to the Heathens, which was never reſtrain'd, but by neceſſity, or an half

* Cardoſo das Excelencias. † Weemſe Treatiſe of the four degenerate Sons. The Jew Sect. b. p. 338, 339.

Con-

Converſion; as was that of the Proſelytes of the Gate. They tolerated theſe; but as they hated the reſt, and murder'd them when they could, we ought alſo to tolerate the Circumcis'd, who have ſome inclination to the Chriſtian Religion, or retain to the Synagogue by the Misfortune of their Birth. But we ought not, ſay they, to have the ſame regard for Jews of Zeal and Affection; who hate the Chriſtians, blaſpheme the Meſſiah; becauſe theſe * ſpeak the Language of Aſdod, and † thoſe who call themſelves Jews are a Synagogue of Satan.

III. Others are perſuaded, that the Church alone ought to reign; that Truth has its Privileges which Falſhood can never obtain. 'Tis a Queen that cannot bear a Rival, but ought to aſſault and deſtroy her, wherever ſhe has the Face to appear. The Edicts and Privileges which Neceſſity extorts from the Mouths and Hands of Princes, are no bar to her Privileges, nor ought to be any impediment to her Purſuits. The Erroneous poiſon and kill the Soul; and therefore deſerve the Puniſhment of Murderers and Poiſoners; which is the more juſtly inflicted, as the Death they cauſe is Eternal; and the Soul is more Excellent than the Body.

IV. But others endeavour to ſoften or diſguiſe the Odium of this Notion. They change the common meaning of Words, and colour Violence with the pretext of Charity for the Erroneous. They call it an Holy Severity. They ſay, that the Church has always employ'd Lenity; but they ſay withal, that the denying all Liberty of Conſcience, forcing away their Children, Exile and Confiſcations, are Perſuaſions || rather than Violences or Conſtraints. Whatever is done to avoid them is ſtill voluntary and free. Fathers, as we have ſaid elſewhere, Husbands, Maſters, exerciſe gentle Chaſtiſements upon their Children, Wives, and Servants, to reduce them to their Duty. God deals in like manner with Sinners to make them righteous, and with the Righteous to make them perfect. In all this there is no Conſtraint or Violence: They are only ſomewhat ſtrong Perſuaſions; and Liberty is not forced but cured. The Will is not the leſs free, but it grows more ſound. There is no Injury, nor Violence done either to the Mind or Body by the Cure of it, when it is deliver'd from Diſeaſes, and heal'd of mortal Wounds, tho' it be by Pain and Torture.

A Council of Paris, held in the ſeventh Century, conſtrain'd the Jews to receive Baptiſm, under pretence, that they had tranſgreſs'd one of its Decrees. But we are told, that * the only Puniſhment that this Canon ſpeaks of, is a Favour, and the greateſt of all Favours for a Jew; as granting him the Privilege of being baptiz'd with his whole Family. The Favour is ſo much the greater, becauſe the Sacraments of Confirmation and the Euchariſt are uſually receiv'd with Baptiſm.

God is bleſſed by ſome, becauſe the Inquiſition, which they think is nothing but a Reſtoration of the ancient Diſcipline of Pennance, was eſtabliſh'd not only in Italy and Spain, but in Germany and France.

Laſtly, The Church, which abhors Bloodſhed, for, Eccleſia neſcit ſanguinem, and delivers up to the Secular Arm all that it has condemn'd, without permitting its Judgment to be reviſ'd; is, however, ſay they, an indulgent and charitable Mother, who has no hand in the Murder of her Children.

V. I could wiſh the Church, which boaſts to have Truth for her Inheritance, and to defend the Rights of it, would not thus trifle with the Ambiguity of Words, but act with more Sincerity.

Firſt: It were to be wiſh'd, that without liſtning to the Dictates of an Humane Paſſion, or the Heat of a Faction, which is term'd a Zeal for God, the Enemies of Religion were always repreſented in their true Light, inſtead of rendring them odious by Metaphorical Terms, and drawing cruel and barbarous Conſequences from them. The greateſt Men have been ſubject to this Fault; but inſtead of imitating them, and making uſe of a Great Name to colour Injuſtice, their Example ought to teach us more Equity. Thus St Chryſoſtom being told, That a Woman had been ſtrongly importun'd by a Chriſtian to go to a Synagogue to take an Oath, becauſe he imagin'd it would be more ſolemnly done in that place; fell into violent Heats: He argu'd juſtly at firſt, by telling the Woman, that it was an Error to believe, that Oaths were good, or the better from any particular Place: But at the ſame time he overſtrain'd his Chriſtianity, by aſſerting, That the Goſpel did not allow an Oath to be requir'd of any one. He carry'd his Hatred to the Synagogue farther, in ſaying, † theſe were Houſes of Lewdneſs, ſo many Retreats for wild Beaſts, and the Habitation of Devils. And as if it were not enough for a great Biſhop thus to defile his Paper, he adds, that they did not worſhip God in theſe Places, becauſe they did not worſhip his Son; and that he that knows the Father, knows the Son; and the Worſhip perform'd there terminates on the Devil, becauſe God has forſaken that Worſhip. Can any one reaſon more pitifully than St. Chryſoſtom did upon this account?

What is the meaning of thoſe who ſay, the Erroneous kill and poiſon the Soul? 'Tis a Metaphor indeed, and a Compariſon which a Preacher may employ. But can Divines reaſonably draw from hence a Conſequence for puniſhing Poiſoners, and the Erroneous alike? Or build a Doctrine tending to the Deſtruction of part of Mankind, upon a Conſequence of this nature? A Murderer or Poiſoner kill the Body againſt the Will, and without the Knowledge of the Perſon murder'd: He takes the Poiſon, becauſe he does not know it; or receives a mortal Wound, which he can't ward off: But the Erroneous have the Lamp of Reaſon to diſtinguiſh Truth from Error, and they voluntarily eſpouſe it. Puniſhments ought to be of the ſame Nature with the Crimes. Hereticks that poiſon the Soul, ought to be chaſtiſed with a Spiritual Puniſhment, ſuch as the denial of the Sacraments, and the Spiritual Advantages reaped in the Church, and the Murderer that kills the Body ought to ſuffer a Bodily Puniſhment. Theſe Ideas then ought not to be confounded, and we muſt not ſport with the Equivocation of Words, to eſtabliſh or authorize Perſecution againſt the Erroneous.

VI. They more manifeſtly delude themſelves, who take Puniſhments for Perſuaſions, which rob not the Soul of its Liberty. Thoſe gentle Severities, which oblige a Man to baniſh himſelf his Country, and to ſeek a Sanctuary in Foreſts and Caves, or commonly among unrelenting Strangers, where Miſery and Grief eat him up, are contradictory things. If the Church has a mind to puniſh the Erroneous, and believes her ſelf privileg'd to do it, let her ſpeak ſincerely, and authorize, if ſhe dare, Cruelty and Violence; but let her not call Diſgrace, and Pain, and Miſery an Indulgence. Will it not be acknowledg'd, that in civil Society, Exile is one of the ſevereſt and moſt mortifying Puniſhments? And has it not always been ſo? Are not the loſs of Eſtates, confiſcated by the Sovereign, pecuniary Taxes, the depriving of the means of Livelihood, the ruin and ſtarving of a Family cau-

* Nehem. 13. 25. † Apocal. 11. 9. || Thomaſſin Traite Hiſtor. des Edites 11. Part. c. 5. p. 53. * Ibid. 1 Part. c. 49. p. 633, 634. † Chryſoſt. adv. Jud. hom. 1. p. 391. hom. 3. p. 439.

ſed

ſed by Edicts, ſo many cruel Puniſhments in all Nations of the World? Why muſt the Language be changed in Religion? Has the Church a Power to transform, what all Nations think a harſh and inſupportable Puniſhment into Gentleneſs? Shall we ſay, that thoſe Thouſands of Jews that were baniſh'd Spain, and periſh'd with Famine and Miſery, did not ſuffer? Or that the Neceſſity of leaving all, and expoſing themſelves to manifeſt Peril of their Lives, ought to be conſider'd as a Perſwaſion which prejudiced not their Liberty? Let People ſpeak plainly; let them diſtinguiſh the Degrees of Puniſhment, or that of Death, from other Puniſhments inflicted by the Church; but let them not ſay at the ſame time, that the latter are only Gentleneſs and Perſwaſions.

VII. Father Thomaſſin * authoriſes himſelf by the Example of Avitus, who ſaid to the Jews of Clermont, I don't force you by Violence to imbrace Chriſtianity; which is ſo true, cry'd he, that theſe ſorts of Menaces, or Puniſhments, are not violent Conſtraints, but Inducements to remove the Impediments to your Inſtruction and Converſion. Could any thing be more pitifully ſaid, and would it change the Nature of the thing, tho' Avitus had ſaid it a thouſand Years before us; or if Gregory de Tours † had related it with Applauſe? Hiſtorians agree that Avitus gave the Option either of Chriſtianity or Baniſhment.

Aut admitte preces, aut, rogo, cede loco.

Let us ceaſe then to ſay, that Baniſhment is a Puniſhment, or acknowledge, that there was Violence uſed in the Converſion of the Jews at Clermont. Avitus is not to be conſulted about the Nature of his Actions, but we are to judge of it by the Idea that all the World has had of Baniſhment. Was Exile a Puniſhment to the perſevering Jews, who left the City Clermont, with their Houſes, Employments and Families? And if it was a violent Puniſhment to them, how did it ceaſe to be ſo in reſpect of others? And how could Avitus ſay, without Falſehood, that he did not compel them to imbrace Chriſtianity? His Injuſtice was ſo much the greater, becauſe he not being a Sovereign, but an Eccleſiaſtical Subject of the Kingdom, could not baniſh the Inhabitants of Clermont, but by one of thoſe inſolent Attempts too common with Church-men. Father Thomaſſin acknowledges it ||, ſince he indeavours to ſuppoſe, that Avitus baniſh'd them by a Decree, which he obtain'd by his Intereſt with the Prince; but this is falſe.

VIII. I can't imagine how Men can carry the Fallacy ſo high, as to give the Title of Grace to the Sacraments, conferr'd on thoſe that deſpiſe and reject them. Nevertheleſs this Language is attributed to Councils; and purſuant to this Style has been compoſed a vaſt Hiſtorical Treatiſe of Edicts, which is nothing but a Series of Sophiſtry and Ambiguity. We can't conceive the meaning of the Council held at Paris in preſence of Clotaire in the Year 615, conſiſting of 79 Biſhops, which forbad the Jews to have any Imploy in the Militia, or to bring any Action againſt the Chriſtians, and order'd, that if any one violated the Decrees and Ordinance of this Council, * both he and all his Family ſhould receive the Grace of Baptiſm from the Hand of the Biſhop. I ſhall not obſerve that this Council cauſed thoſe to be baptized, who did not believe there was any Grace in Baptiſm, ſince it was impoſed upon them againſt their Wills, and as a Puniſhment for the Violation of the Canons. But the Council calls that Grace, which it inflicts as a Puniſhment, and can in no wiſe be conſider'd as a Grace, ſince the Sacrament is ineffectual to the Incredulous, and by a much ſtronger Reaſon to thoſe who have an Abhorrence to it. The modern Hiſtorian going farther than the Fathers of the Council, adds, that Baptiſm is the greateſt Grace that can be conferr'd on a Jew, in as much as Confirmation and the Euchariſt were receiv'd with it at the ſame time. But on the contrary, the Puniſhment was multiplied in proportion to the Multiplication of the Sacraments; becauſe not only the Jews Horror was redoubled, but his eternal Condemnation was aggravated thereby. The Sacrament is a Grace to thoſe who receive it with Faith; becauſe to ſuch it is attended with a ſaving Efficacy. But 'tis impoſing upon ones ſelf to term it a Grace, for thoſe who acknowledge neither Grace nor Sacraments, and only partake of them by conſtraint to ſave their Lives.

IX. Is it not a very palpable Error, to maintain that the Church imbrues not its Hands in Blood, Eccleſia neſcit ſanguinem, when it arms the Secular Power to puniſh thoſe it has condemned? We find Councils appointing the Whip or the Baſtinado †, to thoſe who eat with Heretical Clerks. This Puniſhment was common in the Synagogue in our Saviour's days; but is never the more Juſt for being ancient. It ought not to be permitted at preſent, in a Society that is only tolerated; for the Stripes of the Whip, from whatever Hand they come, are unjuſtly given for Errors; and the Legate who ſcourged with his own Hand the old Count of Toloſe, dragging him with his Stool by the Neck like a Beaſt, ought to be condemned, inſtead of meriting Praiſe.

Laſtly, Can it be ſaid that the Inquiſition is a Reſtauration of the Primitive Penance, and that the Marks it impreſſes, || have nothing ignominious in them; that all the Priſons, whether of the Inquiſition, or of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, are only places of Penitence, where it is wholly in the Power of the Criminals, to give themſelves, by this means, an Amneſty for all their paſt Crimes, as to Corporal Puniſhments? If it were not the only Drift of ſome Hiſtorians to dazle, and deceive their Readers, they would draw the Court of Inquiſition in its natural Colours, which would make us abhor it, inſtead of ſaying, We * ought to be cautious, when we ſpeak of the rigorous Tribunals of the Church, leſt we ſhould cenſure what rather merits our Commendation. Lenity; but a true and ſincere Lenity ought to be practiſed in proportion as the Truth is taught, ſince that Truth is no other ways ſalutary, than in proportion as it is known, and voluntarily imbraced. Corporal Pains and Puniſhments ought only to be inflicted for Faults that diſturb civil Society; and the Church ought to imploy no other Arms againſt the Erroneous, than the Word to teach them, or Excommunication to deprive them of the Sacraments, when they render themſelves unworthy of them, and diſgrace the Church they were Members of with Novelties. As the Church takes only the Care of Souls, it ought only to uſe Spiritual Means; and therefore the ſevere Tribunals of the Church, the Puniſhments which they decree, the Priſons to which the Erroneous are confined; thoſe Puniſhments to which they are condemn'd; thoſe ſanguinary and cruel Acts of Faith made from time to time againſt the Jews, where the Inquiſition reigns, are ſo many Acts of Inhumanity and Barbarity, which ought never to be ſeen among Chriſtians.

* Thomaſſ. Treatiſe of Edicts, 1 Part, c. 48. p. 631. † Gregor. Turon. l. 5. c. 11. p. 215. || Thomaſſ. ibid. • Concil. Pariſ. An. 615. c. 15. p. 1653. † Quod juniores Clerici, ſi præſumpſerint, vapulabunt. Concil. Hiſp. An. 517. c. 17. || Thomaſſ. Treatiſe of Edicts, 2 part, c. 12. p. 128. * Thomaſſ. ibid.

X. The

X. The Jews are accuſed of having frequently drawn upon themſelves the Puniſhments of the Church, by their many Attempts againſt her. I don't pretend always to excuſe them. 'Tis even impoſſible, but that in ſo long a Succeſſion of Ages, they muſt have committed ſeveral things to have incurr'd the Hatred and Vengeance of the Chriſtians. And therefore I ſhall faithfully relate what is ſaid againſt them, before I produce the Laws that have been made to reſtrain them.

XI. Firſt, It is complain'd, that they give themſelves the Liberty of abuſing and killing thoſe that deſert their Religion to turn Chriſtians. Conſtantine * ſentenced to the Fire thoſe that ſtoned the Chriſtian Proſelytes, or made them feel the Effects of their Fury: Which Decree was only made upon the Complaints which were brought to his Tribunal, againſt the Outragiouſneſs of the Jews. The Rigour of this Puniſhment did not daunt them; for in ſpite of the Fire they were threaten'd with, they continued to diſturb the Proſelytes. And therefore the Emperor renew'd his Prohibitions. Baronius, † who has quoted this laſt Law of Conſtantine, did not underſtand it: An ambiguous Conſtruction has made him give the words a quite different turn from the Prince's meaning. He forbids the Jews ‖ to diſturb him that is turn'd Chriſtian; whilſt Baronius makes him ſay, that he forbids the Chriſtian Proſelytes to moleſt the Jews.

Conſtantine ſeems to have mitigated the Puniſhment by this ſecond Law, tho' the Obſtinacy of the Jews, and their Obduration, merited an Aggravation of it; for he ſubmits them here only to an Arbitrary Puniſhment, proportioned to the Exigence of the caſe. This Difficulty is removed by two Obſervations; one, That it was not Juſt to inflict the ſame Puniſhment for all the Outrages the Jews committed againſt the Proſelytes: They cudgell'd one, and kill'd another, and theſe two Crimes ought to be differently puniſh'd: And therefore he leaves the Judges the liberty of proportioning the Puniſhment to the Fault: Beſides the Puniſhment of Burning being too cruel, it was fit to ſoften it. A ſecond Difficulty was form'd againſt the Imperial Laws, becauſe the Jews, being oppreſs'd and ſcatter'd, had no longer Authority to deſtroy the Deſerters of their Religion. But this is reaſoning againſt Matter of Fact. Beſides this Nation, tho' diveſted of Supream Authority, nevertheleſs beat and kill'd in ſecret ſuch as had deſerted them. The Jews pretend to have that Judgment of Zeal, by which they are permitted to kill thoſe that Blaſpheme the Name of God, or violate his Law. Their outragious Hatred to the Chriſtians proceeds ſo far, as to maintain *, That when a Traytor attempts to betray either the Goods or the Perſon of a Jew to the Nations, it is lawful for a private Man to kill him, even before he has executed his Deſign, provided he be aſſur'd he perſeveres in it; becauſe the Nation by this Death, is deliver'd of a Man, who might have betray'd many others. All Epicurean Hereticks (by which they mean all Idolaters, or Deſerters of the Law and Prophets) may be kill'd by a private Perſon, provided he do it publickly with a Sword; and if the Execution can't be publick, he may admit Fraud into it, till the Death be brought about. When for example, a Deſerter falls into a Well, he muſt be ſuffer'd to remain there, by telling him, that you will go and fetch ſome other help, and preſently return: And the Law is not violated by this Lye, becauſe the Deſerter's Name is aboliſh'd by his Apoſtacy. Laſtly, If there are any Nations, to which they ſhould ſhew Favour in acknowledgment of Services they have receiv'd, this Favour extends no farther than not to kill them. But you muſt leave them in danger, in a Precipice, or a Deep, and in the Sea; and this is founded upon the Law, which ſays, Thou ſhalt not ſtand againſt the Blood of thy Neighbour; that is, nothing ought to be neglected to ſave a Neighbour who is in danger of Death; but nothing like it ought to be done for the Gentiles, who are not of the Number of our Neighbours. 'Tis no wonder if ſuch like Maxims have drawn ſeveral unhapy Decrees upon the Jews from Chriſtian Princes.

XII. Juſtin Martyr † formerly reproach'd them with maſſacring the Chriſtians as often as they could do it with Impunity; and if they did not do it, it was purely out of fear of the Emperors and the Governours of Provinces: They ſeized on all Opportunities that offer'd to execute their Barbarities. And therefore when Julian came to the Throne, and they found he mortally hated the Chriſtians, whom he had abandon'd, they thought they might do any thing. They therefore pull'd down two Churches at Damaſcus, one whereof was rebuilt at the Charge of the Chriſtians, and the other continued buried in its Ruins. They did the ſame thing at Aſcalon, at Berytus, Gaza and Alexandria. St. Chryſoſtom ‖ taxes them not only with acting in concert with the Heathens; but ſays alſo that many imbrac'd the Pagan Religion, that they might the more ſurely deſtroy their moſt formidable Enemies the Chriſtians.

XIII. It was too much the Jews Intereſt to repel this firſt Accuſation to omit it. * They boaſt of their Fidelity to the Kings they live under, and of the Command left them by Jeremy, of praying for the Peace of the City wherein they live: They boaſt of their Charity for the Nations; or rather they obſerve, that 'tis they that have ſuffered unjuſtly from the Chriſtians. They don't deny, but that their Prayers may offend thoſe that don't underſtand them; for they beg of God that the proud Kingdom may be deſtroy'd; that the Wicked and Hereticks may periſh, and that there may be no hope for Renegadoes: A los Renegados no ſea eſperanca y Todos los Malfines, y los Hereges en un punto ſean deſtruhidos. But they anſwer 1. That theſe Prayers were made by Eſdras and Malachy long before the Chriſtians appear'd, and the Jews were diſperſed among the Nations. 2. That they follow the Style of the Prophets, who often made the like Petitions for the Deſtruction of the Wicked, without any particular Application. 3. That God commanded them to love the Egyptians, notwithſtanding the Evils they had ſuffered from them, and not to abhor Edom, becauſe he is your Brother. The Edomites are the Chriſtians whom God forbids them to hate, from whence they conclude that they don't hate them. 4. Laſtly, They maintain that they are unjuſtly accuſed of making Proſelytes, becauſe their Religion is contrary thereunto. Princes, ſay they, often make uſe of a Pretence of Religion to extend their Conqueſts, and pretend to ſerve God, whilſt they are ſerving their Ambition. But the Jews never had this Paſſion; and God, who gave the Law to a peculiar People, did not command the ſpreading and publiſhing it over all the Earth. The King, who has a beauteous and virtuous Daughter, the Heireſs of his Crown, does not offer her to all Comers. He expects that • Cod. Th. l. 16. t. 1. p. 214. † Baron. An. 336. n. 75. p. 435. ‖ Eum qui ex Judæo Chriſtianus factus eſt, inquietare Judæos non liceat; id eſt, non liceat Judæos inquietare eum qui, &c. Cod. Theod. l. 16. l. 5. p. 222. Aliter Baronius.

---

* Maimonid. † Juſtin. Apol. 11. p. 72. ‖ Ambroſ. l. 2. Ep. 17. Chryſoſt. in Matth. hom. 34. Socrat. l. 7. c. 13. p. 319.
* Cardoſo las Excellencias, quarta Calunia de los Hebreos, p. 352. Quinta Calunia, p. 359. Sexta Calunia, p. 369. Septima Calunia, p. 380.

the neighbouring Sovereigns ſhould come to ſolicit her for a Wife. The Law is that perfect Daughter of the omnipotent God; She is diſhonour'd, when ſhe is proſtituted to every body: A Man ought to know her and love her, before he obtain the Poſſeſſion of her, and injoy the Reward ſhe promiſes. God publiſh'd the Law in a Wilderneſs, where every body had liberty to learn it if he pleaſed. On the one hand, the Barrenneſs of the Deſart gave Men a diſlike to it; but on the other, that place, which was open on all parts, was an Inſtruction, that ſuch as rais'd themſelves above Pain and Poverty, had right to receive it. The Jews have follow'd the Intentions of God; for they never took Arms to ſubdue the Minds and Conſciences; and if there have been Proſelytes, as in Portugal, in the beginning of the laſt Century, where a Monk profeſſed Judaiſm, and declar'd that his Monaſtery was full of Brethren, who had the ſame Opinions, but not the ſame Courage with himſelf; all theſe Proſelytes were voluntary, and they receive no others. And therefore the wiſe Men commonly ſay, If that Man comes to purifie himſelf in God's Name, let Heaven aſſiſt him: But if it be to defile himſelf farther, open the Gate for him and let him go. Vino para limpiarſe ayudan le de los cielos: Vino para immundarſe abrente la puerta. This is their Apology. But I queſtion whether Precepts and Laws are ſufficient for their Juſtification; for People do not always follow the Principles of their Religion; and the Talmudiſts, who came after the Law, have often taught and done things contrary to it.

XIV. Secondly, They are often accuſed of crucifying Chriſtian Children on the Eve of the Paſſover, that they may renew their Fathers Crime, who crucified Jeſus Chriſt. 'Tis farther believ'd, that as the Devil uſes Humane Blood for his Operations, the Jews, who are much addicted to Magick, often murder Children to take their Heart and Blood, which they mingle with the conſecrated Hoſt, and afterwards make uſe of to conjure. This Accuſation is found repeated every where, ſince the Twelfth Century: Hiſtorians ſupport it by a great number of Miracles which God has wrought, to take exemplary Vengeance upon the Jews Impiety, without being able to amend them. Shall we ſay that theſe Miracles and Crimes are equally falſe? The Superſtitious would be provoked, but it is no matter. The Truth is, the Jews complain of the Calumny of all theſe Facts: They relate a thouſand Diſcoveries they have made of the Artifice of Monks or other Chriſtians, who threw into their Houſes the dead Body of a Child or a Man, to have a Pretence of charging them with the Murder. They complain, that it was enough for a Father to have loſt a Child by an Accident, to raiſe the Rabble againſt them, as if they had ſtole him away to kill him; and that afterwards the Carcaſs was found in a Ditch, or in a Wood torn by the Beaſts, or the Infant appear'd again alive, when the Execution was done. They add, that the Nation has always had an Abhorrence for Humane Sacrifices, which have been left * for the Portion of Idolatrous Nations. They eat no Blood, and it would be prophaning the Feaſt of the Paſſover to touch a dead Body, or to kill a Child before its Celebration. They maintain, that it is a ridiculous Prejudice of the People, to think there is need of Humane Blood, or the Hoſt, in Magical Operations; and that the Law forbad them to ſuffer Magicians to live in the Holy Land.

King Alphonſo urged againſt them, that the violent Death of Chriſtians is not look'd upon as Murder by the Jews; for as the Talmudiſts ſay, That he who kills a Chriſtian's Ox is Innocent, tho' he that does the ſame thing to a Jew be guilty: So Murder may be criminal or lawful, according to the Quality, or rather Religion, of the Perſons kill'd. They acknowledge the Fact as to Heathens or Strangers, but only maintain that the Chriſtians are not to be rank'd in this Liſt, becauſe they are not Idolaters. King Alphonſo inſtanc'd, that the Trinity being one of the Fundamental Doctrines of the Chriſtians, they neceſſarily worſhipp'd many Gods like the Heathen, if this Doctrine was not true. But they brought themſelves off by a ſecond Diſtinction, ſaying, That the Chriſtian who believes the Trinity of Perſons, does not deny the Unity of Eſſence; which is enough. This Diſtinction is very Subtle, and both of them ſeem to be the Suggeſtions of Politicks. For in fine, If Jeſus Chriſt be not God, as they ſay in the Synagogue, Chriſtians ought to be look'd upon as ſo many Idolaters, that worſhip a Man whom their Fathers crucified. And if the Murther of Idolaters be permitted by the Talmudiſts, what ſhall we ſay of that of Chriſtians?

XV. They add an Argument drawn from their Intereſts, which ſeems to be ſolid; for whereas they live under the Empire of Chriſtians, that ſeverely puniſh the Murderers of their Children, it is not probable they would be ſo mad as to expoſe themſelves to cruel and general Perſecutions for things uſeleſs and ridiculous. In reality, What ſignifies it to the Jews to crucifie a Chriſtian, as their Fathers did Jeſus Chriſt? Do they think to inſult us thereby? But an Inſult, which ſo evidently ſhocks Humane Nature, and is attended with ſo many Dangers, can ſeldom enter into a Humane Mind: Their Religion does not oblige them to ſuch Actions, and they can reap no other Profit or Advantage from it, but that of ridiculing us. What kind of Railery is this! They had a great Temptation to crucifie the Son of God, who call'd himſelf the Meſſiah. By killing the Leader, they thought to aboliſh the Sect, to hinder the People from believing in him, and to ſave themſelves the trouble of ſeeing their Sacrifices, their Religion and Authority deſtroy'd. But what Temptation can move them to crucifie a young Chriſtian at the Paſſover, as is ſo often ſuppos'd? Their Religion grows but more odious by it, and their Society the weaker, and one Chriſtian, more or leſs, does not ruin the Church. I can hardly believe Men guilty of violent Actions, when they have no Intereſt to ingage them, and Prudence and Humanity are againſt them. I believe theſe Crucifixions of young Chriſtians, have been only ſo many Pretences made uſe of, to incenſe the People and Kings againſt the Jews.

XVI. There are ſtill other Reaſons to invalidate theſe Accuſations, tho' often repeated. Firſt, We only meet with them after the Succeſſion of many Ages. The Jews are not accuſed of doing any ſuch thing in the Primitive Times, when the Increaſe and Proſperity of the Church, which was eſtabliſh'd upon the Ruin of the Synagogue, gave a greater edge to their Jealouſie and Hatred. Why did they bethink themſelves of crucifying Chriſtians in the latter Ages, when they could not hope for Impunity; and did not do it under the Government of Heathen Emperors, where the Crime would not have been ſo enormous, nor the Puniſhment ſo ſevere? 'Tis, for Example, but ſince the middle of the

* Cardoſo las Excellencias, decima Calunia de los Hebræos, p. 412, &c.

Thirteenth

Thirteenth Century, that we have heard of Children murder'd by them. 'Tis ſaid * there was crucified at Lincoln in the Year 1255, a Child of eight Years old, whom the Jews ſtole to repreſent Jeſus Chriſt. They led him before a Judge whom they call'd Pilate, who ſentenc'd him to Death. Others acted the part of Serjeants and Executioners. The Child was faſtned to a Croſs, had Gall and Vinegar given him to drink; and after he was dead, they cut out his Bowels to make Inchantments. After they had buried his Body ſeveral times, which the Earth, in horror to the Action, ſtill caſt out, they were oblig'd to throw it into a Well, where his Mother, who ſought for her Child, diſcover'd him. And this Action coſt the Maſter of the Houſe his Life, who was tore aſunder by four Horſes, and fourſcore and ten other Jews were put to death.

XVII. Secondly, Theſe Accuſations are always follow'd with an Act of Cruelty and Injuſtice on the Chriſtians part, who ought not to be ſevere, nor inflict Puniſhment, ſave on the Guilty, duly convicted of the Crime imputed to them; inſtead of tumultuouſly murdering the Innocent with the Criminal; for theſe popular Commotions bring in queſtion the Truth of the Fact that occaſions them; they are often formed upon falſe Reports, and are executed before Information be made.

XVIII. Peter de Blois, who confeſſes, † that they were often traduced upon this Article, inſinuates thereby, that he thought moſt of theſe Accuſations to be falſe. Upon a bare Suſpicion ſpread about at Prague, that the Jews had ſcourg'd and crucify'd a Child in the Year 1305, the People, who was apprehenſive that King Venciſlaus would diſcover the Impoſture, and not do Juſtice, becauſe it was his Saying, that a Man ought to remember to ſhew Mercy when he was in Paſſion, did not wait for his return, but involving the Innocent with the Guilty, murder'd upon the Spot all they could get into their Hands.

XIX. We cannot forbear ſaying farther to the acquitting of this Nation, that beſides this Character we find a third, which increaſes the Suſpicion; and that is, the Miracles that almoſt ever attend the Death of the Party crucified. 'Tis no wonder that the Earth trembled when Jeſus Chriſt died; becauſe the Lord of Glory was then crucified. But more frequent Commotions are aſcribed to it for common Men, than for our Lord himſelf. It caſts out their dead Bodies, and this ſeveral times, unable to ſuffer them to remain in its Bowels. We have ſeen an Inſtance of it in the Child whoſe Intrails were taken out, to be imploy'd in magical Operations, which is no leſs to be ſuſpected than the reſt. But there was a more famous one in Turingia; for the Jews, to whom they aſſign the Eve of the Paſſover for ſuch ſort of Executions, having kill'd a Child call'd Conradus, carried the dead Body into ſeveral places of Turingia without being able to bury it; it ſtill came out of its Grave, which oblig'd them to hang it on a Tree: The Crime was reveal'd by that Suſpenſion; whereupon all the People, great and ſmall, fell upon the Jews, and imbrued their Hands in their Blood. A Light was ſeen upon the Body of a Child kill'd at Veſel thirty ſeven Years after; and beſides it had ſo fragrant a Smell, that it was convey'd into a Church where it perform'd ſurprizing Miracles; but for this time the Jews got off by Money. Theſe ſorts of Narrations fill'd with Miracles, and related by Legendaries, uſed to run after ſuch Fictions, are highly ſuſpected.

XX. The Chriſtians were ſtill farther violently inflam'd againſt the Jews, believing that this Nation, being an Enemy of their Myſteries, prophan'd the Object of their Worſhip, and crucified a ſecond time the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, which ſome are really perſwaded is in the Euchariſt. They have often actually accuſed the Jews of taking and ſtabbing an Hoſt; and the ſame Miracle recurs as often as this Action is renew'd; for the Blood flows from the pierced Hoſt. Which proves three things; firſt, The Reality of our Saviour's Body in the Euchariſt; ſecondly, That the Communion in both Kinds is unneceſſary; and the third is, The Sacriledge of the Jews. This was, for Example, the Crime of thoſe of Poland, who having ſtabb'd an ‡ Hoſt, had the Folly to catch the Blood which ran plentifully from it in a Glaſs: Whereupon King Sigiſmond and the People renounced the Communion in both Kinds, ſince it ſo evidently appear'd, that by receiving one they partook of the other. There are many People who would queſtion the Miracle from this one Circumſtance, for we don't find God proving the Truth of certain particular Doctrines by Miracles. But this is not the only Obſervation that is made againſt theſe Hoſts that were ſtabb'd.

XXI. Firſt, Theſe Miracles are very novel, and 'tis a wonderful thing, that the Jews ſhould never have thought of this kind of Inſult againſt the Chriſtians, 'till within this two or three hundred Years: Was their Hatred leſs violent in the firſt Ages of the Church? Or will they own that Tranſubſtantiation being not invented, the Jews did not trouble their Heads to ſtab the Bread and Wine, which are the Emblems of the Body and Blood? The Reform'd draw from hence a very ſtrong Conſequence againſt the Adoration of the Hoſt. 'Tis confeſs'd that the Jews did not begin theſe Exceſſes till the Thirteenth Century; which was that in which the Worſhip of the Sacrament was eſtabliſh'd. From which one of theſe two things will rationally be concluded; either that they did not begin to forge Miracles unknown to Antiquity, 'till they paſs'd from Reverence to the Adoration of the Euchariſt; or that the Jews did not begin to abuſe the Hoſt, 'till they ſaw it ador'd; that is in the Thirteenth Century.

What Advantage would the Jews gain by this Crime, which expos'd them to moſt certain and cruel Puniſhments? One would think the Jews were only guilty of theſe Follies, that they might give the Tranſubſtantiators an occaſion to perſecute them.

The Miracles they give out are ſo impertinent, that the Honour of the Chriſtian Religion demands that they ſhould be rank'd in the Catalogue of Fables. In the Year 1399 it came into the Heads of the Jews of Poland, to ſtab an Hoſt with a Knife. The Blood which ſpurted upon their Faces, could not be wiped off. Being aſtoniſh'd with the Prodigy, they reſolved to bury the Particles of the mangled Hoſt; but a young Lad, who was keeping Cows, ſaw it flying and aſcending up to Heaven, and the Herd of Cattle fell down upon their Knees to worſhip it. This beſtial Genuflexion being repeated ſeveral times, the Herdſman was oblig'd to inform the Biſhop of it, who coming with great Devotion, found the Hoſt. A Witneſs obſerv'd in it the bloody place where it had been ſtabb'd. The Jews were order'd to be burnt with a ſlow Fire; and to render their Puniſhment the Crueller, Dogs were thrown with them into the Pile; who being exaſperated by the Flame, tore them in a barbarous manner. A Church was built in the Place where the Hoſt was found, which grew famous for ſeveral Miracles, and the ſupernatural Gifts which a great many Perſons receiv'd there. A Controvertiſt of theſe laſt Ages has made uſe of them, to draw a long Catalogue, wherewith to confound the Innovators. I queſtion whether this Narrative has converted many of them. There are few ſo weak as to be mov'd by a Miracle, in which the Herd falls upon its Knees to adore an Hoſt. Such Stories as theſe will always be the Subject of Ridicule, and with very good reaſon. For Chriſt is not preſent in the Euchariſt for Beaſts, but for Men, and we don't ſee Oxen kneel to worſhip God.

* Matt. Par. Hiſt. Anglic. An. 1255. apud Bart. B. R. t. 11. p. 717. † Petr. Bleſ. contr. perfid. Jud. c. 28. B. M. P. t. 24. p. 1203. Bzov. Annal. An. 1305. n. 18. p. 74. t. 2. 11. ‡ Hiſtoria rerum memor. in vita Pauli 4. Conc. t. 15. p. 40. An. 1555.

XXII. Moſt of theſe Miracles are founded upon Suſpicions, or the Reports of the People, who breath'd nothing but the Deſtruction of the Jews, that they might enrich themſelves with their Spoils; or upon very uncertain Teſtimonies. 'Tis no wonder, that when the Writers of this Nation * relate the Maſſacre of their Anceſtors in Germany, upon the account of a Hoſt, from which Blood flowed. They add, that this was a Report that was ſpread abroad. But Chriſtian Authors have often the ſame Fidelity and Exactneſs as the Jews. Crantzius † relating the Outrage committed in the Year 1330, upon an Hoſt, which the very moment it was ſtab'd, utter'd a Cry like that of a murder'd Child; which produc'd no other Miracle but the Converſion of one Woman, obſerves, that it was ſaid, that this Hoſt had been found in a Synagogue. Another Hoſt, which occaſion'd violent Maſſacres in Germany four Years after, was found only ſtain'd with Blood in a Church. The People concluded, that the Jews had ſtab'd it, only becauſe one of 'em liv'd pretty near the Church. They took up Arms, without examining the Fact any farther. The Jews reduc'd to Deſpair by a Violence that had no bounds nor meaſures, took up Arms likewiſe, and ſhutting themſelves up in Caſtles, which they had fought for their Security, ſold their Lives very dear. Multitudes of Chriſtians as well as Jews periſh'd in theſe Battles. And thus a Suſpicion and a Popular Report is ſufficient to draw a Torrent of Blood.

XXIII. Laſtly, Are we oblig'd to believe the Legendaries upon their Honeſty, even when they report theſe Miracles upon the Tradition of others, and liv'd not till a long time after the Event? Let a Man, for inſtance read Suffridus ||, upon the diſcovery of a Hoſt, that was made in Germany, in the Year 1299. 'tis all over miraculous. There you have Women, who after they had watch'd the holy Saturday by the Sepulchre, go to wake the Prieſt early in the Morning, that he might draw out the dead Body. They perceive two great Luminaries upon the Houſe of a Jew. His Doors are immediately broke open, and he is forc'd to acknowledge, that he had wounded a Hoſt, which had ſhed much Blood, and that he had bury'd it in ſeveral Places, having firſt pounded it in a Mortar. This Diſcovery was follow'd with a Maſſacre. The Jews ſhut themſelves up in a Caſtle, and in making their Defence gave occaſion to a new Miracle; for a Maid, who was deſirous to come out to be baptiz'd, throwing her ſelf out of a Window, was ſeen to deſcend miraculouſly, as if ſhe had been born up by Angels, and was immediately baptized. Let a Man read the ſame Event in Eberard *; who has paſt over nothing in ſilence; neither the Guard of the Sepulchre, nor the carrying away of the dead Body; which makes the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt a perfect Comedy. But we there find, on one hand, the horrible Maſſacre both of Chriſtians and Jews: The latter fearing they ſhould be baptized, threw their Wives and Children into the Fire, and themſelves along with them. They alſo conſum'd their Gold, and whatever was valuable, that the Chriſtians might not be enrich'd by their Spoils. Suffridus has ſuppreſs'd this Circumſtance which ſtrikes us with Horror. We can't juſtifie the Deſpair of the Jews; nor can we excuſe the Chriſtians, by whoſe Cruelty and Violence they were driven to ſuch a hideous Deſpair. Eberard does not mention the two miraculous Luminaries, which diſcover'd the Hoſt. He does not ſay how this Hoſt, when pounded in a Mortar, and bury'd in ſo many places, was found again entire. But he adds, that the Magiſtrates of Ratisbonne, deſigning to honour their City, forbad the Maſſacre of the Jews, and reſerv'd the cognizance of the Accuſation to themſelves; declaring, that tho' they would not oppoſe God, provided it was his deſign to deſtroy this Nation, yet they would alſo be fully ſatisfy'd, that it was the Will of God: And by the help of this Declaration the Jews of Ratisbonne eſcap'd the Fire, in ſpite of the People, who were for having them burnt. That Circumſtance, ſuppreſs'd by Suffridus, diſcovers the whole Intrigue. The Jews were perſecuted, under pretence, that it was the Will of God to extirpate them. This Pretence would not have been alledged, if there had been real Sacrileges; and the Magiſtracy of Ratisbonne, who were zealous for their Religion, would neither have been willing nor able to ſtop the courſe of Juſtice, if the Jews had merited more ſevere Effects of it.

XXIV. The Violences committed upon Images and diſcovered by new Miracles, are more ancient than thoſe of Hoſts, becauſe the Worſhip of the one, is of an elder date than the Adoration of the other. People even attempt frequently to aſcend much higher than they ought. They fail not, † for example, to place in the Year 560, the Action of that Jew, who having carried an Image home from Church, wounded it in ſeveral Places, and went to burn it, but he was immediately covered all over with Blood; and the Chriſtians, who went in queſt of the Image, following him by the track of the Blood, ſtoned the Jew that had ſtole it. Without enquiring how this Image was followed by the track of the Blood, ſince the Jew carried it home before he ſtruck it; we muſt be allowed to ask, from what Monuments this Event is taken; and then we diſcover, that its built upon Sigebert's Authority, a Modern Writer, who quotes no Witneſs more ancient than himſelf. 'Tis abuſing the Simplicity of the Readers to write in this manner. They ought at leaſt to be inform'd of the Age of Authors which are plac'd out of their Rank; and not have ancient Events impoſed upon them for certain, when they are only vouch'd by Modern Writers. Others, the more certainly to deceive, neither ſpecify the times in which the Events happen'd, nor the Authors they have borrow'd them from. Thus Andronicus ||, an Author of the fourteenth Century, who is abſurdly confounded with ſome Emperors of that Name, relates the Hiſtory of an Image, crucify'd at Berytus in all the Forms, without forgetting the Sponge and the Reed, wherewith they gave it to drink. Water and Blood flow'd out of its ſide when it was pierc'd. The Jews aſtoniſh'd, having moreover experimented the Vertue of this Image, in the expul-

* Schialſcheleth Hakkabala, p. 112. Bartol. t. 3. 718. † Crantzius Hiſt. Vandal. l. VIII. c. 8. || Suffridus l. 1. Bart. B. R. t. 3. p. 721. * Eberard Annal. ad An. 1289. † Bartol. B. R. t. 3. p. 1705. || Andronic. contra Jud. c. 44. Caniſ. Lect. Ant.

ſion

sion of Devils and Cures of Diseases, were converted. But at what time did this happen? Shall we believe Andronicus the Jews Accuser, upon his word; as also when he adds, that there was a bloody Image found at Constantinople, which another Jew had thrown into a Well?

XXV. Glaber * is more ancient and more exact than the rest, when he relates that in the Year 1017, there was such a violent Tempest at Rome, as crush'd most of the Inhabitants; which Tempest could not be laid, till a Jew acknowledg'd that an Image of Jesus Christ had been ridicul'd by him; and Pope Benedict had caused him to be punish'd. The Historian was Co-temporary with the Event, nevertheless his History smells of Paganism. A great many People can't imagine, that God should cause so much noise and hurly-burly for an insulted Image, whilst he left unpunish'd so many Crimes committed against his Son at Rome. 'Tis still harder to believe, that a Jew should go and deliver himself up to uncompassionate Judges instead of turning Christian, if he believ'd the Miracle to be true. The Jews say, that God, who forbids their use of Images, does not command them to break those of Idolaters. However it be, 'tis easie to conceive, that all these Facts, true or false, being divulg'd among the People, had been sufficient to authorize the frequent Massacres of the Jews, since Religion was thought to be concern'd; and Injustice and Cruelty pass'd for Zeal.

Theophane † farther affirms, that Omar designing to rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem, and seeing the Foundations would not remain firm, inquir'd of the Jews the meaning of it; who told him, that he must pull down the Cross that was erected upon the Mount of Olives. He did it, and the Foundations remain'd; which gave occasion to the pulling down of a great many Crosses in other places. But hereby they make the Jews such Fools, as to acknowledge and exalt the Vertue of the Cross.

XXVI. Lastly, The Jews have drawn the Hatred of the Christians upon them by their Rebellions ‖: Tho' Theodorick had frequently favour'd them, and restor'd them to their Priviledges in several places, yet they form'd a Conspiracy at Rome in his Reign, by which they kill'd a great number of Persons. The Massacre had been greater, if the Slaves, prompted with the Desire of revenging their Masters, had not fallen upon the Jews. There was a necessity afterwards of giving a Check to these latter, who would have proceeded too far. Egica King of Spain, complain'd * to the Council of Toledo of a Conspiracy against his Kingdom made by the Jews, who acted in Confederacy with those of their Nation in Africa, to rid themselves at once of all the Christians. This Prince writing to the Counsel, promis'd to send them the Proofs of his Accusation, which were found to be good, since the Council condemn'd all the Jews to Slavery, confiscated their Estates, and prohibited their Children from having Correspondence with their Fathers after seven Years of Age.

Favour was only shewn to those dispers'd in Gothick Gaul, as being necessary to the State, because the Plague had depopulated these Provinces, and they were expos'd to continual Dangers by the Irruptions of the French, which had even hindered the Bishops of this Country from going to the Council.

XXVII. They were accus'd a little after † of delivering the City Toledo to the Sarazens, whilst the People were performing their Devotions out of Town on Palm-Sunday. Lastly, During the Heat of the Crusades, they were accus'd of sending a Man to Babylon, to give Intelligence to the Commander there, of the Christians Design, who gave Orders for the Destruction of many Churches at Jerusalem. I question whether the Treason charg'd upon the Jews of Orleans was well proved; but it is certain it cost that unfortunate People a great deal of Blood; for it was resolv'd to expel them out of all Christian Kingdoms. This Decree was executed with so much Rigour in several places, that the number of those that remain'd was very small. These are the Accusations which have served as Reasons and Pretences for the following Decisions.

* Glaber. vita Benedicti III. Concil. tom. 9. p. 810. † Theoph. Chron. An. 634. p. 284. ‖ An. 604. * Egicæ Ep. Synodo Tolet. 17. p. 1361. Concil Tolet. Can. 8. t. 6. p. 1369. † Mariana de Rebus Hispan. in l. 6. c. 18. t. 1. p. 249. An. 716. Tudensis anno 1009.

CHAP. XII.

A Collection of the Decrees of Councils, and the Edicts of Princes, made in all the Ages of the Christian Church against the Jews.

I. They are commanded to reverence the Christian Religion. II. They are oblig'd to keep at home during certain Feasts. III. At what time respect for the Venerable was commanded. IV. Priests respected. V. Disputes with the Jews forbidden. VI. Apostolical Canons against the Rites of the Jews. VII. A Regulation of the Apostles about Easter explain'd. VIII. A Prohibition to Judaize. IX. Heterogeneous Marriges unlawful. X. The Regulations of Councils upon this Subject. XI. The Punishment of Death inflicted upon Women that marry Jews. XII. These Marriages null by the Councils. XIII. The Condition of Children. XIV. A Dominican Monk Marries a Jew. XV. Regulations against a Correspondence with the Jews. XVI. Their Antiquity. XVII. Their Severity. XVIII. Authoriz'd by Kings. XIX. Reasons given for it. XX. The Punishments that were inflicted.

I. PRinces and Councils have endeavour'd to screen the Christian Religion from the Insults of the Jews. And indeed, tho' we could suppose an exemplary Moderation in the Body of that Nation, and as much Charity as it has Hatred to the Christians; yet we could not be secure of the Prudence of private Men, who too often, with an impetuous Rashness, have delighted to make Sport with our Mysteries. Their Misery commonly redoubles their Hatred, and renders them the more active and violent. The Clemency of Princes, under whom they lived in Safety, has not always civiliz'd them; and Theodosius the younger * was oblig'd to repress their Insolence by his Edicts. The Council † held a long time after at Chateau Gontier, in the Diocess of Tours, order'd the Jews to be prosecuted, who spoke ill of our Religion, and if they were convicted of the Crime, to be depriv'd

* God. Theod. l. 16. An. 412. p. 238. † Concil. apud Castrum Gonterii, An. 231. c. 32. t. 11. p. 444.

of

of the Communion of the Faithful. By which we muſt underſtand the civil Society of Chriſtians, which was then common with the Jews in France, where they had ſufficient Power to become Bayliffs of the places where they lived, which the Council ‖ meant to hinder for the future.

II. In order to prevent the Inſults, the Jews * were prohibited to go out of their Houſes for the ſpace of four days, from the day of the Lord's-Supper or Maunday-Thurſday to Eaſter-day. They were not diſpenc'd from the Obſervation of this Law, except in caſe of evident neceſſity; which was confirm'd by the Council of Maſcon † held about the end of the Sixth Century. And there ſeem'd a neceſſity for this Law, becauſe on the one hand, this Feaſt being celebrated in honour of the Son of God, whom the Jews had crucified, rekindled their Hatred to him; and on the other, the Chriſtians, moved with a violent and headſtrong Zeal, fell tumultuouſly upon the Jews. For which reaſon the ſame Councils that made this Decree, injoyn'd the Prelates to take care, that no Violence ſhould be done them upon that day. The ſame Injunction was made for Whitſunday. Laſtly, They were forbid to work publickly on the Feſtivals which the Chriſtians had conſecrated to the Service of God or the Saints.

III. We don't find that the Ancients troubled themſelves with impoſing the Law upon the Jews, of paying reſpect to the Venerable, when it was carry'd to the Sick, or in Proceſſion. Theſe Precautions could not be imagin'd before the latter Ages, wherein they were taken. The firſt Regulation to be met with upon this Subject, is of the Council of Vienna ‖, held at the end of the Thirteenth Century. This Council commanded the Jews to ſhut their Doors and Windows, when they heard the ſound of the Bell giving notice of the approach of the Sacrament; and that of Freiſinghen * held in the middle of the Fifteenth Century, forbad them to vilifie the Virgin, or the Saints, or the Chriſtian Religion, at the time the Sacrament was carried to the Sick. There was not yet any Decree obliging the Jews to fall upon their Knees in the Streets, and forcing them to an involuntary and conſequently criminal Adoration.

IV. The Councils, as jealous for the Perſons of the Miniſters, as for the Myſteries, order'd † the Jews to pay reſpect to the Prieſts; which Reſpect extended ſo far, as to forbid them to ſit in preſence of a Prieſt, under pain of being accus'd to the Judges of the places, and puniſh'd according to the Merit of the Caſe and Perſon.

V. Decrees were alſo made to guard the People from being ſeduced and deceiv'd; Lay-men are ſeldom able to diſpute ſucceſsfully againſt them, becauſe the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion, and the Converſion of the Jews, depending upon the Accompliſhment of the Propheſies, which have characteriz'd the Meſſiah, the Jews eaſily baffles a Chriſtian who doth not underſtand Hebrew. They deny point blank, that what he quotes is in the Original; to produce to them the Vulgar or a French or Engliſh Verſion, is expoſing ones ſelf to their Inſults, without getting any ground upon them; whereas they are able to perplex a weak or ſimple Chriſtian. Therefore the Councils ‖ employ'd the Authority they had over this oppreſſed Nation, to forbid them diſputing with the Chriſtians, leſt they ſhould have the Advantage of ſeducing any one of them.

VI. It was alſo a neceſſary Precaution to hinder the Chriſtians from partaking in the Ceremonies that had any relation to the Jewiſh Religion. The Canons *, call'd Apoſtolical, make four Prohibitions hereupon.

Firſt, To faſt with the Jews: This related to Orthodox Chriſtians, who rejected the Religion of the Synagogue, and had only the Weakneſs to Faſt with it; for if they had been conſider'd as Perſons any ways tainted with Judaiſm, they would have been excommunicated, inſtead of ſuſpended or depoſed. However this Law was too ſevere, and the Obſervation of a Faſt kept at the ſame time with the Jews, deſerv'd not ſo rigorous a Penalty. The Chriſtians were alſo forbid to celebrate the Jewiſh Feaſts, and to receive the Preſents which the Jews then ſent them. The Council of Laodicea order'd the ſame thing; but theſe Decrees are hard to be reconcil'd with the Cuſtom of many Churches, which kept the Sabbath with the Jews, and the Sunday with the Chriſtians. We know that this Cuſtom continued a long time. Beſides, we can't perceive any great harm in celebrating the Memory of the Miracles God wrought under the Old Teſtament. Muſt theſe Miracles be forgotten, and the Remembrance of them blotted out, becauſe they don't reſpect us ſo directly as the Jewiſh Nation? Theſe Preſents were only ſent at the Feaſt of Purim, celebrated for the Deliverance obtain'd by Eſther. There was no Superſtition in it, till they bethought themſelves of crucifying Haman's Image in contempt of Jeſus Chriſt.

The third Article, which condemn'd the uſe of unleaven'd Bread eaten at the Paſſover, is ſomewhat juſter; and therefore the Council † call'd Quiniſext has inſerted it in its Canons: Nevertheleſs it creates one difficulty. The Greeks demand how the Latins can celebrate with unleaven'd Hoſts, ſince the uſe of them is condemn'd. If Depoſitions, ſay they, be appointed for thoſe that only eat the Jews unleaven'd Bread, what ought to be the Condemnation and Puniſhment of thoſe who celebrate the Sacrament of the Paſſover like them? The former eat it as common Bread; and yet they are depos'd and depriv'd of Communion; the latter introduce the Jewiſh Cuſtom into the Church upon the Altar and in the Sacrifice, and yet will pretend to be guiltleſs. An Archbiſhop ‖ of Bulgaria anſwer'd for the Latins, that the Canon did not condemn the Roman Church, becauſe that Cuſtom was not yet eſtabliſh'd among the Latins; and that the Greeks, who came afterwards, are too hot upon the matter. This laſt Aſſertion is true, and the former abſolutely falſe. A Rite is ever condemned, whether the Condemnation precedes or follows its Inſtitution, when the Sentence is expreſs and clear.

VII. We find another Regulation upon the ſame Subject in the Apoſtolical Conſtitution *, which gives a great deal of trouble to Interpreters. The Chriſtians are forbid to obſerve the Paſſover with the Jews, becauſe we have no longer Communion with that Nation, and they are miſtaken in their Calculation, for their Celebration of that Feaſt; which we ought ſcrupulouſly to examine, leſt we celebrate two Eaſters in the ſame Year. The Criticks, from this Decree, draw ‖ Concil. Aurelianenſe III. An. 538. c. 30. t. 5. p. 303. * Concil. Bitter. An. 1246 & 41. t. 11. p. 686. Concil. Friſingenſe An. 1440. c. 21. t. 13. p 1296. Concil. Bitter. ib. c. 40. p. 685. † Concil. Matiſcon. An. 581. c. 14. t. 5. p. 969. ‖ Concil. Vienn. An. 1267. c. 19. t. 11. p. 865. * Concil. Friſingenſe, An. 1440. c. 21. t. 13. p. 1296. † Concil. Matiſconenſe, An. 581. c. 14. t. 5. p. 969. ‖ Concil. Friſingenſe, An. 1440. c. 21. t. 13. p. 1296. * Can. Apoſt. 70 or 71 & 72. apud Coteler. Patres Apoſtolici t. 1. p. 446. Balſamon in Can. Apoſt. p. 270. Concil. Laodic. Can. 37 & 38. t. 1. p. 1503. † Concil. Quiniſex. An. 692. c. 11. t. 6. p. 1145. Balſamon in Canon, p. 270 & 372. ‖ Demetrius Chomatenus Reſponſiones ad Conſtantin. Cabaſilæ interrogata. In Jure Græc. Rom. t. 5. p. 316. * Conſtit. l. 5. c. 17. p. 322.

an

an Argument againſt the Authority of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, ſince the Controverſie about the Celebration of Eaſter did not ariſe till St. Irenæus's time, in Victor's Pontificate; whereas this Queſtion appears here to be decided by St. Clement. Beſides, St. Epiphanius relates, * that the Audians, who would keep Eaſter at the ſame time the Jews keep their Paſſover, grounded themſelves upon a Decree of the Apoſtles taken from their Conſtitutions; who exhorted 'em to prefer the Union of the Churches to an exact Calculation of times, which ſignifies nothing, and to celebrate the Paſſover with thoſe of the Circumciſion. Here is an expreſs Contradiction betwixt the Decree we find at preſent in the Conſtitutions, and that quoted by St. Epiphanius; ſince in the one Chriſtians are exhorted exactly to calculate the day of the Feaſt; and in the other they would have this Calculation neglected, and the Union with the Chriſtian Churches obſerv'd, without troubling themſelves about the exactneſs of a day. Laſtly, St. Ignatius, † writing to the Faithful of Philippi, forbids 'em to celebrate the Paſſover with the Jews; alledging, that thoſe who do it, and receive their Preſents in that Feſtival, partake in the Crime of thoſe who kill'd the Lord Jeſus and his Apoſtles. The Prohibition of celebrating this Feaſt with the Jews, is the ſame with the Apoſtles and St. Ignatius: But it is not amiſs to make ſome Obſervations here. It is reaſonable to maintain, that both theſe Paſſages are ſpurious; ſince the Chriſtians of the firſt and ſecond Century celebrated this Feaſt at the ſame time with the Jews; or look'd upon this as ſo indifferent a Cuſtom, that they had no diſpute upon it till Victor's Pontificate. The Letters St. Irenæus and Polycrates, Secretary to the Aſian Churches, wrote to this ancient Biſhop, are evident Proofs of it. This Reflection has the more weight againſt Ignatius's Epiſtles, as he had been St. John's Diſciple, and liv'd at Antioch, where the People continu'd their Feſtival with the Jews, till the Council of Nice made || a new Regulation. He not only could not condemn the Practice of his Church and of his Flock, but he would have condemned himſelf, by ſaying what is attributed to him. 2. It is fathering ones Imaginations upon the pretended Ignatius, to ſay, he did not cenſure the Quartodecimans; but thoſe who went to eat the Paſchal Lamb with the Jews, or receiv'd a part of it when ſent to their Houſes. For the Law prohibited the Jews ſending any part of the Lamb out of Doors, and they would not have admitted the Chriſtians to their Table to eat it with 'em. The Symbols or Preſents that Author ſpeaks of, was the unleavened Bread. 3. St. Epiphanius * ſeems prejudic'd againſt the Audians, and gives the Apoſtolical Conſtitution a quite different Senſe from what it ought to have. The Copy of theſe Hereticks is preferable to ours, and their Explication to Epiphanius's; for beſides that their Copies, which they had quoted before Epiphanius, were more ancient, and conſequently more correct; the Apoſtles are there made to ſpeak more judiciouſly than they have been ſince. For the exactneſs about the Calculation of a Day, is not of moment ſufficient to be made the ſtudy of Chriſtians, or a Controverſie of Religion; and the Celebration of the Paſſover upon a certain day, having been indifferent under the Government of the Apoſtles, and their firſt Succeſſors, they muſt neceſſarily have us'd the Language which the Audians gave them. St. Epiphanius, as prejudic'd as he who alter'd this place of the Conſtitutions, diſtorts the Text. He makes the Apoſtles ſay, we muſt imitate thoſe who are come out of the Circumciſion. But did the converted Jews make a different Sect in Chriſtianity? Had they an Eaſter day different from the Gentile Proſelytes? Did the Chriſtians go by this Name? Why then muſt they have a new Title? Why does he ſpeak there of converted Jews, rather than of other Chriſtians? If ſome kept Eaſter with the Jews, they were rather thoſe who came out of the Circumciſion, having been for a long time accuſtom'd to keep their Paſſover the fourteenth day of the Moon of March. It would therefore have been not only impertinent, but imprudent to ſpecifie theſe Chriſtians rather than others, who had naturally a greater averſion to the Jewiſh Rites. So that the Audians had reaſon to quote this Decree, which was in their favour, and permitted 'em to keep their Eaſter with the Jews.

The Canon of the Apoſtles alſo prohibited the Chriſtians from furniſhing the Lamps of the Synagogues with Oil, and going to light them.

VIII. St. Ignatius, who has ſeveral Epiſtles aſcribed to him, often cenſures the Judaizing Chriſtians, becauſe it was ridiculous to believe in Jeſus Chriſt, and ſtill to retain Judaiſm. Chriſtianity, ſaid he †, barbarouſly, never believ'd Judaiſm, but Judaiſm has believ'd Chriſtianity. He inſinuates, that there were ſtill People, who liv'd according to the Law; by which he muſt mean ſome of the Ceremonies inſtituted by Moſes. And therefore a Word has been intruded into the Text, which ſignifies Judaiſm. There were alſo Chriſtians that kept Saturday preferable to Sunday, the Excellency whereof he recommends. Laſtly, || he would not have any one hear thoſe who taught Judaiſm, leſt they ſhould give way to be corrupted.

A Canon is alledg'd * of the Council of Antioch, forbidding the Chriſtians to celebrate their Myſteries with the Jews, to have the ſame Sentiments with them, and to give them the Title of Brethren.

I know not whether we ought to reduce to this Head, the Reproach which the Greeks made to the Latins, of kiſſing and worſhipping the Old Teſtament when the Jews carry'd it in their Hands. The Greeks † are ſo given to falſe Accuſations, that we can't relate what they ſay without diffidence. Tho' it be no Crime to reſpect the Law, whatever hand it be that bears it; yet this muſt have been made an Act of Religion, ſince it proceeded ſo far as to bending the Knee; and this was probably done at the time the Rabbin took the Law out of the Cheſt.

IX. There is no Superſtition in the Celebration of the Jewiſh Marriages. 'Tis true, they permit the Marriage of their Nieces; but the Popes alſo give frequent Diſpenſations of this ſort. Beſides, their Ceremonies || are pure enough.

Nevertheleſs, the Marriages of Jews and Chriſtians have been condemn'd, becauſe it was fear'd, this mixture of Religions might cauſe Domeſtick Hatred, or that the weaker Party might be corrupted. Particularly, the Husband's Authority over the Wife was fear'd, and the Power of Wives over their Husbands is no leſs to be apprehended. St. Ambroſe * eloquently prov'd it by the Example of Sampſon, and of ſo many others, who were corrupted and ruin'd by Love. How, ſaid he, can the Union ſubſiſt, where there is ſo great an oppoſition in your Prayers and Faith? How ſhall ye both receive the Sacerdotal Benediction, with which your Union ought to begin, if ye have neither the same Worship nor the same Faith?

* Conſtit. l. V. c. 17. p. 322. † Uſſerius de Ignat. c. xi. p. 203. || Haloix illuſtr. Eccleſ. Orient. Script. in vita Ignat. t. 1. c. 22. & t. 2. ad Iren. vit. cap. 11 * Epiphan. Hær. lxx. p. 822. ἐκ περιτομῆς thoſe of the Circumciſion Epiphanius tranſlates it, thoſe who are come out from the Circumciſion. † Ign. Ep. ad Magneſ. p. 19. 21, 22. || Ad Phil p. 32. * Nomocanon apud Cotel. Mon t. 2. p. 142. † Græci contra lat. ibid. t. 3. || Leon de Modene, Ceremonies of the Jews, P. c. 2. & 3. p. 125. &c * Ambroſ. l. ix. Ep. lxx. p. 174.

ceive

X. The Council of Elvira * condemn'd Marriages contracted with Hereticks or Jews. The Interpreters pretend, that two Passages of the Text ought to be amended, and that in one, the Title of Schismatick must be restor'd; and the rather, because the Council of Carthage, which seems to have copy'd this Decree, made use of this Word, and that there was a double Law against Hereticks. They carry this Severity still farther, and maintain, That it was not lawful for a Man to marry his Daughter to Hereticks, and consequently, to Jews, who are nam'd with them, even tho' they had embrac'd Christianity. These Conjectures are bold and ill-grounded. The Council of Carthage † had a reason for inserting Schismaticks into its Law, because of the Donatists, who were potent and numerous in Africa. But why must the Spanish Bishops have had the same Thought, amongst whom there was no Schism? These two Decrees have no other Conformity than that of the Subject, and one does not seem to have been taken from the other. The repetition of the Word Heretick is not faulty, because it gives greater weight to the Law. In the main it would be an excessive Severity to rob the Converted of the liberty to marry with the Christians. Would they have them marry Jewish or Heathen Wives, or injoin them Celibacy against their Wills? This would be throwing a great Obstacle in the way, instead of facilitating their Conversion. The Council of Chalcedon ‖ was far from this Severity, since it admitted Marriages upon the bare hopes of a Jews or Hereticks Conversion. The Council founded its Prohibition of those mix'd Marriages, upon the impossibility of Society betwixt a Believer and an Infidel. Such a Prohibition has been inserted in the Decrees of the first Council of Nice, but it is found only in the Canons that have been borrow'd from the Arabians. A great many Councils have imitated that of Elvira, and are consonant upon the Condemnation: They are only divided about the Nature of the Punishments to be inflicted upon those that violate the Law.

XI. The severest Law * against these Marriages was publish'd by the Emperor Constantius, who had always a strong Aversion to the Jews; for he sentenc'd to Death every Jew that marry'd a Christian. The Rigor was so much the greater, that it only concern'd Women of mean Birth, and who suffer'd themselves to be the easier won by the Jews, because their Reputation was but indifferent among the Christians. Indeed the Law mentions only the Women that came out of the Work-houses, that is, from certain places, where abundance of Maids and Women were put to spin Wool, and to work for the Service of the Emperor or private Persons. These Houses were Scandalous upon two Accounts; one was, that Prostitutes were shut up in them, to be oblig'd to do Pennance and Work; the other, that the Governours and Masters of these Houses often corrupted those that were sent into 'em. However they were punish'd with Death that marry'd them. The Law only mentions Women, from whence the Lawyers have concluded, that the same Punishment was not appointed for the Men, because a Woman is easier seduc'd, and the Husband has more Authority to command or persuade to Religion; but this is very uncertain.

XII. We have seen Councils † that order'd these Marriages to be broken. I know not for what reason some Interpreters oppose the Authority of the Quinisext Council ‖, which separates and declares null Marriages contracted betwixt two Persons of a different Religion; nor how they declaim against Balsamon *, because he maintained, that there was no Union betwixt the Wolf and the Lamb, nor Society between Persons whose Vows and Desires are coutrary; and that therefore, agreeably to the ancient Canons, these Marriages ought to be broken: For the fourth Council of Toledo had already given Orders, that every Bishop should admonish the Jews who were married to Christian Women, to convert themselves, if they meant to live together; and that upon refusal of a speedy Conversion, they should be parted, because the Infidel can't live with her that has Faith. The third Council of Orleans † had in the beginning of the sixth Century decreed this Separation necessary, and commanded it under pain of Excommunication. Photius ‖ quotes a Constitution, by which these Marriages were look'd upon as Adulteries. Thomas Aquinas maintained since, that Marriages with Hereticks were allow'd and lawful; but his Opinion is not sufficient to condemn Balsamon supported with the Authority of so many Councils. Boniface VIII. more indulgent than the Councils, was contented to deprive a Woman of her Dowry who had contracted with a Jew. But was this in his power? And could the Husband dispence with the Oath he had taken to pay it her?

XIII. Tho' the Law of Nature gives Fathers a Property over their Children, yet this Law has been infring'd; and the Councils of Toledo * decreed, That the Child should follow the condition of the Mother, when she was a Christian, and all the Children should be taken and baptiz'd.

The Councils † would have done well to have kept within their just Bounds; and without determining about civil and corporal Punishments, which belong'd to the Magistrate's Province, they ought to have been contented with Excommunication. The Council of Elvira pronounc'd it only against the Fathers, who had marry'd their Children to Jews, and confin'd it to five Years. But the other Councils, who have added Excommunication to the other Punishments, because a Man ought not to enjoy the Advantages of the Church, when he is united to its Enemies, have fix'd no time, but they left it to the discretion of the Bishops. That of Clermont not content with Excommunication, would have a Man farther depriv'd of Table-Society with the rest of Christians.

XIV. When a Jew corrupted a Christian Woman, he was fin'd ‖ ten Marks in Silver; and the Woman being first whip'd, was banish'd for ever from the City. The Council of Frisinguen appointed a Mulct of twenty Pounds of Deniers, payable to the Lord of the Place where the Scandal was committed. But he only impos'd this Punishment on the Men, both Christians and Jews; for the Christians lov'd the Jewish, as the Jews lov'd the Christian Women.

A Dominican fell into this Misfortune; and his Passion was so violent, that he consented to be Circumcis'd to marry his Mistress, who had impos'd that Condition upon him. The thing was no sooner discover'd, but the Order brought their Complaints to the Queen of France, against this Apostate Monk, who was her Confessor. She promis'd them

* Ambros. l. 9. Ep. lxx. p. 174. † Concil. Eliberit. c. 16. t. 1. p. 972. Mendoza de confirm. Concil. Eliber. l. 11 p. 1151. Hereticis, lege Schismaticis. Catholicas, lege Catholicis. ‖ Concil. Carthag. 3. c. 12. t. 2. p. 1169. * Concil. Chalced. Act xv. c. 14. p. 761. t. 4. † Cod. Theod. l. xvi. l. 6. p. 223. ‖ Concil. Tolet. IV. An. 633. Can. 63. ibid. p. 1720. * Concil. Quinsextum An. 692. t. 6. p. 1174. † Balsamon in Can 72. p. 449. ‖ Aurelian III. An. 538. c. 13. t. 5. p. 299. Phot. Nomocan. p. 173. † Conc. Tolet. III. An. 589. c. 14. t. 5. p. 1012. Concil. Tolet. IV. An. 633. c. 63. Ibid. p. 1720. ‖ Concil. Eliberit. c. 16. t. 1. p. 972. Concil. Tolet. VIII. c. 12. Aurelian. II. c. 19. An. 533. t. 4. p. 1804. * Concil. Vien. An. 1267. c. 17. t. 11. p. 864.

them her Protection, and ſolicited the King to ruin the Jews; but to no purpoſe, becauſe he drew conſiderable Sums out of them. All the Clergy declar'd War againſt this Monk, whether the Gallant or the Husband of a Jew. The Prelates repreſented to the Prince the Danger they were in by a Nation, that maintain'd the Neceſſity of killing the beſt of Chriſtians, and that they ought not to be taught ſo much as to eat Honey. The King evaded the firſt of theſe Maxims, by ſhewing, that the Jews only meant, that it was an excellent Law among the Chriſtians, to kill or to puniſh the Guilty. The Prelates intrench'd themſelves within the ſecond, and prov'd, that they had only forbidden to teach the eating of Honey out of hatred to Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe a Man taſted Wine better after he had eaten it; and that as the beſt Wine was the fitteſt for the Service of God, and to be conſecrated to the Altar, the Jews, who could not bear the Honour done to the Son of God by the Conſecration of the Euchariſt, would not have them learn an infallible Secret to diſtinguiſh the Goodneſs of Wine. The Biſhop's Argument was far fetch'd; and 'tis no wonder if the King was not moved by it. The Prelates alledg'd, that it was read in the Talmud, that Jeſus Chriſt was damn'd. The King would believe nothing of it, being perſwaded that all this proceeded from the Inſtigation of the Queen. However he yielded to their Importunities: He put to death thoſe that had circumcis'd the Concubinary, or married Monk, and expell'd all the Jews out of his Kingdom upon pain of Confiſcation of Eſtate, and Death, if they continued in it above three Months. They reckon this Exile their twentieth Calamity; but they neither ſpecifie the Circumſtance of time, nor the Name of the King of France, under whom it muſt have happen'd. They even own * that they have taken this Story from the Writings of ſome Germans, becauſe the French Hiſtorians do not mention it. They † relate ſuch another Event that happen'd in England in the Year 1260, except that the Monk here is turned into a Prieſt, and the Puniſhment of Exile into that of Fire, in caſe the Jews were not converted, which produc'd an almoſt general Change of the Nation, from whom all their Children were taken at ſix Years old to be made Chriſtians.

XV. Kings and Councils have prevented the Jews Exceſſes, or the Weakneſs of Chriſtians, whom a too great Eaſineſs might have corrupted to the Jewiſh Religion. It was not a Synodal Matter, to make Decrees to break off Civil Society between the Chriſtians and the Jews. Private Exhortations proportioned to the Occaſions and Incidents that might happen, and ſometimes have happen'd, might have ſufficed without making everlaſting Laws, the Severity whereof carries ſomething odious in it, and helps Poſterity only to keep up uſeleſs and criminal Averſions.

In the mean time the Fathers have ſeem'd too ſevere againſt that Liberty which was taken to ſpeak, or go to the Jews Houſes, or to bathe or eat with them. St. Ambroſe ‖ adviſed the People to be ſober and ſad, when the Heathens celebrated their Feaſts, and to avoid even the Converſation of the Jews. It would be in vain to make a tedious Collection of all the Decrees of Councils, which have condemn'd the Society of a Jew with a Chriſtian in the ſame Houſe, or at Meals. I will only obſerve five things which will include all that they have injoyn'd upon this Subject.

XVI. Firſt, Theſe Prohibitions are of old ſtanding, for they were made in Spain in the Council of Elvira, * under pain of Excommunication. The Arabians have attributed ſuch a Decree to the Council of Nice †; but they have only meant to give it a greater Force and Authority, by entitling it to the Name of a venerable Aſſembly. However it is certain, that Synods have, time after time, renew'd theſe Prohibitions, either becauſe they were violated, or had been forgotten. We find them in the Councils of ‖ Epaone, Maſcon, Orleans, Agde, Narbonne, Vienna, and in that of Friſingen, held in the Year 1440.

XVII. Secondly, This Severity has been ſometimes carried ſo high, as to forbid the buying Meat and other Proviſions of the Jews. This Nation being depriv'd of Offices and all Employs, have for a long Succeſſion of Ages devoted themſelves to Trade. To rob them of this ſupport, the Chriſtians, that are abundantly more rich and numerous, combin'd to oblige theſe Merchants to ſell their Goods at a low Rate; and this ſort of Confederacy was ſo punctually executed, that there was a neceſſity of allowing them Jewiſh Superviſors to regulate the juſt Price of the Merchandiſes they expos'd to Sale, that the Chriſtians might be oblig'd to take them at a fix'd Rate. This Priviledge was advantagious to the Nation; Theodoſius *, that gave it, went upon this natural Maxim, that every one ought to be Maſter of his own Goods. Another Expedient was afterwards found to render their Commerce more difficult; not only by forbidding them to ſell Meat on Faſting-days, but by prohibiting them the Markets and Publick Places, and obliging them to ſtay at home and ſell privately.

XVIII. The Kings of Spain have authorized theſe Decrees of the Councils. One of them aſſerts, † that Since, according to St. Paul, All things are Pure to the Pure, all kind of Commerce ought to be rejected with the Jews, and that we can't eat with them without Sin. Another ‖ after having confirm'd this Law, lays great Fines upon thoſe who ſhall receive any Preſent from a Jew, whether directly or indirectly.

XIX. The Councils and Princes have offer'd ſeveral Reaſons to ſupport their Laws and Decrees. One maintains *, That the Jews are a People threatned by God, becauſe they have ſold the Juſt for Money, and the Poor for a Show: From whence they conclude, That it is a Sin to countenance them. Another maintains that the Jews are more filthy than Filth it ſelf; and this was the Opinion of St. Ambroſe †, as well as Recaredo ‖ King of the Viſigoths; the Council of Agde * pretended the Honour of Chriſtianity; for it is obſerved, that ſince the Jews did not eat the Meat that was prepared by a Chriſtian, it was demeaning and humbling our ſelves beneath them to eat what was of their dreſſing. This Council was very nice upon the Point of Honour, and had forgotten that the reaſon of this Difference proceeded from the Law, rather than from a Contempt of Chriſtians, ſince it prohibited the eating of Blood, which they ſo punctually obſerve, as not to dare to eat Fleſh, unleſs they be well aſſured that the Blood of the Beaſt has been well drain'd. Laſtly, The Council of Vienna † ſupported its Decree upon a Fear that the

* Salomon Ben Virgæ Tribus Judæ; Gentius Hiſt. Jud. p. 143. † Schialſchelet Hakkabbala, p. 112. ‖ Ambroſ. Serm. 19. de Calend. * Concil. Eliber. Can. 50. t. 1. p. 976. † Concil. Nicæn. Can. 52. t. 11 p. 307. ‖ Concil. Narbonenſ. Concil. Bitterenſe, An. 1246. Can. 38. t. 11. p. 685. Concil. Vienn. An. 1267. Can. 18. Ibid. p. 864. * Cod. Theod. L. 16. l. 10. p. 226. An. 396. † Recared. Leg. Viſigoth. L. 12. t. 1. 2. l. 8. ‖ Ervigius ibid. * Ervig. † Ambroſ. ‖ Recared. * Concil. Agathenſe, An. 506. Can. 40. t. 4. p. 1390. † Concil. Vienn. An. 1267. Can. 18. t. 11. p. 864.

Jews would poiſon the Chriſtians if they eat with them.

XX. The Puniſhments * inflicted on thoſe that violated theſe Decrees, were more or leſs rigorous, according to the Humour and Genius of the Authors of them. Sometimes ſeven days Penance was enjoyn'd him that had eaten with a Jew; and if he refuſed to obey, the Puniſhment varied according to the Condition of the Perſons. A Perſon of Quality was excommunicated for a Year, and an ordinary Man receiv'd a hundred Laſhes. The Council of Epaone † depriv'd the Laymen of the Honour of eating with the Jews. The Council of ‖ Maſcon more ſeverely forbad all Society with Chriſtians, whether Lay-men or Eccleſiaſticks, who ſhould have eaten with a Jew, but Excommunication was the more common Puniſhment. The Council of Vienna * was afraid of meeting with ſome Oppoſition from the Princes and Clergy, who perhaps made no ſcruple to eat with Strangers. And therefore it excommunicated, by way of Anticipation, the Biſhop of Saltzbourg, (who was not yet inveſted in his Biſhoprick) unleſs he rigorouſly proceeded againſt the Contumacious.

* Concil. Coyacenſe, An. 1050. C. 6. t. 9. p. 1065. † Concil. Epaon. An. 517. Can. 15. t. 4. p. 1578. ‖ Concil. Matiſcon. An. 581. Canon. 15. t. 5. p. 790. Concil. Narbonenſe, An. 1227. Can. 2 t. xi. p. 305. * Concil. Vienn. An. 1267. Can. 18. Ibid. Conc. Friſingenſe, An. 1296. Can. 21. t. 13. p. 1296.

CHAP. XIII.

The Continuation of the ſame Subject.

I. Conſtantine and Conſtantius's Laws about Jewiſh Slaves. II. Repeal'd by Honorius. III. That of Theodoſius the Younger receiv'd. IV. Liberty given to Slaves. V. Nurſes forbidden. VI. The Severity of the Council of Beziers againſt Phyſicians. VII. Authoriſed by the Popes. VIII. The Jews deprived of Offices. IX. Councils decreeing it. X. Fines appointed by Princes. XI. Taxes impoſed on the Jews for the Tithes and Curates. XII. Uſuries condemn'd. XIII. The Teſtimony of the Jews rejected. XIV. The taking away of their Children permitted. XV. Diſinheriting of Children forbidden. XVI. A Badge to diſtinguiſh the Jews, ordered by the Perſians and the Council of Lateran. XVII. A Wheel order'd by the Council of Narbonne. The Death of the King and the Pope. XVIII. A Cope with Sleeves injoyn'd the Jews. XIX. The Violence the Jews do themſelves in wearing the Badge. XX. A corner'd Cap. A white and red Wheel. XXI. A yellow Cap. XXII. The ancient Origine of the yellow O. The Reaſons of a Poet. XXIII. Several Regulations.

I. THE Jews were depriv'd of the uſe of Chriſtian Slaves: The Emperors began this: Conſtantine * made a Law for it ſix Months before his death. The Law which has come down to us, only imports a Prohibition for the Jews to circumciſe the Slaves in their Service upon pain of loſing them. But Euſebius † gives this Law a far greater Latitude; for he relates, that this Prince forbad the Jews to be ſerved by Chriſtians; and every Chriſtian Slave, that was found in the Houſe of a Jew, became Free, and the Maſter was amerc'd a Fine.

Conſtantius ‖ made a more rigorous Law upon the ſame Subject; for, 1. He condemn'd the Maſter to Death, who had circumcis'd a Chriſtian Slave. 2. He confiſcated the Eſtate of a Jew, who ſhould for the future buy a Chriſtian Slave. 3. Laſtly, He confiſcated the Heathen Slaves that enter'd into the Jewiſh Service. Sozomen * aſcribes this Law not only to Conſtantius, but to his Brothers, which demonſtrates, that it was executed over all the Roman Empire; and the end propoſed in it, was to leſſen the number of the Jews, to multiply that of the Chriſtians, and to prevent their being corrupted. Theſe Laws have ſtrangely gravell'd the Interpreters, who have thought Euſebius and Theodoſius the Younger miſtaken, in aſcribing to Conſtantine the Law of his Son; becauſe the Father had only condemn'd the Jews that circumcis'd their Slaves, whereas Conſtantius puniſh'd all that purchas'd Chriſtian Slaves. The one puniſh'd only the Abuſe, and the other prohibited the Uſe; But this Difficulty need give us no diſturbance.

II. Honorius was as remarkable for his Clemency, as Conſtantius for his Severity. It was a Complaint in his Reign, that the Jews multiplied the number of their Chriſtian Slaves even to exceſs. But in vain the Poets might pathetically chant in their Verſes,

> Latius † exciſa peſtis contagia ſerpunt,
> Victoreſque ſuos natio victa premit.

In vain they declaim'd to render this Nation odious; the Prince look'd upon all this as pure Calumnies, which he diſapprov'd. He ‖ even commanded the Governours of Provinces to repreſs them, and to do the Jews juſtice, by voiding all their Incroachments that might have been made, or ſhould be made for the future upon them. And laſtly, He allows the Jews to have Chriſtians in their Service, provided they left them an entire liberty to diſcharge their Chriſtian Duties.

III. They were not ſo happy in the Eaſt, where Theodoſius * the younger, two Years after, publiſh'd an Ordinance, forbidding the Jews to buy a Chriſtian, or to receive him by Gift, becauſe that was a way to evade Purchaſes. There were but two caſes in which he left them a free Poſſeſſion, that of a Feoffement of Truſt or Entails, and of Succeſſion, becauſe the Slaves often making a conſiderable part of the Patrimony of Families, the Jew, who was Heir to a Chriſtian, would have been oblig'd to abandon his Inheritance, and thereby diſgrace the Memory of the Dead, if part of the Eſtate had been withdrawn, by giving liberty to all the Slaves that made Profeſſion of Chriſtianity. Valentinian † who made, in his Empire, ſuch another Prohibition, founded it upon the Apprehenſions that the Maſters would abuſe their Authority, to cauſe the Slaves to abandon their Religion; and theſe two Princes conjoyntly ſome time after, publiſh'd another Edict ‖ of their Council, forbidding the Jews, upon pain of loſing their Eſtates and Heads, to ingage any one,

* Cod. Theod. L. 15. Tit. 9. l. 1. p. 247. † Euſeb. de Vita Conſt. l. 4. c. 27. p. 538. ‖ Cod. Theod. l. 16. t. 9. l. 2. p. 248. * Sozom. l. 3. c. 17. p. 529. † Rutil. Itiner. l. 1. ‖ Cod. Theod. ibid l. 3. An. 415. * Cod. Theod. ibid. l. 4. p. 249. An. 417. † Valentin. III. Conſtitutio cap. 5. Corc. t. 2. p. 1685. An. 425. ‖ Leges Novellæ Theodoſ. Tit. 3. Appendix Cod. Theod. t. 6. p. 2.

one, Slave or Free, to change his Religion. The Biſhops ſeconded the intention of the Princes. Gregory I. * wrote preſſingly about it to Brunehaud and Theodeberd King of France, who had permitted the Jews the uſe of Chriſtian Servants; repreſenting, That Slaves were made of thoſe who were Members of Jeſus Chriſt.

IV. The Councils complain'd of the Inſolence of the Jews, who would not give the Chriſtians liberty, even when they would purchaſe it: Wherefore that of Maſcon †, held in the ſixth Century, oblig'd 'em to releaſe each Slave at the Price of Twelve Sols. If they refus'd to receive their Money, the Slave was allow'd to make his Eſcape, to live where he pleas'd; and the ſame Council granted him the ſame liberty, if he had been oblig'd to be Circumcis'd. 1. The Decree ſeems to have been form'd upon Conſtantine's Law, the motive and meaning whereof is made uſe of, tho' it be of much larger extent. 2. It was repeated almoſt in the ſame Words a long time after by Pope Gregory IX ‖. The Councils of Toledo * have more exactly follow'd the Imperial Laws; for they granted the Chriſtian Slaves their Liberty without a Ranſom, and forbad the Maſters to poſſeſs them either by Gift or Purchaſe. But they give a very odd Reaſon for it; namely, That the Jews are the Miniſters or Members of Antichriſt. Many † Councils held in the thirteenth Century renew'd the ſame Laws in England, Germany, Ponte-Audemor, and even ſome, as thoſe of England and Avignon, prohibited Chriſtian Nurſes from taking Jewiſh Children.

V. The Chriſtians alſo were forbidden to take Nurſes from the Synagogue. The Fathers, who condemn'd the nicety of Mothers that refus'd to ſuckle their Children, took care, they ſhould not have recourſe to Women that were Strangers to the Covenant, to diſcharge this Duty. But the Synagogue was no leſs nice upon this Article than the Church; for it forbad Nurſes to give Milk to the Chriſtians, becauſe it was partaking in Idolatry to ſuckle thoſe who would afterwards worſhip the Creature. Nor would they have Chriſtian Nurſes, becauſe they were accus'd of ſtifling the Children of the Jews, whom they hated.

VI. The Rigor at that time was carry'd againſt the Jews, even to the hating a Man's own Fleſh. They choſe Sickneſs and Death, rather than be indebted for the Preſervation of Life to the Phyſicians of that Nation. The Council of Beziers ‖ forbad, upon pain of Excommunication, to truſt the care of a Man's Health to them. The Council of Alby *, held eight Years after, only repeated the ſame Decree. But that of Avignon † expreſſes all the Reaſons upon which the Prohibition was founded. It thought the uſe of Jewiſh Phyſicians ſcandalous and pernicious to the Chriſtians; ſince, inſtead of deſpiſing and abhorring the Actions of the Enemies of the Faith, they had recourſe to their Remedies. This Council alſo ridiculouſly maintains, that the Medicines offer'd from an impure and defiled Hand, do Miſchief inſtead of Good. Beſides, ſay theſe Biſhops, the Jews drew from hence a Subject of Vanity and Pride, taking occaſion hereby to deſpiſe Chriſtianity and Chriſtians. The intimacy that grew betwixt them under this pretence, occaſion'd a thouſand Evils and many Crimes, which the Jews were ſuſpected to have a hand in, and there was reaſon to fear the Miſchief would ſpread farther. The Council reſolving to maintain their Religion, and ſecure its Subjects from the Faults they might be guilty of, forbad them to employ either Jewiſh Phyſician or Surgeon, or directly or indirectly to make uſe of their Advice and Remedies, unleſs there were no Chriſtian Phyſicians to be found. It extends its Authority over the Jews, forbidding them to enter into Houſes, upon pain of being depriv'd of the Society of the Faithful; and afterwards leaves the Chriſtians, who ſhould tranſgreſs this Law, to the Judgment of the Biſhop. It muſt be confeſs'd, that this Council had very ſingular Principles.

VII. In the mean time, * the Popes were no leſs ſevere than the Councils; and Gregory XIII, who reign'd at the end of the ſixteenth Century, not only caus'd the Jewiſh Phyſician, who enter'd a Chriſtian's Houſe, to be ſeverely puniſh'd by the Magiſtrate, but order'd thoſe that made uſe of them to be deny'd the Sacraments and Burial, which was the higheſt point of Barbarity. It was not long ſince, ſome Doctors † of Phyſick have diſcuſs'd it as a Problem, whether it was lawful for a Chriſtian Phyſician to conſult with a Jew.

VIII. We ought not to wonder, after this, if they were depriv'd of Dignities, Offices and Honours. Conſtantine had left them ſome that were more burdenſome than honourable. But whether they abuſed their Honours, or that the Contempt for the Jewiſh Nation increas'd, they were quickly thrown out of every thing that might make them conſiderable in the State. Valentinian III. ‖ depriv'd them of Military Poſts, and the Title of Advocate, which had till then continu'd among them. A little after Theodoſius the Younger diſcharg'd them from all kinds of Offices in Judicature; becauſe it was unreaſonable, that thoſe who were Enemies of the Roman Laws, ſhould be their Defenders and Guardians, or inveſted with any Authority againſt the Chriſtian Prieſts and Biſhops whom they hated. They were rob'd ev'n of Honorary Titles, which they purchas'd to diſtinguiſh themſelves. They were not ſo much as ſuffer'd to be Keepers of Priſons, for fear they might find a favourable opportunity of exerciſing their Hatred againſt the Chriſtians.

IX. Tho' the appointment of Publick Offices belongs to the Juriſdiction of Princes, yet the Councils have often meddl'd with it. In Spain, the fourth Council of Toledo *, tho' it forbad the forcing the Conſciences of the Jews, yet it interdicted them Publick Employs under heavy Penalties. The Judges and Prieſts were to unite together to deprive them of the Offices they had crept into; and he was look'd upon as a Sacrilegious Perſon, who did not do his Duty in that reſpect. The other Councils of Spain, aſſembled in the ſame place, follow'd this Example. The Council of Lateran †, in the thirteenth Century, not only approv'd that of Toledo, but ſentenc'd the Jewiſh Officer to loſe his Place, and to pay all the Profits he had received from it to the poor Chriſtians. Pope Gregory IX. ‖ ratify'd the Decree of the Council of Lateran; however he ſoftned it in favour of the King of Portugal, whom he lov'd: Underſtanding that this Prince had farm'd his Revenues to the Jews, he was contented to order him to appoint a Sub-Farmer that was a Chriſtian, that might not be ſuſpected to the Clergy, by whoſe Miniſtry the Jews and Heathens likewiſe might levy the Taxes. By this means, the Name of the Jew was conceal'd, who took that of a Chriſtian, who yet continu'd to be the Perſon chiefly concern'd.

* Gr. I. l. vii. ep. 113, 114. † Conc. Mat. An. 581. c. 15. t. v. p. 970. ‖ Greg. Frag. decret. De. 162. Conc. t. xi. p. 407. * Concil. Tolet. III. An. 589. Ibid. p. 2012. Tolet. IV. An. 626. Can. 66. † Concil. Vigornienſe, An. 1241. Can. 56. t. xi. p. 589. Concil. Vien. An. 1267. Can. 16. p. 864. Apud Pontem Audomari, An. 1279. Can. 9. p. 1045. Concil. Vigorn. ibid. Avenionenſe, An. 1279. Can. 6. p. 1055. ‖ Concil. Bitter. An. 1246. C. 43. t. xi. p. 686. * Albienſe, An. 1254. Can. 69. p. 737. † Avernonenſe, An. 1337. Can. 69. p. 1867. * Pauli IV. Conſt. III. Bullar. t. 1. Greg. XIII. Conſtit. 68. Dat. Romæ, An. 1581. Pontif. Bullar. t. ii. † Michaelis Bernardi Valentini Pandectæ Medico-legales, ſive reſponſa Medico-forenſia ex Archivis Academiarum, &c. p. 1. Sect. 4. ‖ Valentiniani III. Conſtit. An. 425. Can. Concil. t. ii. p. 1685. Cod. Theod. Append. ad t. vi. Tit. III. de Judæis p. 2. An. 439. * Concil. Tolet. IV. An. 619. Can. 6. t. v. p. 1721. † Concil. Lateran. IV. An. 1215. Can. 69. t. xi. p. 22. ‖ Greg. 9. Fragm. Decretor. 18. Conc. xi. p. 373.

X. The Princes countenanc'd the Biſhops and Councils upon this matter; and the Ordinances of the Viſigoth Kings † fin'd a Perſon of Quality Ten Pounds of Gold, who ſhould have ſet up a Jewiſh Judge in his Juriſdiction. The Forfeit was five Pounds for the People, and in default of Payment, they were to receive a hundred Stripes. 'Tis ſaid, ‖ that Alphonſo the Wiſe had depriv'd 'em of all ſorts of Offices in the Territory and City of Toledo; but his Law does not appear. But notwithſtanding all theſe Precautions of Princes, Biſhops, Councils and Popes, which were the more neceſſary in Spain, becauſe the Jews were more numerous there, yet they preſerv'd the Poſſeſſion of ſome Employs. For we find a Complaint, which Pope * Stephen wrote to the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, and to the Lords of Languedoc and Spain, by which he declares, he is penetrated with a mortal Grief, to hear that the Lords and Prelates of theſe Provinces had farm'd out to the Jews the Lots and Sales, and that the Chriſtians were often oblig'd to dreſs their Vineyards, and to till their Fields. And in the Year 1300, the People of Toledo vex'd to ſee the Jews ſtill inveſted with many Preferments, was oblig'd to riſe and to make a new Law, depriving them of them for ever. Benedict XIII, † reſiding in Arragon during the Schiſm, took from them the liberty of chuſing Judges for their Nation, becauſe this was the Privilege of the Worſhippers of Chriſt; and whereas the Jews alledg'd, That Princes had granted 'em this Privilege, they were earneſtly ſollicited to take it from the Jews. The ſame thing was done in France; God forbid, ſaid the Council of Maſcon, ‖ that the Chriſtians ſhould be ſubject to the Jews; and therefore it prohibited the making them Judges or publick Farmers: And that of Chateau-Gontier * in the thirteenth Century, depriv'd the Jews of the Title of Bailiff, and of all power of puniſhing Chriſtians, upon pain of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures againſt thoſe that violated the Law. The ſame rigour was practis'd in Italy and Germany †.

XI. The Jews were ſo far from being ſuffer'd to riſe above the Chriſtians, that they were oblig'd, not only to an exact payment of Tiths, but alſo to pay as much to the Curate of the Pariſh, as a Chriſtian would have been oblig'd to, if he had dwelt in the Jew's Houſe. Each Family was tax'd ſix Deniers, to be paid annually on Eaſter-day, in the Parochial Church, by way of Oblation ‖. And at Lambeth * a very particular Regulation was made. The Secular Judges pretended, that the Puniſhment of a Jew, who was accus'd of any Crime, belong'd to them. The Biſhops, on the contrary, imagin'd, that moſt of the Faults pertaining to Conſcience ought to be brought before their Tribunal. Wherefore they appointed in their Council, that the Jews ſhould be reſponſible to them, and thunder'd out an Excommunication and Interdict againſt all Oppoſers. Thus they were oblig'd to ſubmit to the Judgment of their declar'd Enemies, upon pain of being depriv'd of all Commerce.

XII. The Jews baniſh'd out of all Employs, made themſelves amends by the exceſſive Uſuries they extorted from the Chriſtians. The Council of Lateran † endeavour'd to remedy this matter, by interdicting their Commerce with the Chriſtians, till they had repair'd the Damage they had done 'em by their exorbitant Intereſt. As the Princes favour'd the Jews in this reſpect, they were conjur'd not to take offence at theſe Prohibitions, but to repreſs the Exceſs complain'd of. At Lateran they were contented to cenſure private Perſons, who tranſgreſs'd this Law; but the Council of Beziers ‖, held thirty Years after, added Excommunication. Thoſe of Alby and Montpelier * diſcharg'd Chriſtians from paying what they ow'd the Jews, provided they ſwore it was for Uſury. They were ſtill more ſevere at St. Quintin †, where the Eccleſiaſticks complain'd, That Princes and Secular Judges condemn'd them to pay the Jews, without having acknowledg'd or confeſs'd their Debt. The Council provok'd by a Proceedure, which was ſo much the more injurious to the Clergy, as they pretended, that Laymen could not, without violating the Canons, meddle in an Eccleſiaſtical Affair, complain'd, that the Condition of the Enemies of the Croſs hereby became better than that of Chriſtians, and order'd ‖ the Prelates to be vigilant, that if ſuch a Scandal ſhould happen in their Dioceſe, they ſhould proceed by Cenſures till the Injury and Damage was repair'd. The Council of Paris had long ago * forbid the Jews to bring an Action againſt Chriſtians. Thoſe who ventur'd to do it, were oblig'd to deſire the Grace of Baptiſm of the Biſhop. A wonderful Grace to an incredulous Jew, which only the Chriſtians Injuſtice reduc'd him to the neceſſity of receiving! King Clotaire † had confirm'd this Act by a ſolemn Ordinance. Laſtly, It was prohibited either to lend to, or borrow Money of the Jews. A Prior, who borrow'd ſomething of them, was expell'd out of his Priory, and could not be reſtor'd but by a Council. Other Chriſtians had not the liberty to receive any Money from the Jews, for fear they ſhould depoſite it in the Churches; that is, People were not ſorry that they ſhould be rob'd; on the contrary, it was a vexation to ſee 'em lay their Money up in ſafety. Nor was it permitted to lend the Jews any Money, leſt under a borrow'd Name they ſhould take a ſcandalous Uſury. Laſtly, at Friſingen ‖ they were abſolutely forbidden to make any Intereſt of their Money. Paul IV. did the ſame * thing at Rome. But all theſe Laws have had but little effect. The Jews and Chriſtians conſpiring to break 'em; and the one being too neceſſary to the other to be divided on this occaſion, Uſury is ſtill, as it has been in all Ages, an abundant ſource of Riches to this Nation.

† Leges Viſigoth. lib. 12. l. 17. ‖ Mariana de Reb. Hiſp. l. 22. p. 302. t. ii. * Stephani vi. Ep. 4 Conc. t. ix. p. 478. † Bulla Benedicti III. B. R. t. 3. p. 733. ‖ Concil. Matiſcon. I. An. 581. Can. 13. t. 5. p. 969. * Concil. apud Caſtrum Gont. An. 1331. Can. 31. t. xi. p. 441. † Synodus Regiaticina, An. 850. Can. 20. t. viii. p. 68. Conc. Vien. An. 1267. Can. 15. t. xi. p. 864. ‖ Concil. Biterr. An. 1246. Can. 42. p. 686. * Concil. Lambeth. An. 1261. t. xi. p. 810. † Concil. Lateran. IV. An. 1215. Can. 67. t. xi. p. 219. ‖ Concil. Biterr. An. 1246. Can. 37. Ibid. p. 685. * Concil. Albienſe, Ann. 1254. Can. 63. p. 736. Concil. Monſpel. An. 1258. Can. 5. p. 782. † Concil. apud St. Quentin. An. 1271. Can. 5. p. 923. Concil. Vien. An. 1267. Can. 19. p. 864. ‖ Conſtitut. Petri Sinonenſis An. 1215. Can. 4. Conc. t. xi. p. 241. Synod. Vigornienſ. An. 1240. Can. 57. & 58. p. 589. * Concil. Pariſ. V. An. 615. Can. 15. † Edictum Clotarii II. Regis in ſup. Synodo Conc. t. v. p. 1653. ‖ Concil. Friſing. An. 1440. Can. 21. t. 13. p. 1296. * Vita Pauli IV. An. 1555.

XIII. The

XIII. The Councils * have endeavour'd to mortifie it by a great many other Regulations. It has been determin'd, that their Teſtimony ought not to be receiv'd in Judgment, becauſe there was no Fidelity in thoſe that deny'd the Faith, and were Infidels to God. Thoſe Jews that call'd themſelves Chriſtians were not more favourably receiv'd than the reſt; and their Teſtimony was ſuſpected, becauſe their Chriſtianity was ſo. The Secular Judges were oblig'd to obſerve this Statute, under pain of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures. In the mean time all this was grounded upon an Equivocation, as if he, who had not the true Faith could never ſpeak the Truth, nor fear the God he worſhipped.

XIV. They were robb'd † of the Children that Nature had given them. I confeſs, it was ſometimes endeavour'd to cover this Perſecution with ſome Pretence. It was ſaid, as we have inſinuated, that the Mother being a Chriſtian, the Child ought to partake of that Advantage. In England, they alledg'd ſome Crime committed againſt our Religion. In Spain, 'twas pretended, they had conſpir'd againſt the State. But is the Injuſtice the leſs for being colour'd and diſguis'd? Beſides, they did not always trouble their Heads to ſeek Pretences: And the fourth Council of Toledo ‖, which order'd, that all their Children ſhould be taken away from them, offer'd no other Reaſon for it, than that of Religion; which requir'd, They ſhould be forc'd from their Fathers, for fear they ſhould partake of their Errors, and ſhut up in Monaſteries, to be inſtructed in the Chriſtian Truths. We ſhall ſee in the Sequel the lamentable Effects of theſe Rapes.

XV. They went upon better grounds, in preventing the Jews from diſ-inheriting of their Children when they embrac'd Chriſtianity; for it was not reaſonable, the Fathers ſhould exerciſe ſuch a cruel Revenge upon their Children, becauſe they would obey God rather than Men; nor that the Children ſhould ſuffer for their Piety, or be withheld by the fear of Poverty from embracing a known Truth. Valentinian * publiſh'd a judicious Law upon this Head; ordering, That the Child diſ-inherited by his Father for the ſake of Religion, ſhould have the ſame Portion, as if there had been no Will. He order'd alſo, That tho' there ſhould be another cauſe of diſ-inheriting prov'd by the Parents, yet a Portion ſhould be left him, as a Recompence for his Faith.

XVI. Laſtly, It was thought neceſſary to diſtinguiſh the Jews by ſome peculiar Badge. This Diſtinction was a new Note of Infamy, ſo much the more dangerous, that it expos'd them to the Inſults and Fury of the Rabble. The Perſians invented this Cuſtom. For the Caliphs oblig'd the Jews to ſow a piece of yellow Cloth upon their Habit. The ſame thing had been done to the Saracens and Jews in ſome Provinces before the Council of Lateran †, held under Innocent III. But this Council authoriz'd the Cuſtom, and gave two Reaſons for its Deciſion. One was, That the Chriſtians not being able to diſcover abroad, whether a Woman was a Jew, and the Jews and Saracens being equally at a loſs to diſtinguiſh Chriſtian Women, there ſometimes happen'd a very Criminal Mixture. Secondly, the Council bottom'd upon Moſes's Authority, who had thus commanded it to the People of Iſrael. I don't know how Moſes could be quoted here; and the Reaſons of the Council muſt be own'd to be very poor; for the difference of Religions is not that which renders Concubinage Criminal, and the principal Sin ſhould rather have been the firſt Object of the Cenſure. Is a Man more Innocent for leaving a Jeweſs to go and debauch a Chriſtian? The Debauchees had a way to overlook the Badge, and prefer a handſome Jew before an ugly Chriſtian. The Council did not determine about the Mark which the Jews and Saracens were to wear.

XVII. But twelve Years after, that of Narbonne ‖ fix'd upon a Wheel to be wore upon their Breaſt. The Jewiſh * Annals that make mention of this Council, ſay, That it ſubjected them to two Puniſhments; one was, to pay every Year ſeven Sols to the Curate of the Pariſh, and the other was, to wear a Mark in their Hat, which is ſomewhat different from the Wheel appointed by the Council. They pretend alſo, That God reveng'd the Injuſtice that was done them, by the Death of Honorius III, which happen'd the ſame Year that this Council of Narbonne met. It was properly Lewis VIII. who when he was in Languedoc the preceding Year, gave Orders for the holding this Council. But as he had the Pope's Legate at his ſide, the Annaliſts may ſay, The King made that Act at his Sollicitation. They might alſo carry their Conjectures farther; becauſe if the Pope actually dy'd in Lent 1227. whilſt the Council ſat, Lewis VIII. alſo ended his days as he left Languedoc. But there is nothing vainer than ſuch Conjectures, which a Man always makes according to his Prejudices, without being able to enter into the Views of God.

XVIII. Twenty Years after this Council, that of Beziers †, and afterwards that of Alby ‖ repeated the ſame Decree. The Eccleſiaſticks of that time wore Copes; the Laymen were permitted to add to them long Sleeves, but it was not allow'd the Churchmen. The Councils * of Montpellier, Avignon and Salisbury, and the Statutes of Nicolas D'Angers, publiſh'd in this Age, are an undoubted Proof of it. The Jews imitated the Mode of Churchmen. This was thought to be a thing that demanded the whole Attention of a Council, to have a Jew dreſt like a Prieſt or a Monk. And therefore it ordain'd, That beſides the Wheel faſtned to the Breaſt, the Jews ſhould wear Copes, with Sleeves as long as the Cope, and that there ſhould be no Plaits nor Folds in the Sleeves.

XIX. The Jews did not wear this Badge without great reluctance. We need only hear their Complaints, to be convinc'd, that it was an horrible heart-burning to them. For they repreſent, That the Counteſs of Montfort, having oblig'd them to change their Religion or ſuffer Death, parted the Husbands from the Wives, ſhut them up in different Priſons, and caus'd all the Children under ſix Years old to be baptiz'd, which occaſion'd lamentable Cries and Groans. But happily for the Priſoners, whereof fifty ſeven had already comply'd; the Count condemn'd the Conduct of his Wife. As great as this Deliverance was, they did not find it compleat; becauſe they kept the Children that were baptiz'd, and the Biſhop of Toloſe order'd 'em to wear a Mark of Diſtinction. They were oblig'd to obey; but they ſo ſtrongly importun'd the Biſhop, that he revok'd this Order, which they thought inſupportable. They did ſomething more two Years after; for one of their Deſerters having rais'd a Perſecution againſt 'em in the Provinces of Anjou, Poitou, and Bretagne, wherein three

* Concil. Tolet. IV. An. 633. Can. 64. t. v. p. 1720. Concil apud Caſtrum Gont. An. 1231. Can. 33. t. xi. p. 444 Albienſe An. 1254. Can. 67. ib. p. 737. † Concil. Tolet. XVII. An. 694. Can. 8. p 1370. ‖ Concil. Tol. IV. An. 633. Can. 60. p. 1720. * Cod. Theod. L. xvi. Tit. viii. l. 28. An. 426. p. 244. † Concil. Later. IV. An. 1215. Can. 68. t. xi. p. 221. ‖ Concil. Narbon. An. 1227. Can. 3. p. 305. * Salomon Ben Virgæ S. Gentius Hiſt. Jud. p. 413. Guil. à Pod. Laur. c. 36. p. 84. † Conc. Bitter. An. 1246 Can. 39. t. xi. p. 685. ‖ Concil. Albienſ. An. 1246. cap. 64 & 65. ib. p. 737. * Concil. Monſpel. An. 1214. c. 3. p. 108. Concil. Avenion. An. 1209. Can. 12. Salisbur. An. 1217. Can. 10. ib.

thouſand

thouſand Jews periſh'd, without reckoning the Children that the Fathers ſtabb'd, and thoſe that kill'd themſelves, to have the choice of what kind of Death they ſhould die: This Man ſeeing Cruelty unſucceſsful, obtain'd ſeveral Laws againſt his old Brethren; one of which appointed their wearing a red or yellow Hat. They would not obey it, before they had made a Deputation to the King to ſollicite the Repeal of this Decree. They obtain'd it, and return'd triumphant, as if they had gain'd a conſiderable Advantage. But the Inquiſitors began again to torment 'em. They ranſom'd themſelves for ſome time, by paying great Sums to theſe ſtill more covetous than cruel Creatures. But at laſt the greateſt number ſubmitted. Some, as Mordecai, choſe rather to ſuffer Impriſonment at Avignon; but being tir'd with their Irons, they took the Badge and wore it, till at laſt they bought it off with a Sum of Money.

XX. There was no obliging * People that had this Character of Diſtinction in ſo much Deteſtation, to wear it, if coercive Laws had not been frequently renew'd. The Councils † of Avignon and Vavres, held in the fourteenth Century, confirm'd the uſage of the Wheel, and added a Horn for Maids and Women. King John, who had recall'd 'em into France, order'd, as he was dying, that they ſhould take two different Colours, Red and White, and wear them ſo as they might be eaſily obſerv'd. King Charles, his Succeſſor, confirm'd this Ordinance with another, in the Year 1373.

In Germany, the Council of Ravenna ‖ oblig'd the Women to wear the Red Wheel like the Men. In ſome Places they had a corner'd Cap; and leſt theſe Laws ſhould be neglected, the Cardinal of St. Lawrence *, ſent by Pope Martin V. oblig'd the Council of Saltsburg † to renew them, in the Year 1420. and condemn the Jews, who did not wear this Badge, to an arbitrary Fine, which they could not be diſcharg'd from upon any account. This was afterwards alter'd; and the Council of Cologne ‖, held twenty Years after, order'd them to wear upon their Cloaths a round O made of Yellow Thread. Women wore two Blue Strings upon their Head. The ſame Cuſtom was obſerv'd then at Rome, ſince the Council * declares it would conform it ſelf thereunto.

In France they were only commanded to wear ſome manifeſt Mark to know 'em by; and the ſame thing was ſometimes done in Spain.

XXI. Paul IV. † order'd 'em to wear a Yellow Hat. Pius IV. ‖ ſoftned this Ordinance, by permitting them to wear a Black one, or at leaſt, when they travell'd; but Pius V. return'd to the Yellow Hat, and gave the ſame Colour to the Women.

XXII. Inquiry is made after a Cuſtom obſerv'd particularly at Frankfort, where the Jews are obliged to wear an O of Yellow Thread upon their Cloaths. Some aſcend * as high as the Tumult of Alexandria, which happen'd in Cyril's time, during which the Jews diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by a Circle made of Palm-branches. But beſides, that this is going too far in queſt of a thing of more modern date, this was not impos'd as a Puniſhment on the Seditious that were expell'd; and the Magiſtrates of Frankfort, who order'd this Badge, had never perhaps read the Hiſtory of Socrates, nor heard of the Palm-branches platted into a Ring, which the Jews of Alexandria us'd as a Character of Diſtinction in the darkneſs of the Night. The Venetians did ſomething like it in the Year 1349. But why ſhould we go from Germany, ſince the Council of Cologne †, in the Neighbourhood of Frankfort, held in the Year 1442, order'd the Jews to wear a Circle of Yellow Thread? They muſt have been ignorant of this Inſtitution, who go in ſearch of another. As for the Reaſons of it, we may follow, if we pleaſe, the Latin Poet, tho' he ſeems to be very uncertain, and rather to banter than talk ſeriouſly, when he ſays, it was to put them in mind that they deſerv'd Hell; to teach them, that they are not worth a Cypher, or that they demand exceſſive Uſuries. His Verſes are theſe ‖,

Cur ferat Hebræus vocalem pectore quartam,
A multis quæri, lector amice, ſolet.
Addictum æternis ut ſe crutiatibus eſſe
Cogitet, hæc ſecum ſigna doloris habet.
Aut quia pro nihilo numeris apponimus illam,
Inter mortales ſe ſciat eſſe nihil.
Aut quia Judæis augentur fœnore nummi,
Major ab hac numerus nam ſolet eſſe nota.

XXIII. Beſides all theſe particular Ordinances againſt the Jews, we may conſult the Laws of the Viſigoths * in Spain, and the Decrees of the Twelfth Council of Toledo †, which giving a new Authority to the Edicts of Princes, would have them to be irrevocable. Theſe forbid the Celebration of the Sabbath, the Feaſt of the Paſſover, of Circumciſion, and ſeveral other Rites cuſtomary to this Nation. They are forbidden to make diſtinction of Meats, to marry with their Relations, to defend themſelves when they are attack'd about Matters of Religion, to read the Books condemn'd by the Chriſtians; and on the contrary, are oblig'd to receive one from the Hand of the Biſhop written againſt their Doctrines. A Jew durſt not then inhabit a place without leave of the Biſhop, to whom he was oblig'd to give in his Name, when he came or chang'd his Habitation. The other Councils ‖ of Toledo confirm'd the Laws that this had publiſh'd. That of Meaux * held in the Ninth Century, approved part of what the Spaniſh Biſhops had done, and inſerted into its Collection, ſome Decrees of the fourth Council of Toledo, adding to them ſeveral Paſſages of the Fathers, Popes and Emperors. Laſtly, Pope † Benedict XIII. and Paul IV. renew'd the ancient Decrees in their Bulls. But as we find hardly any thing new in theſe Compilations, we content our ſelves with pointing to them. The Reader perhaps is already but too much tired with ſo long a Catalogue of Edicts and Decrees againſt the Jews; Let us reſume the Thread of the Hiſtory, and begin it by the Eaſt.

* Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 415, 416. † Concil. Aven. 1326. Can. 57. p. 1746. t. xi. Vavrenſe, An. 1368. c. 112. p. 2023. ‖ Ravennat. An. 1311. Rubr. 23. p. 1589. t. xi. Conc. Vien. An. 1267. Can. 15. p. 865. * Gentius Hiſt. Jud. p. 413. Guilielm. à Podio Laurent. Chronic. c. 36. p. 84. † Concil. Saltzburg An. 1420. Can. 33. t. xii. p. 327. ‖ Statuta in Conc. Colon. An. 1442. t. xiii. p. 138. * Concil. apud Pontem Aud. An. 1279. Can. 9. p. 1046. † Paul IV. vita An. 1555. ‖ Pii V. Conſt. Bullar. t. ii. Conſt. 48. * Nicolai Tractat. de Siglis veterum, c. 58. p. 313. † Statuta in Conc. Colon. An. 1442. t. xiii, p. 1380. ‖ Nicolai Tract. ib. * Leges Viſigoth. l. 12. † Concil. Tolet. xii. An. 681. Can. 9. p. 1232. ‖ Concil. Tolet. xvi. An. 693. Can. 1. p. 1336. Tolet. xvii. An. 294. Can. 8. p. 1369. * Concil. Meld. An. 845. Can. 73. t. vii. p. 1841. † Bened. XIII. Bulla apud Bartolocci Bibl. Rab. t. iii. p. 740. Paul IV. ib. p. 743.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIV.

The History of the Jews in the East, during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries.

I. The Decay of the Nation in the East. II. A violent Persecution by the Caliph. III. Joseph's Dissimulation and retreat to Aleppo. Al-Nasser reign'd there. IV. Joseph returns from the other World, and teaches what Condition Souls are in after Death. V. Moses Nachmanides: His Knowledge. VI. His Retreat: His Synagogues at Jerusalem: The time of his Death: His Works. VII. A Revolution in Egypt: The Sultans abolish'd. VIII. Two sorts of Mamalukes: Their Origine. IX. Whether they admitted the Jews into their Body. X. Simeon Duran goes into Africa, where he writ Books. XI. The Establishment of the Moguls in Asia: The surprizing Revolution in Corazan: The Taking of Bagdet. XII. The Jews Interest with Argoun Khan. XIII. A Revolution and Massacre happening by the Death of this Prince and his Minister: The Ruin of the Abassides at Bagdet. XIV. A Jew in pompous Equipage at the Court of the Mogul Abousaid. XV. The Greeks tolerate the Jews: The Violence of the Latins censured: The Eating the Paschal Lamb with the Eucharist proved by Medals.

I. THE Jews have ever subsisted, and still subsist in the East; but we know but little of their Transactions in the last Centuries. Being weak'ned by Dispersions, and confin'd to their Synagogues, they have had but little share in publick Events. Their Academies being intirely ruin'd, scarce any Doctors have been seen to come out from those places, who honour'd their Nation, and rais'd its Glory. And therefore their own Historians speak rarely of them. However let us glean up the most considerable things that have happen'd to them.

II. Petachia *, who travell'd to all the Synagogues of his Nation, and whose Voyage is parallell'd with that of Benjamin his Co-temporary, affirms, That he still saw a Prince of the Captivity in the East, when he arriv'd there. But besides that he is little known, a Persecution rais'd at the end of the Twelfth or Thirteenth Century, compleated the Ruin of the Nation in this Country. Nasser Ledinillah †, one of the Abassides, was then Caliph at Bagdet: His Reign lasted Forty seven Years, all which time he declar'd against the Jews; to which he was induced by two Reasons. One was, That he was very zealous for his Religion; for he caused a great number of Moschs and Places dedicated to the Mussulman Service to be built in his Dominions. Moreover he disgrac'd his great Qualities by an excessive Avarice. 'Tis said of him, that seeing a Cistern, which he had caused to be fill'd with Gold and Silver, but which still wanted two Fathoms of it, he cried out, Shall I not live long enough to fill it? And on the contrary, his Grandson Mostanger finding it full, exclaim'd, How happy should I be, could I live long enough to empty it! Both of them lived to see their desire accomplish'd. Nasser, who design'd to fill it, made use of the Law of Escheat, before unknown, and appropriated the Succession of all foreign Merchants, who died in his Dominions. The Riches ‖ of the Jews drew upon them great Extortions from a very covetous Prince, and at last an open Persecution; for Nasser commanded them to depart all his Provinces, or to turn Mussulmans; part of them exil'd, and the rest chose to dissemble.

III. Joseph the Son of Jahia, an able Physician, after he had dissembled for some time, also went into Banishment. He had also studied Mathematicks, and he discours'd of all he knew with a wonderful Facility. This Man * was of opinion, that a Man ought not to expose himself to certain Misery, by sacrificing All to his Religion. He bent under Nasser's Persecution; and having sold his Estate, by the help of his Dissimulation, he retir'd into Egypt with all he had. He there found Maimonides still alive, and with him corrected a Treatise of Astronomy which he had brought. After Maimonides's death, he quitted Egypt to retire to Aleppo, where he bought an Estate, married and practised Physick, under the Protection of Malek Aldaher. Abulpharages looks upon him as the King, which he had the Name of, for 'tis the Signification of the Title Malek; but it was often given to those who had not the Sovereign Power. It was consider'd as a Title, or even as an honourable Name. 'Tis certain that Malek Al-Nasser his Brother reign'd then in this part of Syria. He re-took Damascus, and attempted to re-enter Egypt by the assistance of a Faction of his Family that invited him; but he could not succeed, and was kill'd with his Brother, by Holagon Emperor of the Tartars, after the taking of Bagdet. Aldaher therefore could not protect Joseph, but in quality of Lieutenant, during the absence of Malek Al-Nasser, the last Branch of Saladin's Descendents.

IV. This Physician died † at Aleppo many Years after this Revolution, and promised one of his Friends to return to acquaint him with the State of Souls after death. It seem'd, that these two Friends were in the Dark, as to the Nature and Immortality of the Soul, since that was the Question which the first Dyer was to resolve. Joseph went off first, and return'd not till two Years after. As he made some Scruple to inform his Friend of what he knew, the Living took the Dead by the Hand, challeng'd him with his Promise, and oblig'd him to instruct him about the State of the Dead. He did it in few words, The Universal, said he ‖, is rejoyn'd to the Universal, and the Particular to the Particular. The Answer is obscure, and there was no need of making so long a Voyage to give so short an Account. Joseph taught his Friend, that the Soul was a part of the Universal World, and that it return'd to that Universal, having first been separated from it; and he look'd upon the Body as a particular Being, which return'd to the Center of the Earth. This is the Explication of these words, which ravish'd the Hearer with Admiration, who thought he saw his Friend in the Porch of a Temple dress'd in White, and to have taken him by the Hand; but it was a Dream and a Vision, as generally are the Apparitions and Returns of Souls from the other World.

V. The Holy Land was much depopulated by the Wars which the Sarazens and Christians made there, as well as in Syria. Most of the Cities frequently chang'd Masters. Nevertheless there were still Doctors and Synagogues. For here it was that the famous Moses Nachmanides retir'd and built a Synagogue. He was born at Gironne in the Year 1194. He applied himself first to Physick, but yet made great Progreſſes in the Study of the Law, which have given him the Name of the Father of Wiſdom, the Luminary, the Flower of the Crown, and of Holineſs. A Sermon he preach'd before the King of Caſtile, got him the Character of the Father of Eloquence. Ramban *, which is the Name he commonly goes by, at firſt deſpis'd the Cabbala, but when he had once reliſh'd this Science, he grew to the greateſt Perfection in it. He found whatever he had a mind to in the Holy Writings, and particularly in the Song of Moſes; but not ſatisfied in the ſpeculative Cabbala, he embark'd in the operative Hammaaſſith. He is † accus'd of attempting to introduce Novatianiſm into the Synagogue, becauſe one of his Diſciples laughing at the Cabbala, challeng'd him to find his Name Abner in Moſes's Song. Ramban immediately cited the 26th Verſe of the 32d Chapter of Deuteronomy, I ſaid I would make the remembrance of them to ceaſe from among Men. By taking the third Letter of each word he made up R. Abner ‖. The Diſciple diſmay'd, ask'd if there was no Pardon for him. You have, reply'd the Maſter, heard the words of Scripture. Abner, in deſpair, caſt himſelf into a Veſſel without Sails and Oars; Ramban blew upon it, and he was never ſeen any more. This is what Bartolocci calls the Introduction of Novatianiſm into the Synagogue. But he is miſtaken; 'tis the Exerciſe of a Supream Authority which the Maſters have always aſſum'd over their Diſciples. Ramban is not the only one, who finding all his Imaginations in Moſes's Song, would tranſport beyond Sea all thoſe that oppoſe him, could the bare blowing upon a Veſſel do it. But inſtead of reaſoning ſeriouſly upon this Adventure, it ought to be rank'd among Cabaliſtick Fables.

* Petachiâ Saviû, S. Circuitus, or, Itinerarium MS. apud Wagenseil in Sotab. † Herbelot Bibl. Orient. ‖ Abulpharag. Dynast. 9. p. 302. * Ibid. † An. 1226. ‖ Abulph. ibid. p. 303.

great

VI. We can't conjecture, why Ramban, who enjoy'd ſo great a Reputation in his Country, left it to go to Jeruſalem; but 'tis certain he retired thither, built a Synagogue, and died there. Authors * do not agree about the time of his Death. Ghedaliah had ſomewhere read, that it happen'd in the Year 5060, that is in 1300, but a Life of 106 Years would be too long. Others will have him dye Forty Years before. But then we muſt correct another Fault that has ſlip'd into the Juchaſin, where it is aſſerted, that he finiſh'd his Explication † of the Cabaliſtical Law in the Year 1268, for he muſt have died eight Years before. Perhaps both Opinions are falſe, for if Nachmanides aſſiſted at the Conference held in Arragon in the Year 1263, he muſt not have gone to Jeruſalem till after that, and conſequently lived a long time afterwards. He compos'd a Prayer upon the Ruin of the Houſe, or Temple; Letters to induce Men to Piety; and particularly ‖ to the Holineſs of Marriage. He publiſh'd The Secrets of the Law, The Garden of Pleaſure, or of The Eden of God, which is full of Cabaliſtick Viſions. He enter'd far into the reigning Diſputes at that time, concerning Maimonides's Sentiments, and made an Apology for R. Alphes, which he entitled, * the Book of Wars. It would be uſeleſs to make a Catalogue of all his Works, which may be ſeen elſewhere. Baruch Germerſheim alſo quitted his Country, to labour upon the Reformation of the Spaniſh Synagogues. From thence he went to Candia; and laſtly, He ſought a Retreat in Judea, where he died. He had written a Treatiſe of the Elevation †, wherein he deſcrib'd the manner of killing Animals; and the Gephilim, upon which there aroſe a great Diſpute, which he could not calm. The great Elevations are aſcrib'd to him, where perhaps he revis'd the ſame Matters; but Ganz does not mention this laſt Work.

VII. The Tranquility of Egypt was no leſs diſturb'd than that of the Holy Land. We know that St. Lewis indeavour'd to make a Conqueſt of this Country upon the Infidels ‖: He took Damietta; he beat Malek Almohadam, who ſucceeded his Father, and who then reign'd in Egypt; but this Caliph won * a ſecond Battle, in which the King remain'd a Priſoner. Hiſtorians ſay, That the Infidels had ſo great an Eſteem for this Prince, that they heſitated, whether they ſhould take him for their Maſter inſtead of the Conqueror. But they give him a Glory which does n t belong to him, for the Revolution of Egypt, which ſunk the Saladin Family, was owing to a quite different Principle. Almohadam's Mother caus'd him to be kill'd by Ibek the Leader of the Mamalukes, whom ſhe had a mind to marry. Thus the Love or Ambition of an unnatural Mother, threw Egypt into foreign Hands. There was no Deliberation about the Election of St. Lewis, for Ibek, the Sultaneſs's Gallant, was proclaim'd King, and the Mamalukes became Maſters of this great Kingdom.

VIII. Theſe Mamalukes, ſo famous, were of different Nations: The firſt were Slaves of Great Armenia, or Turcomans, which ſome Tartars had ſold to the Egyptians. The King of Egypt took a thouſand of them into his Service, and employ'd them in building a Fortreſs upon the Sea coaſt, from whence they took the Name of Mamalukes Baharia, that is, Maritime Slaves. Theſe People, accuſtom'd to labour, arriv'd to the greateſt Imploys, till at laſt Ibek became King of Egypt in the Year 1250. The Sultaneſs having cauſed him to be kill'd, Coutus was elected by the Mamalukes. He vanquiſh'd the Tartars, who had thitherto been thought invincible; but chaſing a Hare, he was kill'd by Bibars, one of his principal Officers, and the greateſt Man the Turcoman Mamalukes ever had. He reign'd but † Seventeen Years, but ſpent them all at the Head of his Armies, which were generally always victorious. 'Tis ſaid, that deſiring to remove from his own Head the Preſage of a Comet, which was believ'd to foretel the Death of a Prince, he gave a Glaſs of Poiſon to a young Lord that remain'd of the Houſe of the Jobites, or Saladins, but going to drink too haſtily in the ſame Glaſs, he poiſon'd himſelf. Helaun, one of his Succeſſors, committed the ſame Fault as the Egyptian Sultans; for he brought a number of Slaves in Circaſſia, to whom he intruſted the Guard of the Towers of Cairo, from whence they took the Name of Borghite Mamalukes, who growing potent and numerous, dethron'd the Marine Mamalukes, and made themſelves Maſters of Egypt, which they poſſeſs'd till 1517, when Selim I. took it from them.

IX. 'Tis ſaid ‖, That theſe Mamalukes receiv'd none but Chriſtians among them, whom they caus'd to abjure their Religion; and that all who came of Mahometan or Jewiſh Fathers were excluded. If this Conjecture were ſolid, we could not doubt but the Jews were grown very ſuſpected to the Governours of Egypt for near * three Centuries; for they were as much miſtruſted as the natural Mahometans. Theſe latter were diſtruſted, becauſe they were thought to be ſtill addicted to the Houſe of the

---

• 'Tis an Abbreviation of theſe four words, Rabbi Moſe Ben Nachman, ר מ ב נ † Bartolocci Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. p. 219. ‖ Bartolocci ibid. אמרת· אבא רם אשב תה מאנוש זבל : That is ר אבנר

* Bartolocci ibid. † ביאור אל רת רה Biiùr al Hattora, Elucidatio in Legem. ‖ אגרת הקדש Igherèth Hakkodeſch. Epiſtola Sanctitatis • Buxtorfii Bibl. Rabb. † Therumah, Elevatio. ‖ 1249. * 1250. † An. 1276. ‖ Thevenot's Voyage to the Levant, l. 2. c. 4. p. 402. * 255 Years.

Caliphs,

Caliphs, the Deſcendents of their Prophet, who ſubſiſted ſtill in Egypt, but had no Authority, and only concern'd themſelves with the Affairs of Religion. The Jews had no reaſon to raiſe again this decay'd Houſe: Why then ſhould they be miſtruſted, and hinder'd from entering into the Body of the Mamalukes when they renounc'd their Religion? Beſides, it is not true, that the Mamalukes were compos'd of Renegado-Chriſtians, excluſive of all other Religions. They had, perhaps, ſome Chriſtian Slaves; but the Jews were receiv'd upon the ſame Condition; and the Mamalukes were almoſt all Mahometans by Birth. 'Tis however true, that the Jews made no great Figure in Egypt under their Empire; and that they were great Gainers by changing their Maſter, as we ſhall ſee in the Sequel. They preſerv'd their Synagogues, but had no ſhare in publick Events. It looks as if they had renounc'd Study, ſince no learned Man appears among them.

X. We only find in the Fourteenth Century one † Simeon Duran in ſome Cities of Africa; but he was not originally of this Country. He had paſs'd thither from Spain, from whence he had carried the Commentary of Alphes which he tranſlated. He compos'd a Chronology of the ancient Rabbins, the Buckler of the Fathers, Diligent Judgment, and the Judgment of Juſtice ‖, which Buxtorf has confounded, as if they were but one Book, becauſe they are always joyn'd together.

XI. The Tartars, or Moguls, form'd a new Monarchy in Aſia, and immediately ſeiz'd upon Chorazan. This great Revolution was occaſion'd by one of the moſt frivolous Subjects that could embroil Sovereigns. Mohamed, ſurnamed Chovarezm Schah, reign'd in Chorazan, and had oblig'd all the neighbouring Princes to ſubmit to his Laws. He had even forced the great Tartars to raiſe the Siege of Samarcand. A numerous Caravan of Tartarian Merchants arriv'd at Otrar, a City of the Tranſexane, under the Guard of a conſiderable Officer of Ginghizkhan's Army. Amalnak was Governour of this place. He put ſeveral Affronts upon theſe Merchants; and as one of them, who knew him, call'd him by his Name, he fell into a Rage againſt the Caravan, and cauſed all the Merchants to be made Priſoners, under Pretence that they were only Ginghizkhan's Spies. That which exaſperated him was, that being a Turcoman by Birth, he had been brought up in the Seraglio with the Slaves, and had chang'd his Name to conceal his Origine. He wrote to his Maſter, that he muſt puniſh all theſe Slaves with Death; and as the Perſians have a Saying, The Wiſeſt are Blind, when the Decree of Providence is come. Mohamed, who had ſo great an Intereſt to live peaceably with the Cham of Tartary, order'd * the Priſoners to be put to death without Examination; and would give no Satisfaction to Ginghizkhan, who demanded it before he engag'd in the War which broke out betwixt theſe Princes. Mohamed loſt his Courage, as ſoon as he ſaw the vigorous Reſiſtance that was made by a handful of Tartars, who ſtopp'd his Army in paſſing the Oxus. He deliberated, whether he ſhould paſs that moment to the Indies, where he had made great Conqueſts, but he chang'd his Deſign. The Tartars puſh'd him to ſuch Extremities, that he was forced to make his eſcape to the Iſles of the Caſpian Sea, where he died, and was buried in his own Cloaths, becauſe he had not wherewithal to bury him. His Mother, whom he had put into an impregnable Caſtle, was oblig'd to ſurrender for want of Water; but no ſooner was ſhe got out, but there fell ſuch a violent Rain that the Ciſterns overflow'd. Ginghizkhan ſent her home clad in Mourning; but the Crowd of thoſe who deſir'd to ſee her before ſhe went was ſo great, that ſhe was ſtifled for want of Guards.

The Tartars puſh'd their Conqueſts a great way farther. They took Bagdet in the Year 1258. Moſthadem the laſt Caliph of the Houſe of the Abaſſides, who then reigned, was a Prince of very indifferent Parts, and ſo devoted to his Pleaſures, that he could not wean himſelf, even when Hogalou the Sultan of the Moguls inveſted the City, and preſs'd him hard by a Siege of two Months. This Prince being taken, was led through the Streets of the City, wrapp'd up and ſmother'd in a Felt, in which he expir'd a little after. One of his Sons was kill'd, as he couragiouſly defended a Gate of the City, whilſt his Father was debauching; and the other was knock'd o'th' Head by the Conqueror. Thus ended the Illuſtrious Houſe of the Abaſſides, that had given Thirty ſeven Caliphs; and the Eaſt was ſubjected to the Plunders of the Tartars and Moguls.

XII. As theſe barbarous Nations depopulated all the Places they paſs'd through, the Settlements which the Ten Tribes had in this Country were deſtroy'd, and the Nation again diſpers'd. However they devoted themſelves to theſe new Maſters of Aſia, and ſometimes found Favour at their Court. Akmed Khan, ſurnamed Nicoudar Oglan, after he had uſurp'd his Nephew's Monarchy, turn'd Muſſulman, and thereby drew upon him his Subjects hatred, who had a great Inclination for Chriſtianity, and Averſion for the Mahometans. Argoun Khan, who † impatiently bore his Uncle's Uſurpation, iſſued out of Chorazan, where he was retir'd, but was beaten and taken Priſoner. This Diſgrace raiſed him to the Throne; for Lemir Buga, who was order'd to kill him, joyn'd with him, and ſurprizing his Uncle's General, and the Sultan, who was diverting himſelf at Bagdet, he caus'd him to be flea'd, and aſcended his Father's Throne in the Year 1283. Argoun at firſt gave the Government to Buga, who had done him ſo important a Service; but this Miniſter, puff'd up with his Grandeur, and unable to bear his Exaltation, rebell'd, and was kill'd a little after in the Year 1287, and a Jewiſh Phyſician, ingenious and agreeable in Converſation, named Saadeddoulat, became firſt Miniſter of the Sultan. They do him this Juſtice, that he depriv'd the Chriſtians of nothing they poſſeſs'd in Argoun's Empire. But he imploy'd all his Credit to raiſe his Nation, and to procure it new Eſtabliſhments: Thus the Jews of the Eaſt began to breath again, and to enjoy the Advantages they had ſo long wanted.

The Muſſulmans with Indignation beheld the Progreſs of the diſpers'd Tribes, and the rather, becauſe they were kept out of all Employs, and ſhut out of their Prince's Camp; but they were quickly comforted by Argoun's Sickneſs. The Jews pray'd in all the Provinces for the Sultan's Health, but they were not heard.

XIII. Saadeddoulat, who foreſaw the Conſequences which this Sickneſs might have to himſelf and Brethren, ſent expreſs Orders every where to redreſs the Grievances which were complain'd of during his Miniſtry, and to appeaſe the People by a ſpeedy Satisfaction; but all to no purpoſe. Argoun died ‖, and even before his death, the Miniſter of State was accus'd of having poiſon'd his Maſter. This Accuſation, invented by the Arabian Hiſtorians, ſeems improbable. Nevertheleſs Saadeddoulat was murther'd; and after the Prince's death, which the

† An. 1391. ‖ Maghèn Avòth, Scutum Patrum; Obeù Miſchpat, Diligens Judicium; Miſchpat Tſedek, Judicium Juſtitiæ. Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. p. 411. * An. 1218. † Herbelot. Bibl. Or. ‖ An. 129.

Muſſulmans look upon as one of the Miracles wrought by Mahomet, they fell upon the Jews, and made a great Slaughter of them, to revenge the real or pretended Injuſtices they had done them.

XIV. We read likewiſe in Abouſaid's Life, who was Sultan at the beginning of the Fourteenth Century *, that a Jew appear'd at his Court in a pompous Equipage; for he was follow'd with many Pages, ſome whereof ſupported him when he walk'd. This Magnificence gave occaſion to a Buffoon Poet, who was preſent, to fall upon his Knees, as in Adoration of the Jew; and when he was ask'd the reaſon of it: I ſee, ſays he, the Remainder of the Houſe of Moſes carried by Angels, and I thought it my duty to honour it likewiſe. This piece of Railery informs us, that notwithſtanding the Maſſacre at Chorazan, after Argoun's death, the Jews had re-eſtabliſh'd themſelves at the Court of the Moguls, who became Muſſulmans. This Monarchy was canton'd into many Principalities after Abouſaid's death †, which Diviſion gave birth to cruel Wars, for each indeavour'd to incroach upon his Neighbour's Frontiers, till Tamerlane appear'd.

XV. We find nothing in the Hiſtory of the Grecian Empire relating to the Jews in the two Ages we have examined. We only learn, that they had an entire Liberty of Conſcience, ſince the Greeks of thoſe times reproach'd ‖ the Latins with doing Violence to the Jews, and forcing them to receive Baptiſm, tho' otherwiſe none were ſo ready to Judaize. Theſe Accuſations were well grounded; for the Cruſaders committed great Violences againſt the Jews, not only in the Weſt before their departure, but in all places of the Eaſt where they came. This Violence ſeem'd ſo much the more Criminal to the Greeks, in that they Judaized at Rome. They ſaid, that they paid Devotion to the Sabbaths, ſince they made them days of Faſt; that they preſerv'd the Cuſtom of Sprinklings; that they habited the High-Prieſt like him of the Law. They added, that they ate unleaven'd Bread in the Celebration of the Euchariſt, and even ſacrificed a Lamb at Eaſter. For indeed, they boiled a Lamb, they put it on the Altar, where they offer'd the Sacrifice; they ate it after the Maſs; they burnt the Bones, and preſerv'd the Aſhes to ſprinkle thoſe that deſir'd it, and believ'd they were purified by this Jewiſh Ceremony. Abbot Suger relates, that Innocent II. coming to celebrate the Paſſover in the Abbey of St. Denis, ſacrific'd the Holy Victim of the Paſchal Lamb, which demonſtrates, that they renewed the ancient Sacrifices. We even ſee a Medal ſtruck by the Pope's order in the Year 1334, in which Jeſus Chriſt is repreſented ſitting at a Table in an upper Chamber with his Diſciples, pronouncing theſe words, I have deſired to eat this Paſſover with you. And on the Reverſe, the Figure of a boil'd Lamb, with ſome words of Exodus relating to this Ceremony. This Medal is aſcrib'd to Pope Paul III. but he was not elected till October; and Bonnani *, who has publiſh'd a great Collection of the Popes Medals, attributes it more judiciouſly to Pope Clement, who celebrated the Feaſt of the Paſſover this Year, which was that of his Death. Thus in the Weſt, the Synagogue that had been buried in the firſt Ages was reviv'd, at the ſame time they perſecuted the Perſons, whereas the Greeks had great Indulgence for them in all the places of their Juriſdiction.

* An. 1327. Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. † An. 1357. ‖ Græci in Latinos apud Coteler. Mon. Eccleſ. Græcæ, t. 3. p. 99. 501. 504. 506. 515. * Bonnani Numiſmata Pontificum, t. 1. p. 198.

CHAP. XV.

The Hiſtory of the Jews in Spain, during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries.

I. The Archbiſhop of Toledo Plunders them. II. The Cruſaders Maſſacre them. III. The Diverſity about the Thephilim the occaſion of trouble. IV. Marriages with foreign Women condemn'd. V. The Martyrdom of a Child: Ridiculous Verſes upon this Martyrdom. VI. A Prediction concerning the Birth of Jeſus found in Spain. VII. Pennaforte labours to convert them by fair means. VIII. Raymond Martin compoſes the Ponyard of Faith. IX. A Conference held in Arragon before King James. X. The Regiſters of this Conference doubtful. XI. Martin's Examination of the Jewiſh Books. XII. He accuſes them of having no God. XIII. The Miracles of Jeſus Chriſt ill proved by Martin. XIV. He invalidates the Prophecy of Daniel: Proofs of this matter. XV. He proves ill the Death of the Meſſiah. XVI. An Obſervation upon the Title of Juſt applied to the Meſſiah. XVII. The Rabbins favour'd by Alphonſo X. XVIII. The Alphonſine Tables made by a Jew. XIX. Alphonſo's Reproaches againſt the Jews. XX. Meir a ſhining Star. His Works. XXI. Books of Devotion compoſed by the Rabbins.

I. THE Jewiſh Nation was * numerous and potent in the Weſt, and particularly in Spain, where it maintain'd it ſelf almoſt equally with the Caliphs and Chriſtian Princes, becauſe the different Exigences of State render'd them neceſſary to both. In the mean time their Number and Authority ſometimes excited the Jealouſie of Eccleſiaſticks who perſecuted them. This happen'd at the beginning of the Thirteenth Century at Toledo. The Biſhop of that great City, vex'd to ſee his Dioceſs fill'd with Multitudes of thriving Jews, and deſiring to inrich himſelf with their Spoils, exaſperated the People againſt them. This Biſhop was of a warm and reſtleſs Temper. He embark'd in all the Affairs of Peace and War, and nothing conſiderable was acted in Spain, but what he had a hand in. His Merit had raiſed him to the See of Toledo notwithſtanding his Birth; for he was a Stranger in Caſtile. His Dioceſe became ſenſible of the Vivacity of a Man, who was fitter to be a Miniſter of State, or a General of an Army, than a Biſhop. But the Jews ſuffer'd more than the reſt; for putting himſelf at the Head of a Rabble which he had raiſed, he tumultuouſly entered their Synagogue, diſpers'd the Aſſembly, and thence proceeded to Plunder their Houſes. He endeavour'd to authoriſe his Avarice, by accuſing the Jews of having betray'd the City when the Moors beſieged it: But they anſwer'd this Accuſation by the Silence of Impartial Hiſtorians; and indeed it is not probable the Beſieged would quit the City to go in Proceſſion a League from it, and that they would have given up the Cuſtody of it, as the Archbiſhop Roderigo ſaid.

* An. 1209. Mariana, p. 487. t. 1. Cardoſo las Excellencias, p. 373.

ſaid. Beſides, the Capitulation of the Inhabitants is their Apology; for they were permitted to quit the Country, and carry off their Effects. They were allow'd ſeven Churches, upon Condition of paying the Impoſts that had been paid to the Goths; and the Jews who were included in the Treaty, had their Liberty of Conſcience.

II. This Miſery was follow'd † with another, for the Cruſaders ‖ who were preparing for their Expedition to the Holy Land, having their Rendezvous near this great City, thought that Devotion oblig'd them to Maſſacre thoſe who had crucified the Lord Jeſus, and that the Firſt-fruits of this Blood offer'd to God, would draw down his Bleſſing upon their Endeavours to reſcue his Son's Sepulchre out of the Hands of the Infidels. Theſe Votaries preſcrib'd no Bounds to their Cruelty. * Abravanel looks upon this Perſecution, as one of the four cruelleſt that his Nation ſuffered; for, according to his account, it made a greater number of Jews go out of Spain, than God had conducted out of Egypt by the miraculous Miniſtry of Moſes. The Nobility of Spain withſtood the Torrent of theſe Cruelties, and repreſs'd them by their Authority and Reſiſtance. But King Ferdinand, who endeavour'd to win the Love of his People by perſecuting the Albigeois Hereticks, and who himſelf ſet Fire to the Pile in which they were burn'd, to ſhew the Ardour of his Zeal, was not favourable to the Jews, the moſt Odious of all Hereticks.

III. They † ought, according to their Principles, to blame themſelves for their Calamities, and to conſider themſelves as the principal Cauſe of them, for, according to their own Confeſſion, they were fallen into two crying Sins. There was ſome Variation in their Tephilim. Their Superſtitious Devotions for theſe Phylacteries of the Head and Hand, was notorious in our Saviour's time, but it increas'd in the following Ages. They reckon eight Deciſions proceeding from Mount Sinai, as they ſpeak, of which the moſt conſiderable are, that the Phylacteries ought to be ſquare and ſerv'd with Nerves. As even the Points and Ornaments of the Letters, were a Subject of Scruple and Controverſie betwixt the German and Portugueſe Synagogues; the Spaniards varying upon this matter, rais'd Commotions in the beginning of the Thirteenth Century. R. Baruch ‖ made a Journey from Germany to Spain, to reproach them with the Novelties which they introduced into their Synagogues. I don't know whether it was out of Vexation to ſee his Cenſures deſpiſed, or out of Devotion that he retir'd, but he went on to Candia, and from thence into Judea.

IV. There was in Spain another Scandal, that was greater and better grounded: They no longer ſcrupled to marry ſtrange Women: As the Marriages with Chriſtians had been ſeverely forbidden, it is probable they contracted oftner with the Sarazens Daughters. Moſes de Cozzi fell foul upon theſe Marriages like another Eſdras. He was of an Italian Family, and therefore retain'd the Name of the Town of Cozzo in the Milaneſe, whence he came; but he was born in Spain, and was reckon'd the learneſt Rabbin of his time. He could not bear the Scandal of theſe heterogeneous Marriages. He preach'd often upon this Subject, and at laſt had the good Fortune to be heard; for many ſent away the ſtrange Wives they had married. There were then near twelve thouſand Jews in the City of Toledo.

V. They have been charg'd * with a Crime of a far deeper Dye; for twenty Hiſtorians or Legendaries of Spain, accuſe them with having carried away a Child from the Choir at Saragoſſa, and to have crucified it. The Crime was † diſcover'd by the Guards, who were at the Gate of the City watching the Boats there. They perceiv'd a glaring Light upon the Grave of little Dominick, that had been ſecretly buried on the River-ſide. They gave notice of it to the Clergy, who came and carried away the Body, and depoſited it in St. Giles's Church; but by vertue of a new Apparition of the little Saint, it was convey'd into the Cathedral Church of Saragoſſa, where it has been ſince honour'd as a Martyr, and had great Miracles aſcrib'd to it; the Acts of his Martyrdom are not only preciouſly preſerv'd in the Archives of this Church, but the Orators and Poets have ſtrove to outvy one another in chanting his Conſtancy and Miracles. One compares him to Jeſus Chriſt. There is, according to them, ſome reſemblance in the Names; for he was call'd Dominic, and Jeſus Chriſt is call'd Dominus, and a Conformity in the Hatred of the Jews, who look'd upon this Infant as their Enemy, and Saragoſſa thereby reſembled Jeruſalem. All theſe thoughts are falſe and ridiculous, for the Title Lord is not a Name; and the Empire which this Title intimates, did not belong to Dominic. The Jews could not fear a Child of Seven Years old, as they fear'd Jeſus Chriſt, for his Doctrine and Miracles, and Jeruſalem was deſtroy'd, becauſe he had been crucified. However a Poet has taken the Pains to ſing him in Verſe ‖:

Cui Dominus nomen propriique inſigne Trophæi
Præſtitit, & ſimili prorſus obire nece,
Auguſtæ moriens tantum decus addidit urbi,
Penè ut eam Solymis redderet inde parem.
Hunc properè Hebræus populus ſibi credidit hoſtem,
Ut Jeſum, & dignum morte perire crucis.

Another * makes him to be born with Crowns upon his Head, and miraculous Croſſes upon his Arms, an authentick Mark of his Holineſs:

Huicque fuit ſanctus primo ſignatus abortu
Educens nitidam matris de ventre coronam,
Atque humeros crucibus rutilos oſtroque micantes.

At Seven Years old he ſang the Praiſes of the Virgin, and ſerved the Quire:

Affigunt ligno infantem cantare ſuetum
Virginis & Matris laudes, ſervire choroque
Metropolis noſtræ ſubtili voce Domingum.

His Miracles are boaſted to be brighter than the Sun:

Tranſlata deinceps,
Metropolim in noſtram miraclis clara micantis
Et pulchri ſolis ſuperant oſtenta nitore.

Laſtly, 'Tis added, That Moſes Albayzer, who ſtole this Child, to get, like Judas, a Sum of Money, confeſs'd his Fault, and was baptiz'd. We can't find a Murther teſtified by a greater number of Witneſſes: Yet not one of them was an ocular one.

VI. We are told † alſo, that a Jew was baptiz'd, with all his Family, upon accidentally finding in a Rock an old Book, in which he read theſe words,

† An. 1212. ‖ Mariana l. 11. c. 22. p. 490. t. 2. * Abrabanel in Eſ. c. 46. † Miſchnah t. 1. p. 9. ‖ Ben R. Iſaac de Garmiſa, An. 1236. B. R. Bartol. t. 1. p. 695. Ibid. t. v. p. 75. n. 1210. * An. 1250. † Bzovii Annal. ad An. 1250. n. 18. t. 1. p. 558. ‖ Navarro Canonicus Turiaſonenſis Epigramma. * Vincentius Blaſco Periſtephanon Arragoniæ, l. 4. fol. 72. Tamaio Salazar Martyr. Hiſp. Aug. 31. p. 625 & 626. † Faſcicul. Tempor. Hiſt. German. t. 3. fol. 18.

Muſſulmans look upon as one of the Miracles wrought by Mahomet, they fell upon the Jews, and made a great Slaughter of them, to revenge the real or pretended Injuſtices they had done them.

XIV. We read likewiſe in Abouſaid's Life, who was Sultan at the beginning of the Fourteenth Century *, that a Jew appear'd at his Court in a pompous Equipage; for he was follow'd with many Pages, ſome whereof ſupported him when he walk'd. This Magnificence gave occaſion to a Buffoon Poet, who was preſent, to fall upon his Knees, as in Adoration of the Jew; and when he was ask'd the reaſon of it: I ſee, ſays he, the Remainder of the Houſe of Moſes carried by Angels, and I thought it my duty to honour it likewiſe. This piece of Railery informs us, that notwithſtanding the Maſſacre at Chorazan, after Argoun's death, the Jews had re-eſtabliſh'd themſelves at the Court of the Moguls, who became Muſſulmans. This Monarchy was canton'd into many Principalities after Abouſaid's death †, which Diviſion gave birth to cruel Wars, for each indeavour'd to incroach upon his Neighbour's Frontiers, till Tamerlane appear'd.

XV. We find nothing in the Hiſtory of the Grecian Empire relating to the Jews in the two Ages we have examined. We only learn, that they had an entire Liberty of Conſcience, ſince the Greeks of thoſe times reproach'd ‖ the Latins with doing Violence to the Jews, and forcing them to receive Baptiſm, tho' otherwiſe none were ſo ready to Judaize. Theſe Accuſations were well grounded; for the Cruſaders committed great Violences againſt the Jews, not only in the Weſt before their departure, but in all places of the Eaſt where they came. This Violence ſeem'd ſo much the more Criminal to the Greeks, in that they Judaized at Rome. They ſaid, that they paid Devotion to the Sabbaths, ſince they made them days of Faſt; that they preſerv'd the Cuſtom of Sprinklings; that they habited the High-Prieſt like him of the Law. They added, that they ate unleaven'd Bread in the Celebration of the Euchariſt, and even ſacrificed a Lamb at Eaſter. For indeed, they boiled a Lamb, they put it on the Altar, where they offer'd the Sacrifice; they ate it after the Maſs; they burnt the Bones, and preſerv'd the Aſhes to ſprinkle thoſe that deſir'd it, and believ'd they were purified by this Jewiſh Ceremony. Abbot Suger relates, that Innocent II. coming to celebrate the Paſſover in the Abbey of St. Denis, ſacrific'd the Holy Victim of the Paſchal Lamb, which demonſtrates, that they renewed the ancient Sacrifices. We even ſee a Medal ſtruck by the Pope's order in the Year 1334, in which Jeſus Chriſt is repreſented ſitting at a Table in an upper Chamber with his Diſciples, pronouncing theſe words, I have deſired to eat this Paſſover with you. And on the Reverſe, the Figure of a boil'd Lamb, with ſome words of Exodus relating to this Ceremony. This Medal is aſcrib'd to Pope Paul III. but he was not elected till October; and Bonnani *, who has publiſh'd a great Collection of the Popes Medals, attributes it more judiciouſly to Pope Clement, who celebrated the Feaſt of the Paſſover this Year, which was that of his Death. Thus in the Weſt, the Synagogue that had been buried in the firſt Ages was reviv'd, at the ſame time they perſecuted the Perſons, whereas the Greeks had great Indulgence for them in all the places of their Juriſdiction.

* An. 1327. Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. † An. 1357. ‖ Græci in Latinos apud Coteler. Mon. Eccleſ. Græcæ, t. 3. p. 99. 501. 504. 506. 515. * Bonnani Numiſmata Pontificum, t. 1. p. 198.

CHAP. XV.

The Hiſtory of the Jews in Spain, during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries.

I. The Archbiſhop of Toledo Plunders them. II. The Cruſaders Maſſacre them. III. The Diverſity about the Thephilim the occaſion of trouble. IV. Marriages with foreign Women condemn'd. V. The Martyrdom of a Child: Ridiculous Verſes upon this Martyrdom. VI. A Prediction concerning the Birth of Jeſus found in Spain. VII. Pennaforte labours to convert them by fair means. VIII. Raymond Martin compoſes the Ponyard of Faith. IX. A Conference held in Arragon before King James. X. The Regiſters of this Conference doubtful. XI. Martin's Examination of the Jewiſh Books. XII. He accuſes them of having no God. XIII. The Miracles of Jeſus Chriſt ill proved by Martin. XIV. He invalidates the Prophecy of Daniel: Proofs of this matter. XV. He proves ill the Death of the Meſſiah. XVI. An Obſervation upon the Title of Juſt applied to the Meſſiah. XVII. The Rabbins favour'd by Alphonſo X. XVIII. The Alphonſine Tables made by a Jew. XIX. Alphonſo's Reproaches againſt the Jews. XX. Meir a ſhining Star. His Works. XXI. Books of Devotion compoſed by the Rabbins.

I. THE Jewiſh Nation was * numerous and potent in the Weſt, and particularly in Spain, where it maintain'd it ſelf almoſt equally with the Caliphs and Chriſtian Princes, becauſe the different Exigences of State render'd them neceſſary to both. In the mean time their Number and Authority ſometimes excited the Jealouſie of Eccleſiaſticks who perſecuted them. This happen'd at the beginning of the Thirteenth Century at Toledo. The Biſhop of that great City, vex'd to ſee his Dioceſs fill'd with Multitudes of thriving Jews, and deſiring to inrich himſelf with their Spoils, exaſperated the People againſt them. This Biſhop was of a warm and reſtleſs Temper. He embark'd in all the Affairs of Peace and War, and nothing conſiderable was acted in Spain, but what he had a hand in. His Merit had raiſed him to the See of Toledo notwithſtanding his Birth; for he was a Stranger in Caſtile. His Dioceſe became ſenſible of the Vivacity of a Man, who was fitter to be a Miniſter of State, or a General of an Army, than a Biſhop. But the Jews ſuffer'd more than the reſt; for putting himſelf at the Head of a Rabble which he had raiſed, he tumultuouſly entered their Synagogue, diſpers'd the Aſſembly, and thence proceeded to Plunder their Houſes. He endeavour'd to authoriſe his Avarice, by accuſing the Jews of having betray'd the City when the Moors beſieged it: But they anſwer'd this Accuſation by the Silence of Impartial Hiſtorians; and indeed it is not probable the Beſieged would quit the City to go in Proceſſion a League from it, and that they would have given up the Cuſtody of it, as the Archbiſhop Roderigo ſaid.

* An. 1209. Mariana, p. 487. t. 1. Cardoſo las Excellencias, p. 373.

ſaid. Beſides, the Capitulation of the Inhabitants is their Apology; for they were permitted to quit the Country, and carry off their Effects. They were allow'd ſeven Churches, upon Condition of paying the Impoſts that had been paid to the Goths; and the Jews who were included in the Treaty, had their Liberty of Conſcience.

II. This Miſery was follow'd † with another, for the Cruſaders ‖ who were preparing for their Expedition to the Holy Land, having their Rendezvous near this great City, thought that Devotion oblig'd them to Maſſacre thoſe who had crucified the Lord Jeſus, and that the Firſt-fruits of this Blood offer'd to God, would draw down his Bleſſing upon their Endeavours to reſcue his Son's Sepulchre out of the Hands of the Infidels. Theſe Votaries preſcrib'd no Bounds to their Cruelty. * Abravanel looks upon this Perſecution, as one of the four cruelleſt that his Nation ſuffered; for, according to his account, it made a greater number of Jews go out of Spain, than God had conducted out of Egypt by the miraculous Miniſtry of Moſes. The Nobility of Spain withſtood the Torrent of theſe Cruelties, and repreſs'd them by their Authority and Reſiſtance. But King Ferdinand, who endeavour'd to win the Love of his People by perſecuting the Albigeois Hereticks, and who himſelf ſet Fire to the Pile in which they were burn'd, to ſhew the Ardour of his Zeal, was not favourable to the Jews, the moſt Odious of all Hereticks.

III. They † ought, according to their Principles, to blame themſelves for their Calamities, and to conſider themſelves as the principal Cauſe of them, for, according to their own Confeſſion, they were fallen into two crying Sins. There was ſome Variation in their Tephilim. Their Superſtitious Devotions for theſe Phylacteries of the Head and Hand, was notorious in our Saviour's time, but it increas'd in the following Ages. They reckon eight Deciſions proceeding from Mount Sinai, as they ſpeak, of which the moſt conſiderable are, that the Phylacteries ought to be ſquare and ſerv'd with Nerves. As even the Points and Ornaments of the Letters, were a Subject of Scruple and Controverſie betwixt the German and Portugueſe Synagogues; the Spaniards varying upon this matter, rais'd Commotions in the beginning of the Thirteenth Century. R. Baruch ‖ made a Journey from Germany to Spain, to reproach them with the Novelties which they introduced into their Synagogues. I don't know whether it was out of Vexation to ſee his Cenſures deſpiſed, or out of Devotion that he retir'd, but he went on to Candia, and from thence into Judea.

IV. There was in Spain another Scandal, that was greater and better grounded: They no longer ſcrupled to marry ſtrange Women: As the Marriages with Chriſtians had been ſeverely forbidden, it is probable they contracted oftner with the Sarazens Daughters. Moſes de Cozzi fell foul upon theſe Marriages like another Eſdras. He was of an Italian Family, and therefore retain'd the Name of the Town of Cozzo in the Milaneſe, whence he came; but he was born in Spain, and was reckon'd the learnedſt Rabbin of his time. He could not bear the Scandal of theſe heterogeneous Marriages. He preach'd often upon this Subject, and at laſt had the good Fortune to be heard; for many ſent away the ſtrange Wives they had married. There were then near twelve thouſand Jews in the City of Toledo.

V. They have been charg'd * with a Crime of a far deeper Dye; for twenty Hiſtorians or Legendaries of Spain, accuſe them with having carried away a Child from the Choir at Saragoſſa, and to have crucified it. The Crime was † diſcover'd by the Guards, who were at the Gate of the City watching the Boats there. They perceiv'd a glaring Light upon the Grave of little Dominick, that had been ſecretly buried on the River-ſide. They gave notice of it to the Clergy, who came and carried away the Body, and depoſited it in St. Giles's Church; but by vertue of a new Apparition of the little Saint, it was convey'd into the Cathedral Church of Saragoſſa, where it has been ſince honour'd as a Martyr, and had great Miracles aſcrib'd to it; the Acts of his Martyrdom are not only preciouſly preſerv'd in the Archives of this Church, but the Orators and Poets have ſtrove to outvy one another in chanting his Conſtancy and Miracles. One compares him to Jeſus Chriſt. There is, according to them, ſome reſemblance in the Names; for he was call'd Dominic, and Jeſus Chriſt is call'd Dominus, and a Conformity in the Hatred of the Jews, who look'd upon this Infant as their Enemy, and Saragoſſa thereby reſembled Jeruſalem. All theſe thoughts are falſe and ridiculous, for the Title Lord is not a Name; and the Empire which this Title intimates, did not belong to Dominic. The Jews could not fear a Child of Seven Years old, as they fear'd Jeſus Chriſt, for his Doctrine and Miracles, and Jeruſalem was deſtroy'd, becauſe he had been crucified. However a Poet has taken the Pains to ſing him in Verſe ‖:

Cui Dominus nomen propriique inſigne Trophæi
Præſtitit, & ſimili prorſus obire nece,
Auguſtæ moriens tantum decus addidit urbi,
Penè ut eam Solymis redderet inde parem.
Hunc properè Hebræus populus ſibi credidit hoſtem,
Ut Jeſum, & dignum morte perire crucis.

Another * makes him to be born with Crowns upon his Head, and miraculous Croſſes upon his Arms, an authentick Mark of his Holineſs:

Huicque fuit ſanctus primo ſignatus abortu
Educens nitidam matris de ventre coronam,
Atque humeros crucibus rutilos oſtroque micantes.

At Seven Years old he ſang the Praiſes of the Virgin, and ſerved the Quire:

Affigunt ligno infantem cantare ſuetum
Virginis & Matris laudes, ſervire choroque
Metropolis noſtræ ſubtili voce Domingum.

His Miracles are boaſted to be brighter than the Sun:

Tranſlata deinceps,
Metropolim in noſtram miraclis clara micantis
Et pulchri ſolis ſuperant oſtenta nitore.

Laſtly, 'Tis added, That Moſes Albayzer, who ſtole this Child, to get, like Judas, a Sum of Money, confeſs'd his Fault, and was baptiz'd. We can't find a Murther teſtified by a greater number of Witneſſes: Yet not one of them was an ocular one.

VI. We are told † alſo, that a Jew was baptiz'd, with all his Family, upon accidentally finding in a Rock an old Book, in which he read theſe words,

† An. 1212. ‖ Mariana l. 11. c. 22. p. 490. t. 2. * Abrabanel in Eſ. c. 46. † Miſchnah t. 1. p. 9. ‖ Ben R. Iſaac de Garmiſa, An. 1236. B. R. Bartol. t. 1. p. 695. Ibid. t. v. p. 75. n. 1210. * An. 1250. † Bzovii Annal. ad An. 1250. n. 18. t. 1. p. 558. ‖ Navarro Canonicus Turiaſonenſis Epigramma. • Vincentius Blaſco Periſtephanon Arragoniæ, l. 4. fol. 72. Tamaio Salazar Martyr. Hiſp. Aug. 31. p. 625 & 626. † Faſcicul. Tempor. Hiſt. German. t. 3. fol. 18.

The Son of God ſhall be born of the Virgin Mary in the third World, and ſuffer for the Redemption. This Oracle was follow'd with another, which foretold, that this Book ſhould be found at the Time of Ferrand the Virgin. Hiſtorians differ about this Circumſtance, for William * the Procurator of St. Egmond, aſſerts, That the Reign of Ferrand King of Caſtile was ſpecified in the Oracle. This removes one part of the Difficulty, becauſe this Virgin Ferrand is no more known, ſince the Thirteenth Century, than ſhe was before; and it would be very ſingular for God to have made choice of the Name of this unknown Maid, to fix the time for the compleating of the Oracle. Laſtly, It was much more reaſonable to point at Ferdinand King of Caſtile, who has been reckon'd a Saint, and muſt have been better known to the Jews than any other. For theſe ſorts of Abbreviations of Names are common enough, and Ferdinand King of Naples is alſo call'd Fernand and Ferrand. But ſtill there remains a Doubt, becauſe Ferdinand was already dead; and Alphonſo his Son reign'd in Caſtile in the Year 1253, in which this Event is placed. But it was no new thing; for ſuch another Prediction had been diſcover'd at Conſtantinople: One perhaps was the Mother of the other, for Miracle-mongers have not always Wit enough to invent new ones. Let us ſay then, either that the Fact is falſe, or that it was a Trick put upon a Jew, who was Fool enough to be impos'd upon.

VII. 'Tis certain, that mighty Pains were then taken for the Converſion of the Jews. Raymond de Pennaforte †, General of the Dominicans, had already condemn'd the Violence that had been too often employ'd to deſtroy rather than to convert thoſe People, and had declar'd for the way of Inſtruction and Gentleneſs. As he had a great Credit with James I. King of Arragon, whoſe Confeſſor he was, and often Miniſter to the Pope, he perſwaded this Prince, that he ought to repreſs the Inſolence of the People, to oblige many to the Study of Arabick and Hebrew, to qualifie them to diſpute with Jews and Sarazens, and to lead them to Chriſtianity, by convincing them of their Errors. They boaſt ‖ much of the Succeſs he had againſt the Sarazens, and affirm, that he converted above ten thouſand of them; and that the Moors of Africa had a ſincere deſire to do the ſame thing; but they don't talk ſo confidently of the Converſion of the Jews. 'Tis only obſerv'd, that they preſerv'd a great Reſpect for his Perſon, an acknowledgment of the gentle and equitable way of dealing with them. 'Tis true, King James of Arragon, at his Requeſt, publiſh'd divers Edicts; and tho' they were not Sanguinary, as they ſay, yet they broke in upon their ancient Liberty. They ſpoil the good that was done by Pennaforte, by attributing to him falſe Miracles; for the Legendaries feign, that flying from too corrupt a Court, he paſs'd the Sea upon his Cloak, and that his Staff ſerv'd him for a Rudder, or Sceptre to command the Ocean. This Cloak is ſtill preſerv'd as a precious Relick.

Dedit non terris jura, ſed fluctibus;
Uſus eſt non tridente, ſed baculo;
Virga ceſſit in navigii malum,
Imò in maritimi regni ſceptrum.
O paſſum pallium ventis
Inſigne Regii paludamenti fuit;
Novo ſe Regi ſubjicit Oceanus.

The Popes having firſt appointed the Celebration of his Feaſt, canoniz'd him, when the Money was found, * neceſſary to obtain this Apotheoſis. Pennaforte thought of a thing very uſeful to Religion; for ſeveral Monks apply'd themſelves to the Study of the Languages, which had been neglected. They ſtudied the Holy Scripture, and ſet the Truth in a clearer Light. The Succeſs and Impreſſions of the Word don't depend upon the Doctors; they are only to do their indeavours to render it more clear and efficacious. The Kings of Caſtile and Arragon honour'd Pennaforte † during his Life, which was very long, aſſiſted at his Funeral Solemnity when he died, and Pope Clement VIII. canoniz'd him.

VIII. The Pains of this Dominican produc'd the Poniard of Faith. This Book is ſometimes aſcrib'd to him, as if he was the Author; but he was only the Promoter of it, and it did not come out till three Years after his Death, compos'd by Raymond Martin, a Man of the ſame Order *. It has been ſuppos'd, that he was born a Jew, and that he turn'd Monk after his Converſion; but Nachmanides † does not upbraid him with being a Deſerter of Judaiſm, tho' this violent and paſſionate Rabbin ſpar'd not the groſſeſt Abuſes. He ‖ had been choſen to ſtudy the Languages, to be employ'd in the Converſion of the Jews. He had ſome part at the Conference held at Barcelona, in the Palace of King James, and in his Preſence againſt Moſes Nachmanides, that famous Cabbaliſt before-mention'd. We are told, that Raymond ſo confounded his Adverſary, that he was oblig'd to quit Spain, and retire to Jeruſalem, to avoid the Shame and Reproaches that were made to him, or that he made to himſelf. But they do more Honour to Martin than he deſerves, for he was not the Opponent in this Diſpute. He ſaid but little; but a Monk nam'd Paul, maintain'd the brunt. 'Tis he only that is mentioned by King James, in the Edict he publiſh'd after the Conference; and the ſame Monk is quoted in another Conference held in preſence of Benedict XIII. as the Perſon that diſputed with Nachmanides.

IX. Each pretended to the Advantage of the Diſpute. Paul obtain'd a Decree from the King of Arragon *, by which the Jews were enjoyn'd to open to him the Doors of their Synagogues and Houſes to diſpute with 'em, to furniſh him with all the Books neceſſary to convince 'em, and to pay the expence of the Carriage of his Library, by deducting what they disburs'd, from the Tribute they paid to the King.

On the other ſide, Nachmanides † publiſh'd the Acts of his Conference, in which he claims the Victory, and maintains, the King was ſo well pleas'd with his Conduct, as to give him 300 Crowns for his Voyage. They add, that he liv'd afterwards with the Repute of an Able Man; that he has ſtill been quoted as one of the great Defenders of his Religion, and that if he retir'd afterwards to Jeruſalem, it was only out of Devotion.

It appears by this Printed Conference, that Nachmanides anſwer'd very weakly to the Objection of the time of the Meſſiah's coming; and that the only Advantage he had, proceeded from the imprudence of the Monks and King, who went to prove to him the Trinity of Perſons by the Smell, Taſte and Colour in the Wine, or by the Wiſdom, Power and Will in God.

* Willelmi Monachi & Procur. Egmond. Chronic. Veteris Ævi Analecta, Mathæi t. 4. An. 1700. p. 90. † An. 1255. ‖ Anonymus in Vita R. de Pennaforte. * Clement VIII. † 'Tis believ'd he liv'd a hundred Years. He died in 1275, and was canoniz'd in 1601. Spondan. ad An. 1275. n. 1. p. 254. Mariana de Reb. Hiſp. l. 13. c. 22. p. 579. Carpz. Introd. ad Theol. Jud. c. 12. p. 98. * Raymondi Martini Pugio Fidei, An. 1278. † Moſes B. Nachman was born An. 1194. Jud. 4954. He is ſaid to have lived ſixty Years, and died in the Year 1260 or 5020; and the Conference was not held till the Year 1263 or 5023. ‖ Auguſtinus Juſtinianus Epiſc. Nebbienſis Nebbio. Porcheri Victoriæ contra Judæos. * Cod. Log. Antiquar. apud Lindenbroch. f. 235. † Diſputatio Nachmanidis apud Wagenſeil Telâ Ignea Satanæ, t. 1. p. 24. &c.

X. But

X. But I queſtion whether we have the true Regiſters of this Conference. I ſhall not alledge what is commonly ſaid, That Nachmanides dy'd in the Year 1260. three Years before the Diſpute; for there is no doubt, that this is a miſtaken Calculation, ſince King James's Edict proves, that the Conference was held, and that Nachmanides was cited as one of the Diſputants, under the Name of Maſtre de Gironne, by the Rabbins that diſputed before Benedict XIII. But I have two Scruples; one that theſe ſame Rabbins || produc'd ſeveral Paſſages not now to be found in the Acts publiſh'd by Wagenſeil; the other, that they have many German Words, which don't agree to a Rabbin born at Gironne, diſputing before a King of Arragon againſt Spaniſh Monks. It is probable, that a more modern German publiſh'd this Piece under the Name of an Illuſtrious Rabbin, to give his Work and his Nation the greater Honour; but this is only a Conjecture. This Conference had ſo little fame and effect for the Converſion of the Jews, that Pope Benedict, who was of Arragon, had never heard it ſo much as mention'd. The Jews * plum'd themſelves ſo much upon it, that the Pope condemn'd the King of Arragon for permitting it, and the Monk for ſuſtaining it.

XI. Raymond Martin was aſſociated the Year following with the Biſhop of Barcelona and Pennaforte, to judge of the Blaſphemies inſerted in the Jewiſh Books, which were complain'd of to the King. His Work †, tho' much eſteem'd when it came out, remain'd buried till the laſt Century. A Plagiary, who diſcover'd it, appropriated the beſt part of it to himſelf, and ſince its appearance it is look'd upon as one of the moſt proper pieces to convince the Jews.

XII. In this Poniard of Faith, we find numerous Citations of the Rabbins, which ſhew, that the Author had read them with great Exactneſs and Diligence. But we ought not to wonder, that this heap of Reading produced no great Effect; for moſt of the Proofs alledged are ſo weak, that it is difficult to receive them. The Enemies of the Faith, are charg'd with Doctrines which are none of theirs; and whereas a Man ought to be very cautious in uſing the Teſtimonies of his Adverſaries, to prove to them, that they have believ'd Myſteries elevated above Reaſon, becauſe 'tis impoſſible that ſupernatural Truths ſhould make ſuch Impreſſion in the Soul, to force involuntary Confeſſions; Raymond Martin || runs away with a little word, that has eſcap'd them, and from thence draws Concluſions for the Doctrines of Chriſtianity, as if theſe Rabbins, doting on their Law, had any deſign to teach what is moſt difficult to be believed in Chriſtianity. He accuſes the Jews of having no God, becauſe the Rabbins ſay, that he weeps at certain hours of the day over the Ruins of the Temple, and the Miſery of his People. This would be a ſtrange Weakneſs in the Deity, but 'tis uſeleſs to dilate in Arguments, and to prove that God can, but will not, deliver the Jews; for all theſe Batteries are eaſily diſmounted by recurring to the Prophetick Style; which has given God the parts of a Body, and the Affections of a Man ſo emphatically, that there have been Hereticks, who, miſled by theſe Expreſſions, have believ'd that he had actually Feet and Hands, and all the parts of a Humane Body.

Martin boldly aſſerts, that there never was a Rabbin that denied the Trinity; and that they have only combated the two Principles of the Egyptians, Perſians and Manes. But who can advance this, without being willing to be deceiv'd, ſince the Unity of a God is the capital Doctrine of the Jews, and the Plurality of Perſons is the greateſt Obſtacle to their Converſion? They find themſelves perplex'd in the Explication of the paſſages of Geneſis, where God ſays, Let us make Man in our Image. But they * obſerve, that this relates to the Angels and Intelligences, which God imploys in the Government of the World; and that if the Text has an Expreſſion, that gives a handle to Hereticks, becauſe Moſes ſpeaks in the Plural, the Gods, it at once adminiſters a Remedy, and a Proof of the Unity of a God; becauſe Moſes ſays in the Singular, the Gods hath created. We ſhall never convince the Jews, in being peremptory to perſwade them, that they believ'd what they never did, and that they don't oppoſe the Doctrine of the Trinity, which is the main Object of their Blaſphemies.

XIII. Can a Man fancy, that the Incredulous do not laugh, when he goes to perſwade them, that Jeſus Chriſt is born without Father, and of the Seed of the Woman; becauſe the Shilo promiſed by Jacob, ſignifies the Skin in which the Infant is wrap'd up, and that this Skin is produced only by the Mother, as the Poet ſays:

Ut nondum natus teſtâ circumdatur ovi
Pullus, ſic infans matris de ſemine factâ,
Quam naſcens nempit quaſi teſtam pullulus ovi:
Iſtas pelliculas Medici dixere † Secundas,
Quæ mox expoſitos naturæ jure ſequuntur.

Not to examine whether he proves || well, That Jeſus Chriſt is the Stone broken without hand, mention'd by Daniel, by ſuppoſing that this ſignifies a Man who had no Father, he abſurdly proves the Truth of his Miracles by the Scripture of the People; that is, by the Images that repreſent them; as if Heatheniſm had not pictur'd the Prodigies of its falſe Gods: by Reputation, as if it was not only probable, but neceſſary, to believe the Reports ſpread abroad in the World, and ſubſiſting for ſome time. Laſtly, He proves the Truth of theſe Miracles by the Effects they had produced; and the miraculous Effect brought for an Inſtance, is Conſtantine's Donation to the Pope, and the Ordinance to kiſs his Feet: What will the Jews ſay to this? crys the Author, Which way will they evade the Argument? and to what will he attribute this Effect? 'Tis eaſie to anſwer, That the Jews will laugh to ſee a Man ſo eaſily put upon. They will attribute this miraculous Donation to an Impoſtor, and the Haughtineſs of the Popes.

XIV. The Author of the Poniard of Faith, not only enervates Jacob's Prophecy, by an impertinent Search after Subtilties upon the Name of Shiloh, and the Miracles of the Son of God, but he abſolutely robs us of Daniel's Prediction of the Seventy Weeks, which ſo expreſly proves the Coming of the Meſſiah; and this Argument, which is infinitely ſtrong againſt Judaiſm, grows infinitely weak by his management. 1. Whereas the Prophet Daniel fixes the Term, from whence we ought to reckon the Seventy Weeks to the Edict, that was to be given for the Re-eſtabliſhment of Jeruſalem, Raymond Martin means the Saying of the Prophet Jeremiah *, who promis'd this return, and begins his Computation from the Twelth Year of Nebuchadnezzar, which makes it evidently falſe, and manifeſts a prodigious Ignorance of Hiſtory. 2. There is not one of the Kings of the Medes or Perſians, whoſe Succeſſion or Years of their Empire he does not confound, which compleats the Invalidity of his Proof. He makes Darius Cyrus's Grandfather; he reckons the thirty Years of this latter's Reign, and looks upon the

|| Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 252. * Ibid. 253. † Pugio Fidei. || Raym. Mart. Pugio Fidei, c. 15. p. 73. * Ibid. c. 3. p. 486.
† Siloh dicitur à Siliah. Siliah Hebraicè à Medicis Latinis dicitur Secundina, R. ibid. p. 317. || Ibid. p. 365, 368. * Jer. 29.

Jews

Jews as Robbers that ſteal ſome of them. Whereas 'tis known, that the different degrees of this Empire ought to be diſtinguiſh'd, and that Ptolemy reckons but nine from Cyrus's making himſelf Maſter of Babylon. 3. He cites for his Evidence a ſpurious Author, the falſe Hebrew Joſeph, and relies upon the Teſtimony of Chriſtians, whoſe Writings he had r ad ill.

Daniel ſays, that he ſhall be cut off in the midſt of the ſixty ninth Week. He ſpeaks of the Meſſiah who was to die at that time; but Martin applies it to the Sacrifices of the Law, and amuſes himſelf to prove by a Rabbin's Authority, that the Sacrifice had ceas'd before the Ruin of the ſecond Temple; that is, at our Saviour's Baptiſm. Here are a great many ſtrange Errors; for he robs us of the Meſſiah's Death expreſs'd by the cutting off. He advances a Falſhood, in ſaying that the Sacrifices ſhould not laſt till the Deſtruction of the Temple; which being a Fact eaſily proved, caſts || all Raymond's Structure to the Ground. The Authority of a Jew confeſſing the matter, would be inſignificant, ſince we are never to found an important Proof upon Falſhoods, even tho' there were ſome Perſons that have been deceived by them. But farther, It was not ſaid that the Sacrifice ceas'd either at our Saviour's Baptiſm, or in the Years following.

Laſtly, Raymond * Martyn reckons 112 Years from the Twelfth of Nebuchadnezzar to the re-building of the Temple, and 420 from its being re-built till its ruin by Veſpaſian. This makes Five hundred thirty two Years, from which number we muſt take Forty two, from the time of our Saviour's Death, to the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; and by this means he finds the Four hundred and ninety Years of Daniel. But this Calculation is evidently falſe, for by fixing the Edict to the time of Nebuchadnezzar, Zedechias and Jeremiah, we ſhall find Six hundred thirty four Years to our Lord's death, or a hundred and fifty Years more than there ought to be. And yet this is the Prophecy that Raymond Martin has moſt attentively examin'd.

XV. I queſtion whether we ſhall find him more happy in proving, That the Meſſiah ought to die. To this purpoſe † he makes uſe of a Paſſage of a Rabbin, who ſays, That God repreſenting to Adam the Conſequences of his Sin, informs him, That it ſhould cauſe the Death of that Juſt one. The Juſt one, ſays he, is the Meſſiah, who is call'd by the Prophet Zachariah, the Righteous King; and for whom the World was created, according to the Rabbins. This Proof has been thought a good one; for || Galatin has ſtoln it, and apply'd the Words of Iſaiah, The Righteous periſheth, and no Man layeth it to Heart: And Samuel de Maroch * endeavouring to prove the coming of the Meſſiah to his deſerted Brethren, makes a better uſe of it, by obſerving, That God had threatned his People to leave them in Poverty and Exile, becauſe they had ſold the Righteous for Silver; nevertheleſs, ſince the Prophet adds, that they had Sold the Poor for a Pair of Shooes, 'tis eaſie to conceive, that he meant by it only the miſerable that had been forſaken. Beſides, the Jewiſh Author cited by Raymond, living after the Birth of Chriſtianity, and ſeeing it founded upon the Meſſiah's death, could not have had the thought of making this Death to be foretold by God at the beginning of the World, and imagin'd an Oracle, that overthrew his Religion. Laſtly, This Author foretold Adam, that if he ſhook the World by his Fall in eating the Forbidden Fruit, there ſhould be no body after him able to repair it. The Author therefore denies, that there was any Reparation after the Sin, and acknowledges no body that can redeem Mankind.

XVI. The Title of Juſt is equivocal. Even the Heathens have made uſe of it; and we at preſent ſee near Libadia †, the Inſcription of an Heathen, which he had engraven on his Tomb, that his Soul is gone to the Juſt.

Ψυχὴ δ' ἐς τὸ δίκαιον ἐλήλυθε δένομα τ' ἔμον Νεδέμου.

The Chriſtians of this Country have Conſecrated this Tomb to St. Luke; and ſome have the temerity to imagine the Evangeliſt was bury'd there. Others ſay, that it is one Luke the Hermit, who liv'd in the Place. But 'tis eaſily diſcover'd to be the Tomb of a Heathen, call'd Nedemus, who believ'd, That his Soul aſcended to the Juſt. 'Tis not therefore a Title ſo peculiar to the Meſſiah, as to conclude, that the Author of this Commentary deſign'd to ſignifie him. We have ſaid enough of a Book that has been look'd upon as a Maſter-piece. 'Tis not amiſs to ſhew the Jews, That we go not about to deceive 'em, nor lead 'em to Chriſtianity by uncertain or doubtful Arguments. It is not ſaid that this Treatiſe wrought any great number of Converſions in Spain.

XVII. 'Tis alſo certain, that at the time that ſo many different Meaſures were taken for the Converſion of the Jews by Edicts, Conferences and Books written with ſo much pains and ſtudy, the Rabbins ſtill preſerv'd themſelves in great Credit with the Kings. Alphonſo X. || King of Caſtile, was ſo mightily pleas'd with the Contemplation of the Stars, that he goes ordinarily by the Name of the Aſtrologer. This Prince by Study had obſerv'd great Irregularities in the Diſpoſition of the Parts of the World, as it appears to us; and he ſcrupled not to ſay, that if he had been preſent at the Creation, he would have given good Advice to the Author of Nature. The Rabbins, who were great Aſtronomers, found no difficulty to inſinuate into this Prince's Court. Juda de Toledo, by his Order, tranſlated ſome Books of Aſtronomy, compos'd by Avicenna in Arabick; and penetrating farther into that Science, he counted the Stars, and divided them into forty eight Conſtellations. However, the Glory of that Invention is diſputed him, becauſe almoſt the ſame number of Stars is to be met with in Beda's Writings. But it is not probable that this Toledo Rabbin had read Beda's Works, at a time when Books were ſcarce, and Correſpondence difficult, and the Conformity of Notions is not always an Argument, that the laſt Inventers are Plagiaries and Copiers.

XVIII. Alphonſo * employ'd another Rabbin, Iſaac the Son of Sid, who made the Aſtronomical Tables, which have ſince been call'd the Alphonſine, and been in great Eſteem with all the Learned, who have apply'd themſelves to that Study. Moſes, the Son of Tibbon, who then liv'd in the Kingdom of Granada, tranſlated alſo Euclid's Elements, whoſe Manuſcript is ſtill at Rome. 'Tis ſaid, he taught at Montpelier when he compos'd this Work; which is probable enough. But yet we can't depend upon Gedaliah †, who ſays it, ſince he is ſo ſenſibly miſtaken about the time when this Rabbin liv'd; for || Ibid. p. 722. & 282. * He gives thirty four to the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, from which Jeremy had promis'd the Return, three and twenty to Evilmerodac, three to Belſhazar, two to Darius, thirty to Cyrus, fourteen to Aſſuerus married to Eſther, ſix to Darius, under whom the Temple was built, and four hundred and twenty Years of duration, in all five hundred thirty and two Years. † Ibid. Pars III. Diſt. 2. c. 5. p. 562. || Galat. Arcana l. 6. c. 10. p. 465. * Samuel Maroch de Adventu Meſſiæ c. 6. & 7. † Wheeler Voyages, p. 379. || An. 1255. * An. 1255. † Ghed. Schialſchelet Hakkabala Ganz Tſemach David. An. ſexti millenarii 30. that is, to the Year of Chriſt 1270.

he

he places him in the Year 1330. tho' he flouriſh'd in the Reign of Alphonſo the Aſtrologer, who countenanc'd the Learned of all Nations and all Religion.

XIX. 'Twas probably in this great Prince's Reign that three Villains of Orſona * threw a dead Body into the Houſe of a Jew, and accus'd him of the Murther. This † Calumny being ſpread thro' the City, the People maſſacr'd all the Jews that fell into their hands. Some of 'em eſcap'd into their Friends Houſes; but it being the Feaſt of unleavened Bread, and there being none of it to be met with, they were very near dying with Hunger; as chuſing rather to faſt than break the Law. The Inhabitants of Palma imitated the Orſonians in ſlaughtering the Jews, who ſent to ſollicite their Brethren to make a Deputation to the Court, to put a ſtop to a Maſſacre, that was like to be univerſal. The Proſecutors follow'd the three Jews that were deputed, very cloſely, and arriv'd even before 'em, becauſe theſe Envoys had been oblig'd to leave the Road and abſcond in a Foreſt, for fear of falling into their Perſecutors Hands. Joſeph, the Head of the Embaſſy, and the Spokeſman, pleaded with ſo much Eloquence, that he was admir'd by all the Court. The King acquitted the Nation of the Murther which had not been committed; but nevertheleſs rebuk'd them for their exceſſive Uſuries, the Sumptuouſneſs of their Dreſſes, and the Pomp wherewith theſe Fugitive Slaves walk'd the Streets, to the provoking the jealouſie of his Subjects. He ask'd them, Why they taught to ſing, ſince they ought to be in Mourning? Why they inſtructed their Children to Fence, ſince they never went to War? "If, "ſaid he, you learn the ill Cuſtoms of my Peo- "ple, you ought to imitate their good ones, to "eſpouſe their Modeſty and love of Peace. I don't "ſpeak to you, added he, as a Prince that hates "you, for why ſhould I hate you, ſince God loves "you? Nor do I pretend to diſpute with you, as "knowing, that you will alledge Excuſes and vain "Pretences; only profit by what I tell you". The Jews excus'd themſelves by ſaying, that their Nation had a mixture of bad and good Men, like the Chriſtians; that the King had only condemn'd the Magnificence of Habits in the Jews, without mentioning their Women, which occaſion'd 'em to think the Edict did not relate to 'em. The Accuſers inſiſted, that the Jew ſhould be put to the Rack, to know whether he had committed the Murther, but he warded off that blow, by cauſing the Grave to be open'd, from which the Corps had been taken and thrown into his Houſe.

XX. As Alphonſo countenanc'd them, a great many learned Men produc'd themſelves, beſides thoſe already mention'd. There was ſeen in the ſame Kingdom a ſhining Star and a holy Stem, that ſent out many Shoots; which was Meir Mithridos. Thus he is call'd by Ganz. But ‖ it has been very judiciouſly obſerv'd, that it is a Fault of the Copier; for he was Son to Theodorus, Prince of the Levites of Burgos. He ought not to be confounded, as is commonly done, with another Meir of Narbonne, his Cotemporary, and who had, like him, a great many Diſciples.

This Man, a Native of Toledo, was a great Cabbaliſt. He gave his principal Piece, the Title Before and Behind, or Before the Faces, to ſhew that he penetrated into the bottom of the moſt ſubtile Cabbala, and had ſtudy'd it on all ſides. He writ alſo a Volume of Letters againſt Nachmanides, or Harramban. He gave repoſe to the Law, and bred up Diſciples, that maintain'd their Nation's and their Maſter's Honour.

XXI. Nor was it only at the Court of Caſtile that the learned Rabbins appear'd and were reſpected. James I. King of Arragon, tho' a Votary, lov'd 'em to that degree, as to receive Moral Lectures from them. He deſir'd of them the Books of Devotion and Piety they had compos'd. R. Jona, who liv'd at that time *, writ to another Jona of Gironne for Advice, how he ought to anſwer the King of Arragon's Intention, who had commanded him to write a Book to inſtruct Man in the Duties of Religion and Piety. 'Tis believ'd likewiſe, that it is to this Jona, that we ought to give the Honour of a famous Book concerning Fear, which is attributed to the other Jona, and † has been tranſlated into ſeveral Languages. The Rabbins muſt have been in great Favour with this Prince, ſince he had recourſe to them to be inſtructed in the Rules of true Piety. And we can't read this Requeſt without retorting ſome Diſgrace upon the Chriſtian Clergy of that Country and Age, who perhaps apply'd themſelves more to the Study of the Tongues, than to the Practice of Devotion.

* A City of Andaluſia. † Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 78. ad 92. ‖ Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. p. 18. We muſt read Todros.
* An. 1264. † Into High-Dutch and Spaniſh under the Title of Tratado del Timor Divino.

CHAP. XVI.

A Continuation of the ſame Subject. Several Misfortunes befalling the Jews in Spain.

I. A Promiſe of the Meſſiah. II. An Account of the Fraud. III. Moſes of Leon imitates the Zohar and ſells it. IV. A remarkable Event of the Shepherds. V. The French Hiſtorians Account of this Event. Jews that kill themſelves. VI. The Jews Account. VII. The Maſſacres they commit upon the Jews in Languedoc and Guienne. VIII. Fifteen thouſand burnt upon a falſe Accuſation. IX. The Jews expoſed to a new Danger by a Dream. X. The Perſecution of Toledo. Their direful Deſpair. Their exemplary Fidelity to Peter the Cruel. XI. Raymond the Neophyte confounded with the bleſſed R. Lully. XII. Whether the Jews poiſon'd Henry II. A Queen that expels 'em. A Monk her Gallant hang'd. XIII. A Perſecution under Henry the Curſed. XIV. King John ſuffers 'em to be tormented. XV. The Oppreſſions in Arragon. XVI. Sciprut writes againſt the Chriſtian Religion. The Time he liv'd in. XVII. Zerachias the Younger. XVIII. The Jews Eſteem for Ariſtotle.

I. THeir Repoſe was diſturb'd by a Famous Impoſtor, who fram'd a Deſign to deceive all the Synagogues of Spain. He ventur'd not to ſet up for the Meſſiah; but he promis'd his ſpeedy Appearance, upon their obſerving the Condition he impos'd. This was a very eaſie Task; for the buſineſs was only to learn and remember well a Prophecy which he had made, and in which he pretended to explain the ineffable Name of God. 'Tis a Tradition Tradition handed down from Age to Age, that the Name of Jehovah includes ineffable Virtues, and that he that can discover either the Characters or Explication of them, hereby obtains a Sovereign Power.

II. Zachary, that was the Impostor's Name, imagin'd that he had found out this Explication, and publish'd, instead of concealing it, as had formerly been done, and sent it * to all the Jews dispers'd in the several Kingdoms of Spain. He had an Accomplice that seconded him. These two Cheats impos'd upon the World by the Austerity of their Lives, and their Predictions. They notify'd the Day the Messiah was to appear. The Jews having prepar'd themselves by Fasting and Alms, went to the Synagogue, dress'd in White, to wait the effect of this Promise. A Jew †, who turn'd Monk, and wrote against his Nation, asserts, They were strangely surpriz'd to find Crosses upon these white Cloaths, and upon all the Linen they had left at home. But I believe that their greatest affliction, was the Disgrace to have been impos'd upon.

III. The Spanish Doctors had an Imposture ‖ of another kind to disturb them, which was occasion'd by Necessity and Misery. The Rabbin Moses, who was born in the Kingdom of Leon, was a Learned Man, but Poor. He was call'd to the Government of a Synagogue, the Salary whereof was insufficient to maintain his numerous Family. He resolved, for his Support, to deceive the Doctors. They had in their Hands several loose Sheets of the Zohar *, which was a Work attributed to Simeon Jochaides. Moses of Leon observing it to be distributed by pieces, which were infinitely esteem'd, imitated his Style, finish'd what was wanting, and sold his Work as compleat. This Policy was successful. He sold a great number of Copies, by which means he reliev'd the Necessities of his Family. But there was some difference perceiv'd betwixt the Style of the ancient Doctor and modern Rabbin, who, after that Conviction, was confounded with the Disgrace.

IV. But all these Misfortunes were not comparable to that they felt in the beginning of the fourteenth Century, the Effects whereof spread far and wide. It would be a hard thing to find so singular an Event as that of the Shepherds. If some have attempted in these latter times to deceive the People with false Prophesies and Airs of Piety, their Enterprize has had no Consequence. They perish-ed, as we may say, as soon as they were born, and vanish'd in the very place where they began to appear. But here we shall see a Gang of Shepherds setting up for Votaries, and boasting of their Miracles; that rendevouze and form numerous Armies, that plunder Provinces, and can't be dispersed without a prodigious effusion of Blood. The Jews had a great share in the Cruelties they exercis'd in many Kingdoms; and 'twas by these Shepherds that a long train of Miseries commenc'd, which the Synagogue suffer'd during the fourteenth Century.

V. The Historians † are not perfectly agreed about the Origin of this Event. The French say, that the Assembly of the Shepherds began in France in the Reign of Philip the Long, and that they made the Conquest of the Holy Land their Pretence. They were Headed by a depos'd Priest, and a Benedictine Monk, a Deserter of his Order, who so abus'd the Credulity of the People, as to be thought Miraculous Men. The Peasants quitted their Labour and Plough to follow them; and the great Lords carry'd away with the Torrent, gave them their Protection, till they found it their Interest to destroy them, upon the fear of being plunder'd. They ravag'd Languedoc and the Neighbouring Provinces; breaking the Prison Doors, and releasing the Malefactors to enlarge their Troop, they made themselves Masters of the Cities, where they exercis'd the utmost Cruelties, particularly against the Jews. A considerable number of this Nation retiring to a Castle, under the Protection of the King of France, these Shepherds came and besieg'd em, with a resolution to destroy 'em. The Besieg'd defended themselves like desperate Men; and when their Arms fail'd, they threw their Children from the top of the Walls to move Compassion. 'Twas an useless Sacrifice. The Shepherds set fire to the Gates, and thought to satiate their rage with the Blood of their Enemies, but they found nothing but dead Bodies and some Children remaining. The Jews had kill'd one another, to avoid falling into the Hands of Christians more implacable than Barbarians. Only one Man, who had kill'd his Companions, and could not resolve to kill himself was seiz'd and cut in pieces.

VI. The Jews relate the thing with some little difference, and pretend to have taken it from some Spanish Books translated into Hebrew. They say, That a young Spanish Shepherd, call'd Roar, gave out, that a Pigeon talk'd to him in his Ear, and that she turn'd her self into a young Man, when he stretch'd out his Hand to take her. Roar feined, that this Pigeon metamorphos'd into a Man, commanded him to put himself at the Head of the People, to gather up an Army to expel the Saracens; and to make it the better known, he had impress'd the Sign of the Cross upon his Arm. This miraculous Sign was not only seen upon the young Shepherd's Arm, but there were also People more ingenious, or more credulous, who read on it a positive Promise of vanquishing the Saracens. There needed no more than this to excite the Shepherds. They assembled in such numbers, that Roar quickly saw himself at the Head of three hundred thousand Men. This Army, destin'd at first to rid Spain of the Moors, but alter'd its design, because it was hazardous to attack People innur'd to War, and a Defeat at the beginning would have stagger'd the Faith of the Miracle. A Circumstance happen'd, which fully determin'd them to fall upon the Jews. A Person of this Nation had a quarrel with a Shepherd. All the Multitude hotly espous'd their Brother's Quarrel, whom they thought oppress'd, and they resolv'd to pillage the Synagogues, before they form'd any greater Designs. The Jew was knock'd on the Head upon the spot, and they spread themselves into the Neighbouring Places, where they Massacr'd all they could meet with of that Nation; so they pass'd on to Navarre; where the Cruelties were redoubled, because their numbers were very considerable. Six thousand Jews were murthered in the City of Estella. None escaped but such as could purchase a Retreat into the Fortified Castles of the Lords. R. Menachem however found a Soldier that saved his life. He was then young. His Father and Mother and four Brothers had been stabb'd, and he was left naked, and all wounded upon the Ground. A Soldier, who heard his moan in the Night,

* An. 1258. † Alphonsus de Spina Fortalit. Fidei tit. III. He lived in the Year 1458. ‖ An. 1290. * Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t iv. p. 82. † Du Haillan Hist. of France, l. XIII. Philip the Long t. i. p. 613. Bzov. Ann. Eccl. An. 1320. n. 20. p. 346. Prima vita Joh. XXII. apud Baluz. Vitæ Papar. Aven. t. i. p. 128. Continuatio Chron. Guil. de Nang. An. 1320. Spic. t. xi. p. 687.

moved

moved with his Groans, wrapp'd him up in his Cloak, carried him to his Houſe, and had him cured. He became afterwards Head of the Academy of Toledo, and famous throughout the Nation for his Learning.

VII. The Shepherds proceeded from Navarre to Languedoc, where they committed the like Ravages. Nothing could reſiſt the Torrent which overflow'd on all ſides, and made horrible Havock where-ever it came. Tho' they particularly attack'd the Jews, to enrich themſelves with their Spoils, yet the Chriſtians were not ſecure, becauſe the ſmalleſt Pretence was a ſufficient Motive to the Pillaging their Houſes. Application was made to the Pope who reſided at Avignon, but the Shepherds deſpis'd his Excommunication and Thunderbolts. The Count de Tolouſe executed the Laws and Juſtice upon them. He ſeiz'd ſome of them Priſoners, but the People open'd the Priſons, and the Monks, who cried Miracles, broke their Chains. The Count had a mind to ſave ſome Jews, but the Man to whom he had intruſted their Cuſtody, deliver'd them to their Enemies, and he had the Affront to ſee them come into his City to force the remainder of the Nation to turn Chriſtians. They ſubmitted to it to avoid Death. The Maſſacre continued at Bourdeaux, Agen, Caſtel-Saraſin, and other Cities. Thoſe who were retir'd to Narbonne, imagining the Storm was over, came out of their retreat; but they found in the way a Troop of theſe Shepherds, who, ſupported by the Peaſants, put them to the Sword. The King of France, tired with ſo many Cruelties, order'd them to be proſecuted without Quarter. The Nobility arm'd by the King's Order, and oblig'd them to retire into Navarre and Arragon. They carried the ſame Diſpoſition thither, and cauſed the ſame Diſorders. The King of Arragon armed againſt them, put the Prince Alphonſo at the Head of his Army, who cauſed the Leader of the Shepherds to be kill'd by his Maſter of the Horſe, and diſpers'd the reſt. Part of them periſh'd by the Sword, and the reſt by Peſtilence. Thus an Inſurrection, contemptible in its beginnings, made without experienc'd Leaders, and by meer Peaſants, may yet have terrible Conſequences, when they have the Artifice to introduce Miracles and Religion. All depends upon the firſt Succeſſes; theſe puff up the Hearts of the Rebels, and increaſe their Numbers when they are advantagious. They are impetuous Torrents, that carry Deſtruction where-ever they come; but 'tis rare for the Authors of ſuch Enterprizes, not to periſh after they have flatter'd themſelves with the hopes of Dominion, and erecting their Authority upon the Ruin of their Sovereign's.

VIII. The Plague *, which ſwept away one part of the Shepherds, was a freſh Spring of Miſery to the Jews. People don't love to be thought culpable; they will never own they have deſerv'd the Chaſtiſements of Heaven; and when it ſeems to be provok'd, they caſt about on all ſides to ſeek foreign Cauſes of its Anger. Here the Effects of the Peſtilence were thrown upon the Malice of the Jews, and they could not ſee ſo many Chriſtians dye, without revenging themſelves upon the former, for a thing of which they were guiltleſs. They were accuſed of conſpiring with the Peaſants of Meſura, to poiſon the Waters of the River, and of furniſhing them with the Poiſon. They were caſt into Priſons, and long Informations were made againſt them. Their Innocence was acknowledg'd; but the King, who was unwilling to condemn the Injuſtice he had committed, in retaining ſuch vaſt Numbers of Priſoners ſo long, upon a falſe Pretence, declar'd that he had ſhut them up only to convert them; and upon their refuſal to imbrace Chriſtianity, fifteen thouſand of them were ſentenc'd to the Fire and burnt.

IX. They † were upon the brink of falling under a new Perſecution in Alphonſo XI's time. This King of Caſtile protected them. Joſeph, a Jew of Aſtigy, had got into his Favour the firſt Years of his Reign, and was made Intendant of his Finances. But it happen'd that this Prince dream'd that he ſaw the Wolves aſſembled, to demand of a Shepherd that he would kill his Flock, in Reparation for the Outrages they had receiv'd from it. The daunted Shepherd would have agreed to ſo pernicious a Demand, if a young Lyon, that was hard by, had not diſſwaded him from it. The Wolves exaſperated, return'd ſome days after, butcher'd many of the Sheep and fled. This Dream was too coherent not to be look'd upon as a Preſage. One of his Favourites unfolded the Myſtery, by acquainting the King, that his mutinous Subjects would, ſome time or other, deſire him to expel the Jews out of his Kingdom; that he would yield to ſo unjuſt a Proſecution, unleſs prevented by his Son, who was repreſented in the Dream under the Figure of a young Lyon. The King, who was not ſatisfied with this Interpretation, ſent in queſt of a Jew, being perſwaded that the Prophetick Spirit, which had ſhone ſo long in that Nation, was not yet extinct. He had ſeen, he ſaid, a Monk, who told him, that the Science of the Talmud included great Myſteries, and that it was preferable to all others. The Jew, who was ſent for to Court, had the Honeſty not to pretend to Propheſie, nor the Interpretation of Dreams. He excus'd himſelf upon the Miſeries of the Captivity, which had ſo humbled the Courage of the Nation, that it had entirely loſt all reliſh for the Sciences. His Sincerity was look'd upon as a Diſſimulation. Alphonſo fell into a Paſſion: One of his Miniſters attempted to pacifie him by repreſenting, That tho' theſe Doctors had formerly been as a Lamp, which ſheds its Light in ſeveral places, they could now be compared only to Stones, which caſt out ſome Sparks by their Colliſion againſt one another. Whilſt they were thus arguing in the Palace, a confuted Noiſe of Voices was heard at the Gates. 'Twas that of a tumultuous People demanding, they would give up the Jews to puniſh the Inſolence of one of the young Circumciſed, that had made Water in a Chalice that was carried in Proceſſion. They could not refuſe puniſhing ſuch a flagrant Crime. The Council was aſſembled in the Evening, in which it was debated, Whether they ſhould Baniſh or Maſſacre the Jews. The Advice for Baniſhment prevail'd. King Alphonſo ſign'd the Edict, ordering them to depart in three Months time. The Prince Royal oppos'd this Council, demanded a re-hearing of the Trial, by which it was found, that it was a young Chriſtian living near a Jew, who running to the Window out of Curioſity to ſee the Proceſſion paſs, had unhappily overthrown a Pot of Water upon the Chalice. The King being better inform'd, revok'd his Edict, and liſten'd no more to the ill-grounded Complaints of the People; who cried out, that the Chriſtian had been ſuborn'd to make a Depoſition in favour of their Enemies. Thus Alphonſo's Dream was accompliſh'd. The People, vex'd to have miſs'd their Blow, fail'd not to fall upon the Jews in another City, under the ſame Pretence, and to maſſacre ſome of them. But Alphonſo, cauſing ten of the

* An. 1321. or according to Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 181. in 1340. under Clement VI. in Italy. † Mariana, l. 15. p. 38. t. 2. Salomon Ben Virg. p. 418. An. 1333.

Mutineers to be hang'd, ſtopp'd the Perſecution in its beginning.

X. No ſooner had they eſcap'd this Danger, but they fell into another much more terrible. There was a Mutiny againſt them at Toledo, in which we find ſuch a Tranſport of Deſpair and Fury, as can't be read without Aſtoniſhment. R. Aſcher having fled ſome time before from his native Northembourg, was retired to Toledo with his eight Sons. One of his Children ſeeing the Chriſtians breaking open his Houſe in order to murther him, fell into ſuch an Exceſs of Rage, as to kill all his Relations that were ſhut up with him. He ſtabb'd his own Wife, and that of his Brother Jacob, a Man famous not only for his Diſintereſtedneſs, while he lived, as teaching always gratis tho' he was poor, but he left behind him a famous Book intitled Turim, which is a Body of Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Law. Laſtly, This Jew having kill'd all his Relations, kill'd himſelf for fear of falling into the Hands of the Nazarenes. Some place this Perſecution to the Year 1340, but others date it nine Years later, and with reaſon, not only becauſe in the Year 1340, R. Jacob quietly compos'd the Book before mention'd, but Alphonſo XI. who had countenanced the Nation from the beginning of his Reign, was ſtill alive in 1349. At his Death he tolerated a Sedition which he could not redreſs. Peter the Cruel his Son, who came to the Throne in the Year 1350, ſaw ſeveral Factions form'd in his Kingdom, either by the Inſolence of the People, or the great Lords, who uſurp'd part of the Authority, and cauſed moſt violent Commotions. Henry de Triſtemare, his Natural Brother, ſupported by Bertrand de Gueſclin, took Toledo, kill'd him, and came before Burgos, which ſtill reſiſted. The Jews fortified themſelves in their quarter, and refuſed to ſurrender to the Conqueror. Peter, ſaid they, was our lawful King, and we will rather loſe our Lives, than receive another Maſter, who is not the Heir of his Houſe. They ſay, That Henry could not forbear eſteeming their Fidelity for a deceas'd King, and he granted them honourable Conditions when they engaged on his ſide ||.

XI. At that time appear'd * a very doubtful Man, called Raymond the Neophyte. He was one of thoſe ill converted Jews, who had thrown himſelf into the Order of the Dominicans, the eaſier to deceive his Hearers. He wrote a Treatiſe concerning the Invocation of Devils; and a ſecond Book, in which he examined, Whether an Infidel be ſubject to the Laws of the Church? Pope Gregory XI. who diſcover'd the Artifices and Errors of this Impoſtor, commiſſioned the Biſhop of Tarragona, and the Inquiſitor Emeric, to ſeize all his Books and burn them. That which renders the Fate of this Man doubtful, is, that he is confounded with Raymond Lully. The reaſon of the doubt proceeds from the different Ideas People have had of this laſt Doctor, who after his Youth ſpent in Debauchery, boaſted to have had an Apparition of the crucified Jeſus, ſaying to him, Follow me; and from that moment renouncing the World, he apply'd himſelf to the Study of the Languages, and to the Converſion of the Sarazens of Africa, and the Jews of Majorca, the Place of his Nativity. Some conſider him as a true Saint; and not long ſince came out a Book, to prove that his Doctrine was never condemn'd, and that, time out of mind, Raymond Lully has always been worſhipped as a Saint. Read the † Diſſertationes Iſtoricas de culto Immemorial del B. Raymondo Lullio. A Traveller || going to Perſia, was amaz'd to find, in the Iſle of Majorca, Lully's Statue dreſs'd in St. Francis's Habit, with theſe words, B. R. Lull. His Surprize was increas'd, when he underſtood, that there was not only in this Iſland a Faculty of Divinity, in which Lully's Writings were read, as St. Thomas's were in France; but that his Feaſt was kept, and that there was a particular Office for the day, and that his Relicks were religiouſly preſerv'd, becauſe he had been a Martyr in Africa. Others look upon him as a Rambler, who had made Chymiſtry his principal Study, and had apply'd himſelf more to the Search of the Philoſophers Stone, than to the Converſion of the Erroneous. They add, that Gregory XI. condemn'd his Works as of an Heretick, and that he is look'd upon as ſuch in France. It ſeems, as if there were no Medium to reconcile two ſuch contrary Opinions. And yet many Writers do it in favour of Raymond the Neophyte, whoſe Books they affirm were burnt by the Pope. He gave the Commiſſion for it to the Biſhop of Tarragona, becauſe Raymond the Jew was of this Country, and moſt of his Works were written in the Language of it. Bartolocci *, who is afraid of being miſtaken, refers the Matter to the infallible Judgment of the Church, as Bellarmine had done before him. But this Subterfuge ſhews their Infatuation for their falſe Saints; and how unable they are to reſolve to forſake them. For we need but read Emeric, who had the Pope's Commiſſion to take Information of Raymond Lully's Doctrine, to be † acquainted with the Dangerouſneſs of it, and the numbers of his Errors. The Bull of Gregory XI. has no Ambiguity, ſince Raymond Lully's Name is expreſs'd in it. We can't therefore tranſlate the Pope's Condemnation to a younger Raymond, who came from the Synagogue and preſerv'd his Errors. We muſt therefore neceſſarily confeſs, That there were not two Raymonds, one a Jew born at Tarragona, and the other a Chriſtian born at Majorca, and a Converter of the Sarazens; or if there was a Raymond the Neophyte, it is reaſonable to acquit him of the Errors, and the Condemnation pronounced by the Pope againſt Raymond Lully, tho' he be call'd Bleſſed, and his Feaſt be celebrated at Majorca.

XII. Be it how it will, Raymond the Neophyte lived at the end of the Fourteenth Century, in the Reign of Henry de Triſtamare, who was poyſon'd. The Jews are charg'd with this Crime *, for it is ſaid, that Dom Mehir, this Prince's Phyſician, having ſtolen an Hoſt, which leap'd out of a boiling Kettle, into which it was caſt, was ſo frighted with the Miracle, that he carried it ſecretly to the Prior of the Dominicans. The Crime being diſcover'd, Mehir was arreſted, and he confeſs'd upon the Rack, that he had kill'd the King. But they anſwer with a great deal of Juſtice, that if the Miracle of the Hoſt were true, the Phyſician would have been converted, inſtead of fooliſhly reſtoring it to a Monk. Beſides Mariana, Guſman, and other Spaniſh Hiſtorians ſay, that the King of Granada was ſuſpected to have ſent a Moor to Henry, as fearing (that Peace being made with the Gaſcons) this Prince would make War upon him. This Moor made ſeveral Preſents to Henry, which were thought to be poiſon'd, becauſe he fell ill after the receipt of them. He died of a Languor of the Nerves, and therefore it is not certain he was poiſon'd; and if he died of Poiſon, he receiv'd it from a Moor. Laſtly, A Phyſician, who had the Prince's Favour, would have been the laſt Man to poiſon him †.

They were not treated more favourably at the end

|| An. 1369. Cardoſo las Excellencias, p. 371. * An. 1372. † Memoires of Arts and Sciences, 1702. p. 30. || Pacifici Relatio itineris Perſici An. 1628. Journal of the Learned, An. 1703. p. 1033. * Bart. B. R. t. 4. p. 362. † V. Bzov. An. 1312. n. 19. p. 194. t. 2. & An. 1372. n. 10. * Fortalitium Fidei. † Cardoſo las Excellencias, p. 373.

end of this Century, than they had been at the beginning. They complain'd that Monks, who were willing to make themſelves remarkable at Court, or with the People by Airs of Devotion, affected to appear their irreconcilable Enemies. One of them obtain'd an Order by the Queens means, to baniſh them all from Spain. But this Princeſs being advis'd not to cut down, or pluck up, a Vine that bore good Fruit, was appeas'd by a Sum of Fifty thouſand gold Crowns: She was not the better for them, for whereas the Monk was accus'd a little after, of an Intrigue with her, and was hang'd, ſhe was oblig'd to reſtore the Money ſhe had receiv'd, ſince it was not the Fruit of her Zeal and Devotion that had procured it.

XIII. They alſo ſurpriz'd the Religion of King Henry III. King of Caſtile the Curs'd, who was but Fourteen Years old when he came to the Throne. Martin, Archdeacon of Aſtigy, preaching in the Streets of Sevil and Corduba, ſo inflam'd the Spirits of the People againſt the Jews, as to maſſacre them. The Flame flew to Toledo, Valencia, and Barcelona, where ſome were plunder'd, others kill'd, whilſt the more Politick chang'd their Religion, to eſcape the Fury of the Rabble. The Synagogues of Sevil and Corduba, which were ſo numerous, were diſpers'd by the Multitude of Deſerters. Henry purſued them. Thoſe that retir'd to Andaluſia, and other places, were knock'd o'th' Head by the Inhabitants. Salomon Ben Virga * places this Perſecution in the Year 5150, which would be 1390. Spondanus in the Year 1391. Mariana in 1392. Henry was not King till 1393. And therefore Bzovius † has judiciouſly retarded it till 1396.

XIV. His Son King John was as Inhumane as himſelf. Thoſe who conceal'd themſelves in the Father's Reign, periſh'd miſerably in the Son's, becauſe they were denied all the Neceſſaries of Life, and were eaſily diſtinguiſh'd by a red Badge, which they were forced to wear.

XV. They were not more happy in Arragon, for the States being aſſembled to prevent the Conſequences of a War, that ſeem'd inevitable, they reſolv'd to raiſe new Taxes upon the Moors and Jews, to ſupply the Exigences of State, whilſt the Nobility took Arms; and this Tax expos'd them to Oppreſſions that conſum'd them, lying open not only to the Avarice but Hatred of the Farmers, who never ſcruple to ruin a People; but who pride themſelves in their Barbarity, when 'tis exercis'd upon the Objects of the publick Hatred ‖.

XVI. However this Century was not without its great Men, among whom we muſt reckon Iſaac Sciprut a virulent Enemy to the Chriſtian Religion, and who wrote againſt it. The Criticks all agree, that he flouriſh'd in the Fourteenth Century, tho' they don't exactly accord about the time. Some place him in the Year 1374, and others later in 1396. But Bartolocci * had ſeen at Rome a Manuſcript of his Book againſt Chriſtianity, which ſhews in the beginning and end of it, that it was compoſed at Turiaſſo, a City of Old Caſtile, in the Year 1340, that is, the ſame Year that R. Jacob compos'd his Courſe of Law, entitled, Turim, or, The Four Orders.

Salomon, Son of Chanor ‡, went from Conſtantinople to Burgos, to reveal the Profundities of the Law. This was the Title of a Book, in which he explain'd the difficult Paſſages of the Pentateuch, and the Interpretations of the Rabbins that were too Metaphorical or Hyperbolical.

His Son Schem Tou inherited his Father's Hatred to the Chriſtian Religion. There have been a great many Rabbins of this Name. Schem Tou de Leon wrote againſt the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, to reduce a young Proſelyte that was retir'd near the Pope at Avignon. He publiſh'd the High-way of Faith, דרך נרול אמונה, in which he pretended to prove the Truth of his Religion by Philoſophical Demonſtrations. Another Schem Tou, the Son of Joſeph Palkera, who lived in the Sixteenth Century, was not only a great Preacher, and printed his Sermons upon the Pentateuch, and the chief Feſtivals of the Year, but alſo his Letter of Diſpute is eſteem'd. Ighereth Havicvach, in which he examines whether the Study of the Law ought to be preferr'd to Piety, or Piety to the Study of the Law.

The Perſon we treat of lived in the Year 1375, and tranſlated St. Matthew's Goſpel into Hebrew, under the Title Even Bochen, אבן בוחן, The Touch-ſtone. 'Tis ſaid that he invented this Title to render the Goſpel deſpicable to his Nation; but he might have had another view, ſince the Goſpel is the Rule of the Chriſtians Faith. After he had publiſh'd this Sacred Book, he enter'd into Diſpute againſt our principal Myſteries, as that of the Trinity and the Meſſiah. To which he added, the Contradictions of Maſter Alphonſo the Apoſtate. 'Tis not eaſie to gueſs, who was this Adverſary of Schem Tou; for Alphonſo de Spina ‖, who having embraced Chriſtianity, writ againſt the Jews and Arabians, did not live till the Year 1458, when Schem Tou muſt have been dead. Bartolocci * ſpeaks of an Alphonſo, who anſwer'd all the Objections againſt Chriſtianity, which Kimki has collected in his Wars of the Lord. But it is not known whether he was a Proſelyte, or whether he lived in the Fourteenth Century. Schem Tou alſo publiſh'd his Paradiſe, in which he maintains, that moſt of the Talmudick Stories ought to be interpreted allegorically.

XVII. Zerachias the younger alſo lived at that time, who muſt not be miſtaken for another of the ſame Name, who lived in the Twelfth Century, and paſſes for a Spaniard, tho' he was born at Lunel in Languedoc, becauſe this Province then depended upon Spain. This latter wrought in Confutation of the dangerous Opinions, which another Doctor, born in Judea, had publiſh'd upon the Nature of the Soul. He was one of thoſe who engaged in the Conference before Benedict XIII.

XVIII. Laſtly, The King of Caſtile had two Jewiſh Phyſicians in his Service: The latter call'd Meir Algudes, was at the ſame time Intendant, or Head of all the Spaniſh Synagogues. He tranſlated Ariſtotle's Ethicks. This Philoſopher's Works were ſo eſteem'd by the Rabbins, that Schem Tou, another Learned Man, inſerted them into his Excellency of the Law. This Mark of Eſteem is the more extraordinary, becauſe the Doctors hardly ever read the Works of Forreigners, which they infinitely deſpiſe.

---

* P. 313 & 155. ‡ Ibid. t. 4. p. 376. † Bzov. An. 1394. n. 2. p. 145. ‖ Fortalitium Fidei. ‖ Mariana, t. 1. p. 134. * Bart. B. R. t. 1. p. 366. t. 4. p. 408. * Bartolocci, B. R. t. 3. p. 927.

CHAP. XVII.

The History of the Jews in Italy, during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries.

I. The Popes always favourable to the Jews. II. The Reasons of this Conduct. III. Diversity in the Conduct of Pope Gregory IX. IV. A General Massacre upon Calumnies stopp'd by the Pope. V. A Persecution at Trany: The Pope had no hand in it. VI. Menachem grew Learned in one night, in a Synagogue of the Marquisate of Ancona. VII. Clement V. protects and instructs them. VIII. An Event placed under the Pontificate of John XXII. Upon what account. IX. Fountains poison'd: A general Massacre: Clement VI. protects them. X. Esdras's Original given by the Jews to the Inquisitors of Bologne. XI. This Opinion confuted. XII. The Illustrious Family of the Hannaarim builds a stately Synagogue at Bologne.

I. THough St. Peter was the Apostle of the Jews, and his Successors, treading in his Steps, should be particularly studious to convert this People, yet it appears that they are too much neglected: Of all Soveraigns, hardly one is to be found, whose Authority has been more indulgent to the circumcised than that of the Popes; who whilst they persecute Christians, not subject to their Laws, countenance this Nation, out of which they choose Intendants of their Finances: They grant them Priviledges, and leave them a full Liberty of Conscience. Some Popes, have been their Enemies; but 'tis impossible, that in so long a Succession of Roman Bishops, they should all have been of the same Constitution, and follow'd the same Principles. They still live more quietly under the Dominion of the Heads of the Church, than any where else. I do not condemn Toleration, but it ought to be even and uniform towards all; and the very Moment a Man is perswaded that it is lawful to persecute Christians, and that Religion authorises and commands the Violences that are done them; one would think those that crucified the Lord of Glory, ought to come in for their share as well as the rest. I condemn the Conversions that are the Effects of Violence, because they are commonly false. A Man promises, and swears, he believes what he does not. Perjury, which is sufficient to deprive a Man of Grace, who had already receiv'd the Seed of it in his Heart, is the first Step to the entrance into the Church. The Heart is divided betwixt two Objects, which are almost ever opposite; the Worship he practices, and the Doctrine he has receiv'd from his Ancestors, and still embraces. If he be half perswaded, he makes within himself a third Religion, compounded of one he believes true, and another he believes false: He hesitates, doubts and dissembles to his death, if the Fury of the Persecutors proceeds so far, to ensure his eternal Damnation. But why must the one be persecuted, and the other tolerated? 'Tis easie to assign the Reasons of the Popes Conduct towards the Jews, whilst they have a quite opposite one for the Christians.

II. The Popes have not so much Spleen and Violence against the Jews, because they are ancienter than themselves; and have not sufficient Power to give them umbrage. The Jealousie of Princes only kindles against a growing Republick, or a troublesome Neighbour aggrandizing himself, or attempting to recover his usurped Provinces; whilst they suffer forreign Nations, that are weak and unable to disturb them, to live more at rest. The Protestants front and oppose the Pontifical Authority, and endeavour to resume the Priviledges that belong'd to them; they are bordering and formidable Enemies. And therefore the Popes have a constant Vigilance to weaken and destroy them. Besides the Jews have no particular Grudge against the Popes, but all Christians to them are upon a Level; and they have nothing in their Condition to excite the Jealousie, and other Passions of the Popes. The Desire of Revenge, and the Glory of destroying Rivals, have no place here: Instead of gaining by their Destruction, the respect to their Revenues interesses them in their Preservation. Humane Passions are always more eager than Zeal acting by it self. The Heads of the Roman Religion, have ever been more dexterous at distinguishing, and managing their Temporal Interests, than the Princes and Kings of the Earth: And they have the Art of putting others upon things, which they will not do themselves. The Pope humanly receiv'd those that Ferdinand the Catholick inhumanly expell'd out of his Kingdoms. He secretly laugh'd at the Madness of a cunning Politician, who unpeopled his Dominions of a considerable number of rich and trading Inhabitants, whilst he made great Encomiums upon his Piety. He follow'd the Example of his Predecessors, who most commonly countenanc'd those that other Princes and Nations often persecuted; as we shall see in the Sequel of this Chapter.

III. Gregory IX. Nephew to Innocent III. was one of the most zealous Popes*: He was for having all Princes leave their Kingdoms, to make the Conquest of the Holy Land upon the Infidels. He had the Pleasure to see the Isles of Minorca and Majorca, that were full of Mussulmans, return into Christians hands, after Ferdinand had destroy'd the Fleet of the Moors. 'Tis said too, that all the Inhabitants of these two Isles turn'd Christians. Tho' he had a misunderstanding with Frederick the Emperor, yet he scrupled not to write to him, to let him know, that he might deliver the incredulous Jews to the Secular Arm to be punish'd: In which he departed from his Uncles Conduct, who preserv'd them in their ancient Priviledges. But he himself alter'd his Opinion; for being inform'd that the Circumcised were massacred in several places, when the Expedition was on foot for the Holy Land, he prevented these barbarous Executions.

IV. He deliver'd them from another Persecution they fell into, under a Pretence, that they employed Human Blood in their Medicines. The Inhabitants of Haguenau accus'd the Jews, their Fellow-Citizens, of stealing some Children from the Christians, and murdering them in a Mill, in order to use their Blood in some of their Remedies. The Imposture was gross; for Human Blood is of no use in Physick. The Emperor, who made a nice Inquest into the matter, was convinc'd of their Innocence; and the Historians, who will always have the Jews to be guilty, are oblig'd to say, That this Prince, who put a stop to the Course of the Cruelties, after he had taken cognizance of the Fact, was brib'd by a Sum of Money. The like

* An. 1225.

Fury

Fury paſs'd into Spain. The Engliſh Jews would have been treated with the ſame Inhumanity, had they not warded off the Danger, by buying the Miniſters and the King's Favour. They were kil-led and perſecuted in ſeveral Places; but the great-eſt Maſſacre was at Paris. It had laſted longer, if Pope Gregory IX. who had then the See, had not written preſſingly to St. Lewis, to ſtop the Courſe of theſe Cruelties, and not to force the Conſcien-ces of the Jews: And thus they were indebted for their Lives to the Pope's Toleration, not only in his Dioceſe, but alſo in France.

V. They were ill-handl'd in Trany and Naples by a Popular Tumult, rais'd upon vain Pretences *. They were grown Potent in theſe two Cities, and alſo in the whole Kingdom of Naples, where they had numerous Synagogues and Learned Rabbins: They parallel the Poets of this Country with thoſe of Provence, who were then in ſo great Reputation. The King openly protected them, becauſe they had done him eſſential Services in his Wars. He gave them a Recommendation when he dy'd; but it was thought they could not have a greater Service done them, than by converting them to Chriſtianity. To evade the Perſecution, they promis'd to change their Religion, upon Condition, they might take Wives from good Houſes, and the Noble Families of Naples. Every Body † was deceiv'd in this Con-tract, except the Eccleſiaſticks, who care not at what Price they purchas'd feign'd Converſions. The Jews were ſurpriz'd to ſee his Conditions granted: In the mean time there was no going back, and they muſt turn Chriſtians. It was no leſs a ſurprize to others, to ſee ſeveral Marriages made up by the help of ſo recent and ſuſpected a Converſion. Thoſe that found not a Match, return'd to their old Religion. A Monk of Trany reſolv'd to be re-veng'd on them; and to that purpoſe hid a Croſs in a Dunghil, and accus'd a Jew of the City with doing it. There needed no more to provoke the People, which mutined and cut the Throats of all they could meet with. The Tumult proceeded from Trany to Naples, where the Jews would have been murder'd, if ſome great Lords had not con-ceal'd the Richeſt of them, and skreen'd them from the Popular Fury; which their Hiſtorians reckon the eighteenth of their Calamities. The Jews would be to blame if they accus'd the Pope of all theſe Commotions, who had no hand in them. For Alexander IV. who was then in that See, ſent Octa-vian to Naples, to reſtore his Partiſans the Guelfs, and to inforce his Authority. But Octavian could not ſucceed, and the Pope dy'd ſoon after the ill Succeſs of his Negociation. So that he could nei-ther cauſe nor remedy the Miſeries the Jews ſuf-fer'd.

VI. They were more at reſt in the March of An-cona. This Territory was not in the Eccleſiaſtical State, ſince Pope Clement VII. did not ſeize it with his Troops till the Year 1532, upon pretence of defending it againſt the Turks. It then enjoy'd its Liberty, and the Jews liv'd peaceably in it. They even boaſt, that God wrought a Miracle there in favour of one of their Rabbins. Menachem was born at Ricina Nova, with a ſtupid and heavy Ge-nius. But he ſlept one Night in the Synagogue, and fancy'd he ſaw a Man offering him a Cup of Water, which he had no ſooner drank, but he be-came one of the ableſt Cabbaliſts of his Age ||. We will not vouch for the Miracle; but it ſerves to ſhew, that the Jews were then ſpread into all the the corners of Italy.

VII. Clement V. who remov'd his See to Avignon becauſe of the Troubles Italy was diſturb'd with at the beginning of the fourteenth Century, protected 'em there againſt the Fury of the Shepherds. We have already obſerv'd, that he Excommunicated them. But the Thunderbolts of the Church make but little Impreſſion on a mutinous Rabble, and the Jews had the Honour to reckon a Pope in the Catalogue of their Defenders, without reaping any Fruit from his Protection.

This Pope, who endeavour'd to ſecure them from Violence, and took alſo care of their * Inſtruction: For he appointed Profeſſors in all Univerſities, to teach Hebrew, and breed up Scholars to diſpute with the Jews and inſtruct them, after they had learn'd their Language and Rites, and the neceſſary Method to convince them.

VIII. John XXII. his Succeſſor, took a different courſe: He thought the ſureſt way was to burn all the Copies of the Thalmud; and he earneſtly preſ-ſed the Biſhops to oppoſe the Jewiſh Superſtitions. Nevertheleſs, we are oblig'd to refer to this Pon-tificate, what we are told by the Jewiſh Hiſtorians, That a Good and Equitable Pope was ſollicited by his Siſter Sangiſa, to expel them out of Rome and the Eccleſiaſtical State; but the Pope protected them, and maintain'd their Privileges. They even make him ſay, That Circumciſion ſerv'd inſtead of Baptiſm to purge Souls of Original Sin: But if this Sacrament had any Efficacy under the Law, it has loſt it by the Abolition of all the Ceremo-nies. The Pope, who had ſtood his ground againſt the firſt Sollicitations of his Siſter, could not hold out againſt the Remonſtrances of the Biſhops ſhe brought with her; who aſſerted, they had ſeen the Jews ridiculing them as they carry'd the Croſs in Proceſſion. An Edict was publiſh'd, expelling all the Nation out of the Territories of the Church; which gave them the greater Conſternation, be-cauſe by a long Settlement they were grown ex-tremely rich. To put a ſtop to this Misfortune, they addreſs'd themſelves to Robert King of Jeru-ſalem, who on one hand favour'd the Jews, and on the other liv'd in great Friendſhip with the Pope; and they engag'd him by large Preſents, to ſolli-cit the Repeal of the Edict. The Pope, who had only granted it in complaiſance to his Siſter, con-ſented, provided ſhe was ſatisfy'd; and he revok'd it immediately, upon her receipt of an hundred thouſand Florins. The Pope is not nam'd that iſſu'd and recall'd this Decree of Baniſhment; nor is this Sangiſa, the Pope's Siſter known: We only know, that John XXII. had a Brother, nam'd Pe-ter d'Euſa, to whom King Charles IV. granted ſome Privileges. But ſince the Hiſtorians obſerve, that this Event happened under Robert King of Jeru-ſalem; and that there was a Robert King of this City, as well as of Naples and Sicily, to whom John XXII. had been Chancellor, and with whom he kept a good intelligence; and ſince Benedict XII. his Succeſſor, had no Siſter, we have reaſon to be-lieve it was John XXII. who expell'd the Jews, con-trary to his Inclination, and retracted when he was able to prevent the Execution of the Edict.

IX. Clement VI. ſuccour'd them in a ſignal man-ner. The Perſecution they ſuffer'd was commonly a Fire, that breaking out at one end of a Kingdom, not only inflam'd the adjacent Provinces, but the Neighbouring States, and ſtill furiouſly burnt on. The pretence for this, which was almoſt univerſal, was the poiſoning Fountains and Rivers to deſtroy all thoſe that drank of them. Such as ſoberly examine the matter, acknowledge, that it is impoſſible thus to poiſon Rivers. But no matter for that a great many People dy'd this Year, and the Jews muſt be guilty of the Mortality: They * were maſſacr'd in Spain and Germany, where the Miſchief began; twelve thouſand of them periſh'd in Bavaria. The Imperial Cities made Bridges and Towers with the Ruins of the Houſes of the Jews which they pull'd down; which conſequently muſt have been in great numbers. Some, reduc'd to deſpair, ſuffer'd themſelves to be cruſh'd under their batter'd Houſes, and others burnt themſelves to avoid falling into the hands of theſe inexorable Chriſtians. Clement VI. in the midſt of all their Perſecutors, was their Father and Comforter. He receiv'd them to Avignon, whilſt they were burnt in other Places, and did all that lay in him to ſtop the Torrent of this prodigious Fury. The Hiſtorians and Writers of that time, accus'd him with ſaving the Remains of the Nation, rather from a Principle of Avarice than Charity; but he in like manner tax'd the Perſecutors with proceeding ſo violently, only to enrich themſelves with the Spoils of the Jews; and perhaps both the Accuſations may be true.

* An. 1260. † Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 140. || An. 1280. * An. 1320. † Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 123.

mine

X. The ſevere Inquiſitors exercis'd ſtrange Cruelties againſt the Albigeois, who ſhook off the Yoke of the Church of Rome: But whether the Jews purchaſed their Liberty, or that living in Italy under the Protection of Princes and Popes, no body durſt attack them, they maintain'd a Correſpondence of Preſents and Friendſhip with theſe haughty and cruel Men. Emeric, who made the Directory of the Inquiſition, as knowing all its Springs and Movements, was preſented by them with a Bible, written by the Hand of Eſdras, which the Dominicans ſtill preſerve there with great Veneration: We read in the Pentateuch an Hebrew Inſcription, importing, that

> This is the Book of the Law of Moſes, which Eſdras wrote and read before the Multitude both of Men and Women, ſtanding upon a wooden Tower.

But there is another Latin one that explains the matter more at large. In this we are told, "1. That this Roll of the Law is that which Eſdras wrote with his own Hand, upon his return "from the Captivity, when the Temple was re-"building. 2. That we are aſſur'd it is the Ori-"ginal, from the Teſtimony of ancient Jews that "have receiv'd it into the Synagogues, where it "was preſerv'd. 3. That the Jews have believ'd "it from one Generation to another, and preſent-"ed it to Emeric as an Original. 4. That the "Learned Rabbins, who have examin'd it in the "preſence of Witneſſes, have diſcover'd it by cer-"tain Characters and Strokes not obſervable in "modern Manuſcripts. 5. We are told †, it was "ſhewn to the People on Feſtival days; from "whence it is inferr'd, that it ought to be highly "reverenc'd, as a Book dictated by the Holy Spi-"rit, after all the Sacred Writings were burnt". But Angelus Roccha ‖ adds a Circumſtance, which alone ſuffices to overthrow all theſe Obſervations; for he ſays, that Theſe two Books of Eſdras, written with his Hand, exactly contain the number of Canonical Books, preſcrib'd by the Council of Trent. Did this Learned Ultramontaniſt mean, that theſe two Rolls included all the Books of Scripture, conformably to the Canon of the Council of Trent? Or did he think they were only the firſt and ſecond Book of Eſdras, into which he had inſerted a Catalogue of the Books, which the Church ought to read and include in her Canon? Which-ever way you take it the thing is ridiculous; for it was impoſſible for Eſdras to have mention'd the Books of Maccabees, which the Council of Trent has declar'd Divine; ſince theſe Heroes of the Jewiſh Church liv'd but a long time after Eſdras, and their Actions could not be written before they were born. Beſides Roccha does not agree with the Relation of Dom Monfaucon who travelled laſt, and had the Ingenuity to omit this Circumſtance. But however, they think they do Travellers an extraordinary Favour, when they ſhew them this Copy, which is under the Cuſtody of two Keys, one of which is kept by the Magiſtrate, and the other by the Dominicans.

XI. They * ſhew in the ſame City the Megillath, or the Volume of Eſther, which ſeems to be yet more ancient than the Manuſcript of Eſdras. And laſtly, They have a Bible written in favour of R. Menachem in the Year 1187. We ought not to give credit to the Tradition of the Dominicans, who boaſt they had theſe Copies. They were poor innocent People that believ'd it, and quoted ancient Jews for their Witneſſes, as if old Men could be better inform'd than young Men, of what Eſdras did; or that an hundred Years, more or leſs, were of any moment to the proving this matter of Fact. But ſetting aſide all theſe Stories, two things are certain; one is, the Date of one of theſe Bibles, which the Scribe finiſh'd the 26th of the Month Adar, in the Year 953 or 1187, that Menachem and his Poſterity, and the Poſterity of his Poſterity, might be inſtructed by this Book; and the other is, the Preſent made to Emeric by the Jews of Bologna; for this Manuſcript muſt have had ſome Antiquity, when it was preſented to this Inquiſitor.

XII. The Jews were then potent at Bologna, for beſides the Synagogue they already had, they built another larger and finer, and alſo ſet up an Academy there. 'Twas one of the Hannaarim, who removing from Rome to Bologna, made this new Settlement. This Family, which bears the Name of Children, is ſtill illuſtrious, and pretended to be ſo at that time, ſince Moſes, the Head of it, traced his Genealogy as high as thoſe Jews that Titus carried to Rome. They lived in this great City till the end of the Fourteenth Century, and then they made choice of Bologna, where they made great Acquiſitions, and built the fineſt Synagogue in Italy. Many Rabbins gave it an additional Luſtre, by coming to teach in it. This is a farther Argument, that the Popes † protected the Jews; for not to obſerve that the Hannaarim had amaſs'd prodigious Wealth at Rome, which they enjoy'd: Bologna then belong'd to the Eccleſiaſtical State; and Boniface IX. ſo dreaded by all his Subjects, oppos'd not their erecting a new Synagogue, which for its capaciouſneſs and beauty, was the Gaze and Wonder of Travellers.

---

* Nauclerus Generat. V. Vita Clement. VI. An. 1348. Baluſ. Vitæ Papar. Aven. t. 1. p. 254. An. 1340. † Montfaucon. Diar. Ital. c. 27. p. 400. ‖ Ang. Roccha Bibl. Vatic. Append. p. 294. * Montfaucon ibid. p. 406. † An. 1394.

CHAP.

CHAP. XVIII.

The History of the Jews in France, from the Thirteenth Century, 'till their entire Expulsion from that Kingdom by Charles VI.

I. Philip Augustus's Edicts against Usury. II. The Jews expell'd out of Britany for ever: The remarkable Assizes of John Rufus. III. The unjust Decrees of the Council of Lyons. IV. Jewish Magistrates in Languedoc: Excluded by the Lord of Montpelier's Will. V. Pieces of Money turn'd into Hosts in a Jew's Purse. VI. St. Lewis's Persecution. VII. Shepherds in France during his Imprisonment. VIII. Jechiel of Paris: His Conference: His Magick. IX. St. Lewis expels the Jews. X. Philip the Hardy re-calls them. XI. Levi, the Son of Gersom: His Opinion about the ancient Apparitions. XII. Orders given to the Inquisitors by Nicholas IV. XIII. St. Saviour's Church built at Paris in the Year 1290. The Reason of it. XIV. Philip the Fair expels them out of France: The Causes of this Exile. XV. The Conversion of Nicolas de Lyra: He was a Norman: Jews in this Country. XVI. An ill-converted Jew burnt. XVII. Lewis Hutin re-calls the Jews. XVIII. A Persecution in France for poison'd Fountains. XIX. This Event examin'd. XX. Duels against the Jews authorised by the Virgin. XXI. A false Prophecy relating to them. XXII. Their general Expulsion out of France. XXIII. Their Condition since that time. XXIV. A Confirmation of their Priviledges at Metz, in the Year 1670.

I. PHilip Augustus still reign'd at the beginning of the Thirteenth Century, and many Petitions were presented to him against the Usury of the Jews, who not content with their excessive Interests, and the Mortgages of the Church-Plate, made their Debtors Slaves. The Princes wink'd at these Extortions, because the Usurers bought their Protection; and because, upon the Peoples Complaints, Justice was done by condemning the Usurers to great Fines, and confiscating their Estates into the Royal Treasury.

However Philip * was so often importun'd by the Remonstrances of the People, that he issued out many Decrees of his Council, forbidding the lending Money to a Monk, unless he could produce the Letters-Patents of his Chapter; the taking in Pawn the Ornaments of the Church, and the necessary Tools of Workmen. The Soldier had liberty to pledge his Horse; but the Plough-man and Carpenter, that lived by their Labour, were prohibited borrowing of a Jew, upon pain of losing his Debt. It was still severer in Normandy, where there were Jews as in other places; for the Creditors were oblig'd to cite the Borrowers before the Bayliff, and the Debts were invalid, that were not register'd in his presence.

II. These Remedies did not cure the Evil, for we find afterwards many Regulations upon the same Subject. It was debated in the Assembly of Melun †, convened by St. Lewis at the beginning of his Reign; and that it was forbidden to borrow of the Jews, and take up Money at Interest from them, to deprive them of all Pretences of Violence and Injustice. But among all the Laws, the Assize of the Duke of Britany, ‖ in the Year 1239, is most remarkable.

The Jews dispers'd in this Province were very numerous; and being for the most part Usurers, they ruin'd the People. The Merchants and Nobility complain'd of it. John Rufus was then Duke of Britany, his Father Mauclerc having laid down the Government. This Prince assembled the States *, in which it was enacted, at the Request of the Bishops, Abbots, Barons and Vassals of Britany, that all the Jews should be banish'd out of this Province for ever.

The Debtors of the Jews were discharged from the Debts they had contracted with them; and those that had receiv'd Pawns from them were allow'd to keep them; as if it were lawful to dispose of another Man's Goods.

All that killed a Jew were declared Innocent, and the Judges were forbidden to take an Information against them, or to bring them to Tryal.

It was resolv'd to address the King of France to cause this Assize to be executed in his Dominions, that is, to expel the Jews, to strip them of their Fortunes, and give License to kill them.

The Duke of Britany engag'd for himself and his Posterity, for the present and future, "To main-" tain the said Ordinance; and in case of its Vio-" lation, the Bishops had not only Power to ex-" communicate him, but to confiscate his Lands in " their Dioceses, without any respect to the Pri-" viledges he had obtain'd, or might obtain for the " future. Is it not a Prodigy to see a Prince fettering himself, and from a Soveraign making himself a Subject of his Subjects, even to the Confiscation of his Estate?

Lastly, He declar'd, that not one of his Vassals of Britany, should be admitted to do Homage, till he had taken an Oath before two Bishops, or two Barons, to observe this Law, and not to suffer any Jew upon his Lands.

III. The Great Council of Lyons †, in which the Emperor was excommunicated, with the Torches extinguish'd, made two new Decrees. In one, the Princes who had Jews to their Subjects, were commanded to oblige them to return to the Crusaders, all the Money they had extorted from them, upon pain of Excommunication to some, and others were deprived of the Priviledges of civil Society. Secondly, The Jews were inhibited from demanding their Debts of the Crusaders till their return, or till they had receiv'd an authentick Certificate of their Deaths. The Decisions of the Council were extreamly unjust, for it could not dispose of the Estates of particular Persons, nor suspend the Effect of Contracts made before it sate. Kings commonly give Letters of respite to the Officers in their Service. But are these Favours just, that are given to the Prejudice of others that suffer by it? St. Lewis's Ordinance, which prohibited borrowing, was much more equitable. This Distemper was epidemical, for the Council of Vienna, call'd in the same Century, ‖ was oblig'd to maintain the Christians against the Oppressions they suffer'd by the Usury of the Jews. But to return to the Reign of Philip IV. The Jews had the Liberty, in some places,

---

* Phil. Aug. Decreta de Jud. An. 1218. Spicil. Dacherii, t. 6. p. 471.
‖ Apud d'Argentré Hist. of Bretagne, l. 4. c. 23. p. 207.
† Stabilimentum apud Melend. ibid. p. 473.
* An. 1239.
† An. 1240. Concil. Lugd. Canon. 17. tom. 2. p. 656.
‖ An. 1267.

of

of rising to Offices. At least they enjoy'd them in Languedoc; and they were often in danger at Monpelier * of seeing a Circumcis'd Bailiff at the Head of the Magistracy. And therefore William IV. Lord of this City, was oblig'd to forbid it in his Will, as his Grandfather had done fifty Years before †. However, to discharge his Conscience ‖, he order'd his Heirs to pay a very considerable Sum to one Bonnet a Jew, to whom he was much oblig'd.

V. Notwithstanding the Decrees of Councils, and the Edicts of many Princes, the Christians had Jewish, and the Jews had Christian Slaves. The Christians found their Account in it; for commonly, instead of buying a Slave, they took him from his Master, who re-demanded him in vain. Fugitives also found a sudden and safe Retreat among them. On the other hand, the Jews made use of Christian Slaves *: But Baronius's Continuators say, that this wrought numerous and remarkable Conversions; so that the Councils were in the wrong to provide so many Precautions against this Custom. They say, that a Christian Servant-Maid, that was us'd to despise the Mysteries, tho' she Communicated at Easter, kept an Host that was given her, and carried it in her Handkerchief to her Jewish Master, who took and put it into his Purse with his Money. Some time after he open'd his Purse, and found seven Paris Livres he had in it chang'd into so many Hosts †. What meant the Son of God thus to multiply the seven adorable Bodies, and inclose them in the Purse of a Jew? Was it not to be fear'd this Man would abuse so many Bodies of the Son of God? For the vexation to find Wafers instead of Money might have led him to Profanation. We are told on the contrary, that he was converted, and brought over many of his Brethren. They all went to Rome, whence Innocent III. ‖ sent them back to the Archbishop of Sens to be taken care of.

VI. Saint Lewis, a Zealot for his own Religion, persecuted all others. The Inquisition, encourag'd by his Orders, acted its utmost Cruelty upon those they call'd Hereticks. In fine, this Prince, opinionated with the Crusades, permitted those that engag'd in the Holy League to exercise several Outrages. In his Reign, the People rose at Paris * against the Jews, under pretence, that they sacrificed Children on Good-Friday, and had occasion for Christian Blood that day. Many of them were massacr'd: The same Fury pass'd into the Provinces of Brie, Touraine, Anjou, Poitu and Maine, where above two thousand five hundred Persons suffer'd a violent Death, who refus'd to abjure their Religion. Lastly, things proceeded so far, that the Pope was oblig'd to write to the King, in order to moderate so barbarous a Devotion, and teach him, that the Jews ought to be allow'd to follow the dictates of their Consciences.

VII. During this Prince's † unfortunate Detention in the Holy Land, a Crusade was form'd in his Kingdom of mean Shepherds, confederating to go and rescue him. 'Twas a pleasant Humour, to see a Parcel of Swains associating to march into a remote Country, to deliver the King, who was imprison'd by the Saracens: But they grounded their Chimerical Design upon Revelations; they pretended even to have receiv'd the Gift of Miracles, upon which they assum'd an Authority superior to Priests and Bishops: They were Headed by one Master James of Hungary, a Mahometan, and afterwards an Apostate from the Cesterſian Order. He travell'd with St. Lewis ‖ to Cyprus; and is said to have then made a Treaty with the Soldan, to betray to him all the Youth of France, without excepting the King. He is also accus'd of Magick. They say too much of him; but however, it is true that he was an Impostor and a Rogue. He had those under him that acted as Bishops. They Consecrated Holy Water; they bless'd and dissolved Marriages, and gave Absolution for Sins past and to come; but the greatest number were simple Shepherds. So prodigious was this sort of Inchantment or Distraction, that they not only left their Flocks to follow the Cheat that encourag'd them; but Fathers and Mothers that shut up their Children, could not retain them, and prevent their joining this Multitude. The People favour'd them at first, as believing, God had chosen the Weak things of the World to confound the Strong. Queen Blanche also * espous'd their Interests, as if they were capable of repairing the Miseries caus'd by the Absence and Imprisonment of her Son. An hundred thousand are reckon'd to have listed themselves under Master James: They boasted their Commission from the Virgin, and plunder'd and committed hideous Disorders wherever they came. James of Hungary, at the Head of this Multitude, march'd to Orleans, where he massacr'd all the Priests and Monks he met with. Departing thence, he pursu'd his Road to Bourges; where he caus'd all the Jews Books to be seiz'd, in order to be burnt, and plunder'd them wherever he could. But at last the Nobility and People too mustering their Forces against these Plunderers, in their turn made a great slaughter of them, in which they lost their Leader, with abundance of others. We ought not to mistake these first Shepherds for those that appear'd in the following Century; which we have already accounted for in the History of the Jews in Spain.

VIII. The Year following was held a Conference in presence of Blanche, who was Regent in St. Lewis's Absence, between Jechiel and Nicholas Donim, who had embrac'd Christianity. Jechiel was born at Paris, and profess'd himself a great Cabbalist. 'Twas said, that his Lamp shone without Oil from one Saturday to another. St. Lewis having the Curiosity to see this Miracle, design'd to surprize the Rabbin by Night. He, who was afraid of Robbers, that us'd to knock at his Door and at those of the other Jews, to see if they were asleep, had fix'd a Nail in the Ground; and upon the first Noise, he struck upon the Nail, and proportionably as he drove it down, the Robber without sunk into a Ditch full of Water. The King, who counterfeited a Robber at Jechiel's Door, fell in like the rest. He cry'd out when he saw himself up to the middle in Water. Jechiel was excus'd, upon his giving the King a good Fire and an Entertainment, and shewing him the Lamp. He made it appear, that there was neither Miracle nor Conjuration in it; and that instead of Oil, there was another Combustible Matter. Perhaps it was a Phosphorus that rais'd the wonder of all the People of Paris. The King being undeceiv'd by this Adventure, made Jechiel one of his Counsellors of State. They endeavour'd to impeach him to the Prince, because he would not drink the Wine that was offer'd him at his Table; but Jechiel, like a dextrous Courtier, drank the Water the King had wash'd his Hands in; which was so convincing

* Guillel. Monspel. Testam. Spicil. t. 9. 145 & 161. † An. 1211. ‖ An. 1146. * An. 1213. † Bzovius An. 1213. p. 19. p. 206 Spond. An. 1213. n. 25. p. 53. ‖ Innoc. III. Ep. 155. * An. 1136. † Greg. IX. Ep. 213. Gesta Sancti Ludov. IX. per Guil. de Nangiaco Hist. Franc. Script. t. v. p. 359. ‖ An. 1215. * Math. Paris Histor. Anglic. Hen. III. p. 530.

cing an Argument that he had no Averſion to the Chriſtians and the Perſon of the King, that his Intereſt was conſiderably advanc'd by it. We muſt believe all this upon the bare word of the Jews, who make great boaſts of this Rabbin, as well as of his Son-in-law Mardochai of Auſtria, or the German, another Cabbaliſt. The Chriſtians ſay, that the practical Cabbala that gave 'em ſuch Reputation, was Magick; and that Jechiel ſo ill defended the Honour of his Religion before the Regent, that he left France out of Shame and Confuſion, and retir'd the ſame Year into Judea, where he went to die. 'Tis better to keep to a juſt medium. Jechiel was no Magician, as he is accus'd: He might perhaps have ſome natural Secrets, by which he impos'd upon the People, who are the eaſier to be deceiv'd in this matter, as they are given to haſty Judgments. Pilgrimages to Judea were then ſo much in faſhion for Jews as well as Chriſtians, that we need not to make the Cauſe of Jechiel's Voyage to be the Shame which he receiv'd in the Conference that he held againſt a Deſerter of the Synagogue.

IX. On the other hand, 'tis an impoſition to affirm, that St. Lewis made a Rabbin one of his Miniſters of State, upon his putting a luminous matter in a Lamp, inſtead of Oil. This Prince never lov'd the Nation and ever whilſt he was a Priſoner he ſent an Edict to France, to expel all the Jews out of his Kingdom. They were numerous there, ſince other People were call'd in to fill the Vacancies they had made. They muſt have been alſo rich, ſince ſuch as would be Merchants or Tradeſmen were permitted to ſtay, that the Kingdom might not be too much weaken'd. 'Tis pretended, that the Saracens had infus'd this Reſolution into the King, by upbraiding him with his want of Love for Chriſt, ſince he tolerated his Murtherers. The Regent * caus'd her Son's Orders to be executed, and dy'd the Year following. The Jews pretend, it was this Prince that baniſh'd them, after his return into his Dominions.

X. 'Twas probably Philip the Hardy who recall'd them †; for tho' this Prince has been reckon'd a Devotee, it is known he was not ſcrupulous in a great many things; and after his Son's Death, he made no difficulty to conſult a famous Sorcereſs of Nivelles, to be inform'd, Whether Mary, whom he had marry'd for his ſecond Wife, had poiſon'd the firſt Prince of the Blood, as was ſaid by his Favourite? 'Tis true, he was authoriz'd by the Complaiſance of the Biſhops of his Kingdom; ſince thoſe of Bayeux and Dol in Britany, with the Abbot of St. Denis, made a Journey into Flanders to conſult the Hag. 'Tis ſaid, that the neceſſity of his Affairs oblig'd him to recal the Exiles; for the Impriſonment and Deſigns of Lewis had exhauſted the Kingdom; and the Wars which Philip was oblig'd to ſuſtain accompliſh'd its Ruin. 'Twas thought they could not better re-eſtabliſh the Revenues than by recalling a People that brought Treaſures along with them, together with the art of making Money circulate. Laſtly, Philip's natural good nature, which has made Hiſtorians doubt, whether this Title of Hardy ſhould be given him, contributed much doubtleſs to this Recal: At leaſt, the truth of it cannot be doubted, ſince they were expell'd under Philip the Fair.

XI. The Spaniards claim'd || Levi, the Son of Gerſom, Grandſon of Nachmanides by his Daughter, as one of thoſe Doctors that do them Honour. He liv'd at that time *; but was born in Provence. He was therefore a Frenchman, if we conſider the Provinces that at preſent compoſe that Monarchy, and have always been a part of Gaul; but he was born a Subject of the Spaniards, who were at that time Maſters there. This Rabbin maintain'd, That all the Apparitions that were made to Abraham, the Patriarchs and Prophets, were only Dreams and Viſions. He could not bear, that thoſe who preceded him ſhould put Speech into the Mouth of Balaam's Aſs, ſince 'tis one of thoſe Prodigies that create laughter, when we take 'em literally. He compar'd this Adventure to the Marriage of the Prophet Hoſea, who never marry'd a Proſtitute, which ſcandalous Conjunction would have diſgrac'd him. He obſerv'd, that Balaam's Viſion being made in the Night, he couid not ſee any ſenſible Object. In vain it was objected to him as a kind of Contradiction, that he readily believ'd what the Talmud ſays of another Aſs, that had ſo much Wit, as never to return to the Stable without bringing her Maſters the Price of her Hire, and that ſhe was never impos'd upon. For the Rabbins don't univerſally believe all the Stories in the Talmud, and a Man, who had the courage to change the Tradition of the Fathers, about the Viſions of the Prophets, written in Scripture, did not implicitly believe fabulous Relations, founded upon leſs venerable Authority than Revelation. He liv'd till the fourteenth Century, in which he compos'd his † his Commentary upon Samuel, and many other Works. He was a Witneſs to part of the Miſeries that ruin'd his Nation in France.

XII. It was || ſo powerful in the Reign of Philip the Fair, as ſometimes to make Conqueſts even upon Chriſtianity. This Scandal oblig'd Nicolas IV. to give Orders to the Inquiſitors to be more ſevere againſt them. He was often equitable towards 'em; for underſtanding that the Emperor Rodolphus had impriſon'd the famous R. Meir, a Native of Germany, in hopes of extorting a great deal of Money from him, he wrote to the Pope to releaſe him, unleſs he was guilty of ſome other Crime than the Perſeverance in his Religion. 1. There aroſe at that time an Order of Re-Judaizers, or Relapſers, who having voluntarily left the Synagogue, return'd to it by Waſhings and Shavings of their Head. 2. There were Chriſtians that turn'd Jews, and were Circumcis'd in a different manner from the reſt, that they might always be diſtinguiſh'd from the true Circumciſion. 3. There were ſome wretched Creatures in Gaſcogne and the Neighbouring Provinces, where theſe Diſorders chiefly reign'd; who knowing not to what Saint to devote themſelves when any Calamity happen'd, ran devoutly to the Synagogues, held lighted Candles, made their Oblations, and kept the Saturday as ſtrictly as poſſible. Nicolas thought it his Duty to ſtop the courſe of theſe Scandals, and to that end, ſent his Orders to the Inquiſitors of theſe Provinces to be more watchful over the Conduct both of Chriſtians and Jews. They executed Pope Nicolas's Commands, and employ'd great Severities againſt the Guilty.

XIII. 'Twas in his Pontificat, and upon occaſion of another Scandal, that the Church of St. Saviour was built at Paris *. A Woman, who had taken Money at Intereſt, and had left her Cloaths in pawn with a Jew, demanded 'em for one day to perform her Devotions at Eaſter. The Jew would not reſtore them without receiving an Hoſt in Pledge. As it had been often told him, that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt was in this Hoſt, that he might be certify'd whether it was ſo, he threw it into boiling Water, and run it thro': Immediately he ſaw Blood guſh out; but ſome Chriſtians, who had need of Money, unhappily entring his Houſe, the Hoſt leap'd from the Tub where it was thrown and flew away. Forthwith the Criminal was try'd, his Eſtate confiſcated, and his Houſe raz'd to the Ground, in the Place of which was built St. Saviour's Church. The Reader is at full liberty to reject theſe fabulous Miracles, but they come too often in the Hiſtory of the Jews to be all paſs'd over in ſilence. 'Twas perhaps the ſame Miracle we ſhall mention in the next Article, that has been diſguis'd and plac'd ſixteen Years later, in order to make it the occaſion of the general Expulſion of the Jews out of France.

* An. 1253. Math. Paris Hiſt. p. 576. Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 417. An. 1254. † An. 1272. Geſta Philippi III. per Guil. de Nangiaco Hiſt. Franc. t. v. p. 552. || Ganz Tſemach p. 145. * An. 1290. † An. 1338. || An. 1288. * Nauclerus Chron. Gen. 44. t. 2. p. 875.

XIV. It was King Philip that diſmiſs'd 'em all in general from his Kingdom *, and this Exile is reckon'd one of the four great Miſeries the Jews have ſuffer'd; for they ſay †, that the numbers which then left France, were twice as great as thoſe that follow'd Moſes to the Paſſage of the Red Sea, and the Conqueſt of Canaan. But in this they amplifie; for they never were ſo numerous in this Kingdom. Chriſtian Hiſtorians attribute it to a Miracle wrought in a Hoſt that a Jew had purchas'd: He threw it into a Caldron of boiling Water, and at the ſame time ſaw the appearance of a Child of extraordinary Beauty. Inſtead of being mov'd by ſo manifeſt a Miracle, he went to murther the miraculous Infant; but it fled and ſhifted from one ſide of the Caldron to the other, according as the Jew purſu'd it with a Knife in his Hand. This Sight ſurpriz'd his Children, who went and acquainted their Mother, and then open'd the Doors and publiſh'd it abroad. The People and Clergy came in and ſaw the Miracle of the preſerv'd Hoſt; for the Child was already vaniſh'd. The Jew was condemn'd to be burnt. He thought to ſecure himſelf by holding the Talmud in his Hands upon the Pile; but the Fire burnt but the violenter. If he ſuffer'd the leſs for it, and the Talmud was the Cauſe of this effect, it was an advantage to him. ‖ A Continuator of Baronius admits the Miracle; but aſſerts, That having been wrought ſixteen Years before, it could not be look'd upon as the cauſe of the Decree of the Jews Exile. Platina believes * they were then puniſh'd for their Magick. But the true and only Cauſe, was the Avarice of the King †, deſigning to enrich himſelf at the Coſt of theſe poor Wretches. For it is ſaid, ‖ That he did a good Deed from an evil Principle, viz. the deſire of plundering and growing rich. The King was Covetous, and ſo violently oppreſs'd his People, that the Pariſians rebell'd, and beſieg'd him in the Houſe of the Temple, where he remain'd a whole Day without Food; the Beſiegers, moſt whereof were afterwards hang'd, not permitting any to be brought to him. His Mother-in-law, Queen Mary, had had the Art before of fleecing the Jews. I know not whether upon any Remorſe of Conſcience, or upon what reaſon, ſhe conſulted Pope Clement V. upon it; who adviſ'd her to employ the Money upon the Holy War, but ſhe did not do it. This Money could not be rais'd, unleſs the King had a hand in it; who reſolv'd not to do it by halves, and therefore colour'd his Avarice by an Act of Religion and Piety. Since he pillaged the Churches of his Kingdom, and the Chriſtian Clergy, 'tis no wonder that he ſhould deſire to engroſs whatever was valuable in the Synagogues: Therefore he baniſh'd all the Jews upon pain of Death or Converſion, and confiſcated the Eſtates of all the Exiles to his own uſe, permitting them only to carry their Cloaths and a Sum of Money to conduct 'em out of the Kingdom. Part of 'em dy'd by the way with Fatigue and Hunger, the reſt retir'd into Germany; from whence the Jews of that Country look upon themſelves as originally of France, deſcended from theſe perſecuted People.

XV. Some turn'd Chriſtians to prevent the Miſery they thought unavoidable in foreign Countries. * Nicholas de Lyra was one of thoſe that made this Option. The Engliſh challenge him, as if he was a Native of theirs. Others pretend, that Lyra is a Village of Perche. But how ſhall we contradict this Diſtich, which makes him a Norman?

Lyra, brevis vicus, Normana in gente celebris, Prima mihi vitæ janua ſorſque fuit.

'Tis certain, there was in the Bailywick of Evreux a Borough that went by the Name of Lyra, where there were Jews as well as in Ponteau de Mer. It ſeems as if we could not doubt of his being a Jew, from his Acquaintance with the Hebrew and the Rabbins, from whom he has taken a great many Maxims and Explications. A Chriſtian at that time would have been thought a Prodigy, who had known the Rabbins and their Interpretations ſo well as he. After his Converſion, he writ his Treatiſe of Jeſus Chriſt againſt the Jews; as moſt of the Proſelytes do, who think themſelves oblig'd to give a Teſtimony of their Faith by Writing againſt their deſerted Brethren. He ſpent his whole Life in the Explication of Scripture; and, according to the Cuſtom of the Jews, divided the Books of it into Canonical and Apocryphal, ſetting Tobit at the Head of the latter. He is complain'd of for having too much Philoſophiz'd according to Ariſtotle's Principles; but in truth he is leſs barbarous, and more judicious than the Authors of his Age. 'Tis probable, his Converſion was ſincere; at leaſt he turn'd Monk, and dy'd in a Convent in the Year 1340.

XVI. But moſt of the reſt retain'd the Judaiſm they had abjur'd; and four Years after, one of theſe Proſelytes was burnt at Paris the ſame day with Margaret of Haynault. She maintain'd, That the Soul inebriated with the Love of God, and wholly abſorb'd by this Love, might, without fear and remorſe, ſatisfie all the Deſires of Nature. At that time the Myſticks were condemn'd to the Fire. The Jews, in ſpite of his Converſion to Chriſtianity, ſpit upon the † Images of the Virgin. The Jewiſh Hiſtorians ſay, That God aveng'd their Baniſhment upon Philip the Fair ‖, by ſuffering him the ſame Year to fall into a Ditch, as he purſu'd a Stag, and to die ſuddenly; which is falſe.

XVII. The Avarice and Intereſt which had expell'd the Jews out of France, caus'd them to be recall'd again eight Years after. The Author of the Faſciculus Temporum * ſays, They were expell'd out of the Kingdom, never to return again. But he liv'd long enough after this Baniſhment, to know that it did not laſt always. Lewis Hutin, or the Mutineer, for theſe two words ſignifie the ſame thing, ſucceeding his Father; and ſeeing a great Diſorder in his Finances, the Kingdom exhauſted of Money, the People groaning, and ſtill ready to mutiny, remembring the Oppreſſions they had ſuffer'd in the preceding Reign, was not contented with ſacrificing Enguerrand de Marigni, his Father's Favourite, to the Peoples Deſires, and hanging him; but as this

* An. 1306 † Ganz Chronol. p. 143. Bzov. 1306. n. 8. p. 83. ‖ Spond. An. 1306. n. 8. p. 358. * Platina Vita Clem. V. p. 2501. † Anonym. Continuat. Chronici Guil. de Nangis Spicil. t. xi. p. 622. ‖ Baluſ. Vitæ Pap. Aven. p. 4. * Balæus de Script. † Continuat. Chronic. Guil. de Nangis An. 1310. Dacherii Spicil. t. xi. p. 637. ‖ Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 194. * Faſciculus Temp Hiſt. Germ. t. iii. p. 83.

Execu-

Execution was no remedy to the Miſchief, he demanded a large Sum of Money of the Fugitive Jews, and upon that Condition re-call'd them † into his Dominions, where they lived peaceably in his Reign, but to their Unhappineſs it was very ſhort. As if they had foreſeen what was to happen, they were difficultly induced to return into France to make new Settlements. At laſt, the love of their Country prevail'd over other Arguments, and many of them were deceiv'd ||.

XVIII. In the Year 1320, they underwent a ſecond Perſecution of the Shepherds. This Misfortune was no ſooner over, but they fell * into another. Hiſtorians † relate, That the Sarazen King of Granada, vex'd to find himſelf ſo often beaten by the Chriſtians, ſought an Expedient to be rid of them otherways than by Arms. He call'd the Jews of his Kingdom, and ask'd them, whether there was no way to poiſon all the Chriſtians? They undertook this Commiſſion, but thought they could not execute it themſelves, becauſe they were too much ſuſpected. They corrupted ſome Lepers, and communicated their Deſign to them, which was to poiſon the Wells and Fountains. We are told, That theſe Lepers being brib'd, and farther hoping to make their Fortune, and enrich themſelves with the Spoils of the Dead, aſſembled in four General Councils, where Repreſentatives met from all the Peſt-houſes ſpread over the Chriſtian World. They form'd their Project all together, and alſo gave themſelves the different Titles and Offices of Counts, Biſhops, &c. The Waters were found poiſon'd in France and Germany. A Lord of Pernay ſent to the King the Depoſition of a Leper, whom he had ſeized in his Territories, and who confeſs'd he had been corrupted by a rich Jew, that gave him a Receipt compounded of Humane Blood, Urine, three ſorts of Herbs, and a Hoſt, which being all dried and put in a Bag, and thrown into a Well, immediately render'd all the Water baneful. The Lepers were tried, ſome were ſhut up in Priſons, and others in their Peſt-houſes, and prohibited to go out. The People of Languedoc, without waiting for the neceſſary Formalities, fell upon the Jews that were accus'd, and burnt thoſe they could take. At Chinon, in the Bailiwick of Tours, they made a great Ditch, wherein they threw eight and twenty Perſons, without diſtinction of Sex, who were reduced to Aſhes. 'Tis ſaid, That moſt of theſe miſerable Creatures went to the Fire as to a Wedding, ſinging Songs of Triumph. The Mothers threw their Children into it, to prevent their being baptiz'd. Forty Priſoners, that were kept at Vitry, upon the approach of the Execution-day, choſe him they call'd their Father, who was the Oldeſt and the Holieſt, to kill them all. He demanded a young Man for his Partner to aſſiſt him, which was granted. Theſe two Deputies began the Maſſacre of their Brethren, and quickly diſpach'd it: The old Man, afterwards, deſired his Comrade Executioner to kill him. The Diſpute laſted ſome time; But at laſt the young Man, who deſir'd to live, and to enrich himſelf, kill'd the old one, and loading himſelf with all the Money he could take, made a Rope to deſcend from the Tower; the Rope being too ſhort, he broke his Leg by falling, was ſeiz'd, and led to Puniſhment, with the reſt that were kept elſewere. At Paris they had a little more Equity, for none but thoſe who appear'd guilty, were put to death. Some were baniſh'd, and others kept Priſoners till they had diſcover'd their Treaſures, which King Philip the Long ſeiz'd, and thereby rais'd a conſiderable Sum. Some Hiſtorians however ‖ affirm, That they were all expell'd out of the Kingdom.

XIX. It were eaſie to conteſt the Truth of this Event; for the King of Granada's Deſign to poiſon all the Chriſtians, and not begin with his own Kingdom, nor Caſtile, and the Provinces which provok'd his Jealouſie, was a Madneſs, and we cannot conceive he was guilty of it. What had he to fear either from France or Germany? The four Councils of the Lepers could not meet, or at leaſt ſo numerous an Aſſembly from ſo many different Nations, could not remain a Secret till its Execution. The Project of making all Men ſick, or infecting them with Leproſie, which ſever'd them from Society, and render'd them vile and contemptible, was very Chimerical. There was no way to poiſon the Waters of Wells and Fountains; 'tis a Viſion that has no Foundation; beſides the Accuſation has been renew'd ſo often, that it grows ſuſpected. We are told too, that a Jew of ſome City of France, asking of his Neighbour the fineſt of his Children, which he wanted for a Sacrifice, the Father, who was burthen'd with a great Family, was doubtful, whether he ſhould accept the Offer of a conſiderable Sum for his Son's Life. He was moreover to give him a Hoſt; but Religion did not perplex him ſo much, as his paternal Affection. His Wife, who was more artful, deceiv'd the Jew, by bringing him a Hoſt with the Heart of a Hog, which he took for that of a Child, and paid very dear for it. His Deſign was to mingle the Hoſt with the Humane Heart, and to make uſe of them in poiſoning the Fountains, that the Chriſtians might die who drank of them. And ſo it happen'd, that all the Hogs in thoſe parts, died inſtead of the Chriſtians, becauſe this Creature's Heart had been thrown into the Water inſtead of a Child's. The Myſtery was diſcover'd, and the Jews puniſh'd. Can Accuſations of this Nature paſs for true? And yet Nieva Calvo, Notary to the Inquiſition, relates it * to authorize the Miracle of the Child de la Guardia, whom the Jews muſt have ſacrificed with the ſame Madneſs.

Laſtly, The ſame Accuſation was form'd at the end of this Century, againſt the Dominicans, who were grown odious to the People for their Diſputes about the immaculate Conception of the Virgin. 'Twas ſaid, They had ſuborn'd the Mendicants, who going from door to door, poiſon'd the Wells and Fountains, by caſting in a Bolus made up of the Nails and Hair of a Perſon that was hang'd, with the Blood of Toads. The Dominicans were believ'd to have made this Compoſition; for thoſe who were puniſh'd, confeſs'd they wore a black Robe upon a white one, which was ſufficient to condemn them. It might be the ſame caſe with the Lepers.

Nevertheleſs, As we can't abſolutely charge a co-temporary Hiſtorian with Falſhood †, 'tis probable there was a Mortality at that time, which beginning at Rheims ‖, extended to France and Germany. As the Cauſe of it could not be diſcover'd, the Phyſicians, according to their uſual Cuſtom, attributed it to Magick. This Opinion was the eaſier receiv'd, becauſe the Superſtitious People had at that time their Heads running upon Sorcerers and Witchcraft. Enguerrand, de Marigni's Wife, had been accus'd publickly of killing Philip the Fair, by means of one Paviot a Magician. The Hiſtorian we have follow'd, was himſelf prepoſſeſs'd with the Power of theſe Faſcinations; for one of theſe Lepers Bags being open'd before him, in which was the Head of a Snake, the Feet of a Toad, and the

† An. 1314. ‖ Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 150. * An. 1321. † Continuatio Chronici Guill. de Nangis, An. 1321. Spicil. t. 11. p. 691, &c. ‖ Spond. An. 1321. n. 5. p. 403. * Gardoſo las Excellencias, p. 486. † Paul. Æmil. de Geſtis Franc. Lud. 11. p. 262. ‖ Continuatio Chronici Guill. de Nangis, p. 692.

Hair of a Woman, mingled with a moſt ſtinking Liquor; and the whole being thrown into the Fire, it did not burn; from which he concludes, that it was a very ſtrong Poiſon; as if Poiſon could prevent the Activity of the Fire. The Lepers gave ſome grounds to the Peoples Suſpicions, as the Shepherds do, who are often burnt upon the like Pretences. As for the Jews *, they fell upon them without any more ado, accus'd them out of an inveterate Hatred to their Nation; and put them to Death without waiting for Evidence againſt them. The King's Council, that was more ingenious, took advantage from this Commotion, to inrich their Maſter by the Confiſcation of their Goods and Baniſhment.

XX. The Fear of Death oblig'd ſome to diſſemble, but the Virgin could not ſuffer it. One of theſe baptiſed Jews communicated, and kept the Hoſt, which he carried to his circumciſed Brethren. Chriſt perhaps, might have pardon'd him this Affront; but the Wretch had the Inſolence to maim an Image of the Virgin, who provok'd by this, addreſs'd her ſelf to a Farrier, and preſs'd him to fight a Duel for her with a Jew. The poor Farrier, who had no Inclination to hazard a Combat, had the ſame thing repeated to him over and over again. But as he was going into the Church, the mutilated Image leap'd from the place, and met him at the Door, threatning him, That if he did not challenge the Jew to fight, he ſhould never more go into the Church. The Farrier obey'd, he deſir'd leave of the Judge to fight the Jew, and oblig'd him to meet him at the Field of Battle: But the Circumciſed durſt not defend himſelf; and own'd that God † ſtruck him with his Hammer, rather than the Farrier. I ſaw, ſaid he to thoſe that upbraided his Cowardiſe, I ſaw a thouſand Men armed againſt me, and what could I do alone againſt a thouſand? He was conducted from the Field to the Gibbet, and thrown into the Fire, to the great Joy of the Farrier and the Virgin.

Fabro gaudente velut ante Deumque colente,
Videmus, Egmonde, fatum, ibi laus Deus unde.

I know not how they adventur'd, ſince upon the Condemnation of Duels, for here you have them authoriz'd by the Virgin commanding them, and ſhe may be ſaid to be the Mother of Duels, as God, under the Law, was call'd the God of Hoſts and Battles. For as we can't, without condemning God, aboliſh War that may be juſt and lawful; ſo we cannot, without affronting the Virgin, aboliſh Duels, which are ſo much the more neceſſary, as they ſerve to avenge her Images. It muſt be own'd, that the old Hiſtorians vent impertinent Stories out of a falſe Zeal againſt the Jews, whom they hated.

XXI. I don't know how it can be ſaid, that they were never re-call'd into France by publick Authority; for the Exigencies of the State oblig'd Charles Dauphina of the Viennese, and Duke of Normandy, to recal them during the Diſorders cauſed by the Impriſonment of his Father in England; by the Oppreſſion of the great Men, and the Mutinies of the People, who were weary of their tedious Tyranny. There was then * a Monk in the Priſons of Avignon, who having foretold the Miſeries of France, and the Progreſs of the Engliſh in the Kingdom, aſſured the Archbiſhop of Toloſe, that an Angel, Vicar to Jeſus Chriſt, and proceeding from his Heart, ſhould ſpeedily deſcend upon the Earth, to remedy all theſe Miſchiefs; That he ſhould convert the Jews, and reign a thouſand Years upon Earth. But his Prediction was falſe. Some Events which he wrapp'd up in indefinite and general Terms; and ſome Cenſures againſt the Luxury of the Men, who began to wear Feathers in their Hats; and the Women, who laid out ten Livres upon a Pearl, which had coſt but eight Deniers, ought not to make him paſs for a Prophet, even tho' the Church ſhould approve his Predictions, ſince he was ſo manifeſtly miſtaken in the moſt important of all the Events he had foretold. Charles, when he came to be King, confirm'd what he had done at Dauphin, obliging only the Jews of his Kingdom to wear a Badge of Diſtinction.

XXII. Their laſt Calamity happen'd in the Reign † of Charles VI. This Prince was no longer capable of governing his Kingdom. The Duke of Milan, Father to Valentine Dutcheſs of Orleans, was accuſed ‖ of having bewitch'd him, but he had naturally a weak Genius, and the Fright which an unknown Perſon had given him, in his Progreſs to Britany, had perfectly made him a Fool. The Jews were accus'd of killing a new Convert at Paris; * ſome ſay he was a Chriſtian: I do not know whether the Number of the Murtherers was conſiderable, and even the Murther it ſelf is not certain, ſince Juvenal † de Urſins doubts of it, being contented to ſay, That he was beaten and vilified: And in the Inqueſt it was found, they did many things, that were unſeemly, in deſpite to the Chriſtians. However many of them were taken, and others were ſcourg'd, and the Synagogue was fined Eighteen thouſand Crowns, wherewith they finiſh'd the Chatelet, and little Stone-bridge. Many were converted and baptized. This was but the beginning of their Sorrow, for two Years after they were all baniſh'd out of the Kingdom, never to return; and from this laſt Exile they have made an Epocha, and begin the Date of their Years.

XXIII. They have been tolerated ‖ in France, tho' they have not had an entire Liberty. Profanus the celebrated Aſtronomer taught at Montpellier, in the middle of the Fifteenth Century. Mary de Medicis not only ſent for Montalto to Paris, to be her Phyſician, but obtain'd of Henry IV. an abſolute Liberty of Conſcience for him and all his Family. They ſay, * they were ſo favour'd at his Court, that he gained with them, that Montalto refuſing to viſit a Sick Perſon, becauſe he would have broke the Sabbath; the King was ſo kind to give him freſh Horſes, that he might preſerve both the Sick and his Religion. He died at Tours * at the time that Iſabella of Bourbon went to Spain to marry Philip IV. The Queen cauſed his Body to be embalm'd, which was convey'd into Holland by ſome of his Jewiſh Relations whom he had about him. There were Jews afterwards in Gaſcony, and from thence came Iſaac Caſtro de Tartas, who being taken at Braſil by the Portugueſe, was put into the Inquiſition and burnt alive. The Jews of Amſterdam have made a Martyr of him, and beatified him as a Saint. They ſay too, that he was the cauſe of abrogating the Cuſtom in Portugal of burning alive; becauſe by ſtill crying in the midſt of the Flames, Hear Iſrael our only God; the People who heard him, being fill'd with Admiration, repeated the ſame † words, and Judaized without thinking of it. There were alſo Jews at Limoges, ſince a young Debauchee, who had abuſed a Jeweſs, perſwaded them that the Meſſiah ſhould be born from this Concubinage, by crying at night at her Parents doors, the Meſſiah is going to be born of a Virgin, and this Virgin is your Daughter, who is conceiv'd without knowing a Man. The credulous Family impatiently waited the Birth, which undeceiv'd them, by the delivery of a Daughter.

* Spond. An. 1390. t. 1. p. 646. † Wilhelm. Monachus & Procur. Egm. Chron. p. 232. in Analectis veteris ævi, Matthæus, t. 4. * An. 1356. Continuatio altera Guill. de Nangis, ibid. p. 822. † An. 1327. ‖ An. 1339. * Du Haillan. Hiſt. de France, l. 17. p. 804. An. 1395. † Juvenal des Urſins Hiſt. of Charles VI. p. 129. ‖ Barrius Relacion de los Poetas, p. 55. * Baſſompierre, Memoirs of his Life, An. 1615. † An. 1647. Cardoſo las Excellencias, p. 324.

be

Laſtly, We know the cruel Execution of the Jews, which the People made at Baionne in the laſt Century. A Jeweſs || of St. John de Luts, who diſguiſed her ſelf, being accuſed of wrapping up a Hoſt in her Handkercher, the People could not ſtay to hear her Trial, but haling her from the Priſon *, ſhut her up in a Cask, where ſhe was burnt alive. But if the Jews have lived in France, it was only by way of Toleration, without publick Authority. Moſt diſſembled, and feign'd the Profeſſion of a Religion they abhorr'd. There are ſtill in the Kingdom ſome of theſe diſguiſed Jews, who have enter'd into publick Offices in the Church, to skreen themſelves from the Royal Authority, which proſecutes them with the greateſt Severity even into their Retreats. But theſe particular Diſguiſes are not the buſineſs of an Hiſtorian.

XXIV. The City of Mets only is to be excepted, in which they have preſerv'd their Synagogue and Priviledges, becauſe this City was Imperial, and that from the Conqueſt of Henry II. till the Year 1638, when Lewis XIII. ſettled a Parliament there, the Burghers had reſort to the Imperial Chamber; for as the Jews are tolerated in the Empire, they are allow'd the ſame liberty at Mets. The King even made a conſiderable Decree in their behalf. A Father, who had loſt his Son, accuſed Raphael Levy of ſtealing him. 'Twas in vain that he denied the Fact upon the Rack, for he was condemn'd for it as guilty. He is repreſented as a ſuſpected Perſon, who took frequent Journeys into foreign Countries, becauſe he went ſometimes to Genoa to fetch Palms, or Cedar-branches, for the Celebration of their Feaſts. He was accuſed of Magick, and he increas'd this Suſpicion by being heard to pronounce certain barbarous words in the midſt of his Torments. He ſaid his Prayers in Hebrew, and recited the Scemah; they imagin'd that he invok'd the Soul of Samuel, as Saul had done. They added, That he had only ſtolen the Child to murther it, and make uſe of his Heart in magical Operations. No ſooner was he condemn'd, and the Execution over, but the Carcaſs of the Child was found, which had been rent in the Woods. The Jews complain to the King, who mov'd with the Injuſtice, order'd that for the future, the Criminal Cauſes of the Jews ſhould be brought before the Council, and confirm'd the Priviledges of this Nation by an Edict given at St. Germains in the Year 1670 †.

|| Spond. An. 1519. n. 11. p. 148. * They place this Exile in the Year 5156 of the World: They reckon 309 Years from the Exile from France; that is, from 1397 to the Year 1706. In Bartolocci B. R. t. 1. p. 83. they reckon 277 from this Exile to 1672. † The 18*th of* April.

CHAP. XIX.

The Jews expell'd out of England in the Thirteenth Century. Their return in the Seventeenth.

I. The Oppreſſions of King John: The Deſpair of a Jew. II. Rebellion againſt this Prince. III. An Armenian Prelate, who extol to the Engliſh the wandering Jew. IV. Another wandering Jew fabulous. V. The Origine of this Fable. VI. Henry III. attempts to convert the Jews. VII. Accuſations againſt thoſe of Norwich. VIII. The like Accuſations againſt thoſe of London. IX. The Cruſades dangerous: The Jews ranſom themſelves. X. The dreadful Taxes impoſed upon them. XI. Henry deceives the Cruſaders. XII. The Jews have a mind to quit England. XIII. They are ſold to Richard in Germany. XIV. Of a Child crucified. XV. The Engliſh Leaguers adverſe to the Jews. XVI. Henry III. baniſhes them. XVII. The Motives the Jews give of this Baniſhment. XVIII. A Romance introduced in this Story. XIX. Two different Pavilions the Jews are obliged to go into. XX. This Story examined. XXI. The Jews return into England. XXII. A Confutation of Jacob the Son of Amram's Gate of Truth.

I. RIchard King of England dying without Iſſue, his Nephew Arthur was naturally to ſucceed to his Throne: But Eleanor, Mother of John, Richard's ſecond Brother, eaſily perceiving, that if Arthur became King, his Mother would govern during her Son's minority, and have a Sovereign Power; ſhe brought over one part of England to declare for John, who ſeiz'd at the ſame time upon Normandy and Aquitaine, and forced young Arthur to throw himſelf into the Arms of the King of France, who promiſed to reſtore him, which he never executed. John * reign'd with Severity, uſed his Subjects ill, incurr'd the Diſpleaſure of the Court of Rome by his oppreſſing the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; which oblig'd the Pope to interdict his Kingdom †. The Jews ought not to expect, that a Man ſo barbarous to his own Subjects, ſhould have a greater Lenity for them. He loaded them with heavy Taxes, and when they began to refuſe him Money, he made them Priſoners, and extorted, by violent Puniſhments, what he could not obtain by his Edicts. 'Tis related || of a Jew of Briſtol, of whom the King demanded Ten thouſand Marks of Silver, that he choſe rather to be torn in pieces, than to redeem himſelf. The King order'd a Tooth to be pluck'd out every day till he had paid. He ſuffer'd the plucking out of ſeven Teeth with Conſtancy, but he ranſom'd himſelf when they went to draw the eighth. Trivet adds, * That the King, not ſatisfied with theſe Extortions, confiſcated the Eſtates of all the Jews of his Kingdom, and baniſh'd them by a Proclamation.

II. The Engliſh rebell'd againſt King John, and call'd in a Foreigner to reign in his ſtead. But his Death put a ſtop to the Calamities that threatned the Kingdom. The Barons join'd with young Henry III. rais'd an Army by his orders, gave Battle to King Lewis of France, who had much ado to repaſs the Sea, after he had given up all that he had taken. Henry reign'd Fifty ſix Years, and during ſo long a Reign, the Jews had ſeveral turns of Fortune:

* Triveti Chronicon An. 1208. p. 549. † Polydor. Virg. 65. An. 1208. p. 272. || Matth. Paris, An. 1210. p. 159.
* Triveti Chronicon, An. 1210. ibid. p. 550.

tune: One of them, not content to have embraced Christianity without believing it, must needs enter into Ecclesiastical Dignities, and become a Deacon. The Fraud was perceiv'd, and he was deliver'd into the Hands of Justice and hang'd. Nor was he the only Impostor that was punish'd at that time. A Man who seduced the People, shewing in his Feet and Hands the Prints and Wounds of Jesus Christ (as a French-man did afterwards) was † apprehended by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and severely chastis'd. 'Tis just that Cheats should be punish'd, but they are not always.

III. 'Twas at this time that an Armenian Prelate came into England, with recommendatory Letters from the Pope, to shew him the Relicks of the Saints, and their manner of Divine Worship. Matthew Paris, who lived in those days, seriously ‖ relates, That many People interrogated this Archbishop, one after another, about the Wandering Jew who lived in the East, and ask'd him, Whether he was still alive? The Archbishop affirm'd, That this Man was in Armenia, and one of the Officers in his Train told, that this Wandering Jew was Pilate's Porter named Cataphilus, who seeing Jesus Christ led out of the Judgment-hall, gave him a Blow upon the Back with his Fist, to force him the sooner out; and that our Saviour, with Resentment, said to him, The Son of Man goes, but thou shalt stay till he comes. He was converted and baptized by Ananias called Joseph. He was still alive, when he came to be a hundred Years old, he fell sick, and fainted away, during which Fit he grew young again, and return'd to the Age of Thirty, which he had when Christ died. This Officer affirm'd, That Joseph was known by his Master; That he had seen him eat with him at his Table a little before his departure; that he answer'd with a great deal of Gravity, and without Laughter, to all the Questions that were ask'd him about ancient Facts, as the Resurrection of the Dead, who came out of their Graves when Christ was crucified, about the Apostles Creed, or the History of the Saints. He is still afraid that Christ is coming to judge the World, for then he must die; and the Fault he committed by striking the Son of God, makes him tremble. Nevertheless he hopes for Salvation, because he sinned through Ignorance.

IV. We must not stand to confute this Fable: Let us only observe the Confidence wherewith Men vent the greatest Absurdities. They have invented * since, another Wandering Jew. The former was a Heathen, Pilate's Gaol-keeper, this was truly a Jew, a Shoe-maker, living near the Gate through which Jews pass'd to Mount Calvary. His Name was Assuerus, who seeing the Son of God weary and fatigued, and desirous to rest himself upon his Shop, beat him. Christ said to him, I will rest my self here; but thou shalt run till I come. He actually began to run that moment, follow'd Christ, and has wander'd ever since. A Christian affirms, that he saw him at Hambourg in the Year 1547, and heard him preach in one of the Churches of the City. He was a Man of Fifty Years of Age, of a handsome Stature, wearing long Hair dishevell'd upon his Shoulders. He was heard often to sigh, which gives reason to believe he repented of his Fault.

V. We ought not to wonder at so great a Credulity; at least Examples ought to lessen our Admiration. One and the same passage of the Gospel has been the grounds of this Disorder. Jesus Christ said, There were some in his Retinue, who should not die, till they saw the Son of Man in his Glory. It was believ'd at that time, that St. John should not die. It has been said since, notwithstanding the Proofs there have been of his Death; and Georgius Trapezuntius has writ a Treatise, to prove that St. John was still alive. Some maintain, that if he died, he rose again the next moment. They add, that he was translated with Elias and Enoch into some place, from whence he shall come with them to fight with the Antichrist. Postel had one of his Associates who preach'd at Paris, that he was St. John, who still lived; but he was burnt at Tolose. Thus People have imagin'd wandering Jews, and applied to them our Saviour's Saying about St. John. The Armenian Archbishop, who found some very credulous in England, and perhaps was one himself, confirm'd their Perswasion, that there was a wandering Jew, since he had seen and eaten with him.

VI. Henry III. † propos'd to convert the Jews of his Kingdom; He thought he could not more effectually act for his Father's Soul, or attone for the Sins of his Ancestors, which were great, than by founding a Seminary, or House of Conversion for the Jews. He committed the Conduct of it to an ingenious Man, who carried the Design a great way. All that were willing to be converted, had here a safe Retreat, where they lived in Peace, without being oblig'd to get their Bread by servile Labour or Usury. There was a great many seduced by Idleness, and the Temptation of being maintain'd without Pain and Labour, prevail'd. The number of the new Converts multiplied apace, and the House continued a long time.

VII. Those of Norwich were accus'd a little after of taking away a Christian Child, and kept it for a Year, and after they had circumcis'd him, designing to crucifie him at the Feast of the Passover. But the Design being discover'd, the Crime was not unpunish'd. Matthew Paris ‖ lays the same Imputation thrice upon the Jews of Norwich, only altering some Circumstances. For the first time they brought the Accus'd before the King, who held his Court at Westminster, and they confess'd their Crime. However they were only imprison'd, and submitted wholly to the King's Pleasure. The same Accusation being renew'd the following Year, four of the richest Jews of the City were apprehended, in order to seize their Estates after they were hang'd. Lastly, They were impeach'd before the Bishop in the Year 1239, for the like Villany. At that time a Father found his Child in a Jew's Chamber, which for a Year he had given over for lost. He made a noise upon it, and call'd in the Christians to his assistance, Bishop William Rale put all the Jews in Prison. The Accused in vain appeal'd to the Authority of the King. The Bishop alledg'd, That since the Question was about an Affront put upon Religion, the Cause did not lye before the King's Tribunal; that he was the proper Judge; and at the same time he caused four of the Accused to be taken, and fastned to the Tails of four Horses, and afterwards put upon Gibbets, where they expired. The Jews of Norwich must have been very incorrigible, if they committed the same Crime four times over in the space of Five Years, after they had been severely punish'd for it.

VIII. The same Accusation was brought against those of London four Years after *, with some remarkable Circumstances; The Body of a dead Child was found in St. Bennet's Church-yard, with Characters impress'd upon it. The People, which could not decypher them, sent for some Jews out of the Houses of the new Converts. They could not read these Characters, which perhaps only consisted in the Imagination of the People; for how could they perceive perceive these were Hebrew Characters, if they could not be distinguish'd because the Skin was shrunk or blacken'd? By another Prodigy they discover'd here the Name of the Father and Mother of the Child, and how he had been sold to the Jews, who must have crucified him. 'Tis not easie to conjecture, why nor how these Names appear'd here, rather than those of the Murtherers, the Knowledge whereof was much more necessary. And indeed they could not be discover'd, but some Jews being gone from London at that time, gave occasion to accuse them of the Murther. In the mean time we are assur'd, that the Child wrought Miracles, and the Canons of St. Paul's took Possession of him, to make wonder-working Relicks in time to come †.

† An. 1222. Matth. Paris, p. 217. ‖ An. 1229. Matth. Paris, Henry III. p. 242. * Apud Schudt Comp. Hist. Jud.
† An. 1233. Matth. Paris, Henry III. p. 269. ‖ An. 1235. Id. p. 280. Id. p. 331. Id. p. 359. An. 1236. * An. 1245.

IX. All the Nation was in a Consternation the Year following ‖, from the Persecutions of the Crusaders in Spain, France and Germany; fearing * that this Storm would fly over the Sea, and fall upon them, they prevented it, and purchas'd an Edict of the King †, prohibiting any harm to be done them throughout his Dominions.

By Misfortune the King had frequent Occasions for Money: Galfrid his chief Minister thought it could not be easier found than among the Jews. Upon their refusal to pay the great Sums he demanded, they were accused of committing a Murther at London. They were imprison'd; ‖ and after abundance of Vexations and Torments, they were oblig'd to pay a third of all their Estates.

X. Nor did this suffice for their entire Ransom; for four Years after, this insatiable Prince demanded * new Presents from his Subjects. He rejected those which the Abbots and Priors brought, when they were not considerable enough, and demanded greater. The Jews were not spared in his Demands. He received himself the Gold that was presented, and made his Officers receive the Silver. One particular Jew, call'd Aaron, was oblig'd to pay him four Gold Marks, and his Officers four thousand Marks of Silver. This same Aaron was taxed, seven Years after, ten thousand Marks of Gold, and fourteen thousand Marks of Silver, to satisfie some Necessities of the Queen, and to get out of Prison. He reckon'd and swore to his Brother, by all that was most Sacred, that he had paid the King, for his own part, two hundred Marks of Gold, and thirty thousand Marks of Silver; according to which Calculation, we must correct a Fault crept into Matthew Paris's Account †, who reckons ten thousand Gold Marks in the second Tax, which would make an exorbitant Sum, unless the Thousand was retrench'd, and throw the Historian into a manifest Contradiction. The rest of the Jews were not more happy; they were accus'd of coining false Money, and counterfeiting the Prince's Seal; and under these Pretences, they loaded them with Imposts. They had their Exchequer and particular Judge: 'Tis probable they gain'd this Judge by Presents; at least, the Extortioners were accus'd of favouring them, to have the Power of Bleeding them in their turn. John Lunel ‖, tho' an Ecclesiastick, could not secure himself from this Accusation. He was charg'd with receiving great Sums from many Jews, for his protecting them at the Bar, and diminishing their Taxes. The King suffer'd him to be cruelly handled, and his Punishment would have been still greater, if one of his first Ministers had not procur'd his Pardon. A Knight had afterwards the same Fate: He was impeach'd of being corrupted by the Jews, whose Commissary or Overseer he was, and of having forg'd a false Indenture, to which he had put the King's Seal, intrusted to him for the Jewish Affairs. By help of this Forgery, he had ruin'd another Knight. Complaint was brought to the King, and he recriminated upon the Jews who had assisted him. However he could not rescue himself from the Hands of Justice without the loss of his Post, and a considerable Fine *.

XI. The Holy War † furnish'd Henry with a new Pretence of tormenting his Subjects. The Pope had written a very pressing Letter to him, to oblige him to Crusade, and succour the King of France out of hand. He ingag'd to do it; but at the same time robb'd the Jews of all they had remaining; and after this Inhumane Spoil, he took away from the Christians their Jewels, and every thing that was valuable.

XII. Henry afterwards set a Report on foot, that the King of Spain design'd to declare War against him. This was a new Motive to his demanding Supples from his People. The Lords of the Kingdom being assembled at London, answer'd, That being drain'd by former Taxes, they could contribute no farther: That if the King of Castile did effectually make War, they would not refuse their assistance: But his Design being yet conceal'd, they could not give Subsidies upon uncertain Rumours. They had the better Reason for what they did, because the King's Desire ‖ was, only to satisfie the Avarice of the Foreigners at his Court. The rebound of this refusal fell upon the Jews, who had less Authority but more Wealth. Fresh Sums being demanded of them, which they could not pay, Elias of London spoke for them all, and answer'd the Council, That since they had resolv'd to sink them, they had better expel them out of the Kingdom, or leave them the Liberty of departing; and that, perhaps, they should somewhere else find a Prince, that had some Sentiments of Justice or Humanity for them; That the King knew very well, that tho' he should pluck out their Eyes, or flea them all alive, they could not furnish the Sum demanded of them. To his Discourse he added Tears, and concluded by fainting away, as if he had been ready to expire. However the Council denied them the Liberty of departing, and represented to them the inevitable Mercies of that Option, since the King of France had banish'd them out of his Kingdom, and hated them mortally. The Tax was moderated, and by this means they drew from them the little they had remaining.

XIII. Henry began again * these Extortions the Year following. He represented, That notwithstanding all the Taxes he had rais'd, he still continued poor, and involv'd in Debts on all hands. If his Oaths are to be taken, his Debts amounted to two or three hundred thousand Marks, and he could not find wherewithal to pay them. In the mean time he must live, and defray the Expences of his Houshold; and therefore he demanded eight thousand Marks of the Jews. They represented once more to the King, that they were ready to quit the Kingdom, and that the Pope's Usurers had compleated their Ruin. The King, enrag'd with this Refusal, sold them to his Brother Richard, who lent him a great Sum upon this Bargain. It was not doubted but Richard would treat them still more harshly than his Brother, and demand double the Payment of his Debt; but he took pity on them, because he was convinc'd of their Poverty and Inability.

XIV. Besides these Misfortunes † which overwhelm'd them, the Jews of Lincoln were accus'd of † Matth. Paris, ibid. p. 436. An. 1244. ‖ An 1236. * Ibid. p. 295. † An. 1239. ‖ Ibid. p. 295. * An. 1243. † An. 1250. Matth. Paris, p. 526. ‖ An. 1251. Id. p. 353. * An. 1252. Matth. Paris, p. 573. † An. 1252. Id. p. 557. ‖ An. 1254. Id. p. 596. * An. 1255. Matth. Paris, p. 606. † An. 1255. Spond. n. 12. Matth. Paris, p. 613.

murthering

murthering a Child. There were three particular Circumſtances in this Accuſation. One was, That the Inhabitants of Lincoln had invited four Jews from every City in England to aſſiſt at this Sacrifice. A ſecond, That the Murderer confeſs'd, when his Life was promis'd him, that this Sacrifice was renew'd every Year, tho' it was not always diſcover'd, and that the Earth had caſt out the Body of the Child. The third was, That the King refuſing to ratifie the Promiſe of ſaving the Jews Life and Limbs, not only put him to Death, but arreſted ninety one Priſoners at London, and puniſh'd many others of 'em capitally.

XV. 'Twas impoſſible but that the King, who reign'd with ſo much Extortion, and exhauſted his Subjects by his Avarice, ſhould create himſelf cruel Enemies. Therefore they combin'd againſt him in England. The Earls of Leiceſter and Gloceſter heading the Leaguers, gave him Battle, in which his Brother Richard, who was call'd King of Germany, becauſe he had been elected Emperor by the Suffrages of ſome Princes, and King Henry, with his Son Edward, were made Priſoners of War. Edward made his Eſcape, by obtaining the liberty of exerciſing his Horſes in a Neighbouring Meadow. He defeated the Earl of Leiceſter, who was found ſhot through upon the ſpot; and Henry having reaſcended the Throne, confiſcated the Leaguers Eſtates to the uſe of thoſe who had continu'd faithful to him †. But none of theſe Revolutions were advantageous to the Jews; for the Leaguers ſeiz'd upon their Synagogue at Lincoln, and paſs'd from thence into the Iſle of Ely, where they ſtill made greater Ravages. Thus, however, the Wheel of Fortune turn'd; this unhappy Nation was ſtill oppreſs'd.

XVI. Laſtly, 'tis pretended, that Henry III. baniſh'd them out of England by an irrevocable Edict. Hiſtorians give a very different Account of this matter. The Jews ſay, This Misfortune befel 'em in the Year 1260. or 5020. Selden ‖ thought it impoſſible any body ſhould be ſo groſly miſtaken; and therefore he has corrected the Text, and by the change of a Figure, has made it 5050. This Correction would be juſt and eaſie, if we were not oblig'd to make it in two Authors; but the Number being noted by ſeveral Jewiſh Hiſtorians *, it muſt neceſſarily be own'd, that they have impertinently antedated their Exile by twenty Years. For at Wincheſter, in a Place which had doubtleſs been a Priſon for the Jews of that County, a Stone has been found, upon which one of the Priſoners had engraven theſe Words in Hebrew Characters †; The Community of the Jews were made Priſoners in the Year 5047. They could not therefore have been expell'd in the Year 5020, or 1260. Beſides, the Leaguers, who were defeated by Henry III. ſeiz'd upon their Synagogue at Lincoln in the Year 1267. So that they ſtill ſubſiſted in the Kingdom, and had their Publick Places at the end of Henry's Reign. Laſtly, none of the Engliſh Annaliſts mention Henry's Edict of Baniſhment; but they obſerve, that his Son Edward impriſon'd the Jews in the Year 1287. and baniſh'd 'em three Years after. The Dominicans of Colmar ſay in their Annals ‖, that it was in the Year 1291. and 'tis better to follow them, tho' Strangers, than the Hiſtorians of the Country, becauſe the Council of London held in 1291. caus'd their Deſtruction.

XVII. The Motives alſo of this Exile are variouſly reported. A Jewiſh Hiſtorian * ſays, They were accus'd to the King of adulterating the Coin. The King eaſily perceiv'd the Innocence of the Accus'd, and that the Delators were guilty of the Crime they had charg'd on others. But for all that, they went on with their Accuſation, and produc'd Witneſſes. The King ſeeing them ſo cruelly bent, was afraid, ſays this Hiſtorian, that the People would tear all that Nation in pieces, and to ſave their Lives he order'd 'em to depart his Territories.

'Tis true, the Jews were accus'd under Henry III. of corrupting the Coin; but this Prince was ſo far from baniſhing a Nation that ſof requently fill'd his Coffers, that, on the contrary, he would never give 'em liberty to go out of his Kingdom, even when they beg'd it with Tears.

XVIII. Love is ſometimes introduc'd into this Exile, and ſo Tragical a Story has been the Foundation of a Romance: For 'tis ſaid, † That a Prieſt deſperately fond of a handſome Jeweſs, ſacrific'd his Religion and Prieſthood to his Paſſion: Whether he deſerted both, or that he diſſembled, he caus'd himſelf to be Circumcis'd to marry her, ſince he could not enjoy her but upon that condition. The matter quickly became Publick; and to revenge a pretended Affront they had done Religion, by debauching a Prieſt, it was reſolv'd to burn all the Jews in London; but the King ſentenc'd only to the Fire thoſe that had Circumcis'd the Prieſt, and order'd all the reſt, either to imbrace Chriſtianity, or to depart the Kingdom in three Months time; and at the ſame time took away all their Children under ſix Years old to be inſtructed.

XIX. 'Tis ſaid alſo, that after the King's Death, his Son ſeeing the Kingdom depopulated by Plague and Famine, was willing to know the reaſon of it. They perſuaded him, That the Jews Unbelief drew down this Divine Vengeance upon the Nation, and he oblig'd 'em all to turn Chriſtians; but the Famine not ceaſing, it was believ'd, that the anger of Heaven proceeded from the Violence that was offer'd the Jews, and that they ought to be left to an entire Liberty. The King commanded all the Jews to meet round two Pavilions he had caus'd to be ſet up on purpoſe by the Sea-ſide, upon one of which was a Croſs, and upon the other the Law of Moſes. At the ſame time ‖ it was proclaim'd, That all thoſe who would turn Chriſtians ſhould enter into the Pavilion diſtinguiſh'd by the Croſs; and that thoſe who perſever'd in their old Religion ſhould go into the Tent of the Law. The more Politick perceiv'd there was a Snake in the Graſs, and became Chriſtians. The reſt were murder'd at the ſame time they entred into the Tent of Moſes, and their Bodies were thrown into the Sea.

XX. The Chriſtians agree * about the Decree of Baniſhment, made againſt the Jews at the end of the thirteenth Century, in King Edward's Reign; and manifeſt Proofs are found of it in ſome Chanceries of England. But they diſcover no Tracks of theſe Tents erected for the choice of Religion, nor of the Maſſacre that follow'd it. If a Monk of St. Francis's Order has related the Fact, as if he had taken it from the Writing of ſome Engliſhman, he ought to quote them. But as there is no Hiſtorian that mentions it, 'tis probable he borrow'd the Story from the Jews that have related it. Trivet †, whoſe Chronicle was publiſh'd by Dom Luc of Achery, only ſays, That Edward III. baniſh'd the Jews out of his Kingdom, gave them Money for their Paſſage into France, and afterwards confiscated their Estates. Polydore * Virgil attributes this Advice to a Council held at London in the Year 1291, which designing to separate the Sheep from the Goats, commanded, by a publick Edict, all the Jews to depart England in a few days, giving 'em liberty to carry away their Effects. They obey'd the Decree; and so this Nation, Which was prodigiously numerous in England, departed out of it for ever, still wandering from one place to another, till it was entirely lost; and its loss will not be very afflictive, provided they leave us their Sacred Books, without which it would be difficult to preserve our Religion in future Ages. This is the Reflection of this Historian; in which two things are to be censur'd: One is the entire loss of the Jewish Nation, which must never happen. Had he forgotten, that it was to be recalled before the end of the World? Besides, the Jewish Books might have been useful in Primitive times, to extract the Oracles proving the coming of the Messiah, and shewing, that they were not fictitious; but at present these Testimonies are no longer necessary. It sufficiently appears, by the Christians Disputations with the Jews, that these Oracles were neither corrupted nor falsly imagin'd.

† Trivet Chronicon An. 1267. Hen. 51. p. 620. Spicil. t. viii. ‖ Selden de Jure Gent. l. II. c. 6. p. 190. * R. Ghedalia Sepher Schialſcheleth Hakkabala fol. 112. & Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 139. Ganz Tſemach 142. † Seld. id. ‖ Annales Dominican. Colmar. apud Vurſtium Hiſt. Germ. t. II. p 25. * Salomon Ben Virgæ ibid. p. 140. Gedalia ibid. fol. 113. † Gedalia ibid. ‖ Cardoſo las Excellencias p. 382. * Selden de Jure Nat. l. II. c. 6. † Trivet Chron. An. 1290. p. 654.

wards

Edward, the preceding Year, had pass'd such another Decree for all the Provinces he possest in France. The Motive alledged for this Severity, was, That the Jews entring into too strict an Intimacy with the Christians, corrupted them; and that there were at that time many, who in their Sicknesses and Misfortunes went devoutly to the Synagogues, held lighted Candles, and spent the Vigil of the Sabbath there. Be it how it will, the Jews never appear'd again in a Body in England, from the time that the Council of London had obtain'd a Decree from King Edward to banish 'em.

XXI. In the Year 1649. an Apology was made for them, in order to engage the Parliament to repeal the severe Laws which had continu'd for so long a time. The Author represented, That if their Ancestors had crucified the Messiah, it appears from the Gospel, that the Heads and Doctors of the Law were the only Guilty, whilst the People cry'd Hosanna to the Son of David; and that their Posterity ought not to be punished for a Fault worn out by so great a number of Generations and Ages. He added, That we ought to respect the Character of the People of God, which they still bore, and the remains of a Covenant which God had so solemnly treated with them. Lastly, he observ'd, That the Toleration of this Nation would bring down the Divine Blessing upon the Kingdom, which for a hundred Years had been the strong Support of the Truth, and the Sanctuary of the Miserable.

The Author protests, that he was not a Jew; that he had no Concerns with them, nor had been sollicited to make this Apology to the Parliament; that he only explain'd the Notions which he had long confin'd within his Breast. Lastly, he affirms, † that he had no other prospect than the Glory of God: Lo que tengo escrito no ha sido a Pedimento de ninguno de la Nacion de los Judios. Solo mostrar lo que a tarito tiempo tengo en mi coracon y sobre todo es mi intention fundada en la gloria de Dios. I don't know whether this Authors Protestations are to be believed; for in examining his Sentiments and Style, we easily observe that he was a Jew, who took the Character of a Christian to give the greater weight to his Apology, and to make more Impression upon the English Parliament, which then had Cromwel at the Head of it.

In effect, the Liberty was granted 'em they had so long lost; which Event has been thought so advantageous, that they engrave it in their Publick Monuments, and put the Date of it in their considerable Epochas. In fine, they obtain'd a Synagogue, which they call'd the Holy Assembly and the Jewish Parnassus.

O Kahal || Kados Inglos oye mi Queia,
Mi Queia oie o Juizio Parnaseo.

The Rabbins, who govern the Synagogue, will not permit any Correspondence with the Christians about Religion. Dr. Kidder *, Bishop of Bath and Wells, offer'd a Conference to the Cacam of London to convince a young Maid, who had already some knowledge of the Truth; the Cacam not only refus'd, but the Maid was shut up by her Parents, and oblig'd to stifle the Seeds of Truth she had receiv'd. Another Jew would no more return home, for fear of making himself odious to his Brethren.

XXII. This Bishop, who was taken away by a sad and dreadful Accident †, has confuted the Gate of Truth, written by Jacob the Son of Amram. This Author, who was unknown to Bartolocci, liv'd in the last Century ||, and his Work continues in Manuscript. Bp. Kidder was afraid it would stagger those that read it, and therefore he answer'd it. In the mean time Jacob's Objections are not considerable. He accuses Jesus Christ of being deceiv'd, by saying, That David and his Companions ate the Shew-bread which is false, since he was alone. He maintains, That the Purification of the Virgin contradicts the Immaculate Conception of the Mother and the Son: That the license given the Devils to precipitate the Swine into the Sea, is contrary to Charity, since private Persons lost their Herds by it: That Christ did not eat the Paschal Lamb as the Law ordain'd: That, according to St. Matthew, St. Peter must have renounc'd his Master before the Cock crew, and, according to St. Mark, he did not do it till the second crowing of the Cock: Jesus promis'd to go before his Disciple into Galilee, and yet he did not do it; and on the contrary, he promis'd his Disciples not to send them his Spirit till after his Ascension, tho' they had receiv'd it before. If these Objections breed any doubt of the Truth of the Christian Religion, which the Jewish Doctor design'd to shake, a Man may recur to Bp. Kidder's Preface, who confutes 'em before he demonstrates Jesus Christ to be the Messiah so long expected.

* Polyd. Virg. Angl. H. l. xvii. p. 327. † Edw. Nicholas Apologia per los Judios fol. 8. || Barrios Epistola al Kalhal Kados de Londres in 1683. p. 22. * Kidder's Demonstration of the Messias. † He was crush'd under the Ruins of the Episcopal Palace, in a Storm which happened in 1703. || An. 1634.

CHAP. XX.

The History of the Jews in Germany, Hungary, &c. during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries.

I. Frequent Accuſations againſt the Jews in Germany. II. The Irruption of the Perſians into the Weſt countenanc'd by the Jews. III. They aſſiſt the Tartars. This Aſſiſtance diſcovered. IV. The City of Frankfort burnt. The Title of Biſhop of the Jews examined. V. The Emperor acquits them as to the Murder of ſome Children. VI. Their Condition at Cologne. VII. A Maſſacre in Bavaria. VIII. Another at Bern. IX. Baruch and Eliezer de Germerſheim Learned Men. X. Iſaac of Vienna and Meir of Rottemburg Heads of the Synagogues. XI. Amnon carried up to Heaven. XII. Their Settlement in Lithuania. XIII. The extraordinary number of the Jews impoveriſhes the Pariſhes. Regulations of the Council of Vienna. XIV. Precautions taken at Auſburg againſt falſe Oaths. XV. Diſputes with the Caraites. XVI. A Popular Commotion raiſed by Raind Flaiſch againſt the Jews of the Upper Palatinate and Franconia. XVII. Mardocai of Auſtria a Martyr. XVIII. Lewis of Bavaria ſtops a Perſecution. XIX. The Biſhop of Spires forbids 'em Uſury. XX. A Perſecution caus'd by the Flagellans. Cruelties exerciſed. XXI. Wells poiſoned in Germany. Caſimire protects them in Lithuania. His Love for a Jeweſs. XXII. The Synagogue of Prague burnt. A Prayer upon this Occaſion. XXIII. An Execution begun in Bohemia againſt Uſuries, paſſes to Spires. XXIV. The Emperor protects them. Their Perſeverance.

I. THere is no Place where the Jews have been ſo frequently accus'd of enormous Crimes as in Germany. I will not deny but the Jews have given occaſion to ſome of theſe Accuſations. But yet it is ſtrange they ſhould be infinitely more wicked in one place than in another. Beſides, it is ſo common for the predominant Religion to charge thoſe with Crimes it means to oppreſs, to render 'em odious, and juſtifie its Conduct, that we ought not to wonder to ſee the ſame Accuſations often repeated. Chriſtianity ought to have deſtroy'd this Spirit of Slander, but it reigns among Chriſtians as much as ever it did among Heathens. The Perſecutor often finds wiſe People, that murmur and condemn his Fury, when it is diveſted of all Pretences. But when he has the Art to invent a Crime, Puniſhment appears neceſſary. No body dares vindicate thoſe who add Corruption of Morals to that of Faith. A Man is afraid of growing odious by defending wretched infamous Hereticks. They are deſerted; and ſince falſe Accuſations have ſo ſpeedy an Effect, they are generally made uſe of. We will not therefore vouch for thoſe that have been made againſt the Jews in Germany; but we are ſorry they occur ſo often in this Hiſtory.

II. One of the principal Crimes charg'd upon the Jews of Germany, was the favouring the Conqueſts of the Perſians and Tartars *. I don't know what deſign they might have; but we are aſſur'd, † that a multitude of Perſians quitted the Eaſt to ravage the Weſt. Their Incurſions did not laſt long. They return'd into Perſia, aſtoniſh'd with the Obſtacles they found to their intended Conqueſts, they gave up a Deſign, which three Magicians of the ſame Nation at Cologne had put into their heads. 'Tis ſaid, that the Jews of this Country, whoſe Diſperſion made them attentive to all ſurprizing Notions, flatter'd themſelves, that the Perſians would become their Deliverers. Their hopes and joy were a greater ſcandal to the Chriſtians, becauſe they did not diſguiſe them; but called the Son of him who commanded this Army David, fancying that he would be their King.

III. Tho' their hopes || were diſappointed, yet they entertained new ones ſtill more chimerical, when they heard that a prodigious multitude of Tartars had penetrated into Hungary, and after they had ravag'd it, threatned Bohemia, and the Neighbouring Countries. The Emperor was in a Conſternation, and forc'd to ſue for Aſſiſtance to all Chriſtian Princes, and Cruſados were preached up againſt thoſe Enemies of the Chriſtian Name; but with little Succeſs, becauſe Frederick's Enemy the Pope, deſired his and the Empire's Ruin. The Emperor, however, made Head againſt the Barbarians, and Conrad his Son giving them Battle, obliged them to retire. The Jews dazzled with the tranſient Proſperity they had enjoy'd, imagin'd, that the Tartars were of their Nation, and that they came to their Aſſiſtance. They pretended, that their Anceſtors, who were carried to the Banks of the Caſpian Sea, had brought forth this People, that carried Deſolation and Terror wherever they came. They reſolved to join them, and ſuccour 'em with Supplies of Proviſions and Arms. And to do it the more effectually, they promiſed the Princes to poiſon the Wine they carried, and ſo to deſtroy theſe Barbarians. They were believ'd upon their word. They put Arms in the Casks of poiſoned Wine, and had already made a conſiderable March, when they were ſtopp'd upon a Bridge to pay the Duties. They thought to avoid the Payment, by ſaying, that this Convoy was deſigned only for the Service of the State and Religion. The Cuſtom-Officer, who was extremely miſtruſtful, cauſing a Veſſel to be opened, found it full of Sword-blades and Knives. Their Fraud being diſcovered, they were made Priſoners, and delivered to the Executioners, and dy'd by their own Swords. The moſt favourable thing for the Jews in this Event, was, that the Emperor Frederick was alſo ſuſpected of calling in the Barbarians. However, the Accuſation was falſe; the Clergy and Pope had invented it to make him odious; and ſo far was he from joining and correſponding with this Nation, which came only with deſigns to ravage the Empire, that he expell'd them, and reſtor'd the King of Hungary to his Throne *.

IV. † They were accus'd the ſame Year of hindering the Converſion of a young Man of their Nation, who had a mind to be baptiz'd at Frankfort. This Accuſation ſeems better grounded than many others; becauſe 'tis common for People, and particularly for Fathers to prevent the Deſertion of their Children, and to that end, frequently go beyond the Bounds preſcrib'd by Reaſon and the Laws; and therefore the Councils and Emperors have often been oblig'd to reſtrain the Violence of the

* An. 1222. † Incerti Authoris Fragm. Hiſtor. apud Vurſtiſium t. ii. p. 89. || An. 1241. Matth. Paris Hen. III. p. 382. & 379. * An. 1241. † Additiones ad Lambert, Schafnasburg Hiſt. Germ. Piſt. t. ii. p. 257.

Jews

Jews in oppoſing theſe Converſions: The Oppoſition we ſpeak of coſt the City of Frankfort and the Jews very dear; for the People being diſturb'd that a Conqueſt of this kind ſhould be taken out of their hands, mutinied and run to Arms. Some Chriſtians were kill'd in the Fray; a hundred and eighty Jews were deſtroy'd by the Sword, or the Fire that they had kindled; but the Flames continuing, and paſſing from Houſe to Houſe, half the City was conſum'd, which put the reſt of the Jews into freſh Danger. The more prudent, to the number of twenty four, were baptized to avoid Death: But we know not what is meant by the Monk, who relates this Event, in liſting their Biſhop amongſt the Converts. 'Tis true, the Seventy Interpreters have † ſometimes ſpoke of Biſhops among the Jews; for Eleazer was Biſhop of the Luminary; and 'tis from their Verſion, that the Apoſtles, when they were about filling up the Place that Judas had vacated, borrow'd theſe Words of the 109th Pſalm, and his Biſhoprick let another take. Laſtly, the Hiſtorian of the Maccabees ‖, in the ſame Senſe relates, that Antiochus had ſet Biſhops over the Jews: But this Term had a very different Signification from what the Chriſtians have given it, and did not ſignifie an Eccleſiaſtical Government, ſuperior to that of Prieſts. Laſtly, 'tis not from hence that the Chriſtians have taken their Biſhops. It muſt therefore neceſſarily follow, that the Hiſtorian we ſpeak of fancy'd, that the Government of the Jews was like that of the Chriſtians at his time, and that he took the Rabbin who govern'd the People and Synagogue of Frankfort, for a Biſhop.

V. The Accuſation * of killing Children at the Paſſover, was current in Germany, as in all other Places of the Weſt. This Crime was imputed to them at Haguenau in the Lower Alſatia. They were accuſed of taking of three Children of Seven Years old, which were found dead in one of their Houſes. Complaints of it were brought to the Emperor, who anſwer'd, That ſince theſe Children was dead they muſt be buried. This anſwer, that look'd like Railery, and was an Argument of his Incredulity, incenſed their Accuſations. It was not doubted but this Prince was corrupted by great Preſents; and the Hiſtorian who relates the Fact, boldly affirms, That tho' he did not do Juſtice, God puniſh'd him for it, by caſting him into Hell. The Hiſtorian was more culpable than the Emperor, whom he damn'd eternally, without any Proof that it was the Will of God, or that the Prince had deſerv'd Hell, by diſbelieving the Allegations againſt the Jews. The Parties did not accuſe the Jews of killing theſe Children, but of finding them dead in their Houſes. A more † impartial Hiſtorian ſays, That the Emperor call'd an Aſſembly of able Divines, to be inform'd whether it was true, that the Jews believ'd it their Duty to ſhed the Blood of Chriſtian Children on Good-Friday, in order to make all the Jews of the Empire ſuffer for it; and that not being able to diſcover any thing certain upon the Matter, he was appeas'd, to which the Jews contributed by their Money.

VI. The Paſſion of this Monk call'd Richer, renders another Event, he relates of the Jews of Cologne, very ſuſpicious. There was a part of the City, in which there remain'd but one Houſe, which was inhabited by a Chriſtian; in which he had put the Image of a Crucifix, with thoſe of Mary and St. John. This Chriſtian having left his Houſe, it was lett to a Jew, who came to dwell at Cologne, and who could find no other to be hired. In an Entertainment he made to his Friends, they diſcover'd the Image left by the Chriſtian; and after many Abuſes utter'd in their Cups, againſt the Crucified, one of them took his Knife, and ran it into the Image, from whence the Blood immediately flew out. Part of the Jews, being aſtoniſh'd, fled. The Clergy, and the People of the City, came to ſee the Miracle, and they fill'd a Diſh with the Blood that iſſued from the Wound. Piety preſently turn'd into Fury: They began with plundering the Jewiſh Houſes, they ſeiz'd on all the Jews they could take, and kill'd thoſe that would not be converted, or could not run away. The Hiſtorian adds, That they never were ſeen more in the City. He could not Divine they ſhould return again. He lived at that time, but knew little more of Germany, than by his going to the Duke of Lorrain; and 'tis own'd that he vented a great many Fables for Truths.

VII. A more terrible Accuſation was renew'd ‖ in Bavaria: An old Woman confeſs'd, that ſhe had deliver'd a Child to the Jews, who had drain'd all his Blood with Needles to make a Sacrifice. The People of Munich roſe, and without ſtaying for the Sentence of the Judge, knock'd all the Jews o'th' Head they could meet with. The Officers in vain oppoſing this Fury, adviſed the reſt of that Nation to take Sanctuary in a Synagogue which was of Stone. But this made their Miſery but the more general; the People purſued them thither, ſet Fire to the place, and burnt all thoſe who thought themſelves ſafe, whilſt neither the Duke, nor Courtiers, could ſtop their Rage.

VIII. They have made * a Martyr, and a Wonder-working Saint, of a young Man of Wurtsbourg, call'd Werkner, whoſe Blood the Jews of this Country are ſaid to have drawn out as in a Preſs, to uſe it as an Ingredient in ſome Medicines. Thoſe of Bern made another Martyr of one Rodolphus, who had been kill'd in the ſame manner, and reveng'd his Death with the Lives of many Jews. They place this Event under the Empire of Adolphus de Naſſau. But we don't know what the Hiſtorians mean, by ſaying, That this Prince, upon occaſion of this Murther, laid Siege to Bern, without being able to take it. Beſides, when we ask what uſe the Jews could make of the Blood of ſo many murthered Children? 'tis anſwer'd only, That they make Sacrifices with them, tho' their Religion forbids Humane Victims. We are told alſo, That in the Act of the Murther they cry, If Jeſus Chriſt be the Meſſiah, let the Blood of this innocent Child, who dies in the Faith of Chriſt, avail me to eternal Life.

IX. Notwithſtanding all theſe Accuſations, the Nation of the Jews continued to multiply in Germany. Learning flouriſh'd in the Synagogues, which were govern'd by learned and illuſtrious Rabbins. The City of Germeſheim alone produced two, one of which was Baruch de Germeſheim, for then they began to take Sirnames; and as Noblemen took theirs from the Fiefs and Lands they poſſeſs'd, Men of Letters commonly deriv'd theirs from the Cities where they were born. We have ſpoke ſufficiently of Baruch, Eliezer de Germeciman was of the ſame City, and one of the greateſt Cabbaliſts of his Age. He compos'd The Cloak of the Lord about the Year 1240. at leaſt R. Ganz thinks ſo, but I queſtion whether he be not deceiv'd; for Eliezer muſt be ſomething older, ſince he taught Moſes Nachmanides the Cabbala, who died in the Year 1260, at Sixty ſix Years of Age.

† Numbers 4. 16. Acts 1. ‖ 1 Macc. 1. 55. * Richerius Chronicon Senon. l. 4. c. 32 & 33. Spicil. t. 3. p. 401. An. 1236. † Authoris incerti Fragmentum Hiſtoricum ante Alberti Argentinenſis Chron. Vurſtiſ. t. 2. p. 91. ‖ An. 1286. Aventin. Ann. Boior. l. 7. p. 441. Annales Steronis. An. 1288. Hiſt. German. t. 4. p. 396. * Ibid. & Faſcicul. Tempor. Ætas 6. Hiſtor. Germ. Piſtor. t. 3. fol. 83.

X. Isaac of Vienna †, not content with sowing the Light, as he call'd it, took the Pains to transcribe Books for the Synagogues of his Country, to make them more correct and exact. He had the Ingenuity to make valid a Contract of Marriage, whose Date was false by Inadvertency, and to shew the time when it was made. This Judgment did him a great deal of Honour. He had Meir de Rottembourg for his Disciple, who excell'd his Master. He became the Judge and Doctor of his Nation, which drew upon him a long Train of Misfortunes; for as he was thought to be very rich, or to have the Management of his Disciples Purses, the Emperor, who loved Money, laid a great Tax upon him, and imprison'd him for want of Payment. One of his Disciples bail'd him, but he died before he obtain'd his Liberty. Three things are to be observ'd of this Rabbin; One, That it is a Mistake to say, he died in a City call'd Beitsohar, which is not to be found in any part of the World. He ended his Life sorrowfully in Prison, and from hence came the Equivocation; for a Prison being call'd Beth Hassohar in Hebrew ‖, it has been made a City of. Secondly, The Learned Buxtorf thought it was he that wrote against Maimonides; but it has been observ'd, that he mistakes him for another of the same Name *, who was the true Author of the Censures ascrib'd to him. 'Tis a further mistake to say, That the Emperor Rodolphus impriſon'd him in the Year 1305, for this Prince died in the Year 1294. 'Tis pretty probable, that it was his Successor Adolphus of Nassau, or rather Albert of Austria, Rodolphus's Son, who made Meir a Prisoner †, and he died six Years after in the Year 1305, which oblig'd the famous Rabbin Asser to leave Hambourg, and to retire into Spain, because, being his Master's Security, he was afraid of being disturb'd, and forc'd to pay the Money after his death. Lastly, A Work is ascrib'd to him intituled Hattisbats; but he is but indirectly the Author of it; for 'twas his Disciples that, after his death, made a Collection of his Decisions, and gave them this Title.

XI. The German ‖ Jews boast mightily of Amnon, whom they make a kind of miraculous Martyr: They relate, That the Archbishop of Ments, understanding that he was distinguish'd in his Nation for his Wealth, Learning and Beauty, indeavour'd to convert him. Amnon demanded three days to deliberate, and at the same time repented he had given his Answer, because he ought never to hesitate about his Change of Religion. He bewail'd his Sin, and his Friends in vain endeavour'd to comfort him. The Archbishop forcing him to determine after the time appointed, upon his refusal, order'd his Toes and Fingers to be cut off. He took them and laid them in Salt, till the first day of the Year, when he was brought to the Synagogue with his salted Fingers, where, after a most importunate Prayer, it was perceiv'd, that God had translated him into Heaven. Three days after he appear'd to a Rabbin, whom he taught a Prayer, which the Jews still repeat at the beginning of the Year, and at the Feast of Propitiations. Some Christians deny the Truth of the first part of this Story upon a very bad Foundation; for they pretend, that it being found impossible to force a private Conversion by Torments, the Jews were suffer'd to live quietly, till their Crimes deserv'd another Treatment. The whole History of the Modern Jews, is a Proof of the Falshood of this Pretension. 'Tis true the first Christians were very Humane to these Enemies of the Church. But this Conduct has been chang'd in latter Ages, in which they are grown Inexorable and Cruel. Tho' it should be true that Persecution was not common, could a Fact be contested by an indefinite and general Reflection? Would it be impossible for a Bishop of Ments to deviate from the Practice of his Predecessors? But the Jews have expung'd this Story out of the Rituals used in the Italian Synagogues. They are to be commended for it; they perceiv'd that that Translation of Amnon to Heaven was fabulous; and instead of supporting it by new Lies, as is common with false Miracles, they have made an honourable Satisfaction to the Publick, by striking out all that is false in it. The German Synagogues have a long time made use of another Prayer made by the same Amnon, and beginning thus, Lord of the Universe, come hear my Prayer.

XII. Besides the Advantage they enjoy'd in the Thirteenth Century, of having a considerable number of great Men, they met with another, for Boleslaus, Sirnamed the Chast, because he lived in Celibacy with his Wife, gave them * liberty of Conscience in Lithuania, with the addition of many considerable Privileges, which they preserv'd for many Ages. He only imitated other Princes, who generally took this Nation into their Protection. This appears from the Council of Vienna held at that time †.

XIII. This Council ‖ observ'd, That the Number and Power of the Jews was so great, that the Revenues of Parish-Priests were considerably lessen'd by them; and therefore they were oblig'd to make them amends proportionably to the Profits they would have receiv'd from Christian Families living in their Parishes. Besides, they hinder'd their Wives and Children from embracing Christianity, and yet circumcis'd Christians, which was a Prejudice to Religion. Lastly, They multiplied their Synagogues, making them larger, higher, and more sumptuous. The Council restrain'd these Abuses by new Decrees, and at the same time, that it allow'd the ancient Synagogues, it order'd the new ones to be pull'd down.

But these Decrees were insignificant, whilst Christian Lords and Princes protected those that refus'd to obey them. The Princes not only did it, but order'd their Bailiffs to defend those who implor'd their Succors. The Disorder was great, since they proceeded to the last Extremity, for it was declar'd to the Sovereigns, and their Officers, That they were excommunicated and banish'd the Church, if they continued to protect the Jews, and refused to execute what the Ecclesiasticks had determined against them.

XIV. * They were oblig'd to make a new Regulation at Ausburgh, about Oaths which were violated with Impunity upon two Accounts. 1. As the World was very Superstitious at that time, and the Virgin and the Saints were † more frequently invoked than God, the Jews were made to swear by the Name of the Saints, by the Blessed Mary, or even by the Son of God. They made no Scruple to take these Oaths, and to break them, as not thinking themselves oblig'd to keep them. When this sort of Infidelity was observ'd, they were oblig'd to swear still by the Name of God, and by the Law of Moses, by laying their Hand upon the Pentateuch. The Heathens had been oblig'd to do the same thing long before; for the Jews deceiv'd them in Swearing either by the Princes they liv'd under, or by Jupiter the Thunderer.

† An. 1242. Or Narva. Lux Sata. This is the Title of one of his Books taken from the 97th Psalm, Light is sown for the Righteous. ‖ Bartolocci Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. p. 25. * Meir Cohen. † In the Year 1299. ‖ An. 1242. * An. 1624. † An. 1267. ‖ Concil. Vienn. apud Canis. Lect. Ant. t. 1. p. 621. * An. 1285. † Crusius Ann. Suev. p. 3. 4. 3. c. 8.

Per

Per Templa Tonantis.

Basil the younger, or the Conqueror of the Bulgarians, had also indeavour'd to remedy the false Oaths which the Jews of his Empire took in the Eleventh Century. A Jew discover'd the manner that ought to be used to render their Oaths Sacred and Inviolable. They must, said he, spit three times to renounce their Circumcision; they must sit upon a Bag of Leather tied to their Girdle; they must Swear by the Law of God, and by the Spittle and the Bag. But these Ceremonies are so odd, and so unknown, that we can hardly believe the Relator. We only find, that false Oaths were long complain'd of; and the Germans oblig'd the Jews to Swear by the Name of God, rather than by that of Saints.

There was another Defect in the Jews Oaths; for they believ'd that God abolish'd them on the Day of Expiations; they could therefore hold good but for a Year; which Disorder could not be remedied, but by limiting the Promises to a little space of time, since God could not be hindred from dispencing with their Observation of an Oath, or at least, they could not be hinder'd from believing themselves dispenced with them. They have also their Casuists, who approve of Equivocations, and officious Lies; which Subtleties of the Doctors are of ancient standing; for the Talmud says, that it is ‖ lawful to vary for Peace. It was no wonder that the Christians of Ausburgh indeavour'd to stop this Disorder.

XV. Their Disputes with the Caraites were then very hot; The latter were headed by a learned Man, who not content to expose the Extravagancies of the Talmud, and to compose a Treatise * of them under the Title of Doctor Aharon †; explain'd all the Articles of Faith, and call'd his Book The Tree of Life, because he did not believe Life was to be had without believing these Articles. Bartolocci says ‖, he rejected all the Sacred Books, except those of Moses; And therefore, says he, we find no Commentary of the Caraites upon the Prophetick Writings. But he was evidently mistaken, since Aharon commented David's Psalms, Isaiah, and Jeremiah's Prophecies, and * these Works are in Manuscript in the Leiden Library. This Doctor maintain'd, that God spoke the Elements, when he said, Let us make Man. In effect he gave Man a Body composed of Elements. He believ'd the Resurrection of the Dead, but confined it only to the House of Israel. As zealous as he was for his Sect, it began then to degenerate from its first Severity; for it began to be so fond of Traditions, that Nissi the Son of Noah, who lived at that time, was oblig'd to explain the Misnah, because it was earnestly desir'd of him. Aharon was also forced to have some Complaisance for his Disciples; and, that he might not disgust them, he gave an Allegorical Explication of several Scripture Passages. The Rabbinists were glad to see their Enemies make an advance towards them; but they were not reconcil'd, for their Controversie continued as hot as ever.

XVI. They fell under a greater Misfortune than that of Disputes and Division. A Peasant, named Raind Flaisch, rose up † during the Wars that disturb'd Germany, by the Competition of Adolphus of Nassau, and of Albertus and Austria, who were elected Emperors, and taking advantage of this Circumstance of Confusion and Troubles, went a Preaching in the Upper Palatinate, that God had sent him to destroy the Jews. He run over Franconia and the neighbouring Provinces, proclaiming every where the same thing. To give it the more weight, he publish'd, That they had stole a Host. The People rose upon this Accusation without examining it. The Inhabitants of Nuremberg, Nieumark, Rottembourg, Amberg, and other Cities of Bavaria and Franconia, excited by Raind Flaisch, seiz'd all the Jews in that Country and burnt them. Some chose rather to burn themselves, with their Furniture, Wives and Children, than to be thrown into the Fire by the Christians. Ratisbonne more humanly saved its Citizens. Albertus of Austria was willing to restrain this Violence, but he durst not make a bold Experiment at a time that his Power totter'd, and the least Discontent of the People, who look'd upon Raind Flaisch as a Messenger of God, would have made them declare for the Count de Nassau. He was forced therefore to wait for a more favourable Opportunity, which at last occurr'd. In which the Jews were restored to their Privileges, and Nuremberg amerc'd a great Fine, which was so much the more uneasie to them, because part of the City had been reduced to Ashes by the Fire the Oppressed had put to their Houses. Some retard this Event ‖ till after Adolphus's death, and add two Circumstances; one, that what provok'd the People, was the Miracle of the Host, which cast out Blood when the Jews beat it in a Mortar; the other, That a great many Christians joyn'd with the Oppressed, and defended them so vigorously, that the mutinous People was forced to besiege them, and force them in their retreat. One of these Circumstances destroys the other, it not being probable that so great a number of Christians would have joyn'd with the Jews, and that the Archduke would have headed them, if they had been convinced they had pounded an Host, and Blood had issued from it. It was nothing therefore but a popular Tumult, which the better sort of People condemn'd; and indeed no body was put to death upon this Accusation, because the Magistrates resolv'd to hear the Trial according to the ordinary Forms of Justice.

XVII. I don't know whether this Commotion was quieted at Nuremberg by order of the Emperor Albertus; but at least the Hatred of its Inhabitants was not extinguish'd, for it burst out again ten or twelve Years after, and the famous Mordecai of Austria lost his Life by it. He had compos'd a Commentary upon some Books of the Talmud, and some Works of Isaac Alphez, which are in great Esteem. He collected all that he thought good from the Books of ten Rabbins, to which he added his own Observations *. He ought, I think, to be confounded with another Mordecai the Son of Halay, another Commentator of Alphez, and who must have lived at the same time with him. He left Austria to come and teach at Triers, where Isaac, whose Family came from Dijon, was his Collegue. But returning to Nuremberg, he was condemn'd to be hang'd there †. The Jewish Historians make a Martyr of him, for they say he died for the Sanctification of the Name of God ‖.

XVIII. The Confusions increas'd instead of lessening *; One Armleder in the Neighbourhood of Nassau, heading some Peasants, and incouraging them with the hopes of Plunder, caused them to take up Arms against the Jews. They run over several places, unmercifully killing all they met with, to inrich themselves with the Spoils. The Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, foreseeing the Consequences of this ‖ Menass. Concil. Genes. Q. 37. p. 48, 49. * See our Book t. 2. c. 9. §17. t. 1. p. 474. † More Aharon. ‖ Bartol. Bibl. R. t. 1. p. 29. * Freii Excerpta Aharonis explanat. in Pentateuchum. † An. 1294. ‖ An. 1292. Steronis Annal. Hist. Germ. t. 5. p. 402. Histor. Australis apud Reuber. Hist. German. t. 5. p. 341. * V Bartol. B. R. t. 4. p. 47. † An. 1310. ‖ Ganz. p. 147. * Spond. An. 1338. p. 433.

Commotion,

Commotion, put a ſtop to it, by taking off Armleder's Head, who had occaſion'd ſo terrible a Sedition. Bzovius adds, † that the Jews were moreover accus'd of having taken an Hoſt and wounding it; and that they were ſo frighted at ſeeing the Blood ſpout out, that they ran from the Houſe where they committed this Sacrilege. Which being diſcover'd, they were impeach'd to the Duke of Auſtria, who would do nothing without conſulting Benedict XII. which Pope anſwer'd, That the Hoſt ought to be reverenc'd, and thoſe who had ſtabb'd it puniſh'd. There was another Hoſt at Gaſtrow in the Dutchy of Meklebourg, which ſent out Groans and Sighs, when the Jews had inhumanly ſtabb'd it.

XIX. Pope Clement V. having || call'd an Oecumenical Council at Vienna againſt the Templers, made a Decree againſt Uſury and thoſe that exacted it. He alſo * condemn'd the Approvers of it for Hereticks. This Decree being publiſh'd, The Jews were expos'd to many Oppreſſions, which their exorbitant Uſuries upon the Chriſtians drew upon them. They were brought before the Tribunals and diſputed their Principal, for having violated the Law of the Chriſtians. They eſpecially felt the Effects of this Law in Germany; but Menicho, Biſhop of Spires, took upon him † their Defence; he argued that the Law did not reſpect them, becauſe the Church does not Judge thoſe that are without. He was perſwaded, that it was lawful for them to demand Uſury, ſince they had been dealt with without any deſign of Fraud. And therefore he ſeverely prohibited their being diſturb'd about Uſuries for the future.

XX. The Devotion of the Flagellants || was a freſh Source of their Calamities. This Sect, which had been almoſt extinct, reſum'd Vigour in the Year 1349, and caus'd new Maſſacres. A Company of People muſter'd under certain Leaders aſſembled twice a day, and ſtripping themſelves ſtark naked before the People, whipp'd themſelves with Cords loaden with Nails and Spurs. They utter'd ſome Prayers with a doleful Accent, and read aloud a Letter that was brought to them from Heaven by an Angel; wherein God, who writ it, commanded them to ſuffer theſe Macerations, to relieve the Souls that groan'd in Purgatory, and to ſtop the courſe of the Miſeries and Sins that ruin'd Germany. They drew into this Fraternity the People of Spires, Strasbourg, and ſome other places *. Theſe People, exaſperated by the Flagellants againſt the Jews, ſeiz'd them, and burnt them in great Numbers at Turingia; but their greateſt Calamity happen'd at Frankfort, where the Flagellants, having committed ſome Diſorders, had conſented to an Accommodation, when a Jew, named Cicogne, whoſe Family was numerous in the place, deſiring to avenge his Brethren, threw a Squib into the Town-houſe. The Fire took, and the Archives were conſumed. The Flame reach'd the Church, which was preſently reduced to Aſhes; it flew as far as Saxenhauſe. Such a Crime as this could not be ſuffer'd to go unpuniſh'd; not only the Guilty periſh'd, but all the Jews in the City, except a few that eſcap'd into Bohemia.

XXI. They were accus'd the ſame Year of poiſoning the Wells, Fountains and Rivers. The Plague at the ſame time made a great havock in Europe, I don't know whether the Jews died in leſs numbers than the reſt, and whether they were envied this Bleſſing of Heaven. But they were thought guilty, becauſe God exempted them from a Mortality that was almoſt univerſal. A Suſpicion was ſufficient to condemn them; and People, inſtead of thinking to make a good end, employ'd all the remains of Strength and Life they had to murther their Enemies. They burnt the Jews in ſome places, and knock'd them o'th' Head in others. Thoſe of Ments defended themſelves, and ſurprizing two hundred diſarmed Chriſtians, were cruel in their turn, and took an unmerciful Revenge of them. The People, provok'd by this Defence, run to Arms, and fell upon their Enemies with ſuch Fury and Severity, that twelve thouſand of them periſh'd in that only Execution. † "They ſet Fire to their "Houſes, and the Flame ſpread to that degree, "as to melt down the great Bell and Glaſs of the "Church of St. Quentin. This Torrent over-run "all Germany; The Imperial Cities pull'd down "their Houſes, and made uſe of the Materials to "build Caſtles and Towers. They were the more "violently bent upon the Ruin of the Houſes of "the Jews, becauſe they found great Riches in the "Rubbiſh. Robert Count Palatine, indeavour'd to "oppoſe this Violence, and give a Sanctuary to the "Perſecuted, whoſe Innocence was confeſs'd by "honeſt Men; but the People and part of the "Nobility oppos'd this Act of Charity. They ac-"cus'd them of being brib'd to countenance the "Enemies of the Son of God. All the Inhabitants of Ulm were burnt, || with their Families and Effects. The Princes durſt not engage in ſo nice an Affair, and the Jews found no where any place of retreat. There was no place but Lithuania, where they enjoy'd more quiet, becauſe Caſimer the Great, who was in love with a handſom Jeweſs, named Eſther, like the old Deliverer of God's People, had granted them great Privileges.

XXII. Thoſe that fled to Bohemia, could not find any long quiet there. The People of Prague, with Indignation to ſee them celebrate the Feaſt of the Paſſover, choſe that day, above all others, to burn * their Synagogue, and thoſe that perform'd their Devotions in it. The Project was eaſily executed, no body made Oppoſition, or eſcap'd the Death that was prepar'd for them. This was ſo doleful and afflictive an Event, that the Synagogue of Prague preſerves the Memory of it in a Prayer it made ſome time after, to deplore its Calamity.

XXIII. Two Years after, † Wenceſlaus King of Bohemia and Emperor, with deſign to pleaſe his Subjects, to whom his Effeminacy and Drunkenneſs had render'd him extreamly Odious, diſcharg'd the Nobility and Cities from all their Debts to the Jews. This Decree made People believe they might attempt any thing againſt a Nation, which the Emperor refus'd to protect. The Maſſacre began at Gotha by the People, but it grew more terrible when the Peaſants joyn'd them. Thoſe of Spires put all to the Sword, without regard to Age or Sex, except ſome Children that they carried to the Church to be baptiz'd. However as ſuch ſort of Executions are odious, and unpeople Countries, a ſtop was put to them by puniſhing ſome of the Mutineers; and Hiſtorians endeavour to juſtifie this Violence, by accuſing the Jews of having inſulted a Prieſt who was carrying the Holy Viaticum to a ſick Perſon.

XXIV. The Jews were once more accus'd || of poiſoning the Wells; and this Accuſation, which drew Death after it, and the moſt cruel Tortures, ſpread it ſelf into Germany, Italy and Provence; at † Bzov. An. 1338. n. 20. p. 814. || An. 1310. * Clement. l. 5. p. 310. † An. 1339. Nauclerus, Chronogr. p. 1003. || An. 1349. * Hiſtor. Landgr. Thur. c. 105. p. 941. † Nauclerus Chronogr. Gener. 45. p. 1009. || Cruſius An. Suevor. l. 5. p. 253. * An. 1391. Cruſius An. Suev. l. 6. c. 3. † Hiſt. Landgr. Thur. c. 132. p. 948. Hiſt. Germ. Piſtor. t. 1. Æneæ Sylvii Hiſt. Boh. c. 34. || An. 1400.

leaſt

leaſt the Jewiſh Hiſtorians * give us this account; but at the ſame time they add, that the Emperor own'd their Innocence, and repreſented to his Council, that it was impoſſible to poiſon a running Fountain that conſtantly ſupplies freſh Waters. But the People maintaining, that they had ſeen the Jews throw Poiſon into them, pronouncing ſome words in a low Voice at the ſame time, the Emperor, upon their Importunities, reſolved to baniſh them. The notice of this cauſed great Rejoycings among the Seditious, as if there was no Puniſhment too cruel for thoſe that had been the death of ſo many Chriſtians. And ſo the Emperor was oblig'd to order them to fly, or to change their Religion.

But the Jewiſh Hiſtorians affirm, That notwithſtanding the Miſery was ſo great, that the like was never ſeen ſince the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, no body forſook his Religion; Tho' the Germans roſe on all ſides againſt the Sanctification of God, yet Iſrael deſerted not his Glory. The Example of ſo general a Conſtancy is rare, and we muſt believe it upon the Sincerity of their Hiſtorians.

* Salomon Ben Virgæ An. 160. p. 151. Et Ganz An. 160. p. 146.

CHAP. XXI.

The Hiſtory of the Jews in Spain during the Fifteenth Century, and their Expulſion out of that Kingdom in the Year 1492, and of Portugal in the Year 1496.

I. The Deſign of this Chapter. II. The Conference of the Jews before Benedict XIII. III. Reflections upon the Titles of Domnus and Dom. IV. The Method of the Jews in the Conference. V. Jerom de Sancta Fide's Anſwer. VI. Their Perplexity about the Manifeſtation of the Meſſiah. VII. The Jews Account of the Conference. VIII. The Faults they have committed. IX. The Relation of the Chriſtians. X. Benedict's Conſtitution againſt the Talmud. XI. The different Notions of the Jews and Chriſtians about Vincent Ferrier. XII. An equivocal Letter of a Rabbin againſt him. XIII. The Falſhood of the Converſions he made. XIV. An Edict of Toledo againſt the Jews. XV. A Conference of Alphonſo and Thomas the Philoſopher: The time when it happen'd. XVI. The Subjects that were treated in it. XVII. Another Conference with Alphonſo of Portugal upon the two and twentieth Pſalm. XVIII. Learned Rabbins. XIX. Joel the Preacher. XX. The Edict of Ferdinand and Iſabella. XXI. Illuſtrious Refugees. XXII. The Miſery of the Fugitives. XXIII. Ferdinand's Politicks cenſur'd. XXIV. Their retreat to Portugal. XXV. A Maſſacre at Lisbon. XXVI. The Diſſimulation of thoſe that remain'd. XXVII. Proofs of this Diſſimulation. XXVIII. The Proceedings of the Inquiſition againſt them. XXIX. The Miracles God wrought for them. XXX. A Catalogue of their Martyrs.

I. THE Jews had liv'd for a long time, and multiply'd, in Spain, where they had their Synagogues, famous Doctors, and conſiderable Settlements, when Ferdinand, pretending a Zeal for Religion, reſolv'd to baniſh them. The Synagogues were pull'd down, the People exil'd, and the Families, who were terrify'd with this Baniſhment, reduced to diſſemble from one Generation to another. This is the fatal Event that ſhall make the Subject of this Chapter. But as this Revolution did not happen till the end of the Fifteenth Century, and was preceded with many conſiderable Events, we ſhall give an account of them, before we deſcribe their general Baniſhment and miſerable Flight.

The Anti-Pope Benedict XIII. was in Arragon *, the only Place he had remaining, and which was his whole Juriſdiction. He was minded to ſignalize his Zeal by attacking the Jews: He began with Conferences; Jerome † de Sancta Fide, who had deſerted the Synagogue, and was his Phyſician, put him upon this Deſign, by aſſuring him, that he could convince all his Adverſaries from Paſſages out of the Talmud, that Jeſus Chriſt was the Meſſiah. The Principal Rabbins of the Kingdom were ſummoned. Dom Vidal was choſen for the Defendant in this Diſpute. We muſt not miſtake him for Dom Vidal of Toloſe; whether he was born in this City, or that his Parents came from it, for this latter liv'd in Catalonia forty Years before the Conference. The Jews at that time began to take the Faſtuous Title of Dom, which the Spaniards took from the Latin's Dominus, with whom this Title ſignified Lord, and was particularly given to the Deity.

The Chriſtians imagin'd, that the Popes out of Humility and Modeſty, would not be call'd Lords, becauſe this Word ought to be reſerv'd for God; but by retrenching a Letter they were call'd Domnus The one, ſays a Writer ‖, is the Name of Terror, and the other of Majeſty, which impreſſes Veneration and Reſpect, and therefore this latter became peculiar to the Popes. Even the Greeks, ſay they, acknowledg'd it, ſince the Emperor Conſtantine gave this Title to Agathon, in the Letter that this Prince wrote to him *, upon occaſion of the ſixth Council: But afterwards the Abbots took this Name; it was given to the Monks, and laſtly the Jews, who ſaw it was a Character of Diſtinction for the great Lords of Spain took it alſo. It ſignifies little to examine the uſe of a Word, which has ſo often chang'd, and whoſe Signification may vary without a Crime; and we have already † ſpoken of it before. However, we can't forbear obſerving, that they ſubtilize too much, and that the different variations that have been made by taking ſometimes the Title of Dominus, ſometimes that of Domnus, and laſtly Dom, only proceeded from the deſign of contracting the firſt word, and rendering the Pronunciation more ſhort and eaſie, ſo that theſe imagin'd Diſtinctions are falſe.

III. 'Tis true, the Chriſtians have believ'd, that the Title of Lord ought to be appropriated to God, and to him that has a Sovereign and Eternal Power over Life and Death. The French have for a long time preſerv'd a remainder of that Notion, ſince they ſwore by Dame Dieu, that is, the Lord God. We read in Bertrand du Gueſclin's Chronicle, who liv'd in the fourteenth Century, that he ſwore by Dame

* An. 1412 or 1413. † He was before called Jehoſchuah Halloſki. ‖ Onuphr. Officia, ſive Magiſtr. p. 60. * Sacra An. 680 Conc. t. 6. p. 593. † T. 2. p. 1090.

Dieu

Dieu qui maint en Firmanent; at which time Men had only the Title of Dan or Dant. However, this Distinction has not been so exactly observed, but that the dead Saints have been styl'd Monseigneur St. George, and Monseigneur St. Lewis; and living Men, Kings and Emperors, have been distinguish'd by this Title. It would be useless to produce Examples, since they are but too notorious. But where have they learnt, that the cutting off an i in the Title of Dominus, takes away Terror and introduces Respect and Majesty? And how will they prove this Custom, making Domnus signifie a subordinate Lord? The Humility of the Popes deserves not to be taken notice of, if they have only placed themselves a little below God, and leaving Terror to him, have reserv'd Respect and Veneration for themselves. I question whether the Subscription of Constantine's Letter ought not to be suspected, because 'tis the only one of the Sixth Council where this Title appears. We there find other Letters of the Council and the Emperor, address'd to Leo II. and of Justinian II. to Pope John, where it is never repeated; At least it was not more peculiar to the Pope at that time; for the Rule of St. Bennit *, who had already appear'd at the end of the Seventh Century, imports, That the Abbot, as the Vicar of Jesus Christ, ought to be called Domnus. Lastly, We can't justifie either the Abbots or the Monks, who have appropriated this Dom, since it must have proceeded from a Spirit of Ambition, which they have carried into their Cloisters. We find it by the words before quoted, for the Abbot is only call'd Domnus, because he looks upon himself as God's Vicar in his Retirement. Is there no Pride in assuming these Airs of Grandeur, as Sacred as it is? The Cistercian Monks will be call'd Dom, to be distinguish'd from the Mendicants, whom they place much below 'em. None but Monks of quality and consequence appropriate this Name. There is a sort of Nobility in the Orders, as among private Persons, which is honour'd with this Title, that a poor Capuchin or Recollect dares not pretend to. 'Tis not from Jesus Christ, but from the Lords of the Earth, and worldly Authority, that they have borrow'd this Name, introducing it into Religion to procure greater Respect, and to equal, as much as possible, the Sovereigns that wore it. Pride would be more pardonable in the Jews, and yet they have not ventur'd upon it before the end of the Fourteenth Century. Their Writers often give it to more ancient Rabbins. And Gedalia calls one of his Grandfathers Dom Jachia, whom he places in the Tenth Century; but these Doctors only did it, to give greater Reputation to their Masters or Ancestors; but it was not really given to the Doctors till the time we speak of. Let us return to the Conference.

IV. The Head of the Captivity, or Super-Intendant of the Synagogues of Arragon was present at it, follow'd by many famous Doctors. As the Pope civilly entertain'd 'em, and bore their Charges, they resolv'd to discourse with Moderation; and they had even the sordid Flattery for this Anti-Pope, as to apply to him the Words of David's Petition to God, † Shew us thy mercy, O Lord, and grant us thy Salvation. However they handled‖ Jerome de Sancta Fide roughly, calling him Epicurus, whom they infinitely hated, not only because he had forsook 'em, but because he had drawn them into an Affair which they apprehended the issue of.

This Man had rashly form'd a design of convincing the Jews from their own Writings, that Jesus Christ had perfectly answer'd the twenty four Characters he gave to the Messiah: For besides that it is unlikely that so many clear and evident Expressions should escape the Talmudists, to prove Truth, which they don't believe, the Rabbins generally give an Allegorical meaning to the offensive Passages of the Doctors, and seek Mysteries * in their Words; and it is impossible to stop People who have such a Loop-hole to escape thro', since there is no end of Allegorical Significations.

V. Jerome de Sancta Fide † went to prove, That the Messiah was come, because Elias said, there should be two thousand years under Nature, which he calls the Void, two thousand years under the Law, and two thousand under the Messiah. He found himself defective in his first Proof, because the four thousand Years were not accomplish'd at the Birth of Christ; which oblig'd him to say, That God did not always reckon justly, and that the Children of Israel did not live two hundred Years in Egypt, though God had foretold they should live above four hundred. But this false Chronologer reckon'd the Years from Joseph's Death, whereas he should have ascended up to the Promise made to Abraham. The Rabbins answer'd farther, That Elias, who made this Prediction, was no Prophet. He alledges what we read in the Talmud; That as a Peasant was cultivating his Field, an Arabian, who heard his Ox low, cry'd to him, Loose the Ox, for the Temple is destroy'd; and upon the second lowing, the Arabian cry'd, Put thy Oxen to the Plough, for the Messiah is born. He concluded from hence, and from other such like Stories, That the Birth of the Messiah was fix'd to the time of the Destruction of Jerusalem; and tho' the Temple subsisted sixty Years after the Death of Christ (he was mistaken) for it was above sixty Years from his Birth, and but forty from his Passion, yet this Temple had lost all its Holiness. The Veil was rent, the Miracles were ceas'd, and this first Ruin was more considerable than the fall of the Walls. The Rabbins might easily answer, That the Talmud did not speak of an Allegorical fall, but of the true and real Destruction of the City and Temple, such as befel them under Titus.

He prov'd, That the Messiah was to be born of a Virgin, because there is a M shut ‖ in the Prophecy, that promises the multiplication of his Empire; and this shut M noted the Name of Mary and her Virginity. He produc'd these Words of Ezekiel, who speaks of a Gate of a Temple which shall be shut, and no Man shall enter in by it, because the Lord hath entred in by it. All this is very mystical, and I question whether the Christians themselves can discover Mary's Virginity in it.

VI. The Jews on their part were at a great loss to prove, that the Messiah was not come. They had recourse to vain Cavils and ridiculous Subtilties. Sometimes they confess'd, That he was born at the time that Jerusalem was destroy'd, but that he liv'd at Rome, or some other Place, as Enoch and Elias are said to live in the Terrestrial Paradice. They said, That the two thousand Years noted by Elias were not accomplish'd by reason of Sins, and that this signify'd, that the Messiah might come during that time. They confess'd, there was a necessity of promising the People still a sudden Arrival, lest they should lose their Courage and be stagger'd in their Faith. Lastly, They insolently answer'd, That it was lawful for them to believe and say some Absurdity about the Messiah, since the Christians scruple not the publishing the greatest upon this Article. And he that made this Answer, which

* Bened. Reg. c. 663. t. ix. p. 613. † Ps. 85. 7. ‖ Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 227. & 246. * Ibid. p. 264. † Hieron à sancta fide contra Judæos, l. 1. c. 2. B. P. t. iv. P. 1. p. 750, &c. ‖ Isa. 7. 14. הָעַלְמָה Hagnal-Mah, Virgo.

which highly provok'd Benedict, has not diſſembl'd it in his Narrative, tho' he was cenſur'd for it by his Brethren.

VII. The Succeſs of this Conference is differently related. The Jews own †, that they gave many Biſhops who were preſent, Money to oblige the Pope to put a ſpeedy end to it; but that the Pope remain'd ſteady, and would have Jerome de Sancta Fide ſtand to his Promiſe. They add, That their Doctors came off with Honour; that they were only order'd to reſtore part of the exceſſive Uſuries they had taken from the Chriſtians, but, that upon application to Mark Pope of Florence, they were diſcharg'd, and ſet at entire liberty.

VIII. This Account abounds with a great many Faults; for, 1. We can't perceive how a Man, who was preſent at the Conference, and ſent the Relation of it to the Synagogue of Gironne, could ſay it was held at Rome in the Pope's Palace; ſince it was undoubtedly in the Kingdom of Arragon, and in the Caſtle where Peter de Luna was confin'd; this muſt needs be a Fault of the Copier. 2. The other Hiſtorians ‖ are groſly miſtaken in the time; for they place it in the Year 1353. whereas we are infallibly certain, it was not held till ſixty Years after, in the Pontificate of Benedict XIII. It ſhou'd not therefore be wondred, if we ſometimes depart from ſuch an erroneous Chronology. 3. What is ſaid of a Pope Mark of Florence, is evidently falſe. Theſe two Events are join'd together, which Salomon Ben Virgæ had divided. But ſtill theſe Popes are chimerical, whether they are diſtinguiſhed or confounded; for there never was a Pope call'd Mark the Florentine. Theſe Hiſtorians are out in the Name, or elſe have taken an imaginary Man; for Pope Martin, who was elected after Benedict's Depoſition, and reſided ſome time at Florence. The matter of Fact is thus: Benedict XIII. having publiſhed a Bull againſt the Uſuries of the Jews, they took advantage of his Depoſition, and went to demand the Repeal of Pope Martin of Florence. As the Catalans, who had renounc'd Obedience to Benedict, call'd him Brother Peter, the Jews gave him the ſame Name, and were miſtaken in that of Pope Peter de Luna, or Benedict XIII. who had condemn'd them; whom they turn into a Monk call'd Peter, and make him plead impertinently before Mark or Martin. 4. Laſtly, We ought not to believe 'em, when inſtead of relating the Iſſue of the Conference, they only ſay, They came off with Honour, for it was to their diſadvantage.

IX. For indeed the Chriſtians aſſert, that Jerome de Sancta Fide having preſented a Writing * the ſame Year to the Anti-Pope, containing the dangerous Errors of the Talmud againſt the Law, the Meſſiah, and the Chriſtians: One of the Rabbins preſent gave the Cardinal of St. Angelo a Writing, in which he declar'd †, That the Paſſages drawn from this Book, appear'd to him offenſive and erroneous: That it is true, another Senſe may be given them, but that he did not know it; and therefore he confeſſes, That he does not pretend to defend them, nor juſtifie them, and diſowns all the Anſwers he might have made to elude them. And all the Rabbins preſent, except Joſeph Albo and Ferrer, ſubſcrib'd the ſame Declaration ‖.

Here then you have a Triumph of the Chriſtians, and the Talmud ſolemnly condemn'd by thoſe who ought to be its principal Defenders. The Manuſcript, whence Bartolocci has extracted this matter, is in the Vatican Library. But yet, I confeſs, it ſeems to be ſuſpicious: Firſt, Becauſe Jerome, who publiſh'd ſome time after the Objections he had taken from the Talmud, does not mention this Recantation of his vanquiſh'd Enemies; which yet was an Article he neither ought nor could forget. Beſides, Aſtroch, who ſent the Acts of the Conference to Gironne, and muſt have made this Recantation, does not mention it. On the contrary, this Man, who ſeems the boldeſt and moſt inſolent of all the Diſputants, maintains, That they came off with a great deal of Honour. Since all the Rabbins except two, were of this Opinion, it was not his part to draw up the Declaration, nor preſent it in his Name, but it muſt have been made and ſign'd by Dom Vidael, who was choſen for their Chairman, but who does not appear in it. As ſhort as this Writing is, the Name of one Ferrer, a Rabbin, is inſerted, who was not at the Conference, nor indeed known.

The Chriſtians add, That three or five thouſand Perſons were converted by Jerome's Piece, which has rendred it infinitely valuable; and that Joſeph Albo, who was afraid all the Synagogues would be deſerted, compos'd the Articles of Faith; in which he endeavour'd to re-ſettle the tottering Faith of the People. The Compoſition of this Book is undeniable; but the motive of this Author is a Secret and a Myſtery.

X. What is moſt certain is, that Benedict XIII. the Year following publiſh'd a Conſtitution againſt the Talmud, and the Jewiſh Uſuries *. But as this Anti-Pope was depos'd ſome time after, his Conſtitution was conceal'd with his other Ordinances, and ſo the Jews felt not the effect of it. We know too, that Joſeph Albo endeavour'd to confirm the Faith of the Jews, that was diſſettled by this Conference. He publiſh'd his Articles of Faith, which he reduc'd to the Exiſtence of God, the Law of Moſes, and Puniſhments and Rewards. He had an Intereſt to reduce 'em to theſe Heads. I don't know whether he found his Brethren too much ſtraitned upon the Article of the time of the Meſſiah; but he ſtruck it out of his Confeſſion. He maintains, That a Jew was oblig'd to believe that he ſhall come, as God is believ'd to have wrought Miracles, or that he will work them in the behalf of this People, but that this Belief is not neceſſary to Salvation. He cenſures Maimonides without naming him, for numbring this Doctrine with the eſſential Articles. His Work is in ſuch eſteem, that Gedalia, a Polander, has commented it under the Title of the Planted Tree: His Notes are the Roots of the Tree, the References to Scripture Paſſages are the Branches, and the Allegorical Explications are the Leaves. Thus this Commentary is a perfect or planted Tree.

XI. Vincent Ferrier, another famous Converter, appear'd then upon the Stage. They † call him the Splendor of Spain, the Light of Valencia, the Prodigy of the Univerſe, the Model of the Dominicans, and the Glory of glorify'd Saints. What could they ſay more? He bark'd in his Mother's Belly like a Dog, which was a Preſage he would be a great Preacher: He ſpoke only his Mother-Tongue, but by a more incomprehenſible Miracle than that of the Apoſtles, all Nations underſtood him. When he was ſick, Jeſus Chriſt came to careſs him, familiarly taking him by the Cheek and Hand, and commanded him to go and Preach a Lye, which was, that the day of Judgment was at hand. He took so much pleasure and satisfaction in weeping before the Communion, that it was a matter of discontent to stop the flow of his Tears. The Jews do him greater Honour than the Christians; for whereas the latter reckon for his Converts but eight thousand Moors, thirty or thirty five thousand Jews, and a hundred thousand bad Christians; they make those of their Nation amount to two hundred thousand. He was moreover a very intriguing Man. He was chosen to maintain to the People the Validity of Ferdinand's Election; who by that means became King ‖ of Spain, and who afterwards made him a noble Recompence: He was Steward of the Palace and Confessor to the Anti-Pope Benedict XIII. Thus he was in the Schism, even when he work'd so great Miracles. They have not fail'd to Canonize him, and there is hardly a Church in Spain but receives his Office.

† Schialſchelet Hakkabala p. 113. ‖ Ganz Chron. p. 144. An. 1412, or 1413. * The Conference began February 7. 1413. and ended May 10. 1414. and on November 10. Jerome preſented his Writing, which was approv'd December 12. † R. Aſmurh. ‖ Bartolocci Bibl. Rab. t. iii. p. 177. * An. 1415. See his Bull in Bartolocci B. R. t. iii. p. 731, 797. † Tamaio Salazar, Martyrol. Hiſp. t. ii. p. 509. Sauſſagus Martyrol. Gall. t. i. fol. 190. Legenda M. S. Lect. l. iv. apud Tamaium p. 510.

The Jews * call him Mummar, that is, Apostate, as if he had deserted the Synagogue to embrace Christianity. But yet it is said, that he was born a Christian of an Illustrious Family, and known at Valencia, which for a long time had gone by the Name of Ferrier. He employ'd King Ferdinand's Authority, to make the Conversions more pompous and easie. But it is said also, that he introduced the Power of God, and that one day entering unexpectedly into a Synagogue with a Cross in his Hand, it was perceiv'd †, as he was preaching, that the Cloaths of the Men and Linen of the Women were cover'd with Crosses; which oblig'd all the Synagogue to own the Crucify'd, and to change it into a Church, which goes by the Name of St. Cross.

Judæo expulso primus Vincentius, illam
Lustravit pura Religione Domum.
Fulgens namq; jubar subito descendit Olympo,
Cunctisq; impressit pectore signa crucis:
Inde trahunt cives Vincentii nomina multi,
Et Templum hoc veræ dicitur inde Crucis.

The Giant St. Christopher descended from Heaven to assist him, and appear'd often to the Jews to oblige them to change their Religion; and by way of Gratitude, they dedicated to him a Synagogue of converted Jews, and kept his Feast at Valencia the Tenth of July, because on that day the Church was dedicated. How shall we believe these Apparitions, if St. Christopher be as imaginary a Giant as is the Emperor Dagnus, under whom he must have suffer'd, according to the Acts of his Martyrdom?

XII. Notwithstanding all these Miracles, the Conversions he made must be still much suspected, because they were but of a short duration. There is a Writing preserv'd in the Vatican Library ‖ of one Duran, a Rabbin, who after he had embrac'd Christianity, wrote artfully to his Son, that he should not imitate his Fathers. The whole Letter was equivocal. It was believ'd at first reading, that it was an Exhortation to stand fast in the Religion he had embrac'd; but the Mystery was easily discovered, and it appear'd, by an attentive Consideration, that this Father meant to oblige his Son to return to Judaism, which he had left at Vincent Ferrier's instigation, and embrac'd again four Years after. He was not the only Person. Most of the new Converts, having dissembled for some time, took off the Disguise, and made it known, that they had only yielded to Force and Necessity, which St. Ferrier had render'd insupportable.

XIII. People * seldom fall back from a voluntary Conversion. Notwithstanding the Fickleness of a Human Mind, it does not change when it has been truly convinc'd. 'Tis natural to love Truth, when it is known, and a Man will not give it up when he thinks he possesses it. The Mind may be dazzled by false Reasonings, but these Dazzlings seldom happen. 'Tis difficult for a great many Persons to suffer themselves to be deceiv'd at the same time by the same Prejudice. When therefore we see a Multitude abandoning their Religion to take another, and a Moment after, or in the Secresy of Retirement, and their Family practising their old Religion before the new, we must conclude, they were constrain'd to it. We must not exclaim against the Treachery or Inconstancy of the Heart of Man, but against the Violence of the Converters, who leave not the liberty necessary to make a true Conversion. The Mind of a dissembling Jew is but too constant; he bestows external Appearances upon Error, whether he will or no, but retains his ancient Doctrine; why then must he be charg'd with an Inconstancy which he is not conscious of? Such were the Conversions of Vincent Ferrier in Spain. The Jews, whom he had drawn by multitudes into the Church, were no sooner at home, but they resum'd the Practice of their ancient Ceremonies. They Circumcis'd their Children in secret, and observed the Feast of the Passover. Bzovius, who has also made 'em offer Sacrifices, has forgot himself. In fine, they complain, that Vincent Ferrier was their great Persecutor, and that with a Cross in his Hand he forc'd fifteen thousand Jews to dissemble. With all his Holiness, he grosly slander'd 'em in his Sermons. In effect, we know not whether we ought more to admire the Blindness of this pretended Saint, who tax'd them with losing a great quantity of Blood monthly in Punishment of their Sins; or the Pains an Author of this Nation takes to confute this Calumny with an Air of Seriousness that provokes ones Laughter †. The Clergy remain'd not long without perceiving the Actions of these new Converts. The Prince was inform'd of 'em, and a Deputation sent to Pope Sixtus IV. who in Indignation to the Affront offer'd the Christian Religion by so speedy a return to Judaism, order'd the Inquisition to be watchful, and to punish severely such as fail'd in their Duty, exhorting all Christian Princes to lend a strong Hand to the Executors. The Decree was fix'd up in all the Cities of Spain. Seventeen thousand Jews, astonish'd at the Rigor of the Edicts, turn'd Roman Catholicks, and submitted to the Penance impos'd by the Church. Two thousand were burnt, tho' some of 'em acknowledged Jesus Christ to be the Messiah. Others were shut up in Dungeons, where they suffer'd a long time. Those that were taken out, were declar'd infamous, and oblig'd to wear two red Crosses upon their Cloaths, to shew that they had deserv'd the Fire. Even the Dead did not escape, but their Bones were dug up and burnt; they confiscated their Estates, and depriv'd their Family of all the Rights they had to their Fathers Inheritance. I don't wonder such Cruelties were acted. The Inquisition has cur'd our Surprise, by a long course of these Violences; but, I confess, it raises my Indignation, to see Historians ‖ boast of the Indulgence and Charity of their Church, at the time that they load their Annals with such flagrant Facts; and it was believ'd to be the best destiny of Spain, and particularly of Castile, to have receiv'd so bloody and barbarous an Inquisition upon that occasion: happy were the Jews who had the wit to fly so inhumane a Tribunal! However, there were some sincere Conversions; for Salomon de Levi, upon reading Thomas Aquinas's Sums, was convinc'd of the Truth of the Christian Religion, was baptiz'd, and took the Name of Paul of Burgos. He * was well rewarded for changing his Religion; being made Bishop of this his Native City, and afterward Patriarch of Aquileia. He left his Additions to Nicholas de Lyra, another sincere Proselyte. He almost continually criticises and corrects him; but 'tis presum'd, that the Corrector ought to be corrected, and that he ought not always to be believ'd, when he quotes the Rabbins he should have read; for he has confounded the Paraphrase of the Pentateuch, attributed to Jonathan, with that of another Jonathan made upon the Prophetick Writings; and he absurdly adds, That this last Paraphrase is equally esteem'd in the Synagogues with the Text of Moses. Simon of † Gironne writ against him, but without Success, since he was oblig'd to quit his hold, and sometimes give up the Talmud, whose Authority was so great in his Party. Paul de Burgos left one Son, who succeeded him in the Bishoprick, and made himself known by a Work upon the History of Spain. He had a second, who was Bishop of Placenza, and a third, ‖ marry'd into an Illustrious House. Lastly, He was made Preceptor to the King of Castile; but in the midst of his Dignities he confess'd, That the Preferments of Church and State ought never to be intrusted to those of his Nation, because they were accustom'd to dissemble. Was he himself of this Character?

‖ An. 1412. * Legenda MS. Lectio 1. † Bzovius An. 1412. n. ii. p. 343. Ægidius Gonzales Abulensis Historiogr. Philippi III. l. 3. c. 15. ‖ Bartolocci B. R. t. i. p. 404. * An. 152. † Cardoso Excellencias, &c. tercera Calunia de los Hebreos Cola y sangre, p. 345. Besides V. Ferrier's Sermon, he cites Lorin, Salmeron; the Fortalitium Fidei; Dom Juan de Quinones, Author of divers curious Treatises. ‖ Mariana de Reb. Hisp. l. xxiv. c. 17. t. 2. p. 394.

that

XIV. As the Jews were brought * in for their share in all the Miseries that befel the Kingdoms where they liv'd, they had a good part in the Insurrection of the City Toledo; which complain'd, that its Privileges had been violated by the Imposition of a Tax, tho' a light one, and necessary to the War. The mutinous People plunder'd the Houses of the richest Citizens, and knock'd on the Head those that resisted. The Jews were not spared, but the Violence was carry'd even to the Posterity of the Converts. And when things were somewhat quieter, Laws were publish'd, excluding all, both Jewish and Heathen new Converts, from all Offices. The Clergy protected them; for the Dean of the Cathedral Church of Toledo, mounting the Pulpit, thunder'd against this Order of the Inhabitants; and he caus'd Publick Theses to be held, in which he oppos'd it. The better to manifest the Consequence and Injustice of it, or rather to engage a greater number of People in his Interests, he mention'd many Illustrious Families by Name, who were ally'd to those of the Converted Jews, and who hereby were depriv'd of Employments. All this signify'd nothing; but Pope Nicholas V. publish'd a thundering Bull against this Decree, Excommunicating all those who offer'd to exclude the Converted Jews and Heathens from Political and Ecclesiastical Offices, from the Priesthood and Government. This Bull met with no good Reception, and the Pope was even forc'd to send out a second to maintain the first; and Mariana is the almost only Spanish Historian that has thought fit to insert it in his History, because it was not to the liking of the rest.

XV. Their Historians † relate a long Conversation between Alphonso the Great, King of Spain, and Thomas the Subtle Philosopher. This Title seems to agree to Thomas Aquinas, who was a great Philosopher, who explain'd Aristotle's Principles, and whose Books have been translated into Hebrew. For Cantes has translated into this Language three Books of his Sums, by the assistance of one Rabbin Jonas, who turn'd Christian. We don't know the Translator of another Book, entitl'd, de Anima. But 'tis most probable he was a Christian, since he not only calls St. Thomas San, like the Hebrew Doctors when they speak of some beatify'd Christian; but the Translator gives him the Title of Saint הקדוש Hakadosch, which a Jew never gives to a Christian. These Hebrew Versions must have given Thomas Aquinas the Reputation of a very Subtle Philosopher. As he liv'd in Alphonso's time, who was a Favourer and Lover of the Circumcis'd, there might be some Grounds to suspect, that the Discourse we are going to relate, was betwixt Alphonso and Thomas Aquinas; but it does not appear that this Doctor went into Spain. Besides, Nicholas de Lyra's Commentaries are there mention'd, who liv'd not till after St. Thomas and Abravanel, who was expell'd Spain in the general Banishment. Either then Salomon Ben Virgæ must have brought Men together, who were not Cotemporaries; or the King of Spain, he speaks of, must be Alphonso V. King of Portugal, who reign'd in the middle of the fifteenth Century.

XVI. Alphonso congratulated himself to see Thomas the Subtle Philosopher arrive in his Kingdom, because an imprudent Bishop had preach'd some days before, That the Jews could not celebrate the Feast of the Passover without the Blood of Christian, which, if it were true, he resolv'd to expel them out of his Dominions. The Prince added, That he was amaz'd at God's severe Treatment of the Jews who worshipp'd him, since the Romans had been Masters of the World, tho' they worshipped false Deities. He also speaks of an Island, which worshipp'd Venus in a very lascivious manner; but this Prince, or the Historian, were not well acquainted with the History of the Romans, or of these Islanders. Lastly, He concluded, That the Jews had all that could render 'em Happy and Potent; they were Wise and Politick, Couragious, Rich and Numerous. Thomas having heard the King speak, made but a scurvy Apology for the Jews; for the Arguments he employ'd to shew they did uot use Humane Blood in their Feasts, were generally childish. He went upon Abravanel's Authority, who maintain'd ‖ from the Testimony of an ancient Doctor, That he who believes one God, the Creation of the World, Hell and Heaven, has the Law. That the Christians worshipping God have the Law, because they destroy not the Unity, by admitting a Trinity of Persons; from whence he concluded, That the Jews don't rank Christians with Idolaters. He accus'd the Christians with envying the Fortune of those, who from being Poor were grown Rich; or dress'd themselves finer than the Rich. He charg'd the Excesses complain'd of upon the Talmudists Account, who ty'd up this People by very severe Laws. Lastly, He advis'd the Prince to make some Laws against Luxury and Usury, which would be very agreeable to the People. The Conference lasted many days; and as Thomas so openly espous'd the Jews, that he would introduce Abravanel as one of the Lineage of David, he procur'd 'em the King's Protection.

XVII. 'Twas moreover in the Presence of Alphonso King of Portugal, that another Conference was held

* An. 1430. Mariana l. 9. p. 189. † Simon's Criticisms of the old and new Testament, l. 3. c. ii. p. 415. ‖ They were call'd Alphonso, Gonsalvo and Alvarez. * Mariana l. xxii. c. 1. An. 1449. † Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 18. ‖ Ibid p. 28 held about Religion. The Christian maintain'd to the Jew, That the 22d Psalm related to the Messiah. The Rabbin told the Story of one of his Doctors *, who having abus'd his Cock for waking him too soon in the Morning, put him into the Pot; but the Cock still crow'd on, and the Doctor imagin'd, that the Prophet Jeremy had foretold this Adventure. The Rabbin very justly ridicul'd the foolish Imagination of the Man; but at the same time maintain'd, That as it was ridiculous, not to observe in Jeremy's Prophecy several things not agreeing to the Cock, the same thing ought to be said of the 22d Psalm, since Jesus Christ, who voluntarily suffer'd Death, could not complain, that God had forsaken him: Nor could he say, Our Fathers have hoped in thee, since he was without Father. Lastly, he said, That these Words, as a Lion my hands, respected the Jews; because, as a Lion makes a Circle round the Forest with his Tail, and hinders the Beasts from going out; so the Nations shut up the Jews, and oblige 'em to submit to their Laws. The King perceiv'd the Falshood of this Answer, grounded upon a thing which the Lion is not guilty of. We can't guess how this Conference ended, since the Manuscript it was taken from was torn.

XVIII. However, the Synagogue was then in possession of great Advantages: For besides the Learned of Arragon before-mention'd, many others appear'd. Chamai was † famous at that time for his Cabalistick Art. He taught the Secret of getting more Boys than Girls, by turning a Man's Bed from North to South. Indeed, 'tis the Principle of the Rabbins, that the Majesty of God resides from East to West; 'tis dishonouring him to set ones Bed that way; but when we set it from North to South, God recompences this Mark of Respect by the Generation of Sons, which are generally preferr'd before Daughters: A very different Reason from that of the ancient Philosophers; who imagin'd, That the North-wind contributed to the begetting of Males.

XIX. Joel, the Son of Sciocu, publish'd ‖ Sermons. This Preacher was prolix and diffus'd, the too common Vice of those who harangue the People; because they have more Complaisance for themselves than their Auditories; but yet he was much esteemed, because he was a Learned Man, and good Judges have thought his Explication of some Chapters of the Pentateuch very solid.

Lastly, The Family * of the Altadeb produced two famous Astronomers, the Uncle and Nephew, who both made Astronomical Tables. But we shall not insist longer upon this Head, because we shall find still many Learned Men included in the Sentence of Condemnation, and involv'd in the last Misery that swallow'd up this Nation, and expell'd it out of Spain.

Abraham Prince of the Nation, and Preceptor to Aben-Ezra, had predicted two hundred Years before, That the same Constellation which had produced Moses, should produce the Messiah. This Constellation was the Conjunction of † Saturn and Jupiter, and was to happen two thousand eight hundred fifty nine Years after Moses, that is, in the Year 1464. of Jesus Christ. And indeed this Conjunction was made twice in the same Century. Jupiter and Saturn met in the Year 1444. in Cancer, and twenty Years after in Pisces. But instead of Miracles, which were to be the Consequences of these Conjunctions, and of the Birth of the expected Messiah, they felt many sad back strokes of Fortune; and at last a general Exile out of Spain was the Destruction of a great part of the Nation.

XX. Ferdinand and Isabella were the Accomplishers of this great Work. After they had put an happy end to the War against the Moors, they thought of nothing more than the ruining the Synagogues, and getting rid of the Jews. Ferdinand the Catholick, in March 1492. issu'd out an Edict, commanding the Nation to depart the Kingdoms of Spain, within the space of four Months, or to embrace Christianity. Turrecremata, who was the very Soul of this Persecution, advis'd the shortning the term, and forbad the supplying 'em with Provisions, under great Penalties, and lending any Assistance to those who should not be gone in April. Some Historians are of Opinion, That the liberty granted them of carrying off their Gold and Jewels was alter'd, and that they were only permitted to change them for Cloth and Wine, and other Merchandises. In the mean time this Prohibition was not rigorously executed, or else the Jews were ingenious, since they carry'd off thirty thousand Millions of Ducats. Such as had the Courage to leave their Country, were oblig'd to pay some Ducats per Head to the King for their Freight; those that would not, or could not go for want of Money, became Slaves, and their Goods were confiscated. This last Clause was so rigorously executed, that two Vessels which were loaden, not being able to sail at the prefix'd time, they unmercifully sold all those that were on Board.

XXI. Mariana affirms, That seventy thousand Families, or eight hundred thousand Persons, left Spain upon the execution of this Edict. The Jews ‖ reckon a hundred and twenty thousand Families, and six hundred thousand Souls. The Favour, Abravanel so long had with the King and Queen, could not preserve him from the same Fate. He was oblig'd to imbark, and depart with the rest for Italy. He must have been accustom'd to Exiles; for however glorious his Life was, he was often oblig'd to fly *. In the Bloom of his Youth he appeared at the Court of Alphonso in Portugal, and had a great share in his Favour; but John II. his Son, having different Notions, Abravanel stole secretly into the Kingdom of Castile. Ferdinand and Isabella, tho' Catholicks, made use of him in their Finances. They say he got great Treasures in a little time, and was expell'd with the rest of his Nation in 1492. He retir'd to Naples, and quickly procur'd the King's Favour, to whom he did great Services; but this Prince being dead †, and Charles VIII. having possess'd himself of the Kingdom of Naples without any Opposition, Abravanel was oblig'd to fly to Sicily, with Alphonso II. who succeeded his Father. He preserv'd his Fidelity to his Prince in the midst of his Distresses, which despoil'd him of his Riches and his Crown. Alphonso dy'd ‖ in Sicily, and Abravanel was oblig'd again to change his Place of Sanctuary. At first he went to Corfu, and from thence farther to Apulia; where, after he had resided some time, he went to lay his Bones * at Venice. His Body still travell'd after his Death. This Man is famous, not only for a long train of Disgraces, but especially for his Works †. He is the most useful of all the Rabbins for the understanding of Scripture. He wrote in a pure and intelligible Style, tho' it be too prolix, and hath more of the Strain of a Rhetorician, than of an Interpreter of the Bible. He explains the literal

* Salomon Ben Virgæ. † An. 1420. Bartol. Bibl. Rab. t. ii. p. 840. ‖ Ibid. t. iii. * R. Isaac Ben Tsadic, R. Isaac Ben Salomeonis, Ben Tsadic. Bartol. Bibl. Rab. t. iii. p. 290, 925. An. 1482. & 1484. † Pic. de la Mirand. in Astrol. l. 5. c. 12. p. 386. ‖ Abravanel, &c. Cardoso las Excellencias. * An. 1481. † An. 1494. ‖ An. 1495. * An. 1508 Æt. 71. † Simon's Criticisms of the old Testament, l. iii. c. 6. p. 380. Bartol. Bibl. Rab. t. iii. p. 876.

literal Senſe of Scripture, and handles the moſt important Queſtions that are found in the Books he has Commented. He was a good-natur'd Man, and liv'd in familiarity with the Chriſtians; but yet it is complain'd of him, That his Works are full of Invectives againſt 'em, particularly againſt the Clergy and the Pope, for which reaſon there are People, who would have the reading of 'em forbidden the Jews.

There was ſeen moreover, amongſt the famous Refugees, Iſaac the Son of Arama, a great Philoſopher, and a greater Cabbaliſt. The Jews wonderfully eſteem his Explication of the Law; but ſome Chriſtian Criticks think *, a Man ought to have a great deal of leiſure to read theſe long Commentaries, fill'd with Allegories, and a perfectly Jewiſh Morality. He brought with him R. Meir, his Son, one of the principal Rabbins of his time; the Author of a Commentary upon Job, which Buxtorf has attributed to his Father. The Divine Cabbaliſt, the Thaumaturgus; So they call Joſeph Gigatella, alſo made Flight his Option, and explain'd in his Exile, The Attributes of God, his Names, the ten Sephiroths; that is to ſay, that part of the Jewiſh Divinity, which is at once the moſt myſterious, and the moſt eſteem'd by the Nation. Iſaac Karo was one of theſe Exiles. He retir'd firſt into Portugal, and went thence to Jeruſalem; but he loſt his Children and Books by the way. He liv'd a very ſolitary Life, and compos'd the Generations, or the Children of Iſaac, to comfort thoſe that had loſt them. There are Doubts upon the Pentateuch, which he has clearly enough reſolv'd. Abraham Zacuth liv'd alſo at that time. Bartolocci † confounds him with Abraham the Jew, who has tranſlated a Treatiſe about the Virtue of Medicines, out of Arabick. Theſe two Authors publiſh'd a perpetual Almanack, and both of 'em were great Studiers of Aſtronomy. The latter was of Salamanca, and taught at Sarragoſſa; but he was oblig'd to quit his Country by Ferdinand's Edict. He retir'd to Portugal, where King Emanuel gave him the Title of his Hiſtoriographer. Here it was he compos'd the Juchaſſin, the famous Book of Generations, from the Creation of the World to the Year 1500. They did not univerſally perſevere. There were abundance of Deſerters that comply'd with the times, and choſe rather to take on an external Mask of Chriſtianity, than expoſe themſelves to the Miſeries that purſu'd abundance of Fugitives.

XXII. The Truth is, their Miſery was extreme. The Fire ſeiz'd ſome Tranſport Veſſels, and conſum'd all the Paſſengers; many were ſhipwreck'd, and periſh'd in the Sea, either through the Fault, or the Deſign of the Pilots. The Peſtilence having infected the reſt, the Pilots ſet 'em on Shore. Part of thoſe that landed being cur'd, dy'd of Hunger. Others arriv'd at Fez, where the Inhabitants frighted at ſuch multitudes of Fugitives, ſhut up the Gates They were forc'd to ſet up Tents in the Field, to live upon ſome Herbs, which the Drought and Barrenneſs render'd very ſcarce. Beſides the Injuries of the Air, they were forc'd to ſubmit to the Inſolence of ſome Inhabitants, who thought all things were permitted 'em againſt the Miſerable. One of 'em took a Maid by force before her Parents Face; and return'd a Moment after to murder her, for fear ſhe had conceiv'd, and would bring forth a Child that was a Jew. A Sailor ſurpriz'd a Company of Children who came to look for Shell-Fiſh and other Fiſh when the Sea retir'd. He made 'em come on board his Bark, where he gave 'em Bread, which attracted a great number of 'em. One day he weigh'd Anchor, and carry'd off all the young Children, which he ſold to ſome great Lords, and made Slaves of the reſt. A Spaniſh Pilot entred upon a Reſolution of murdering all the Paſſengers, to revenge, as he ſaid by their Death the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, which they had ſhed. But he was told, That Chriſt, who had ſhed his Blood for Mans Redemption, did not require a Sinner's Death. Softned by this Remonſtrance, he contented himſelf with ſtripping 'em, and throwing 'em upon the Shore, where they had freſh Miſeries to contend with. Part of them died, after they had ſuffer'd Hunger for three days. Some were torn by Lions that came out of a Neighbouring Cave. Others were ſav'd by the Charity of a Pilot; who ſeeing 'em in ſo diſmal a Condition, receiv'd 'em into his Veſſel, and tore his Sails to cover their Nakedneſs. Thoſe that made their way for Italy, arriv'd at Genoa, where the Famine render'd Proviſions extremely dear. The Inhabitants ſeeing theſe Fugitives attenuated by ſo long Sufferings, and deſtitute of Money to buy Food, went into the Streets, holding Bread in one Hand, and a Croſs in the other; offering the Bread to theſe famiſh'd Creatures, upon condition of worſhipping the Croſs. This Stratagem ſucceeded, and ſuch as had had the Courage to leave their Eſtates and Country, ſubmitted to this ſecond Temptation.

XXIII. People murmur'd ſtrangely againſt the Politicks of the King of Spain, who depopulated his Kingdom by ſo miſtaſten a Perſecution. Beſides, he run the risk of a Rebellion, ſince eight hundred thouſand People, driven to Deſpair, were capable of making a dangerous Inſurrection; and Abravanel had reaſon to boaſt of this Exemplary Fidelity of his Nation, when it might have taken Arms againſt its Perſecutors, and have caus'd a Civil War; for it is remarkable. Ferdinand doubtleſs had laid in Precautions againſt an Event he had reaſon to fear. But Deſpair often throws the Prudence of Kings and Politicians off the Hinges. It was not conceivable, how this Maſter in the Art of Reigning came to weaken himſelf ſo conſiderable, without any neceſſity. Religion ſeem'd only a Veil to cover the Conduct of Ferdinand, who was infinitely Ambitious. We can't anſwer for the Motions of Human Mind, whoſe Springs are not only hidden, but different, according to the Circumſtance of Times. Ferdinand and Iſabella thought to buy off their Sins by this uſeful Sacrifice to the Church. They computed the Wealth which this Deſertion would give 'em, which did not prove ſo conſiderable as they were made to believe. They imagin'd they ſhould open a vaſt and ſpacious Career for the Praiſes of a flattering Clergy; and they were not miſtaken in this laſt particular. And thus they ſacrific'd the Proſperity of the Kingdom to Ambition, their predominant Paſſion. Ferdinand alſo receiv'd the Title of Catholick ſome time after, from the ſame Alexander VI. who laugh'd with himſelf, to ſee him thruſt out thoſe People which he receiv'd.

XXIV. John II. King of Portugal, lying at the very Gates of Spain, was willing to enrich himſelf with his Neighbours Spoils. The Intereſt of his Kingdom demanded, that he ſhould give a Retreat to the Jews, from whom he had receiv'd conſiderable Services. He had ſent || ſome of 'em to the Coaſt of Ormus, and the Red Sea, who brought him a faithful Account, and ſerv'd him in the Diſcovery of the Eaſt-Indies; but yet he did not love them. At once to indulge his Politicks, and his Averſion to 'em, he receiv'd 'em, but impos'd on 'em moſt rigorous Conditions. Each Head was oblig'd to pay him eight gold Crowns for the Privilege of Refuge.

* Simon ib. † Bart. B. R. t. i. p. 29. & 54. || R. Abraham de Beia & Joſeph Zapatero de Lamego, who came and made their Report to him

He

He moreover fix'd a time, beyond which it was not lawful for 'em to continue in his Territories without entring into Slavery. The two Conditions were discharg'd by abundance of Fugitives that retir'd into this Kingdom, and who afterwards chose rather to live in Slavery, than to expose themselves to fresh Misfortunes. They complain *, That he sent a vast number into the Isles of Thieves, newly discover'd, where they miserably perish'd. But at the same time they comfort themselves with a Notion, That God aveng'd 'em for it; for he dy'd young, and his Son, who by marrying Isabella became Heir to many Kingdoms, fell from his Horse into the Tagus, from whence he was carry'd to a Peasant's Cottage, where he dy'd; so that the Crown pass'd into another Branch.

XXV. Emanuel, John's Successor, at first compassionated these oppress'd Wretches, and restor'd 'em to their Liberty. But the Alliance he made with Isabella and Ferdinand, whose Daughter he marry'd, alter'd his first Notions. Isabella plainly declar'd, that she would not have a Man to her Son-in-law that suffer'd the Enemies of God in his Kingdom. This was only the Pretence. The Riches which the Fugitives had brought into his Dominions, and the number of his Subjects, which were increas'd by the Jews and Moors, awaken'd their Jealousie; and the Vexation to see their Conduct condemn'd by Emanuel's, which was quite contrary, contributed to sowre their Minds. Emanuel, who had also his Interest in view, sacrific'd the Jews and Moors to an Alliance he thought more advantagious. He allow'd both of 'em time to depart out of his Dominions. He kept his word with the latter, as fearing Reprisals would be made in Africa upon the Christians. But he doubly violated his Faith with the Jews, by depriving 'em of the liberty to carry away their Children above fourteen Years of Age, which reduc'd 'em to that Despair, that some of 'em kill'd themselves, and others sacrificing Nature to their Religion, turn'd Executioners to their own Bowels. Besides, after that they had assign'd 'em three Ports, whither they were to go to imbark, they reduc'd 'em to one. They were oblig'd to alter their Measures, to make a double Journey and exhaust their Treasures. In fine, the delays that were given to the Embarkation, made great numbers miserable. If this Action of Emanuel has found Panegyrists, there have been also more equitable † Historians, who have not related it without condemning it of Injustice.

XXVI. The Misery oblig'd many to call themselves Christians; and these Conversions, which were mostly feign'd, had three effects. Those who had comply'd with the times, and bent under the Violence of their Enemies, were not trusted; and a great many of 'em were massacred ‖ upon the first occasion that offer'd it self, which was the most frivolous imaginable. There was in the Church of Lisbon a Crucify'd Jesus, the Wound whereof was cover'd with a Glass: Some fanciful Bigots thought they saw a darting Light proceed from the. Glass, and cry'd out Miracles! An imprudent Jew venturing to deny the Fact, there needed no more for the Votaries and two Dominican Monks to enflame the People against this Nation, tho' it was converted. The Sedition lasted three days, in which they kill'd above two thousand of these new Converts, whom they pursu'd even into the Churches, and dragg'd from the Altars. Any Alliance or Relation with 'em was sufficient to make a Man an Object of the Popular Fury. They plunder'd their Houses, and unmercifully kill'd those that were shut up in them. The Magistrates not only conniv'd at the People, but countenanc'd these Commotions. Emanuel came at last to settle the matter by the Punishment of the two Dominicans, who were burnt; and by degrading of the Magistrates, who had not done their Duty in repressing the Sedition.

Some Historians charge this Disaster upon the Jews, affirming, they drew it upon themselves, because some of 'em, after publickly professing Christianity, and being baptized, were found celebrating the Feast of the Passover in secret; but Mariana * ought to be preferr'd before all foreign and German Authors. Nevertheless, 'tis true, that most of those that remain'd in Spain and Portugal dissembled instead of being Converted, which is the natural effect of Persecution in matter of Religion. The most surprizing thing is, that this Religion spreads from Generation to Generation, and still subsists in the Persons of Dissemblers in a remote Posterity. In vain the great Lords of Spain † make Alliances, change their Names, and take ancient Scutcheons; they are still known to be of a Jewish Race, and Jews themselves. The Convents of Monks and Nuns are full of them. Most of the Canons, Inquisitors and Bishops proceed from this Nation. This is enough to make the People and Clergy of this Country tremble, since such sort of Churchmen can only profane the Sacraments, and want Intention in consecrating the Host they adore. In the mean time, Orobio, who relates the Fact, knew these Dissemblers. He was one of them himself, and bent the Knee before the Sacrament. Moreover, he brings Proofs of his Assertion, in maintaining, That there are in the Synagogue of Amsterdam, Brothers and Sisters and near Relations to good Families of Spain and Portugal; and even Franciscan Monks, Dominicans and Jesuits, who come to do Penance, and make amends for the Crime they have committed in dissembling.

XXVII. Experience confirms what he advances. The Church of Rome, after it has bred up these Dissemblers, sees 'em shamefully leave her Communion, and plainly prove the Vanity of those Conversions, in which it so often triumphs. We have even seen very ingenious People leave her, who have study'd the Law much more than the Gospel. Joseph the Son of Joshua, who continued his Chronology till the Year 1554. was a Spaniard, and the best Historian this Nation has had since Josephus. Joseph Ben Virgæ was another Spaniard, who has collected several necessary Rules for the understanding the Gemara, which are the more useful, because they were forgotten by other Interpreters. Isaac Cardoso, a Descendant also from the Portugueze Dissemblers, became one of the principal Physicians of Castile; where he wrote his Spanish Tract concerning the usefulness of Water and Snow, and cold or hot Drink. Utilidades del aqua y de la nieve, de bever frio y caliente. But at last being tir'd with his Disguise, he quitted Spain and the Catholick Religion with his Name Ferdinand, which he had received at his Baptism, and retired to Verona about the middle of the last Century. He printed his Treatise ‖ de las Excellencias, de los Hebreos, in which he expatiates on the particular Prerogatives of the Jewish People, which ought to make them honoured, notwithstanding their Miseries and Dispersions, which God only sends for the expiation of their Sins. He observes, that this Nation was chosen by God; that it alone is separated from all other Nations; that it receiv'd

* Cardoso las Excellencias, p. 388. † Osorius l. 1. Mariana l. xxvi. c. 13. ‖ An. 1506. * Mariana l. xxviii. t. 2. c. 17. p. 593. † Limborch Collat. cum Jud. p. 102. ‖ Isaac Cardoso las Excellencias, &c. An. 1679.

the

the Sabbath and Circumcision from Heaven, and that the Divinity instructed it by inspir'd Men. Lastly, He retorts ten Accusations that Christians bring against this People, part of which we have inserted in several Places. 'Tis strange that this Work should have escap'd Bartolocci, who had so vast an Acquaintance with the Jewish Books.

XXVIII. The Inquisition is watchful over these new Christians; for thus they are still call'd, tho' two hundred Years have roll'd over their Heads, since the first Conversion of their Ancestors. They are still suspected by the cruel Ministers of this Tribunal, who inrich themselves with their Spoils. The least Suspicion suffices to make 'em guilty. For indeed, whenever any Accident happens in the Kingdom, the People accuses 'em of Judaizing in secret, and bringing down the Divine Vengeance. An Instance of it was seen at the beginning of the last Century; for the People fermenting I know not upon what pretence, a Dominican, with a Crucifix in his Hand, put himself at the Head of these Mutineers; they plunder'd, they ravag'd, they kill'd four or five thousand of these Converts. * An Act of Adoration refus'd an Image, is a Crime deserving Capital Punishment. The Witnesses are heard and believ'd without being confronted. The Confession extorted by unheard of Torments, is a Conviction more than sufficient. The Act of Faith, in which they are burnt, is one of the most solemn Sights they go to see. They run to it in Crowds †, and look upon it as one of the Ramparts of Religion, and a glorious Act of Piety. When it is to be made, the Accus'd are drawn from their Dungeons, shav'd, and cover'd with a long yellow Habit, the Women being only distinguish'd by a white Veil upon their Heads. Upon this Dress are St. Andrew's Crosses, Flames and Devils, which notifie beforehand to the Miserable what is to be their Fate and kind of Death. Each Prisoner is attended by two Familiars of the Holy Office; these are Persons of Quality, who Pride themselves in serving the Ministers of this hideous Tribunal, and carrying long Wands, like the Serjeants that accompany the Hangman on Execution-day. All these Prisoners are conducted to the great Court of the Palace of Lisbon, upon a long and large Theatre, like a Tennis-Court. A Pulpit, design'd for the Preacher, separates them. They begin with the Sermon, which turns upon the Conversion of the Jews. Another Ecclesiastick comes next into the same Pulpit, and reads the Sentence of Condemnation. They begin with the Jews that promis'd to be converted; on whom Punishments are impos'd, proportionate to the Crime they are charg'd with; and afterwards the Obstinate are deliver'd up to the Secular Arm, with a precise Petition to exercise Humanity towards the Guilty, and to permit no effusion of Blood. The Secular Judge feigns in his turn to grant this feign'd Request. He dares not revise the Sentence, nor doubt of its Validity. It were better for a Man to be burnt a thousand times, than that it should be believ'd, he had been imprisoned, being Innocent. The Criminals are taken and led to Punishment, and that there may not be an effusion of Blood, as was promis'd, they are cast into the Fire and burnt.

XXIX. The Jewish Historians make bitter Complaints of the continuance of these Violences at Corduba, Lisbon, and Conimbra, and even in the Indies, against the Women as well as the Men. But at the same time they make all the Sufferers Saints and Martyrs, whose Death God avenges by glorious Miracles. For they tell ‖, that a Physician, call'd Sylva, who had been kept Prisoner thirteen Years at Lima, and had led an exemplary Life, was no sooner thrown into the Flames, but an impetuous Wind and dreadful Tempest over-turn'd the House where he had been condemn'd. Even the Indians were astonish'd at this Prodigy, and confess'd, they never saw any thing like it before. Another, who was burnt in Portugal, saw his Chains fall off in the midst of the Flames, and was never seen any more, which made the Executioner say, The Devil had carry'd him away. They believe he miraculously disappear'd, because God was pleas'd to rescue him from their Fury. Thus the Jews comfort themselves for the Christians Barbarity, with false Apprehensions of Miracles, and with Heavens interessing it self in their Afflictions.

XXX. In Honour of the Memory of these Martyrs, they preserve a Catalogue of 'em. The Jews have for a long time neglected these Diptycks of their Martyrs, whose Names deserve better to be convey'd to Posterity, than those of some Cabbalist Doctors; but they do it at present, at least in some Places *. In this Rank they reckon a Monk of the Ascension, who was burnt at Lisbon in the Year 1603. Sobremont, after he had suffer'd twenty two Years a severe Imprisonment at Lima, where he practis'd Physick, was committed to the Flames by the Order of the Inquisition.

Veinte y dos annos en prison penosa,
Por defender de Dios la verda pura,
Treminno arrastra la cadena dura,
Que le dact ser la sacra ley su esposa.

Dom Lope de Vera was of a Christian and Noble Family; but having study'd at Salamanca, he turn'd Jew, Circumcis'd himself in Prison, and took the Name of Juda the Believer. He was also burnt, and dy'd with a Constancy, that oblig'd the President of the Inquisition to confess, That he never saw such ardent desires of dying, so great an assurance of Salvation, and so perfect a Constancy, as that of this Youth, who was in the Flower of his Age †. Almeyda was burnt at Compostella, in the Year 1655. Mynes at Corduba. In the Year 1680. was made an Act of Faith at Madrid, by which seven Persons dy'd. Three others were burnt two Years after at Lisbon, by such another Sentence. The Rabbins say, That God permits it, because he will have in all Nations and Ages irreproachable Witnesses of his Unity. Thus the Jews of the West have lost their Liberty in four Kingdoms, France, England, Spain and Portugal. Let us see what those of the East did, where they still subsist.

* An 1605. Cardoso Excellencias p. 383. † See the Relation of the Inquisition of Goa, in 1687. and Memoirs of Mr. D'Ablancourt, 1701. ‖ An. 1693. at Lima Sylva was Circumcis'd in his Imprisonment; he eat no Meat, he turn'd Nazarene, and was call'd Heli Nazareno indigno Siervo de Dios, alios, Sylva: Cardoso las Excellencias, deciema Ex. p. 322. * At Amsterdam See Barrio's Gouvirno popular Judaico p. 42. Menasses Esperanza d' Israel p. 99. † An. 1644. at Valadolid, Carta del Inquisidor Moscoso a la Condesa de Monterey.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXII.

The History of the Jews of the East in Persia, Armenia, Media, &c. during the Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries.

I. The Religion of Tamerlan: The Jews but little known at his Court. II. The Establishment of the Empire of the great Mogul: Arguments proving Jews at Cachemire. III. These Arguments examined. IV. They take Ishmael Sophy, King of Persia, for the Messiah, and are undeceiv'd. V. Succession of the Sophy. VI. Schack Abbas's Design of persecuting the Jews repress'd. VII. The Conference he had with them. VIII. Their Engagement to turn Mussulmans at Seventy Years end. IX. The Execution of this Treaty. X. A Chronological Reflection against this Narrative. XI. Another Remark drawn from Schack Abbas's Character. XII. This Prince persecuted Liberty given: A fresh Persecution under Abbas II. XIII. New Arguments drawn from this Persecution: The Toleration of the Persians. XIV. The Tribe of Levi at Schiras: Jews at Lar, Goa, in the Indies. XV. Other Jews at Bagdet: Pilgrims that come there: The Rafedi's hatred of them. XVI. The Tranquility they enjoy in Armenia. XVII. Their Settlement at Ecbatana and at Ragues in Media continues. XVIII. The Princes of Mingrelia and Georgia descend from David: Jews in that Country: A Description of their Condition in the East.

I. THE Jews suffer'd much by the rapid and violent Conquests of Tamerlan; for this Conqueror having fix'd his Capital at Samercand, pass'd on * to Chorazzan where they were numerous. He seiz'd upon Bagdet, and all the Irake: He flew into Syria, where he plunder'd Damascus: He defeated Bajazet, who reign'd in Anatolia, where this Nation had considerable Settlements; and as he laid waste all places where his Armies march'd, it is no wonder that the Jews were ruined and dispersed by his Invasions. Tamerlan follow'd Gingizkan's Religion, which consisted in seven or eight Precepts dictated by the Law of Nature. He owned the Unity of a God, and declared himself an Enemy to Idolatry. Tho' he has been represented as a Barbarian and an ignorant Man, because he had follow'd no other Profession than Arms, yet he was a Lover of Men of Letters, and maintain'd a great number of 'em, with whom he often convers'd. Physicians and Astronomers were very well receiv'd at his Court. Hence we have reason to believe, that many Jews were in it, since they excell'd in these two Sciences. But as the Arabian Writers, who have given us his Picture, and the History of his Life, don't speak of it, we shall not supply their silence.

II. The Conquests of Tamerlan were divided betwixt his Sons and Grandsons, who could not agree about sharing the Succession, and who weakned themselves by their Division. Nevertheless they supported themselves a hundred Years, till a Commander of the Usbecs † enter'd Chorazzan, and by Conquest took it from them. Arbek, a Descendent of Tamerlan, was oblig'd to fly to the Indies, where he set up the Empire ‖ of the great Mogul. We are told, there was there a Province of Cachemire full of Jews, that came there in Soloman of Salmanazar's time, who have left Footsteps of their Establishment, by which they are discover'd at this day. Mr. Thevenot desired one of his Friends to examine, whether those in this Country had the Holy Scripture, and whether their Old Testament was like ours? But he answer'd, That tho' there were formerly Jews there, yet there were none at present. "All are, said he *, "either Heathens, or Mahometans, perhaps some "of them might be found in China, for I have lately "seen in the Hands of our R. P. Jesuit of Delhi, Let- "ters of a German Jesuit written from Pekin, signi- "fying that he had seen such, as had preserved "Judaism and the Old Testament, and who knew "nothing of the Death of Jesus Christ, and that "they would even have made the Jesuit their "Kakan, provided he would abstain from Swines "Flesh; however we may still find here some "Tracks of Judaism. The first is, That as we "enter this Kingdom, after the passage of the "Pire-Penjabe Mountain, all the Inhabitants I saw "in the first Villages seem'd to me to be Jews, by "their Make and Looks, and, in fine, by some- "thing particular, which I know not how, distin- "guishes one Nation from another. This Notion "is not peculiar to me, but our Father Jesuit, and "many of our Europeans, had it before me. The "second is, That I observed the Name of Mousa, "which signifies Moses, to be much used among "the People of this City, tho' Mahometans. The "third, That they say commonly that Salomon "came into their Country, and that it was he who "cut the Mountain Baramoule, to give current to "the Waters. The fourth, That Moses died at "Cachemire, and that his Tomb is a League from "this City. And the fifth, That they pretend "this little and very ancient Edifice, which ap- "pears here upon a high Mountain, was built by "Salomon; for which reason 'tis still called Salo- "mon's Throne. Thus I should not be willing to "deny, that some of them have penetrated as far "as this place. But in tract of time these People "might have lost the Purity of their Law, and "turned Idolaters, and at last Mahometans.

III. Mr. Bernier is in the right, for I doubt not but that there were some Jews in the Dominions of the great Mogul. The Misery they were reduced to in the East by frequent Wars, obliged some of them to follow Arbec with his other fugitive Subjects; and as they go into all places, where they can make their Fortunes, the Prosperity of these Princes might, in their turn, draw over Merchants, Astronomers, and Physicians. But it is equally false, that they were settled there from Salomon or Salmanazer's time; and that Characters of Judaism are found at Cachemire, distinct enough to draw Consequences from them. 1. The Temple and Throne of Solomon are Chimera's, for Solomon only built the Temple at Jerusalem; and tho' his Name might have been carried into this Country by the Fleets that he sent to the neighbouring Islands, can it be imagined, that the remembrance of it was so long preserved, and that Temples were built to the Honour of this Prince, bearing his Name to this day? 2. The burying of Moses at Cachemire is still more fabulous, and the Name of Mousa is so well known to the Arabians, that 'tis no wonder the Inhabitants of that City give it often to their Chil-

---

• Vattier's History of Tamerlan, l. 1.
* Voyage de Bernier, t. 2. p. 141, &c.
† Sharbeck Vid. Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 771.
‖ About the Year 1465.

dren.

dren. Mouſſa, the Son of Giafar the Juſt, is one of the twelve Imans, whom the Muſſulmans worſhip for Saints. They give him the Title of Amim, of Alkiidem, and Saber, to ſignifie that he was the Faithful Guardian of the Faith and Tradition, the Gracious and the Patient, becauſe he ſtifled his Anger, and with Humility ſuffered the Perſecution of the Caliph Aaron, who cauſed him to be taken Priſoner and poiſon'd. There is no need therefore of going up ſo high as Moſes the Jewiſh Legiſlator, ſince the Muſſulmans have a Saint of the ſame Name whom they worſhip. 3. Laſtly, There is nothing more ambiguous, than this Jewiſh Phyſiognomy aſcrib'd to the Inhabitants of Cachemire, and we are not to go here in queſt of the Remains of the diſperſed Tribes, ſince we have no Proof of their coming hither either in Salomonar Salmanazer's Reign, or even in the Flight of Arbec, who founded the Empire of the Great Mogul.

IV. The Body of the Nation remain'd in Perſia and Media; but as their Academies had been deſtroy'd, and the Sciences could not flouriſh among the Confuſions of War, their learned Men, and Heads of the Captivity, have for a long time diſappeared; and even the private Perſons diſperſed in the Provinces and Cities, made a ſad Figure there, becauſe they had been ruined. 'Tis ſaid they raiſed their Head under Iſhmael Sophy, Founder of the Family that reigns at preſent in Perſia. This Prince, who thought himſelf a Deſcendant of Aly, gathered all thoſe who were devoted to this Sect, and all the Unfortunate that would follow him. He found but ſeven or eight thouſand Men in Caramannia, which is the ancient Cilicia; but with this ſmall Number he threw himſelf into one of the Provinces of Media †, and beat and kill'd Ferokhead the King of it; and this firſt Victory obtain'd at fourteen Years of Age, put him in a capacity to take Tauris, which ſome Geographers confound with Ecbatana, and make himſelf Maſter not only of the reſt of Media but alſo of Perſia. The Jews, who were numerous in Media, with which Iſhmael began his Conqueſts, dazled with his Valour, and the ſpeedy and rapid Succeſs of his Deſigns, imagined, as 'tis ſaid, that this young Conqueror might be the Meſſiah they had expected for ſo many Ages. Two Circumſtances concurr'd to deceive them; one, that Iſhmael went to reform the Muſſulman Law, and ſeem'd to oppoſe the Religion which the People profeſſed in the Eaſt; the other, that he boaſted of being a Prophet ſent from Heaven. 'Tis ſaid alſo, that his Courtiers exalted him above the pitch of Humane Nature. It was eaſily perceiv'd, they had built upon a falſe Foundation, ſince tho' Iſhmael impugn'd the prevailing Religion, it was only to re-eſtabliſh the Sect of Aly; and the great Change he made, only related to the Head-dreſs, ſince he took a red Turbant, which had twelve Folds about it invented by his Father Haydar; for which reaſon 'tis call'd the Haydarian Crown. Laſtly, Iſhmael, inſtead of making himſelf reſpected as the Meſſiah of the Jews, deſpiſed their Homages, and manifeſted more Averſion than Inclination for them.

V. Iſhmael Sophi died in the Year 1523, being thirty eight Years old, and left the Empire to his Son Thahamasb, who being engag'd in a long War with Soliman, was at laſt oblig'd to ruin his own Country, that he might not be purſued nor taken in his retreat. The Sultaneſs poiſon'd him, to ſet a Son ſhe had by him on the Throne. But as this Son was viſiting his Father's Treaſures, his Siſter cauſed him to be knock'd o'th' Head by the Officers ſhe had ſuborn'd to execute her Deſign. She preſently releaſed Iſhmael II. her other Brother, out of Priſon, to place him upon the Throne: But this Ingrateful Man kill'd her a little time after. His Subjects, unable to bear him, poiſon'd him after a Reign of two Years, and eſtabliſh'd ‖ a third Son of Thahamasb, who was blind, and was call'd Iſhmael. From this blind Man proceeded the famous Schak Abbas, who undertook to perſecute the Jews; which gave occaſion to a general Maſſacre a long time after his Death. The Matter of Fact is thus related.

VI. Schak Abbas's Council repreſenting to him, that Perſia was very depopulate *, he reſolved to grant great Privileges to all that would come and ſettle there. Multitudes of People arriv'd from all the neighbouring Parts, and particularly a Crowd of Jews, who drew the Trade to them, and enrich'd themſelves. They quickly provok'd the Jealouſie of the other Inhabitants, who brought their Complaints againſt them to the Sophy. There was no Expedient to puniſh them without giving Umbrage to other Strangers, whom the Violation of Privileges granted for ſome Years, would oblige to retire. But it was found in the Alcoran, that this Nation was to embrace the Muſſulman Religion ſix hundred Years after its Publication, or be entirely deſtroy'd. Abbas, who was naturally cruel, would have executed Mahomet's Orders, and have cut off all the Jews, if the Mufti had not ſtopp'd him. It was reſolved however to quote the Kacams, or the Sages of the Nation, before the Sophy's Tribunal, to anſwer his Demands.

VII. Schak Abbas queſtion'd them particularly about the Abolition of the Sacrifices, and the other Ceremonies, the uſe of which had ceaſed ſince the coming of Iſaiah, or Jeſus, whom Mahomet had ſucceeded. A Chriſtian could not have diſputed more ſubtlely, ſince that is the weak part of the Jewiſh Religion. The Kacams, aſtoniſh'd at theſe Interrogatories, declared that they expected a Meſſiah, and that they could not receive the Chriſt whom their Anceſtors had crucified. Abbas was provok'd with this Anſwer, ſince the Alcoran makes an honourable mention of Jeſus Chriſt. Why will ye not believe Jeſus Chriſt, ſaid he, ſince I believe him? They replied, That Chriſtians were ſo many Idolaters, who worſhipped a Man, who was curs'd and hung upon a Tree. Very well, ſaid the Sophy, believe not the Meſſiah of the Chriſtians, ſince you have no mind to it. But what think you of Mahomet? This Demand confounded them, as perceiving the Danger they incurr'd, by diſcovering their Thoughts of the falſe Prophet. After they had conferr'd in ſecret, they declar'd, That Moſes was the great Prophet, and the only one they ought to follow; but That they did not abſolutely reject Mahomet, becauſe he was Son of Abraham by Iſhmael. To this Anſwer they added Intreaties and Supplications to the Sophy, to have Compaſſion on his Slaves and Subjects, who had ſettled in his Dominions only to pleaſe him.

VIII. Abbas reproach'd them that under Pretence of expecting a Meſſiah, they perſevered in their Incredulity, and hinder'd others from embracing the Muſſulman Faith. But, ſaid he, to remove this vain Pretence, fix a time for the coming of your Meſſiah, I will tolerate you till the Accompliſhment of this Period. But if the Meſſiah, who has been delay'd for ſo many Ages, deceive you once more, 'tis juſt you ſhould embrace Mahomet's Religion, or loſe your Eſtates, your Children and Lives. He allow'd them time to confer together, and to conſider in what Year the Meſſiah ought to appear. After a mature † An. 1500. ‖ An. 1577. * Hiſtory of three Impoſtors, p. 114. Kidder, A Demonſtration of the Meſſias, p. 3. c. 2. p. 435.

Deliberation, they determin'd that the Meſſiah was to appear in Seventy Years, reckoning from the day of their coming before the Sophy. Hereby they eluded the Puniſhment they were threaten'd with, ſince both Abbas and themſelves muſt be dead before ſo long a term of Years. Abbas, who was covetous, ſold them theſe Years of Reſt at a dear Rate, and cauſed their mutual Promiſes agreed upon to be regiſtred; for on one hand, the Jews promiſed to turn Muſſulmans, or to conſent to the Confiſcation of their Eſtates, and their utter Deſtruction in all the Sophy's Dominions, if their Meſſiah did not appear at Seventy Years end: On the other Hand, Schak Abbas promiſed for himſelf, and his Succeſſors, to turn Jews, if the Meſſiah appear'd at that time. The Agreement was ſign'd on both ſides, kept in the Archives, and the Jews tax'd two Millions of Gold, in the interim, till their Promiſe was executed.

IX. A hundred and fifteen Years were run out ſince Abbas's Reign *, and yet no body thought of the Contract he had made with the Jews. For indeed the Empire of the Perſians was diſturb'd with almoſt continual Wars with the Turks, † who ſeiz'd upon Bagdet whilſt their Hands were imploy'd againſt the great Mogul. Amurath IV. found a great many Jews there, who had ſtill remain'd in this Country, ever ſince their firſt Diſperſion. But tho' this Prince, violating his Promiſe, put the Perſians to the Sword, that he might weaken his Enemy by this Maſſacre, yet he ſpared ‖ this Nation, becauſe he thought it was very uſeful to him.

The War cauſed ſo great a Diſtraction at the Perſian Court, that the Treaty Schak Abbas had made with the Jews was not executed. But we are told, that Abbas II. who began his Reign in 1642, and was a little more at Peace, turning over one day the Regiſters of the Palace, found in his Father's Journal, the Contract between the Jews and Schak Abbas I. This ſurpriz'd him the more, for as much as Zabathai Tzevi made a great Noiſe at that time, and moſt of the Jews look'd upon him as the Meſſiah, who came to dis-ingage them of their Promiſe. He aſſembled a great Council to deliberate about ſo important an Affair, but it was there unanimouſly reſolv'd to deſtroy, without any delay, this Nation abounding with Cheats and Impoſtors, that labour'd only to oppoſe Mankind. Order was given to all the Inhabitants, both Strangers and Natives of the Sophy's Dominions, to fall upon the Jews, and to ſpare neither Age nor Sex, exccept ſuch as ſhould turn Muſſulmans. This Maſſacre began at Iſpahan, the Capital of his Kingdoms. It was exercis'd with the ſame Barbarity in the Provinces of Seyra, Ghelan, Humadan, Ardan, and Tauris, where the Jews were ſettled. The Execution laſted three Years, * without any glimpſe of Humanity or Compaſſion from the Perſians; inſomuch that there remain'd not one ſingle Jew in all that vaſt Extent of Provinces, where they had heap'd up mighty Riches. Some eſcap'd the Barbarity of the People by flying into the Lands of the Turk, and the Indies, and abjuring Judaiſm. 'Tis ſaid alſo, That the Hatred of the Perſians againſt this Nation is ſo violent, that there is no hope of their being ever able to ſettle there again.

X. We were not willing to deny the Publick ſo circumſtantiated a Relation: In the mean time 'tis impoſſible to reconcile Chronology with this Event. For Abbas I. cauſed not his Brother's Throat to be cut till 1586, ſixteen Months after his Father's Death, and there interven'd but fourſcore Years from his Elevation to the Year 1666, when the Maſſacre was perform'd, and yet they reckon above a hundred and fifteen. It would require ſome Years for Abbas I. to ſtrengthen a Throne which he had uſurp'd. Some time alſo muſt be allow'd the Jews to inrich themſelves, which can't be done ſo ſuddenly. So that there were not ſixty Years between his Treaty with the Jews, and the beginning of the Perſecution; and it can't be ſaid, that they were oblig'd to ſuſpend the Execution of this pretended Contract, or even to forget it long, by reaſon of the Wars with the Turks and Indians.

XI. Moreover Schak Abbas, whom the Perſians look upon as one of their greateſt Princes, is ſuppoſed to make a Treaty that ſhocks Probability; for 'tis pretended he did not perſecute the Chriſtians, and that he was even afraid to provoke them. Whereas we know, that upon a bare Suſpicion, that the Chriſtians of ſome Cities of Armenia depended upon the Biſhop of Rome, he perſecuted them, and put to death above a thouſand Perſons by cruel Tortures †. He alſo cruelly perſecuted the Jews, which Perſecution does not agree with the Suſpenſion promiſed by a Treaty concluded in form with this Nation. Is it probable, that this Prince would have entred upon a Treaty with his Slaves, and have laid his Religion, or that of his Succeſſors, at Stake, by engaging to change it upon the appearance of the Meſſiah? How is it likely that a Prince, infinitely proud and cruel, and inveſted with Arbitrary Power, as Abbas I. was, would have ſtoop'd to have articled with ſome Merchants of his Dominions, or have equall'd his Religion to theirs, and promiſed to give up the Faith of his Anceſtors upon the coming of a Jewiſh Meſſiah, tho' the Perſians have no Idea of this Meſſiah to come?

XII. 'Tis better to ſay, That without any Reference to this Treaty with the Jews, Schak Abbas perſecuted them; and as he recompenced thoſe who renounced their Religion, or pretended to be Muſſulmans, he thought he had contributed a great deal to the Propagation of the Faith. But this great Prince, who was not willing to be deceiv'd, having diſcover'd that almoſt all the Deſerters of Judaiſm diſſembled, he was not aſhamed to give up his Deſign of Converſions, and to reſtore to the Jews the Liberty of Conſcience he had taken from them, as is the Cuſtom of the Perſians.

They injoy'd it, till a Miniſter of State, who hated them, or deſign'd to inrich himſelf by the Perſecution, ingag'd his Maſter to torment them, ‖ and to oblige them to turn Mahometans. "He "imploy'd his utmoſt Efforts, ſparing neither Vio- "lence nor Lenity to ſucceed in his Deſign. There "was alſo an Order of the Prince, forbidding the "Exerciſe of the Jewiſh Religion in his Dominions; "but notwithſtanding all this, he could not effect "it; for upon a diligent Obſervation it was found, "that whatever Pretences they made to Maho- "metiſm, they practiſed Jewdaiſm ſtill: So that "there was a neceſſity of permitting them to turn "bad Jews again, ſince they could not be made "good Muſſulmans. In they mean time all thoſe "that are at Iſpahan, are beggarly and miſerable; "nor are there a great number of them, ſince there "is nothing for them to do. They pay annually "a Sequin a piece to the King, and are oblig'd to "wear a little ſquare piece of Stuff of two or three "Fingers breadth, ſew'd to their Caba, or Robe, "in the middle of their Breaſt, about two Inches "above their Girdle; and it ſignifies nothing of

* He died at 63 Years of Age, in the Year 1629. † An. 1638. ‖ Dom Miguel de Barrios Hiſtoria Univerſal. Judaica, p. 4. * From the Year 1663 to 1666. † Th. Herbert's Voyage to Perſia 1677. ‖ Thevenot's Voyage, t. 4. l. 2. c. 14. p. 388.

"what

" what Stuff this Patch is made, provided the Co" lour be different from that of the Habit it is
" ſow'd to.

XIII. Theſe Words furniſh us with new Arguments againſt the Treaty of Schah Abbas I. with the Jews. For, 1. Mr. Thevenot obſerves, That as 'tis the Cuſtom of the Perſians to leave Strangers of all Religions an entire Liberty of Conſcience, the proceedure of Eatemad Doulet was thought very ſtrange, who undertook ſome Years ſince to conſtrain the Jews to turn Mahometans. 2. He travell'd in this Country from the Year 1663. to 1665. and conſequently, would have been a Witneſs of the Maſſacre made by vertue of the Contract between Abbas I. and the Jews. And yet he ſpeaks only of a Perſecution made ſome Years before, which had been diſapprov'd. 3. Laſtly, In his time, and ever ſince his Return till now, the Jews inhabit the Cities of Perſia, where they endeavour to grow rich, tho' they are generally all Beggars and miſerable.

XIV. The Tribe of Levi pretends to keep up it ſelf at Schiras, where the Perſians have a fine Academy, a great number of Scholars, and Profeſſors to teach Philoſophy, Phyſick and Divinity. 'Tis certain there are a great many more Jews there than at Iſpahan; but we can't conjecture upon what foundation they pretend to be of the Tribe of Levi, nor how this Tribe, which return'd from Chaldea with Eſdras and Nehemiah, has been able to get together in this City to trade in Glaſſes and Wine, for that is their main Occupation. They are ſtill more numerous at Lar, the Capital of a Province, where they have * a Quarter aſſign'd to 'em at the foot of the Mountain between the City and the Caſtle. They are alſo diffus'd into the Country, on the Coaſt of Ormus and Bander Abaſſi, in order to glean up ſome little part of the Trade that is us'd from thence to the Indies, where they had formerly a great many Brethren. Indeed they were diſtinguiſh'd there into two kinds, one that were born Indians, who turn'd Jews, and the others were deſcended from the Race of Abraham. The King of Portugal, tho' he had expell'd 'em out of his Kingdom, tolerated 'em ſtill † at Goa and other Places, where they had their Publick Worſhip: And here it was, that ſome Years ſince ‖ an Impoſtor, pretending to be the Meſſiah; who deceiv'd abundance of People, whom the vehement deſire of Liberty and Deliverance drew after him. His Reputation flew as far as Portugal, where ſome were ſilly enough to believe and admire all that was ſaid of him. But the Inquiſition at preſent purſues in that Country, and obliges the moſt part to conceal themſelves or diſſemble. They accuſe 'em here of ſacrificing to the Devil, like the Bramins, to hinder him from doing Miſchief. But this Accuſation is falſe, it is only true, that they believe the Metempſychoſis, and pretend to prognoſticate Futurities, whether by the Cabbala, or the Study of the Conſtellations and Motions of the Stars, which infinitely pleaſes the Indians. But to return to thoſe of Perſia, or of the depending or adjacent Provinces.

XV. Bagdet, which was ſo long the Seat of the Princes of the Captivity, has for a long time been no conſiderable City. They do not reckon above fifteen thouſand Inhabitants, ſince its being* taken by Amurath IV. Nevertheleſs the Jews have maintain'd themſelves here; where they have a Synagogue, and at preſent make a part of its Inhabitants; but their number increaſes conſiderably every Year, by the Pilgrimages made to Ezekiel's Tomb. This Devotion continues among the Jews as well as the Perſians, and a multitude of Pilgrims arrive annually at Bagdet, and remain there. However, they are infinitely hated, and the Raſedis, which make a particular Sect among the Muſſulmans, and are very powerful at Bagdet, will have no ſort of Correſpondence with 'em. We know the Story of one of † theſe Raſedis, who was a Water-Carrier, and who ſeeing a Jew very thirſty, and deſiring to buy a Glaſs, refus'd to ſell him any. The Complaint was brought to the Governour, who order'd the Secretary to be cudgel'd, whilſt the Jew drank his Water at free coſt.

XVI. I don't know how it can be ſaid, that they live more quietly in Armenia ‖, becauſe they eaſier compromiſe with the Chriſtians of the Armenian Religion, than with any other; for the Armenians defend the Eſſential Doctrine of the Meſſiah, which makes a moſt prodigious Chaſm betwixt the Jew and the Chriſtian; and tho' there ſhould be ſome Conformity of Ceremonies, it would not be Foundation enough for a ſtrict Union betwixt 'em, ſince of all Religions, there is none that is more enriched with the Spoils of Judaiſm, and that has adopted more of its Ceremonies, than the Roman, againſt which the Jews declare a perpetual War. Beſides, the Jewiſh Hiſtorians don't acknowledge the Lenity of the Armenians; for they tell, That the Maſians accus'd their Nation of the Murther of a Chriſtian, becauſe he was ſeen to go into a Jew's Houſe, and not to come out again. The Inqueſt being very precipitately made, the Accus'd confeſs'd the Murther. They crucify'd ſome, burnt others, nor did they even ſpare Abiob, a famous Phyſician, who was caſt into the Fire. Three days after, the Chriſtian appear'd again in the City, and it was perceiv'd, that the Accuſation was made out of ſpite, and the Confeſſion extorted by the violence of Torments. A Complaint was brought of it to Soliman II. who depriv'd the Subordinate Judges of the Cognizance of theſe ſort of Crimes, and reſerv'd them only for the Sovereign. As this Event is taken from a Book, intitl'd, The Calamities of the Jews, and attributed to an Author who wrote in Egypt: It is ſaid, that the City Meſia is the ancient Gerrum, and the modern Maſely, ſituate upon the Sea-ſide. But the Accuſation being made by the Armenians, it is more probable it was made among them, and the rather, becauſe there is a Mountain of this Name in the Upper Armenia, near Niſibe. If this Nation liv'd quietly in Armenia, 'tis becauſe the Chriſtians of this Country are honeſt ignorant People, and oblig'd to ſtoop, thro' the fear of a Miſery which is common to 'em with the Jews, as living under the Muſſulmans; or, in fine, this Peace is granted 'em by the Ottomans, who continue to the Jews their Ancient Privileges in this Province, as well as in the reſt of the Empire, as we ſhall ſee in the Sequel.

XVII. We alſo find ſome of 'em in Media, where they were carry'd at the time of the Captivity, and where they have ſtill continu'd, tho' declining very much. I don't know whether Tauris be the old Ecbatana, or rather, a more * modern City, as the Arabians believe it; but being a City of great Commerce, there are many Trading Jews in it. Chasbin is a great City in Media, which ſome Geographers think to be the ſame with that which Tobit calls Rages of Media. 'Tis alſo a Place very much enrich'd by its advantagious Situation. Thahamasb made it his Capital, and commonly ſpent the Winter in it; and ſo did his Succeſſors, till Abbas I. remov'd his Court to Iſpahan. It ſerves to unite the Trade of Hircania, Iberia and Media, with the other Provinces of the Kingdom. The Jews were carry'd thither in Sennacherib's time; and there liv'd Gabael, to whom Tobit truſted ten Talents. It can't be ſaid, whether this Nation remain'd there, without any interruption, for ſo long a Succeſſion of Ages, in which the City and the Provinces have gone thro' mighty Revolutions; but however, there are a hundred Jewiſh Families to forty of the Chriſtians.

* Thevenot ib. l. 3. p. 2. p. 461. † Mandeſlo's Voyage to the Indies, l. 2. p. 272. ‖ An. 1639. * An. 1638. † An. 1639. Tavernier's Voyages, l. 2. p. 234. ‖ An. 1627. Herbert's Voyage to Perſia. * Built in the Year 165, of the Hegyra, 781 of the Chriſtian Æra.

XVIII. They are not ſuffer'd at Scamachia, ſeated upon the Caſpian Sea, a Place * of great Trade; but the Tartars, who bring thither Girls and Boys, and Horſes to be ſold, tolerate 'em out of neceſſity, and mingle with 'em in order to Commerce. We find ſome of them as far as at the Foot of Mount Caucaſus, which the Arabians thought encompaſs'd the whole Earth, ſo that the Sun roſe upon one of its Points, and ſet behind the other. 'Tis related, † That the Prince of Mingrelia pretends to be deſcended from David. The King of Imiretta aſſerts the ſame thing. The ancient Kings of Georgia believ'd it likewiſe, and the Cham of Georgia puts it among his Titles, that he iſſu'd from this great King by Salomon his Son. But theſe Pretenſions are ſupported by no Proof; 'tis only true, that there is a Synagogue at Aſcalzike, a little City ſituate at the Foot of Mount Caucaſus, which the Georgians had built, to defend themſelves againſt the Invaſions of the Enemy, and which the Turks have taken from them. This is the State of the Jews in all this part of the Eaſt, by which it appears, that the Tribes which were diſperſed there, keep up ſtill in Perſia, Armenia and Media, where they have their Synagogues, and are ſtill numerous, ſince they are in all the Trading Cities from Baſſora and the Indies to Mingrelia. But the Tribes are too much confounded to be any longer diſtinguiſhed; they are ignorant, poor, miſerable, and reduced to the vileſt Offices to get their Bread. Laſtly, They have ſo little Correſpondence with their Weſtern Brethren, as hardly to know any thing of them. It would be uſeleſs to make a longer deſcription, what we have related being a ſufficient Proof of it. Let us continue their Hiſtory in the other Provinces of the Eaſt.

* An. 1627. Chardin's Voyage to Perſia, p. 439. † Chardin ib. p. 152.

CHAP. XXIII.

A Continuation of the Hiſtory of the Jews in the Eaſt: Of thoſe of Syria. The Adventures of the Falſe Meſſiah Zabathai Tzevi, who came from Aleppo.

I. Syria divided into five Provinces by the Arabians. II. Damaſcus is the Terreſtrial Paradiſe. The Origine of this Tradition. III. The Monuments of the Jews Cruelty againſt St. Paul. Their State at Damaſcus. IV. An Inſcription brought from Aleppo. A Conjecture about Jupiter Madbacius. V. The Jews are very well at Aleppo. VI. Zabathai Tzevi is born in this City. His deſign of making himſelf the Meſſiah. VII. His Paſſage to Salonichi, and his ſcandalous Marriage. VIII. Levi declares himſelf the Prophet Elias. IX. He proclaims Zabathai the expected Meſſiah. X. His Condemnation at Smyrna. The People ſave him. XI. His Throne and his Kingdom. XII. The Titles he gives himſelf. He is baſtinado'd. XIII. He is taken Priſoner. XIV. An Order to run him thro' with a Sword. XV. Zabathai turns Muſſulman. The Peoples Credulity for him.

I. THE Arabians divide Syria differently from us, which they call Scham, for they make it include all Judea *. Therefore a Geographer ſays, That of all the Cities of Syria, the moſt conſiderable is the Holy City, or Jeruſalem, ſituate in a mountainous Country, in which is the nobleſt Temple that has been built thro' the whole extent of Muſſulmaniſm. But we ſhall follow the common Notion, and reſerve what relates to Judea for the following Chapter.

II. Damaſcus, notwithſtanding all the terrible Revolutions it has undergone, is ſtill conſiderable in Syria. The Chriſtians could not take it all the time of the Holy Wars. The Sultan defended it, as a Poſt of the greateſt Conſequence. Tamerlan carry'd immenſe Riches from it, after he had taken it in the Year 1402. The Jews and Chriſtians of that Country have a Tradition, That the Terreſtrial Paradiſe was in the Valley of Damaſcus. The latter think, that they obſerve a red Earth, of which the firſt Man was form'd, becauſe it ſeems moſt proper to make Fleſh, or rather, becauſe Adam was call'd Red. 'Tis ſaid, That they borrow'd this Tradition from the Arabians; who tell, That Schodad, the Cotemporary of Heber, Patriarch of the Hebrews, having reign'd two hundred and ſixty Years in this Country, built a City in it call'd Paradiſe †, which diſappear'd immediately after his Death. But there is no need of ſtealing the Arabian Fables, to place the Garden of Eden in the Valley of Damaſcus. Its an extremely happy Situation; its Fruitfulneſs and Beauty are enough to poſſeſs the Inhabitants with this Notion; and a learned Commentator of Geneſis, who runs not after the fabulous Tales of the Orientals, has nevertheleſs ſeated the Terreſtrial Paradiſe in theſe Places, tho' the Names of Euphrates and Tigris diſcover a very different Situation.

III. At Damaſcus they preſerve the Monuments of the Jews Cruelty towards St. Paul: Whether the Muſſulmans are as credulous as the Chriſtians in this particular, or that being more politick and ſubtle, they cheriſh a Credulity that is beneficial to 'em, becauſe they ſell the Sight of theſe Monuments very dear to the Chriſtians. 'Tis certain, they ſhew them not only the Houſe, but the Chamber where Ananias was, when God reveal'd to him, that he muſt go and find out St. Paul. The Chriſtians built a Church there, which is turn'd into a Moſch. They alſo ſhew the Houſe of Judas, in which the ſame St. Paul continued ſhut up till Ana-

* They divide it into five Provinces, Hennaſſerim, where is Aleppo; Hems, in which is Emaſa; Damaſcus, which has the general Name of the Province Scham; Arden, Galilee, or the Country of Jordan; Paleſtin, where is Paleſtine; Jeruſalem is call'd Beit Almohaddes, the Holy City; and the Temple Maſged Alaſca. Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. P. 772, & 773. † Gennet, Paradiſe, ib. p. 780.

nias

nias had instructed him. The Place where St. George was ston'd by the Jews, who accus'd him with letting St. Paul escape thro' a Gate which he had the Keys of, is well known. Some Travellers assert *, That the Accusation was well grounded, and that if St. George, who kept the Gate of the City, durst not open it, for fear of answering for it, yet at least he shew'd St. Paul the place of the Wall where he might get down. This Place has been wall'd up, and the Arabians imagine the City can be taken no other way. Great Devotion † is paid to the Tomb of St. George, on which there are burning Lamps, the Oyl whereof miraculously cures the sick Christians and Mussulmans, because they have Faith in the Miracle. Notwithstanding these Monuments of the Jews Cruelty against St. Paul, which must render their Posterity more odious, yet they still continue at Damascus. They have always had and still have a Trade, their Synagogues, and their Cachams, or Doctors, in this Place. And not content ‖ to have Synagogues in the City, they have a famous one in the Place where they think the Prophet Elijah call'd Elisha to be his Disciple. This is a Conquest they have made upon the Christians, who had built a Church in the same place. Lastly, They have near the City a publick Burying-Place, separated from that of the Christians but by a small Alley.

IV. Aleppo is the ancient Berea. It has always been considerable, tho' it has gone thro' different Hands, since the Caliphs took it from the Greeks. The famous Mr. Cuper has receiv'd an Inscription from thence, running thus; To Jupiter Madbachius, & Selamanez: to the Gods of the Country. The Learned have made several Conjectures about this unknown Monument. But may it not be said, 1. That Madbachius and Selamanez are two Epithets of Jupiter? for if Madbachius was another Divinity, he would be distinguish'd by the same disjunctive Particle as Madbachius and Selamanez. 2. We ought not to seek here for an Altar or Sacrifices, but the God of Union and Peace. Jupiter is often intitled, Jovi Pacifico, and the Word Selamanez leads us to this Interpretation as well as Madbachius *, which signifies Union. This Derivation †, which Mr. Le Clerc has noted, is much more natural than that of Sacrifices, in which a Letter must be chang'd. But this Learned Man makes a particular God of him, and confines his Function to the Conjugal or Political Union; whereas it might be turn'd into a general Elogy of Jupiter, who is the God of Peace and Union. 3. Andronicus, who has erected this Monument, thought he could join the Gods of the Country, Deos Indigites, with Jupiter, or else Madbachius and Selamanez are petty Gods of the Country that are not known. We thought, that in speaking of Aleppo, it was not amiss briefly to give our Notion upon this Monument, which has already given occasion for so many Conjectures ‖.

V. The Sultans of Aleppo have for a long time made Kennasserim their Capital, which afterwards gave its Name to the chief Province of Syria. But Aleppo has, for all that, been always a considerable Place. The Jews have been, and are at present numerous in it. They have there, as at Damascus, their Synagogues, and a share in the Trade. They commonly make a Figure on * Publick Festivals, and give Shews to denote their joy for the Prosperity of the Ottoman Empire, or for the Birth of the Sultan's Children, and thereby indeavour to increase † their Interest at Court, and particularly with the Governour whom they depend upon. The Favourite of the Grand Visier, who besieg'd and took Bagdet at the Head of a hundred thousand Men, was a Jew, born at Aleppo. He follow'd his Master to the Army, and the Power he had with him, gave a great Lustre to his Family which liv'd there, and to all that part of the Nation which was spread in Syria.

VI. 'Twas this City ‖ that produc'd the famous Impostor Zabathai Tzevi, who deluded this Nation in the last Century, pretending to be the Messiah. His Father was but a Poulterer at Aleppo, but yet he had the Ambition and Rashness to go about persuading the People, That he was the Redeemer of Israel, promis'd by the Prophet, and expected for so many Ages. He learnt betimes all that was necessary to be known, to act so great a part. Scarce was he come from School, but he set up for a Teacher. He preach'd in the Fields, in sight of the Turks, who laugh'd at him, whilst his Disciples admir'd him. At twenty four Years of Age he marry'd a young Jewess, whom he divorc'd without knowing her, and took another, with whom he also liv'd in Abstinence. It can't be conjectur'd, what was the use of these Marriages, repeated without Consummation, unless it was to amuse silly People with his love of Chastity. He fell upon the Study of Prophecies, which perfectly overturn'd his Head, by his applying them to himself. He imagin'd he was to ascend above the heights of the Clouds, as Isaiah had foretold *; and whether his Head was perfectly craz'd, or that he thought he had sufficient Authority to impose upon his Disciples, he ask'd them one day, Whether they had not seen him carry'd in the Air? and he upbraided those with Blindness that had not seen him. The wiser sort easily perceiv'd what a Man would come to, who so boldly boasted that he work'd Miracles, and pronounc'd the Name Jehovah. He was cited to appear before the Heads of the Synagogue of Smyrna, where he then was, and condemn'd to Death; but because no body would execute the Sentence, they only banish'd him.

VII. He went to Thessalonica, a City full of Jews, which he thought a proper Stage to act his part; but he was expell'd from thence, as well as from Athens, and several other Places of Greece; which oblig'd him to retire to Alexandria, where he got greater Reputation. He marry'd a third time, to a lewd Wench, whom her Jewish Parents had left in Poland, under the Conduct of a Christian Lord. He gave out, That the Spirit of the Father departing from his Body, had pass'd from Asia into Poland, to fetch his Daughter, and convey her stark naked into his House. Tzevi marry'd her, after she had run thro' Germany and Italy; and he had sufficient Authority to have her respected as the Queen of the Empire he was to conquer. This Woman's Brother, who was a Tobacconist at Frankfort, left his Shop to find out his Brother-in-law, with the hopes of sharing the Dignities of the Crown; but he return'd, after he had been cheated like the rest.

VIII. Tzevi, who travers'd the World, met with a Jew of Reputation at Gaza, call'd Nathan Levi, or Benjamin, to whom he communicated his Design. The Conjuncture was the more favourable, in that the Cabbalists prov'd from a Passage of Daniel, that the Messiah was to come in the Year 1675. Levi imbark'd in his Designs, and set up for the Prophet

---

* Stochove's Voyage to the Levant, p. 312. An. 1630. Thevenot's Continuation of the Voyage to the Levant, l. 1. t. 4. p. 50. An. 1664. † Thevenot ibid. Stochove p. 314. * דבק Debac, adhærere agglutinari. Those that derive it from זבב Zebac, change ך into ז. † Le Clerc Bibl. choisie t. 7. p. 144. ‖ See the Supplement of Mr. Jurieu's Critical History concerning Doctrines and Worship, p. 28, 41, &c. * Thevenot's Continuation of the Voyage to the Levant l. 1. † An. 1638. Stochove's Voyage to the Levant. ‖ Some make him born at Smyrna instead of Aleppo. * Isa. 14. 41.

Elias.

Elias, who was to be the Meſſiah's Forerunner. He aſſembled the Jews at Jeruſalem, and aboliſh'd the Faſt that was there celebrated in June, becauſe Sorrow was not ſuitable to the Feaſt of the Meſſiah. He declar'd Tzevi to be the Perſon expected. Part of the Nation was over-reach'd; and they flatter'd themſelves with the hopes of ſeeing Jeruſalem deliver'd by a Man who ſpecify'd the Month of September for the Period decreed for the Conqueſt and Ruin of the Grand Seignior. Wiſe Men, inſtead of being impos'd upon, were aware, that this Inſurrection would be the cauſe of their Deſtruction. Wherefore they oppos'd this new Meſſiah, and anathematiz'd him. He was oblig'd to quit Jeruſalem, and return to Smyrna, and from thence to Conſtantinople, where he hop'd to gain Followers; but twenty five Rabbins had prevented him, by Letters to their Smyrna Brethren, ſignifying, That he was an Atheiſt, and that the Man who ſhould kill him, would do as acceptable a Work to God, as if he had won many Souls. He parted from Conſtantinople to return to Smyrna, where his Preſence was neceſſary. He knew, that four Ambaſſadors ſent by Levi were to wait upon him there, and acknowledge him for the Meſſiah. This Embaſſy impos'd upon the People, and even on part of the Doctors, becauſe Levi, who ſent it, was an eminent Man among them. All the Multitude, deceiv'd by his Humility, and his Diligence to waſh himſelf every Morning, and to be firſt at the Synagogue, and eſpecially by his pathetical Sermons, own'd him for their King; and every one brought him Preſents, that he might be able to ſupport his Dignity.

IX. Levi did not forget himſelf: He perſuaded all that were willing to hear him, That Tzevi was the Prince of the Nation; That the Ottoman Empire was to fall under his Government; That they were only to wait nine Months, for which time he was to be conceal'd, and cauſe great Afflictions to the People; but that afterwards he ſhould appear with Glory, mounted upon a Lion, reducing the People to their Country; and that a ſtately Temple, wherein they ſhould make continual Sacrifices, ſhould at the ſame time deſcend from Heaven.

X. The Smyrna Doctors met to conſult a ſecond time, about an Affair which daily grew more important. The more Judicious of them did not find the Characters of the Meſſiah in Tzevi, nor thoſe of Elias in the Perſon of his Forerunner. For which reaſon they condemn'd him to Death; but as their Party was not the moſt numerous, they were forc'd to yield to the Multitude. Tzevi ſummon'd the People to the Synagogue, celebrated a new Feaſt, pronounc'd the Name Jehovah ſeveral times, changed ſome Words of the Liturgy. They acknowledg'd his Authority, and thought they ſaw ſomething Divine in his Perſon. A third Decree of Death, pronounc'd by the Rabbins, did not daunt him, as knowing no body durſt execute it. His Friends had gain'd the Cadi of Smyrna; upon whom he waited in his Palace, and obtain'd his Protection. The People publiſh'd, That Fire proceeded from Tzevi's Mouth when he ſpoke to the Cadi; that a Pillar of Fire had frighted the Turkiſh Governour, which had oblig'd him to ſend him away, inſtead of putting him to Death: They brought him back in Triumph, ſinging theſe Words of the Pſalm, The right hand of the Lord is exalted.

XI. Nothing was wanting but a Throne for this new King; wherefore he caus'd one to be erected, and another for his Royal Conſort, and he ſpoke from thence to his Subjects. He drew up a new Form of Faith, which every Body was oblig'd to receive, as coming from the Hand of the Meſſiah. A famous Jew, call'd la Peigne, continuing to oppoſe his Empire, he ſent to, and demanded of the Synagogue to puniſh him; upon their refuſal, he went himſelf at the Head of a Company of five hundred Men, and la Peigne avoided Death only by a haſty Flight. His own Daughters roſe againſt him, and ſtagger'd their Father's Faith. Many others, who had been incredulous, ran along with the Stream, or honeſtly believ'd they had been miſtaken. They artfully apply'd the Prophecies of the old Teſtament to this Impoſtor, and ſhew'd 'em accompliſh'd in his Perſon.

XII. When he ſaw himſelf exalted to ſo high a pitch of Power, he order'd the Name of the Ottoman Emperor to be eras'd from the Prayers to ſubſtitute his own; and before he undertook the Conqueſt of his Empire, he divided the Dignities and Employs of it amongſt his Favourites. He call'd himſelf the King of the Kings of Iſrael, and Joſeph Tzevi, his Brother, the King of the Kings of Judah. At laſt he departed for Conſtantinople, in a little Veſſel, whilſt moſt of the Jews made their march by Land. The Paſſage laſted thirty nine days, in which time the Grand Seignior was advertis'd of his coming, and order'd the Vizier Azem to arreſt him Priſoner, and to give him a ſound Baſtinado, which was executed.

XIII. This Adventure did not diſhearten the Jews. They call'd to mind Levi's Prediction, that the Meſſiah was to be conceal'd nine Months, during which the Nation ſhould ſuffer greatly. They took this for the accompliſhment of the Oracle, and this Misfortune confirm'd them in their Prejudice, inſtead of undeceiving them. The Criminal anſwer'd upon his Examination, That he had taken the Title of King whether he would or no, and to ſecure himſelf from the Violence of the Jews, who had forc'd him to it. This Anſwer oblig'd the Vizier Azem, who was going to the Siege of Candia, to treat him gently, and to ſhut him up in the Dardanelles. This was a new Miracle. The Jews maintain'd, The Grand Seignior had not power to put their King to Death, ſince he had not done it. They flock'd from all Parts to the Dardanelles; they won the Governour by Preſents; they made larger to the Meſſiah, who puff'd up with the Honours that were paid him, even in his Priſon, commanded all the Nation to celebrate the Feaſt of his Birth; diſpatch'd Ambaſſadors to all Parts to proclaim him the Meſſiah, and to publiſh the Miracles he had wrought, and ſtill perform'd. Laſtly, He gave plenary Indulgences to all that came and offer'd their Devotions at his Mother's Tomb.

XIV. But yet he was not without Enemies. Nehemiah Cohen, a Poliſh Jew, came to maintain to him in Priſon, the Vanity of his Pretenſions, and turned Muſſulman, that he might the better ruin him by revealing the whole Intrigue to the Caimacan. The Mufti was provok'd, becauſe Favour was ſhown to a Man who diſgrac'd the Mahometan Religion, in calling himſelf the Meſſiah. The Grand Seignior, at the requeſt of his Principal Officers, ſent for the Impoſtor to Adrianople, and order'd a Sword to be run into him, to try whether he was invulnerable.

XV. This Order put Tzevi into a Conſternation, who choſe rather to turn Muſſulman, at the ſollicitation of the Emperor's Phyſician, who had given him an Example, and his Wife did the ſame. Nevertheleſs, as the People will never be in the wrong, they were not entirely undeceiv'd. The Cabbaliſts aſſerted, That the Meſſiah was to continue ſome time among the Turks, as Eſther had liv'd with Ahaſuerus. But what Confuſion and Diſgrace muſt involve all thoſe who had any remainder of Shame? He has occaſion'd a Book concerning Three Impoſtors, differing from one another, of the ſame Title, which perhaps was never compos'd; for the three Impoſtors treated of in this Book I quote, are Zabathai Tzevi, Mahomet Bey or John Sigala, and Padre Ottomanno. This Article is ſomewhat long, but we could not omit it; and 'tis not amiſs to learn from theſe Circumſtances, how far an Impoſtor may carry his Impudence, and the People their Credulity.

ing

CHAP. XXIV.

The History of the Jews in Judea, at Sapheta, and in Jeruſalem.

I. Sapheta Peopled with the Jews. II. An Academy there, and famous. III. Moſes Cordoverus teaches there. IV. Dominic of Jeruſalem: Whether there were two of this Name. V. Two famous Profeſſors at Sapheta. VI. Moſes Alſchech born there. VII. Ozida preaches. Ridiculous and buffoonry Titles of Books among the Jews and Chriſtians. VIII. Moſes of Noghera, a Galilean, A Preſs at Sapheta. IX. Judas Jona: His Converſion. X. Few Jews at Jeruſalem. How that City comes to be neglected. XI. R. Jacob, Doctor at Jeruſalem, his Eye of Iſrael. XII. Diſputes at Sapheta againſt his Son Levi. Additions of Leo de Modena. XIII. The Patriarch of Jeruſalem a Jew in 1665.

I. ONE would think, that the greateſt number of Jews were to be found in Judea; and yet we deceive our ſelves if we ſeek for 'em there. Their Paſſion for the Holy Land is wonderfully cool'd, ſince it no longer flows with Milk and Honey for them. 'Tis made a piece of Devotion in the Synagogue, as well as in the Chriſtian Church, to go a Pilgrimaging, and to be bury'd there: But there are few that ſettle in that Country, becauſe there are not many ways of ſubſiſting and growing rich. Sapheta is the moſt populous and celebrated City amongſt 'em. They enjoy many Privileges there. For, 1. This City, ſituate in the Tribe of Nephthali, nine Miles from Bethſaida, upon a Mountain with three tops, is of moſt difficult Acceſs, and therefore it is ſhelter'd from the Incurſions of the Arabians, who plunder and lay waſte the Cities where they can enter. 2. I don't know whether the Turks are unwilling to unpeople this City, by ill uſing the Jews; or whether it be the Ottoman's Indulgence that draws the Jews thither *. But 'tis certain, they are more numerous and more kindly treated at Sapheta, than in all the reſt of the Ottoman Empire. A Traveller † affirms, That at the beginning of the laſt Century this City was Peopled with nothing but Jews; but he had not ſeen it. He was content with going to the Foot of the Mountain, without going into the Town; for one third of the Inhabitants are Turks, and the other two are Jews. He is guilty of a greater fault in taking it for Eſther's Country. It has an Academy in it.

II. This Academy was not yet erected at the end of the twelfth Century, ſince Benjamin de Tudela does not mention it; but it was quickly after. It is even grown very famous; and tho' for a great many Years the Oriental Jews have much neglected Study and the Sciences, yet they ſtill keep up Profeſſors and Doctors here, that are Men of Repute. Hither they ſend their Children to Study, as believing the Hebrew Tongue is here learnt in its Purity; as if that Language was annex'd to the Holy Land, and that the Doctors who teach it, who are often Strangers, ſpoke it better than other Rabbins. But 'tis the Prejudice of the People; and the Acadamy of Sapheta has been, for ſome Ages, what that of Tiberias was before, to which it has ſucceeded.

III. Here the moſt famous Cabbaliſt, that has appear'd ſince Simeon Jochaides, taught. He was born at Corduba, which gave him the Name of Moſes Cordoverus; but quitting Spain, towards the end of the thirteenth Century, he was one of the Pillars, and perhaps one of the firſt Founders of this Academy. He took ‖ for his Text, and the Title of his Work, theſe Words of the Canticles, Thou art a Paradiſe of Pomegranates; and, according to the Cabbaliſtick Mode, he found every thing he had a mind to. The Word Paradiſe includes the four Senſes that may be given to the Scripture. The P ſignifies the Literal Senſe, the R the Myſtical Senſe, the D the Enigmatical Senſe, and the S the Secret and hidden Senſe. We may judge by this of the reſt.

IV. Dominic of Jeruſalem taught in the ſame Academy for ſome time. He became Doctor after he had perform'd his Courſe of Studies, and read Lectures upon the Talmud. His Profeſſion of Phyſick, he practis'd at the ſame time, made him better known, than the Titles of Rau and Judge that were given him. The Sultan invited him to Conſtantinople, to be his Phyſician. He liv'd to the beginning of the laſt Century, and turn'd Chriſtian; tranſlated the new Teſtament into Hebrew, and at the ſame time anſwer'd ſome Objections of the Rabbins, againſt St. Stephen's Martyrdom. Criticks are at a loſs, becauſe Marſius * ſpeaks of another Dominic at Jeruſalem, who was, as the firſt, a Jew by Birth, a Phyſician to the Sultan in the laſt Century, and alſo a Convert to Chriſtianity. This Conformity in Name, Profeſſion, Vocation and Religions, is a certain Criterion, that they are one and the ſame Perſon; for tho' the Writer declares, in his Epiſtle Dedicatory, That he only relates what he has ſeen; yet he has not been ſo exact, but that he might confound an Event, which was pretty novel, when he went to Conſtantinople.

V. Few † have done more Honour to this Academy, than Moſes of Trany, and Joſeph de Karo, who had the Conduct of it about the middle of the ſixteenth Century. The one was born in a City of Apulia, and taught with ſo much Succeſs at Sapheta, that the Jews call'd him the Light of Iſrael, the Sinaite of Sinai, the Doctor that plucks up Mountains, becauſe he reſolves the Difficulties that are raiſed upon the Law. The great Buxtorf is miſtaken, in thinking, that he only publiſh'd Sermons; the Title of his Book manifeſts, that it is an Abſtract of the Jewiſh Civil Law; in which he aſcends up to the Fountain Head of the Laws, and diſtinguiſhes betwixt theſe that proceeded from Moſes, and others that had been handed down by Oral Tradition, and a third ſort, which are bottom'd only upon the Deciſions of the Rabbins.

* Fuller's Piſgah's Sight, l. III. † Stochove's Voyage to the Levant. ‖ Bartol. Bibl. Rab. t. iv. p. 230. t. ii. p. 282.
* Nicol. Murſius Relatione della citta de Conſtantinopoli con Riti, &c. del Ottomanno Imperio, p. 34. † Bartol. Bibl. Rab. t. iv. p. 31. & t. iii. p. 819.

VI. This

Joseph de Karo was a Spaniard, and went into Galilee, where he dy'd in 1575. He also explain'd the Law of the Nation with so much Applause, that he was call'd the Prodigy of the Universe.

VI. This Academy has not always been govern'd by Strangers, but had Doctors of its own Growth. Moses Alscheh was born * in this City, and distinguished himself in the seventeenth Century, not only by the Eloquence of his Sermons, but by the Commentaries he compos'd upon a part of the Law. All the Titles of his Works are Metaphorical; one is call'd the Eye of Moses, another the Rose of Sharon, the third the Lily of the Vallies He is much prais'd for attempting, in his Explication of Scripture, to produce something new; and being more devoted to the old Interpreters than the Moderns, he has exactly related their Sentiments, even when they favour'd the Christians. He † does not, for example, dissemble that the Messiah ought to be afflicted. On the contrary, he proves it by the Division the Ancients have made of Afflictions into three portions; one for the Patriarchs, another for the Jews, when they were banish'd out of the Holy Land, and the third relating to the Messiah. The Confusion he was in is easily observ'd, as to Isaiah's Prophecies; for having acknowledg'd, that the Prophet had the Messiah in view in the fifty third Chapter, he afterwards apply'd the Oracle to another Person, and at last ascends up to Moses, which is ridiculous.

VII. Samuel Ozida was another Preacher that thunder'd also at Sapheta, the Place of his Birth. He explain'd Jeremy's Lamentations, and intitl'd his Commentary, the Bread of Tears. Most of the Titles which the Jewish Doctors prefix to their Books are very odd; but they are not the only ones of this sort; and tho' the Palate of the present Age be much disgusted with these Metaphorical Titles, yet we still find very ridiculous ones to many Books. Father Maria Ghirlandi, Provincial of the Minims of Tuscany, has three Years since printed at ‖ Pistoria, from whence his Family came, a Collection of Sonnets, which he calls, A Garland of Poetick Motions for the Holy Heart of Jesus: Ghirlanda daffetti Poetici al Sacro cuor de Giesu. He promises as much for the Virgin. This Title is foolish for a Subject that requires Respect and Elevation; and the allusion of a Garland to the Name of Ghirlandi, is very childish for a Monk in an Age so discreet, and exempt from these Follies as ours is. We find another Work compos'd by Gomez de la Cruz, Professor of the Convent of Minims at Salamanca, intitl'd, El Meior Sol defiganno, el siempre Augusto Sacramento; the best Sun to be undeceiv'd by, the ever August Sacrament of the Altar. Father Nadal, a Jesuit in Sicily, has publish'd the Mines of Indulgences, and Purgatory overflow'd with Grief, because the Indulgences empty'd and depopulated it, le Meniere delle Indulgenze, el Purgatorio inundato di dolore. The Life also of Jesus Christ has been writ in Elegies, as Ovid's Metamorphosis has been some Years since in Stanzas. In these Elegies Love takes all sorts of Shapes; we there find nascent Love. This is the first Book. The second is miraculous Love. The third is suffering Love; and the Author concludes with triumphant Love. This is what he calls Amor Divinus adumbratus in Jesu Christo. 'Tis in vain to say, That these Frolicks are permitted the Sons of Apollo; for the Poets ought to renounce this liberty, or that of handling grave and important Subjects. At least, these People have no pretence to upbraid the Rabbins with their Allegorical Titles. But to return to the Doctors of Sapheta, that have occasion'd this Reflection.

VIII. Moses de Nagiara was also a Galilean, tho' some make him a Portugueze, because of the Family of Noghera, which was, or is still in this Country. He taught at Sapheta, and has left a Commentary upon the Pentateuch, which the Jews esteem.

The Jews had a Press there, in which they printed the Ritual, which Moses Gallant, Head of this Academy, compos'd in 1560. It has been said, That this Book was printed at Zaphat, a City of France. But this is a Mistake, for there is no City in France of that Name. The Jews have no Printing-House there; and we ought to read Galilee instead of Gallia. IX. Lastly, Judas Jona, who after his Conversion became the Learned Bartolocci's Master *, and put him upon the design of his Rabbinical Library, was born at Sapheta, and took the Degree of Doctor, or Rabbin, in this Academy. He was descended of a Spanish Family, who after Ferdinand's Expulsion, retir'd into Tuscany. Pius V. having expell'd it from thence, it pass'd into the East, where Judas Jona was born. Having gone thro' his Course of Studies, he came into the West, and determin'd at Amsterdam, the Validity of a Will, made by a Father in behalf of a Bastard-Child. Two Circumstances made this Judgment famous; one, that the Succession was of three hundred thousand gold Crowns; the other, That the Brother of the Deceas'd had taken Possession, by favour of a Sentence pronounc'd by the Rabbins of Venice. Judas Jona voided this Sentence, and that which he gave was approv'd by eighty seven Rabbins of Germany and Thessalonica. The Jews of Hambourg made him afterwards their Judge, and assign'd him a Salary; but he went from thence to Poland, where he turned Christian, and became Jeweller to Sigismond III. Wretched Fate for a Man of Letters! His Miseries increas'd, because the King having sent him to Constantinople, under pretence of seeking Jewels, he was taken for a Spy of the Cossacks, who had lately burnt a City upon the Banks of the Euxine Sea, and he had lost his Life if the Venetian Ambassador had not ransom'd him. He was sent to Italy, where he came and settled at Rome, and taught Bartolocci Hebrew; who like a grateful Disciple, vindicated him from the Errors imputed to him, and which disgrac'd his Christianity. He had † so strong a Memory, that if the Talmud had been lost, he could have restor'd it. Something therefore now and then that is good, comes out of Galilee. Of all the Cities of Judea, there is none where the Jews have subsisted longer, and still continue with greater Lustre and Security.

X. There are fewer Jews at Jerusalem than at Sapheta. They reckon but about a hundred Families, who have their chief Habitation upon Mount Sion. Some of 'em have Imploys in the Custom-House; others are Secretaries to the Governour; but the greatest part is made up of Beggars, and live upon Alms. They send in quest of 'em even to the West, where Wealth and Learning are retir'd. 'Twas upon this Errand that Jacob Tomerita took a Journey to Frankfort and Holland, in the Year 1684. His Father had retir'd from Portugal to a little Town in the Holy Land, bordering on Sapheta, call'd Tomer: His Brethren deputed him to seek something for their Subsistence, and at his Return he undertook to carry Mr. Ludolf's Letters to the Samaritans of Garizim, by whom he was known. Four Years after appear'd another Deputy from the Jews of Jerusalem, who came begging for 'em, which sufficiently proves their Poverty. When you ask them the reason of their want of Zeal to settle themselves at Jerusalem? they answer, That when the Messiah comes, that City shall be burnt by Fire from Heaven; and that afterwards a miraculous Rain shall extinguish this Fire, that this City having pass'd thro' Fire and Water, according to the Prophet's Expression, may be purg'd from the Impurities which the Christian and Mahometan have committed in it. We are afraid, say they, of being bury'd in this general Conflagration, and therefore we remove so far off of it. But were it not better to assign two natural Reasons for this want of Zeal for the Holy Land? One is, That the Mahometans look upon Jerusalem as a Holy Place; and therefore there are a great many Santons and devout Mussulmans, who have taken up their Abode there, who are Persecutors of the Jews as well as of the Christians, so that they have less Tranquility and Liberty at Jerusalem than in other Places; and as there is very little Trade, there is not much to be got, and this want of Gain drives 'em away.

* An. 1599. † Mosis Alsche in Isaiam ex vers. Constant. l'Emp. Præf. & p. 232, 238, 240. ‖ An. 1703. * Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. iii. † He dy'd in the Year 1668.

ging

XI. When Selim took it at the beginning of the sixteenth Century *, there was a famous Rabbin, who compos'd the Eye of Israel. This Work is a Collection of the Explications of the Law contain'd in the Talmud. Many Doctors had compil'd before what related to the Questions concerning Right and Rites; but Rabbi Jacob collected the Explications of the Law that were dispers'd in this great Book. He could not finish his Design, but Levi his Son, who was at least as Learned as the Father, put the last Hand to it, and publish'd it; giving at the beginning Publick Expressions of the Affliction he was still under for the too early Death of his Father.

XII. 'Twas this Work that occasion'd † the Commotion of the Sapheta Professors. As they were Contemplative Doctors, they mightily despis'd the Doctrines. They found in the Work of Jacob and Levi, Doctors at Jerusalem, things that displeas'd 'em. The Dispute was violent, and the Division great, as long as Levi liv'd; but the Jealousie of the Sapheta Professors dy'd with him. His Memory was honour'd, and his Work, which saved the reading of many huge Volumes, was received with wonderful Applause. Leo de Modena endeavour'd in the last Century || to perfect it, by adding the Opinions of many Doctors that were wanting. He gave an Index of the Passages, that they might be the easier found. He intitled his Additions, The House of Juda, and the Table or Index, The House of the Bread of Juda.

XIII. Lastly, 'Twas at Jerusalem, that in the Year 1665. we saw an Example of profound Dissimulation, and a Jew made Patriarch of the Christians. As this Patriarch * was not agreeable to the Jesuits, we may suspect their Integrity, and imagine, that they were willing to blemish his Memory, by accusing him after his Death of a Crime he was not guilty of. Those who shall be better inform'd of this Fact than we, may hereafter explain it; but we are told, That a Jew, whom the necessity of his Affairs oblig'd to change his Religion in Judea, so eminently distinguish'd himself among the Christians, that they promoted him successively to all the Orders of the Clergy, and rais'd him to the Patriarchate of Jerusalem, without perceiving his Dissimulation. But as his Ambition had no Bounds, he went from Jerusalem to Constantinople, to obtain that See, which was vacant. He was there seiz'd with a Distemper, which gave him not leave to doubt that his Death was approaching. Hereupon he resolv'd to throw off the Veil, under which he had been so long disguis'd. He call'd to his Bed-side many Grecian Bishops, and a great number of Jews, to whom he declar'd, That he had always believ'd the Jewish Religion the best; and that he renounc'd the Bishoprick of Jerusalem, to die in his old Profession, which he had never deserted but outwardly. Great was the Astonishment and greater still the Scandal, in Places where these Examples of Dissimulation are frequent, and the intention of Consecration necessary.

• An. 1517. † An. 1538. || An. 1635. * An. 1665. Hilarii Continuat. Phil. Cypr. Chron. Eccl. Græc.

CHAP. XXV.

Continuation of the State of Judea. Of the Samaritans that live there. Two Letters upon that Subject.

I. Mr. Beland's Letter concerning the Samaritans. II. Their Chronicle. III. They deny the Existence of Angels. IV. Simon Magus call'd himself the Messiah. V. The Samaritans Explication of the Urim and Thummim. VI. The Antiquity of the Sanhedrim prov'd. VII. Joshua's Fraud like that of the Gibeonites. VIII. The Explication of Balaam's Counsel. IX. A Fault in Josephus corrected by the Samaritan Chronicle. X. The Worship of a Pigeon at Gerizim. XI. The false Origin of the Samaritans. XII. A Letter of the Samaritans to their Brethren in England. XIII. Their Belief. XIV. Their Feasts. XV. When they celebrate the Passover. XVI. Purifications and Washings. XVII. Degrees of Kindred forbidden in Marriages. XVIII. Their Queries to the English. XIX. Their Entreaty to send a Deputy to Sichem. XX. The Subscription and Date of the Letter.

I. BEsides Jews, there are some Samaritans at Joppa, Gaza, Sichem, or Napolousse. We have already spoken of 'em. But I ought not to deprive the Publick of a Letter, that Mr. Beland *, who is wonderfully skill'd in the Oriental Languages, has written me upon this Subject.

Sir,

'II. I Send you ten Remarks upon the Samaritans 'Chronicle: They are but short, because I 'some time or other design to publish this Chroni-'cle, with my Notes upon it, if the Publick seem 'to desire it. The Samaritans give their Chronicle 'the Name of Joshua, because it begins with this 'Hero's Actions. They esteem this Book as much 'as the Pentateuch, and 'tis a Crime with them to 'sell it. My Copy is Arabick, Translated from the Hebrew, and transcrib'd by that which the Samaritans sent to Scaliger. They confess, That they have not the Hebrew Original, nor is it among the Jews; at least Mr. Ludolf and I, who made a most diligent search after it, were not able to discover it. We only found a Fragment in the Juchasin, compos'd by Ab Zachut, and commented by Sam. Schullam. The Commentator speaks thus in the last Page of his Notes, Printed at Constantinople; I have found and seen this in the Chronicle of the Samaritans. This Fragment contains the Wars of Joshua with Saubec *, and the Copy of the Letters he writ to that Prince. The Arabick Version is rather a Paraphrase than a Translation; and I am mistaken if it was not made since Mahomet, because I have observ'd many Phrases, and several ways of speaking, which we meet with in the Alcoran. As for the Hebrew, we can't guess the time when it was compos'd. The History is carry'd as far as the Conquests of Alexander the Great; but I believe this Work ought to be distinguish'd into two Parts; one containing the Conquests of Joshua, in which are thirty eight Chapters, but the following have no Connexion with the preceding; and this last Part, which mentions the Emperor Adrian, was probably only a Rhapsody of several loose Sheets sow'd to the Book of Joshua for fear they should be lost.

* Viro clariss. Jacobo Basnage Adrianus Relandus, Profess. Ultraject. S. IV. Nonas Aprilis, 1706.

'III. I have observ'd in this Work, That the Samaritans deny the Existence of Angels. Leontius had said before, that they acknowledge neither Angels, nor the Immortality of the Soul. It was fancy'd, that he confounded the Samaritans with the Sadducees; and it was endeavour'd to convince him of it by St. Epiphanius's Authority, who distinguish'd the Samaritans from the Sadducees by this Character, That the latter believe neither Angels nor Spirits. Hottinger and Father Morin did not question it, when they had consulted the Samaritan Pentateuch and Chronicle, because they often read there the Word Angels; but they did not take notice, that the Sadducees also make use of the same Word to express a Vertue, or an Instrument, which God uses to act by. 'Tis in this Sense the Samaritans speak of Angels, as well as the Sadducees; for in relating the History of Balaam, they say, That God sent an Angel of his Angels. This were enough, if they had the same Belief as the rest of the Jews upon this Article. But to shew that they deviate from the common Opinion, they explain themselves thus: God sent a Commandment of his Commandments, and the Servants of Balaam, who saw the Commandment of God, betook themselves to flight; but a speaking Instrument of the Divinity approach'd Balaam, God stood in the way, and Balaam saw the Instrument that was there. These Paraphrases, of which we might produce more Examples, prov'd, That the Samaritans meant by Angels God himself, or his Vertue, or some sensible Organ he employs for the Execution of his Orders: Or, as Justin Martyr tax'd some Christians with this, they think, That Angels are Vertues naturally united to the Deity, which he sends out when he pleases. The same thing appears from the Samaritan Pentateuch †, in which they often substitute God for Angels, and Angels for God.

'IV. Hottinger had already observ'd, that the Samaritans speak in their Chronicle of the great Angel; and that this Angel, rais'd above the rest, is the Messiah. But as they believe, that the Angels are only a Vertue and Emanation of God, may we not say, That Simon Magus boasted to be the Messiah, when he said, He was ‖ the great Power of God, that is, the great Angel?

'V. We find in this same Chronicle an Explication of the Urim and Thummim: For relating the manner of the Discovery of Achan's Theft, the Author says, That the Name of the Tribe of Judah, engraven upon the High-Priest's Breast-Plate was obscur'd; from whence it was concluded, that the Guilty was of this Tribe. Eliezer says also in his Sentences, Pirke, that the Name of the Tribe that had sinn'd, shed no Light. Raschi asserts * the same thing. Josephus also † affirms, That the Stones of the Breast-Plate had for two hundred Years past cast no Light, because of the Sins of the People. And the same Tradition is preserv'd by the Mahometans.

'VI. Many Christians have imagin'd, that the great Sanhedrim, establish'd by Moses, was abolished by his Death ‖. But we find a Proof to the contrary in the Samaritan Chronicle, since the Author mentions it a long time after the death of Moses. The Jews believe it as well as the Samaritans, and they have very good reason; for if Moses, the great Lawgiver, had need of this Council in his Life-time, it was much more necessary for his Successors, in the Government of the Commonwealth.

'VII. Tho' Joshua be the Hero of the Samaritan Chronicle, yet it does not forbear accusing him of using the same Artifice as the Gibeonites, when he sent Spies into the Land of Canaan; which Observation removes the difficulty found in the History of Joshua, that the Gibeonites did work wilily *, or employ'd deceit. For indeed, the difficulty vanishes, when we understand, that they only imitated the Example Joshua had given them.

'VIII. The Story of Balaam is told more exactly in the Samaritan Chronicle, than in the Book of Numbers †; and this Narrative may help to explain the Revelations of St. John: For Balaam spoke thus to the Kings that sent for him; You shall never be able to conquer the Israelites, so long as God shall protect them; and he will always protect them, as long as they do good Works: You must therefore draw them from the service of God, and to this end you must take them by their weak part, which is Whoredom. The God whom they adore hating all sorts of Impurity, will fight for them no more, and the Victory will be surely yours. Balaam's Advice was follow'd.

'IX. By this Chronicle ‖, a Fault may be corrected which is crept into Josephus; who relates, That an Impostor deceiv'd the Samaritans, by promising them to discover the Holy Vessels that Moses had hid under Mount Gerizim. The Error is manifest, since Moses did not enter into Canaan, and the Samaritans own it; but they say, That the Sacred Vessels were bury'd by Oziz, who was the fifth High-Priest from Aaron, and the Copyists have put the Name of Moses, as being better known than that of Oziz.

'X. The Jews accuse the Samaritans of having worshipped a Pigeon upon Mount Gerizim: But they deny they ever paid this Worship; and this Accusation is founded upon this, That in

---

* We have given an Abstract of them in Book II. † Genes. 5. 1. & 24. 9, 6, 15, 22. ‖ Act. 8. 10. * Ad Jos. 7. 17. † Joseph. Ant. l. 3. c. 9. ‖ I maintain this Opinion, and the Authority of the Chronicle is not sufficient to overthrow it; for its Author might have lived since the Maccabees, after the Establishment of the Sanhedrim, See our Book V. c. 1, 2. This is evident, since he speaks of the Impostor who deceiv'd the Samaritans. * Josh. 9. 4. הַמָּה גַּם they also. † Numb. 31. 16. Apoc. 11. 14. ‖ We have follow'd the faulty Text of Josephus, l. 2. c. p. 309. but it ought to be corrected. Mean time we see not what oblig'd the High-Priest to hide the Holy Vessels there.

Adrian's

'Adrian's time a Figure of a Pigeon was ſet upon this Mountain, which made it ſelf heard when any Samaritan came to worſhip upon the Mountain. We read this in their Chronicle.

'XI. They ſay, That the * Iſraelites, for ſo they call themſelves, were expell'd out of their Country by Nebuchadnezar, who re-peopled it by a Colony ſent from Perſia. The Fault of the Chronologer is groſs, ſince they confound Salmanaſar with Nebuchadnezar. But they don't ſtop here, but add, That at the return from the Captivity, a part of the Iſraelites went and ſettled themſelves upon Mount Sion, and the reſt preferr'd Mount Gerizim. They would have this to be the Origin of their Separation. St. Epiphanius has follow'd them, without examining the Sacred Hiſtory. Joſephus confirms what they ſay, That the Colony ſent to re-people the Holy Land came from Perſia; for he obſerves, That the Samaritans deſiring to ſecure themſelves from the Perſecution of Antiochus the Great, aſſerted, that they were a Perſian Colony. He adds alſo, That they were call'd Cuthæans, from the Name of a River and a Place of Perſia, call'd Cuthæas. However, this Place did not lie in Perſia, but depended only upon their Empire.

I am, &c.

XII. To this Letter we'll add that which they ſent to the Jews of England. They ſay, That Huntington † perſuaded 'em, they had Brethren at London; but he ſays, That the Samaritans were miſled by the Name of Iſraelites, and thought that all who went by the Name of Hebrews were Samaritans. They intruſted him with their Pentateuch, and a Letter we add here to ſhew their Style and Opinions. They have written ſince to Mr. Ludolph; but thoſe Letters which Huntington has brought back ‖ are fuller; wherefore we prefer 'em before all others, and if there be any obſcurity in 'em, we will endeavour to illuſtrate 'em with Obſervations, which ſhall be the Subject of the following Chapter.

A Letter of the Samaritans, to their Brethren in England.

'XIII. IN the Name of the Almighty, Adorable God.

'In the Name of the Great Lord, who is * by himſelf, our God, the God of our Fathers Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, who has ſaid in his Law, I am the God of Bethel, the Supreme God, Lord of Heaven and Earth, God Almighty, who has ſent Moſes, the Son of Amram, commiſſion'd with his Laws, and by his means has reveal'd the Holineſs of Mount Gerizim, and of the Houſe of God.

'We ſalute you, O Synagogue of Iſrael, the People of our Lord and Maſter, who has choſen this People above all Nations of the Earth; for you are a People Holy to the Lord. We call our ſelves Samaritans, and we aſſure you, our Brethren in Iſrael, that we are extremely devoted to Moſes the Prophet, and to the Holy Law. We obſerve the Sabbath as God has commanded; for on that day no body moves out of his Place, except it be to pay his Devotions at the Houſe of the Lord. As all thoſe who ſought God went to the Tabernacle of Witneſs, we do nothing there but read the Law, Praiſe God, and pay him our Thankſgivings; and whereas the Jews ride on Horſeback, go out of the City, light Fires on that day, and lie with their Wives: We ſeparate our ſelves the Night of the Sabbath, and light no Fire. The Jews don't waſh for every kind of Pollution; but we do, and purifie our ſelves thereby. We pray to God Evening and Morning, according to the Command he has given us, You ſhall offer me a Lamb in the morning, and another Lamb between the two evenings. We lie upon the Ground when we worſhip God before Mount Gerizim, the Houſe of God.

'XIV. We have ſeven ſolemn Feaſts, wherein we aſſemble. The firſt is the Feaſt of the Paſſover, at the time that our Fathers came out of Egypt. We ſacrifice the Lamb the fourteenth day of the firſt Month, at Evening, a little before Sun-ſetting, and eat it roaſted, with unleavened Bread and bitter Herbs. We make this Sacrifice only upon Mount Gerizim, and we prepare it on the firſt day of the Month Nizan, according to the Greeks †. We reckon ſeven days for the Feaſt of unleavened Bread; ſix whereof we eat Bread without leaven. On the ſeventh, we go early at break of day to Mount Gerizim, to celebrate the Feaſt and read the Law. When Prayers are ended, the Prieſt gives the Bleſſing to the People from the top of the Eternal Mountain. We don't begin to reckon the fifty days of the Feaſt of Harveſt like the Jews, from the Morrow of the Feaſt of the Paſſover; but we reckon 'em from the day following the Sabbath that happens in the Feaſt of unleavened Bread, till the Morrow of the ſeventh Sabbath, on which we celebrate the Feaſt of Harveſt upon Gerizim. We celebrate alſo the ſeventh Month, which begins with the Feaſt of Trumpets. Ten days after is that of Propitiations. In which we ſing Hymns and ſay Prayers, from one Day to the other Night and Day. The Women and Children faſt as well as the Men, and we diſpenſe with none but thoſe that ſuck; whereas the Jews diſpenſe with all under ſeven Years old. We obſerve the Feaſt of Tabernacles upon Mount Gerizim, the fifteenth of the ſeventh Month. We ſet up Tabernacles according to the Order given us by God ‖, Ye ſhall take you the boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm-trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook. We ſpend ſeven days in joy under theſe Tents, and on the eighth we end the Feaſt of the Lord with an Hymn.

'XV. We very circumſpectly obſerve, whether the Conjunction of the Sun and Moon happen in the Night, or in the Day before Noon. If it happen before Noon, that Day is the firſt of the Month; but if it happen at Twelve o' Clock, or a little after, we delay the beginning of the Month till the Morrow: If the Conjunction be Lunary, the Month continues twenty nine Days, but thirty if it be Solary. If the new Moon falls on the eleventh of the Month Adar of the Greeks, we intercalate a Month, and we reckon thirteen that Year; and the Month that immediately follows, is the firſt Month of the Year. But if the Month begins on the twelfth of Adar, or ſome days after, then that is the firſt Month of the Year, and we reckon but twelve; for the Week of unleavened Bread muſt be in the Month Nizan. The Jews

* We have related the Fact, l. 2. c. 1. p. — † We have related what he ſays, t. 2. p. — becauſe we had not at that time theſe Samaritan Letters. ‖ Verſio Latina Epiſtolæ Samaritarum qui Sichem incolunt, ad fratres ſuos in Anglia, cum Epiſtolis à Ludolfo, p. 26, &c. * Cellarius hath tranſlated τῷ ὄντως ὄντι, which eſſentially exiſts. † In the Letters the Samaritans writ to Scaliger, it is the fourteenth of the Roman Month Niſan. Monſ. de Peireſe, into whoſe Hands this Letter fell upon Scaliger's death, imagin'd that the Sichemites had eſpouſed the Cuſtom of the Roman Church, and their Moveable Feaſts. Father Morin, who had ſtudy'd the Jewiſh Doctors afterwards, committed the ſame Fault. But the Romans, in modern Authors, are the Greeks. The Samaritans here clearly explain themſelves. Morini Vita p. 30. inter Ant. Eccl. Or. Ep. 31. p. 303. ‖ Levit. 23. 40.

'reckon otherwiſe than we: We begin the Sabbatick Year and the Jubilee from the firſt day of the 'ſeventh Month.

'XVI. We ſprinkle the Water of Separation the 'third and fourth day, upon all that are defil'd by 'the Contact of Women, and we ſprinkle it ſeven 'days upon the Woman who has an Iſſue upon her *. 'The Woman who is deliver'd of a Boy ſeparates 'only forty one days; and eighty if it be a Girl. 'The Circumciſion is exactly made the eighth day 'after the Birth, without deferring it one ſingle 'day, as do the Jews. We purifie our ſelves from 'the Defilements contracted in Sleep, and we touch 'none of the unclean things ſpecify'd in the Law, 'without waſhing in clean Water. We offer to 'God the Fat of the Victim, and give the Prieſt 'the Shoulder, the Jaw, and the Ventricle.

'XVII. 'Tis not lawful for us to marry a Niece, 'or a Couſin, as is done by the Jews. We believe 'in Moſes, and in Mount Gerizim. We have Prieſts 'of the Race of Levi, deſcended in a right Line 'from Aaron and Phineas. We are all of the Tribe 'of Joſeph, by Ephraim, Manaſſes; and of the Tribe 'of Levi. Our Habitation is in the Holy City of 'Sichem and at Gaza. We have a Copy of the 'Law, written in the time of Grace, in which we 'read theſe Words. I Abiſhai the Son of Phineas, the 'Son of Eleazar, the Son of Aaron, have written this 'Copy at the Door of the Tabernacle, in the thirteenth 'Year of the People of Iſrael's entrance into the Land of 'Canaan, upon its Frontiers. We read this Law in 'Hebrew, which is the Holy Tongue, and do nothing but according to the Commands of God, 'given us by Moſes, the Son of Amram, our Prophet, upon whom is Peace for ever and ever.

'XVIII. We give you notice, you that are our Brethren, Children of Iſrael, That R. Huntington, an 'Uncircumcis'd, is arriv'd here from Europe, and 'has acquainted us, That you are a great People, 'compos'd of Men pure and holy, like our ſelves, 'and that you have ſent him to deſire of us a Copy 'of the Law; to whom we would not give Credit, 'till he had written before us ſome Characters of 'the Holy Language, in order to aſſure you, that 'we have the ſame Moſaick Religion that you profeſs, and if we had not been willing to oblige you 'we ſhould not have ſent a Copy of the Law by the 'hands of an Uncircumcis'd, for that is a ſhame to 'us. Nevertheleſs, we have committed it to him 'with two other little Books, that we might not 'abſolutely deny your Requeſt. We alſo conjure 'you in the Name of the Living God, not to deny 'ours, and to tell us what Religion you are of? 'Tell us what is the Language you ſpeak, the City 'you live in, the King that governs you, and what 'Religion he profeſſes? Have ye any Prieſts of the 'Race of Phineas? Have ye only one Prieſt? In 'the Name of God tell us the Truth, without any 'ſhadow of Diſſimulation, and ſend us a Copy of 'the Law, as we have ſent you ours. Send us alſo 'ſome Learned Men, ſome Prophets, ſome Perſons 'of Repute, and eſpecially ſome Deſcendant of 'Phineas; for know, that God has choſen us Children of Iſrael to be his People, and to live at Ge'rizim, according to what he has ſaid, You ſhall ſeek 'their habitation, and ſhall go there. He has ſaid alſo 'You ſhall keep three Feaſts every Year; the Males ſhall 'rejoyce three times a Year before the Lord. Know alſo, that all the Prophets are bury'd in the Territory of Sichem; our Father Joſeph, Eleazer, Ithamar, Phineas, Joſhua, Caleb, the Seventy Elders, 'Eldad and Medad.

'XIX. If you are willing to oblige us, acquaint 'us, Whether you are devoted to Moſes and his 'Law, to Gerizim and the Houſe of God; and ſend 'us ſome Perſons, without being concern'd about 'the length of the Journey. Don't intruſt a Jew, 'for they hate us. If you ſend us any Deputy, give 'us notice of it by ſome Friend. If ye have the 'Book of Joſhua, and any Liturgy, ſend us that alſo. Tell us what your Law is. As for us, we call 'the Law, what begins with the firſt Word of Geneſis, and ends with the laſt of Deuteronomy. Cauſe 'all this to be Copied for us in the Holy Tongue, 'and tell us by what Name you go? We adjure 'you, by the Name of the Living God, not to ſuffer a Year to run over your Heads without giving 'us an Anſwer. In the mean time, we bleſs God, 'the Lord of Heaven and Earth, and we implore 'his Mercy and his Juſtice, to inſtruct you in all 'that can pleaſe him, and to guide you in the good 'way, Amen. May he preſerve you, and deliver 'you from the Hands of your Enemies, and gather 'you together from your Diſperſions, into the 'Land of your Fathers, thro' the Merits of Moſes.

'XX. We add, that this is our Faith: We believe in God, in Moſes his Servant, in the Holy 'Law, in Mount Gerizim, the Houſe of God, and 'on the Day of Vengeance and Peace. Bleſſed for 'ever be our God, and let his Peace reſt upon Moſes, the Son of Amram, the righteous, perfect, pure 'and faithful Prophet.

'We have written this Letter at Sichem, near Gerizim, the xv. Day of the vi. Month, which is the 'xxvii. of the Lunary Month, in the 6111th Year 'of the Creation of the World, according to the 'Greeks; the ſecond from the Year of Reſt. This 'Year the ſeventh Month will begin the iv. of Elul, 'according to the Greeks; and the next Year is the '3411th from the entrance into the Land of Canaan, 'God be bleſſed.

'May this Letter, by the help of God, arrive into the City † England, to the Sonagogue of the 'Samaritan Children of Iſrael, whom God preſerve.

'It is written by the Synagogue of Iſrael, dwelling 'at Sichem. Mechab, the Son of Jacob, a Deſcendant of Ephraim, the Son of Joſeph, was the Secretary.

Theſe two Letters are conſiderable, as repreſenting the preſent State of the Samaritans in Judea, and giving new light to what we have ſaid of their Chronicle and Divinity. It would be uſeleſs to add at preſent, the Letter which the Samaritans have written to the famous Mr. Ludolph, as containing the ſame things. If there be any thing particular, we will inſert it in the following Chapter, with Mr. Cellarius's Notes; who has Printed 'em, and writ upon this Subject with that exact and profound Erudition obſervable in all his Works.

* A Proſluvio. † Angliam urbem.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVI.

Reflections upon the foregoing Letters.

I. Whence the Samaritans derive their Name. II. Observations upon Sichem, or Naples. III. Gerizim, a fertile Mountain. Whether the Bleſſing was pronounced there. IV. The Samaritan Characters more ancient than the Hebrews. V. The Shekels uncertain. VI. Their Sacred Books. VII. The Name of Jehovah ineffable, and ſo is that of the Meſſiah. VIII. The Supreme Authority of the Samaritan Prieſt. IX. His Genealogy: His Images. X. The Meſſiah, who ſhall come out of Ephraim. The Original of this diſtinction. XI. The Samaritans accus'd of worſhipping a Pigeon, the miraculous Bird of Joſhua. XII. Bochart confuted about the Pigeon of the Aſſyrians. XIII. A braſs Figure plac'd upon Gerizim, that ſpoke. XIV. The laſt Conjecture about this Fable. XV. The Jews accus'd of worſhipping an Aſs's Head. XVI. Reflections upon this Accuſation. XVII. The Samaritan Chronicle not ancient. XVIII. Places where the Samaritans dwell.

THO' we have explain'd the Samaritan Religion, yet we'll here add ſome Obſervations to illuſtrate many places of the Letter to the Engliſh, and of that we have receiv'd this Year * concerning the Book of Joſhua.

I. Mr. Ludolph imagin'd, That the Samaritans, having preſerv'd their Ancient Name, did not pretend to conceal its Original. However, they were offended at the Superſcription of his Letter to them, To the Sons of Schomron, becauſe they would not be thought to deſcend from Somer, the Owner of the Mountain upon which that City was built. But they think themſelves the Depoſitories and Guardians of the Law. We know not, ſay they in their Anſwer †, what is the meaning of the Word Schomrom: Know, that we are the Children of Iſrael, pure Samaritans, and Holy Obſervers of the Law. A Scholiaſt of Homer pretended, that Samaria borrow'd its Name from the Tomb that Mars erected to his Son Aſcalaphus. Samaria was the Monument of Mars, σῆμα Ἄρης, This is a Viſion; for Aſcalaphus dy'd not at Troy, nor was his Body carry'd to Judea or Samaria. But the Notion of the Samaritans, who make this Name a Subject of Glory and Vanity, is no leſs Chimerical. Nevertheleſs there are Great Men among the Chriſtians that authorize 'em in it. We have already obſerv'd, that St. Epiphanius call'd them the Keepers of the Law; and afterwards confounding Salmanazar with Nebuchadnezar, he maintains, that the latter ſent a Colony into Judea to keep the Land. To which we add, that || St. Jerome thought the Etymology ſo good, that he pray'd to the Samaritan, that is to ſay, God, to keep his Friend ſound in Body and Mind. Leontius of Byzantium ſays * alſo, That the Colony ſent to preſerve Judea, took the Name of Samaritans, becauſe this Word in Hebrew ſignifies Keepers. We can't ſufficiently wonder, that the Chriſtians, who have ſeen the Origin of this Name in Scripture, ſhould be ſo lamentably miſtaken, and trifle with the ambiguity of a Name, ſince they have no Intereſt to humor the Vanity of the Samaritans.

II. At preſent they prefer the Title of Sichemites before that of Samaritans, as appears by the Subſcription of all their Letters; and 'tis eaſie to gueſs the reaſon of it, becauſe they inhabit this City, whereas Samaria is deſtroy'd. Beſides, the Jews at Jeruſalem, their Neighbours, give 'em not leave to be ignorant of the true Origin of the Title of Samaritan, which is odious. Sichem was the City of the Patriarchs, whoſe Deſcendants they pretend to be; and therefore they preſerve the Name of it, rather than that of Naples, or Napolouſſe, which the Arabians at preſent give it, and which it had in Joſephus's time. For † Veſpaſian paſs'd thro' the Lands of Samaria thro' Naples, which was alſo call'd Mabortha. This laſt Word is not well known. Pliny has changed it into Mamortha; and we obſerve another Change in a Medal of Marcus Aurelius, where it is call'd,

ΦΛ. ΝΕΑ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΛ. ΜΟΡΘΙΑ.

Flavia Neapolis Metrapol. Morthia.

We find || Pliny juſtify'd with an Obſervation, that the Emphatical Article Ma of the Hebrews, is retrench'd from the Medal, which could contain nothing inſignificant; and this Word is explain'd by that of Lord or Miſtreſs, as if Naples was the Miſtreſs and Capital of the Country. But it was enough to have call'd this City the Metropolis, without intitling it Miſtreſs, a Name that it did not deſerve; for Samaria not being deſtroy'd in Joſephus's time, ſo vain-glorious a Title could not be given to the City of Naples, which held but the ſecond Rank. We are told alſo that Mamortha ſignifies the Water of Lords, becauſe of Jacob's Well, near which Jeſus Chriſt diſcours'd with the Samaritan Woman. But Ainſworth * judiciouſly obſerves, that the Plain of Moreh border'd upon Sichem. Indeed it was there that God appear'd to Abraham, and where this Patriarch built an Altar to him. 'Tis eaſie to conceive, that the Greeks have coin'd Morthia and Moriia of the old Word † Moreh, which was pronounc'd with a ſtrong Aſpiration. Mamorthia has the ſame Derivation, only adding an Article to the firſt Word.

The City Naples did not always implicitly follow the Intereſts of Samaria, tho' it was engag'd in the ſame Schiſm; for it aſſerted Niger's Party, whilſt Samaria continu'd faithful to Severus; for which reaſon this Prince || granted Samaria ſome Privileges, whilſt he took away thoſe which Naples had, till Caracalla obtain'd their Reſtoration. It often happens, that two Neighbouring Cities eſpouſe a different Intereſt in Civil Wars.

III. We have ſaid enough of Gerizim, that Holy Mountain, which the Samaritans make ſo frequent mention of in all their Letters. We will only add the Remark of a Jew, who aſſur'd * Mr. Ludolph, that this Mountain was very fertile, water'd with many Fountains, and very pleaſant; whilſt that of Ebal is dry and barren. Nevertheleſs, an ancient Poet, whoſe Fragments Euſebius has preſerv'd, impugns this Notion, when deſcribing theſe two Mountains, he repreſents 'em † as equally cover'd with Trees and Herbs.

---

* An. 1706. † Epiſt. I. Sicchemitarum Ludolfo, p. 2. || Hieron. in Epitaph. Lucinii Bœtici. * Leont. de Sectis. † Joſeph. de bello l. 4. c. 26. p. 890. || Cellarius Conjectan. Hiſtoriæ Samarit. p. 10, 11. * Ainſworth's Annotations. Deut 11. 5. 30 Geneſ. 12 6. † מורה || Spartian. in Severo p. 67. * Ludolf. Not. ad 1 Epiſt. Sichem. p. 20. † Theodotus apud Euſebium Præp. Evang. l. 9. c. 22. p. 476.

'E-

Ἓν αὐτῆς ὄρος μαλ' ἄγχι δύ' ἄκρεα φαίνετ' ἐρυμνὰ
Ποίης τε πλήθοντα καὶ ὕλης.

Tecti junctо prope vertice montes,
Hinc gemini excipiunt, herbaſq; nemuſq; miniſtrant.

Should we prefer the Teſtimony of a Poet before an Eye-witneſs, or ſay, that Mount Ebal, which is at preſent barren, has loſt its ancient Fruitfulneſs? 'Tis more probable, that the Poet took the liberty to confound theſe two Mountains, and gave Ebal a fecundity not belonging to it, that he might not diſgrace a Country he was repreſenting as infinitely fine. God choſe Mount Ebal to pronounce the Curſes on, becauſe its Barrenneſs was an Image of his Juſtice and Anger; whilſt the Beauty of Gerizim repreſented his Benediction and Mercy. Benjamin de Tudela confirms the Teſtimony of the modern Jew, and confutes the Greek Poet; for he affirms, that Mount Ebal was a Rock.

IV. The Characters the Samaritans make uſe of in their Letter, are very ancient. Scaliger affirm'd they were the ſame that were us'd by the Phenicians. His Opinion has been conteſted, about which it is pretty difficult to determine, ſince Proofs are wanting on both ſides, and we have neither Manuſcript nor Monuments old enough to depend upon. The greateſt difficulty ariſes from the jealouſie of the Jews, who maintain, That they have preſerv'd their ancient Letters, and that the Samaritans are Innovators. Some Chriſtians * ſupport this Opinion by the Teſtimony of the Goſpel, becauſe the Samaritan Jod is not the leaſt Letter of the Alphabet, as Jeſus Chriſt declares, whereas it is with the Jews. They produce ſeveral Medals, and ſeveral Teſtimonies out of the Talmud to confirm it. Scaliger, Father Morin, and many Learned Men, declare for the Samaritans againſt Buxtorf and Lightfoot; and obſerve with St. Jerome, that Eſdras returning from the Captivity, chang'd the ancient Characters for thoſe of Chaldee, which facilitated the reading of the Sacred Text, as being better known: And indeed, if it be true, as we have ſaid, that the Samaritan Pentateuch was brought to 'em before the return from the Babyloniſh Captivity, it is natural to ſay, they have preſerv'd the Hebrew Characters, and thoſe of the ancient Original. Euſebius attributes to Eſdras a Criminal Motive for the change of the Letters, becauſe he was afraid of having any Conformity with the Samaritans; but how did Euſebius know what was Eſdras thought? 'Tis much more probable, that the People having forgotten the old Hebrew, which was difficultly underſtood, they by degrees wrote the Law in Chaldee Characters, which they were more us'd to, becauſe the Interpretations and Paraphraſes were made in this Language; and ſo there is no need of aſcending up to Eſdras, nor making him the Author of an Innovation, which would have ſcandaliz'd the Jews.

V. The Preſumption therefore lies on the ſide of the Samaritans; but it muſt be own'd, that deciſive Arguments are rare, and even uncertain; for † the Criticks, who have moſt carefully examin'd the Samaritan Characters in Manuſcript and Print, complain, that they find conſiderable changes and variations, and hence proceeds the raſh Accuſation of their changing their T, for fear the Croſs ſhould be diſcover'd in it, which is their ſubject of Scandal. 2. The Teſtimonies of the Talmudiſts and other Jews, heap'd one upon another are inſignificant, becauſe they all liv'd in Ages too remote from the Origin of the Samaritan Pentateuch, or the return from the Captivity, to ſpeak exactly of it. And 'tis the more uſeleſs to conſult 'em, becauſe that they not only want means to ſupport their Conjectures, but are Parties in this Affair. 3. Nor doth the Goſpel afford any Argument ſince Jeſus Chriſt ſpoke of the Figure of the Jod, as it was in his days. He could have no regard to the Samaritan Characters, but to thoſe that were us'd at Jeruſalem, and were brought from Chaldea. Laſtly, We can't depend upon the Authority of the Shekels; not only becauſe moſt of 'em are Modern ‖, and minted by Impoſtors, but we often read theſe Words, Jeruſalem the Holy, which diſcover, that theſe Shekels were not ſtruck by the Samaritans, tho' they go by their Name. Vilalpand doted with a witneſs, when he found the Prophet Samuel in one of theſe Shekels; as if ſome of them had been ſtruck whilſt the firſt Temple ſtood, and were preſerv'd till now. Thoſe that have been lately produc'd from the Cabinets of ſome of the Learned, could not have been ſtruck by the Samaritans, in the Year 124 of the Æra of Alexander, in memory of the deliverance from the Greeks; for the Samaritans went by the Æra of the Seleucides, to whom they were ſubject, and were not deliver'd from the Subjection to the Greeks, till Hircanus reduc'd 'em under his, by the taking of Samaria. The Beſieg'd defended themſelves ſo vigorouſly, that it is not likely that they look'd upon Hircanus's Conqueſt as a Deliverance, whoſe Remembrance they were to celebrate. Beſides, the Years did not agree. The Figure of a Temple, and that of a Man cleanſing it from the Impurities of the Gentiles, gives occaſion to believe, that the Dedication of the Temple by Judas Macchabeus, in the fourth Year *, from the Reformation of Sion, was ſignify'd by theſe ancient Monuments. But neither the Samaritans, nor the Jews could at that time have ſtruck this Medal, becauſe the Samaritans were not at liberty; and would the Jews have engraven upon the publick Monuments of Deliverance, the Characters of the Samaritans, who were their Enemies, and in actual War with 'em? The Shekels therefore were ſtruck many Ages after by Impoſtors, who thought to give a more venerable Air of Antiquity to their Medals, by preſerving the old Hebrew or Samaritan Characters, concerning which we can produce nothing but Conjectures.

VI. They wrote † to Scaliger, That they could not ſend a Copy of the Law by the Hands of an Uncircumcis'd. But afterwards they made no great ſcruple to intruſt one with Dr. Huntington, who paid them perhaps better than Scaliger would have done. Our Synagogue, ſaid they ‖, our Judgments and Cuſtoms are like thoſe of the Jews; but the Scripture of the Jews is the Scripture of Eſdras, who may he periſh and be curſed eternally. This difference conſiſts, not only in the Characters, but in the Books; for they read no other Book than the Law, which begins with this Word, In the beginning, and ends with theſe, *In the ſight of all Iſrael. We have * the Book of Joſhua, but we read not the Writings of the Prophets receiv'd by the Jews.* Abulpharages ſays alſo, That the Samaritans receiv'd no other Sacred Book than the Law, that is, the five Books, for thus it ought to be tranſlated; and the Verſion is evidently wrong, which renders theſe Words thus, they believe God to be corporeal. Mr. Ludolph †, who has criticis'd this Fault of Dr. Pocock, imagin'd, That the Samaritans would read and admire the Books of the other Prophets, if any one would be at the expence of ſending them

* V. Cellarii Collectanea Hiſt. Samarit. p. 43. † Aleander and Father Morin. ‖ Morini Ep. Aleandro, Aleandri Morino inter Antiquit. Orient. Ep. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. * They reckon the 148 Year of Alexander's Æra. † Samaritan. Ep. 1. in Antiq. Orient. p. 126. ‖ Samaritan. Ep. 2. ibid. p. 131. * Epiſt. 2. Sichem Ludolf. p. בראשית & finit. ישראלבל. † Ludolf. Not. ad Ep. Sichem. p. 21, 22.

tran-

tranſcrib'd in their Characters. But this is impoſſible; for they have too great an Intereſt to reject the Works of David and Salomon, and moſt of the Prophets. The Doubt could only relate to ſome Book made by Schiſmatical Prophets, or the Deliverance obtain'd by Eſther, in which the ten Tribes had a greater ſhare than the reſt of the Jews; ſince it arriv'd under Darius, Son-in-law to Cyrus, who had already ſent back the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin to Jeruſalem. However, we have already obſerv'd, that the Cuthæans were but little concern'd about what happen'd to the old Inhabitants of Samaria, before they came into their Room. Nor perhaps did they concern themſelves much more in the Glory of their Deliverance, eſpecially when they ſaw, that the other Jews kept the Feaſt of it, and added Eſther's Hiſtory to the other Sacred Books. Indeed *, the Jews ſo eſteem it at this day, as to affirm, That all the Writings of the Prophets and Holy Penmen ſhall periſh at the coming of the Meſſiah, but that this ſhall remain, becauſe it muſt laſt as long as the Pentateuch; and tho' the remembrance of all ancient Afflictions ought then to be blotted out, yet ſtill the Feaſt of the Lots ſhall continue to be celebrated, and the Hiſtory thereof to be read, becauſe Eſther has ſaid, the Feaſt of Purim ſhall never be aboliſhed, and that the remembrance of it ſhall remain to Poſterity. The modern Samaritans might intereſt themſelves farther than the Chriſtians, in the Fate of thoſe they conſider as their Anceſtors, and whoſe Deliverance was ſo glorious. But we need only be acquainted with the Spirit of Schiſm, to know, that People deſpiſe a Book proportionably as their Enemies eſteem it. Tho' the Book of Eſther be for the Glory of the Samaritans, yet I queſtion whether they would read it, tho' it were tranſcrib'd for 'em into their Characters. The difficulty would be much greater as to the other Books, ſince it would be making a great advance towards the Jews, to receive their Canon in Scripture, wherein they would find the Samaritans Condemnation.

Mr. Ludolph ſays farther, that the Samaritans receive the Book of Joſhua. I believ'd ſo too; but yet I muſt not diſſemble, that Mr. Beland's Letter has much ſtagger'd me, and that the Veneration they have for their Chronicle, which they ſtyle Joſhua, and equal with the Pentateuch, perſuades me, that 'tis this Chronicle they call the Book of Joſhua the Son of Nun; or rather, we muſt diſtinguiſh the old Samaritans, from thoſe that have liv'd ſince the writing of this Fabulous Book. The former receiv'd the Book of Joſhua, and the other Hiſtorical Writings publiſh'd before the Schiſm; ſince they have taken thence moſt of the Events, and inſerted 'em in diſguiſe into the Chronicle we ſpeak of. But this Chronicle, publiſh'd in Arabick, has ſunk the true Book of Joſhua, which they regard with leſs eſteem. As for the Hymns and Pſalms which they promis'd † to ſend Scaliger, we muſt not underſtand by 'em the Pſalms of David or Aſaph, but certain particular Hymns introduc'd into their Liturgy, and repeated when they celebrate their Feſtivals. Caſtellus, who had ſeen the Liturgy of the Samaritans us'd in the Synagogue of Damaſcus, has interſperſed ‖ ſeveral Extracts of it in his Dictionary, by which we may judge of it.

The Samaritans are more Superſtitious than the Jews about the Sabbath; for they declare in their Letters, That they depart not from their Place; whereas the others, in times of Perſecution, walk, and allow Flight, when neceſſity requires. To juſtifie themſelves they tell, * That the Emperor having notify'd a very harſh Declaration to the Jews of Sephoris, they conſulted Eleazar, the Son of Perara, what was to be done in the Caſe. The Doctor durſt not ſpeak openly, that they ought to betake themſelves to their Heels; but he made a Sign, which gave them ſufficiently to underſtand it. Don't ask me, ſaid he afterwards, but conſult Jacob, Moſes and David, who made the beſt of their way when they thought it neceſſary; and indeed, the Doctors have ſince decided, that the Sabbath may be prophan'd to ſave a Man's Life, when he is purſued by Robbers or Heathens; and even Joſhua violated it to take Jericho.

VII. We have obſerv'd Aben Ezra's Accuſation of the Samaritans, of ſubſtituting the Idol Azima for the true God, in the beginning of Geneſis But we muſt here add Mr. Ludolph's Conjecture, who thinks that this Accuſation ſprung from hence, That the Samaritans, who pronounce not the ineffable Name Jehova, make uſe of the Word Schemah. Aben Ezra, who found perhaps this Word ill written in his Copy, inſtead of Jehova, or Elohim, thought that thoſe Schiſmaticks worſhipped Aſchimah, and corrupted the Scripture, which is evidently falſe. If it be objected, That the Samaritans having loſt the true Pronunciation of the Name of God, call'd him Jave, as Theodoret affirms, I have two things to anſwer: One, That the Samaritans might have many different Terms to expreſs the Deity; the other, That ſince Theodoret to Aben Ezra's time, they might have chang'd the Word Jave into Schemah, which ſignifies the Name by way of Excellence. We ought to be much more ſurpriz'd that they make any ſcruple to pronounce the Name Jehova, ſince this Superſtition aroſe but ſince the return from Babylon. One would think they could not borrow this Cuſtom from the Jews, ſince they not only hated one another, but the latter found their uſage upon the Words of God, † this is my Name for ever. This Name יהוה, written without ו may ſignifie to conceal ones ſelf; and ſo God has inſinuated, that his Name ought to be conceal'd. But the Samaritans have not the ſame reaſon; for they write יאוה in a perfect manner, that is, with all the Letters.

The Samaritans were not willing perhaps to be thought the Jews Imitators; but there are certain Superſtitions common to all Nations, who love to ſpeak of the Deity in a myſtical manner, and to veil it from the People to inſpire them with greater Veneration. The Egyptians were ſtrangely infatuated with this Notion, which made 'em forget the old Religion, as the Jews have forgotten the true Pronunciation of the Name Jehova. Have not the Chriſtians for ſome time had the like ſcruple for the Sacraments of Baptiſm and the Euchariſt, which they would name before the Catechumens? Will any one ſay, they borrow this from the Jews rather than from the Heathens? The Samaritans call their expected Meſſiah Haſchoab ‖; but they know not the Signification of this Word. Who is it that underſtands it except the Lord? Cellarius ſays *, that they borrow'd this from a Prayer of the Jews, who deſire the Meſſiah to make haſte, and to come in their life-time, or in their days. But he produces this no otherwiſe than as a very uncertain Conjecture.

VIII. The Samaritans ſay, That they do nothing † but what the Lord has commanded 'em; and they are more ſcrupulous even than the Caraites, about the Tranſlation of the Pentateuch, for their Verſions are made exactly word for word. Laſtly, They accuſe the Jews of forſaking the Law and

* Maimon. Hilcot. Megilah c. 2. § 5, 18. † Ep. 2. Ant. Orient. p. 126. ‖ Las telli Lexicon Polyglott. • Bamid. bar Rabba apud Voſt. Not. ad Maimon. de fundam. Legis c. v. § 7. p. 60. † Exod. 3. 15. ‖ השחב Ep. 1. Samar. ad Scal. p. 126. * Cellar. Collect. Hiſt. Samar. c. 3. p. 38. † Sam. Ep. ad Scal. p. 123.

the

the Precepts of God, because they believe and do what the Wise Men and Ancients command them. Nevertheless, they give an almost unlimited Power to their High-Priest, for the Causes of all the Cities are brought before his Tribunal. He judges the People; he exercises Judgment even over the Thoughts. All things are determin'd by his Counsel; and happy is he who obeys his Word, and woe to them that rebel against them.

'Tis true, they add, that this High-Priest, who inhabits the Holy Place, and never goes out of it, is an equitable Judge, that receives no Bribes; who has no respect of Persons, and follows the Truth in all his Determinations. But these are new Elogies which they bestow upon the Person of their Pontiff, rather than a Quality he possesses. Thus erroneous and schismatical Churches acknowledge an Head, and invest him with an excessive Authority, because Man, who is naturally lazy, generally loves to acquiesce in anothers Judgment for his Religion, and to excuse himself by the help of a foreign tho' insignificant Authority.

IX. The High-Priests of Sichem trace their Genealogy from Aaron, reckoning a hundred twenty two Generations to the end of the fifteenth Century. They follow the Law in the Portion of the Sacrifices they allow 'em. They permit 'em to marry but one Wife; but the Law is universal for all the Samaritans, who make the Jews Polygamy in the East to be criminal.

X. Whereas, 'tis a Tenet of the Synagogue, that of the two Messiahs who are to appear, one shall be of the Tribe of Ephraim, the Son of Joseph, and the other shall proceed from the House of David. Cellarius, who is so Learned and Judicious a Critick, has imagin'd, that the distinction of these two Messiahs was older than the Schism of Rhehoboam; since the Samaritans, who also wait for a Messiah of the Tribe of Ephraim, have not borrow'd this Notion since their Separation. But 'tis much more probable, that this distinction of the Messiahs was invented since the Schism; since the Prophets, who taught at Samaria, would not have suffer'd them to hope for a Messiah of the Tribe of Ephraim, or that was not a Descendant of David. Besides, we must not imagine, that by the Tribe of Ephraim the Jews mean the Schismatical Samaritans: They speak rather of the Tribe of Ephraim, which subsisted in the Captivity in our Saviour's time, and still subsists; and from hence they fetch their poor Messiah, who has nothing to do with Samaria. Not one of the ancient Authors has mention'd this twofold Deliverer. But the Jews have made use of him to get rid of the Christians Objections, who often quoted these Words of Isaiah; He was despis'd of men, he was stricken, afflicted, he hath born our griefs, and carry'd our sorrows. And indeed, they don't accuse the Samaritans of inventing this Distinction. They espouse it instead of rejecting it, which proves, That they are themselves the Fathers and Authors of it. They acknowledge, "That a Messiah "shall arise from this Tribe, and that they have "given him the Name of Joseph, because in reality "Joseph being a Prisoner in Egypt, and a long time "conceal'd and unknown to his Brethren, was the "Image of the House of Israel, or of the ten Tribes, "which God shuts up in some place, whilst the rest "of the Nation can't discover and find them out. "These Tribes shall one day escape from their ob- "scurity, and appear again with anger, like Jo- "seph after some Years Imprisonment. This Mes- "siah *, the Son of Joseph, shall not be King of all "the Nation, but shall be a Viceroy, as Joseph was "in Egypt under Pharaoh; because then the Nation "shall be re-united under one Head, and acknow- "ledge the Messiah, the Son of David. The ten "Tribes undeceiv'd by the Death of the Son of "Joseph, will easily perceive that they ought to "have but one Sovereign, to whom they shall sub- "mit.

'Tis not probable that the Rabbins, who take the pains to explain the History of this Messiah, and allow him a Viceroyalty under the Son of David, owe this Imagination to their bittereſt Enemies, nor that so gross an Error should be as ancient as the Schism. Nor can the Samaritans, by their Principles, receive the Rabbins System about the Messiah, the Son of Joseph. It may be said, perhaps, that envying the Glory of the Jews, who boast their Messiah, they have fancy'd another who shall proceed from the Tribe of Ephraim. But, 1. They can't own, that this Messiah, after many Sufferings, shall be kill'd. Their Enemies, the Rabbins, have vented this false Imagination, the easier to explain the Scripture, and assert to themselves a victorious and conquering Messiah. 2. As the Jews often speak of this Messiah, and the Christians make no mention of him; as the former have invented this distinction to defend themselves against the Christians, who apply'd the Predictions of Isaiah and the other Prophets, to Jesus Christ, we ought to leave 'em all the Glory of it.

XI. Mr. Reland is of Opinion, That the Jews accus'd the Samaritans of worshipping a Pigeon, because we read in their Chronicle, That the Emperor † Adrian set the Figure of a Pigeon upon Gerizim, which made its Voice to be heard when any Samaritan came to worship there. Four Conjectures have been grounded upon this Accusation, the Origin whereof is very obscure.

First this same Samaritan Chronicle informs us, That Joshua had a miraculous Pigeon, which he imploy'd to carry Letters and give Intelligence to his Allies. The Encomiums given to Joshua's Pigeon, have been a ground for the Jews Accusation; for 'twas natural to worship a Bird, who had an honourable Place in the History of the Head of the Samaritans, who had done great Services to that Nation. And indeed this was not an ordinary Pigeon, accustom'd by Art and Practise to obey its Masters, like the Sparrows mention'd by Manilius ‖:

Qui gestant caveis volucres ad jussa paratos.

But he was a miraculous one. The Jews violently hated those who taught Pigeons to thieve. And Scaliger has even thought it was these Tutors of Birds that Christ drove out of the Temple. I don't know for what reason; for the business there mention'd was not the teaching of Birds to be Thieves, but the getting a Livelihood by furnishing things necessary for the Sacrifices. But yet, 'tis true, that those who taught Pigeons Theft were excluded from the Royalty and considerable Posts. Nor was their Testimony admitted in Judgment. Shall we say, that this was done in hatred to the Samaritans, who, in their Chronicle, praise the Pigeon imploy'd by Joshua? This may be said, but very few will believe it.

XII. Secondly, The Assyrians bore a Pigeon in their Standards. Mr. Bochart * went so far as to believe, that Jeremy alluded to this Custom, when he threatned the Country with absolute Desolation, because of the Anger of the Forager, and the Sword

* Menasseh Esperanca de Israel § 15. p. 89, 90. † We have already handled this matter, t. 1. p. but it is good to illustrate it.
‖ Manil. Astr. l. v. * Boch. Hieroz. P. 2. c. 1. p. 45.

of

of the Oppreſſor; for he will have the Prophet to ſpeak of the Fury and Sword of the Pigeon, by alluding to the Colours and Standards of the Aſſyrians, who were to ravage Judea; and as the Cutheans came out of this Country to Samaria, 'tis imagin'd, they brought this Pigeon-worſhip along with 'em, ſo well known in Aſcalon and Syria. The firſt of theſe Conjectures is too ſubtle; for ſince the Word of the Prophet is capable * of a proper and natural Senſe; and may ſignifie a Forager and an Oppreſſor, why muſt the literal Senſe be forſaken to hunt after an uncertain Alluſion? Great Criticks are commonly too ſubtle, becauſe they would ſet off their Wit and Reading. Our Tranſlators have been more exact and judicious. The ſecond Conjecture does not ſeem probable; for tho' 'twas natural for the Cutheans, to bring their Religion to Samaria, and they might have worſhipp'd a Pigeon at the time the Colony was ſent by Eſſaraddon; yet in ſuch a great Tract of Ages, wherein the Religion ſo often vary'd in this Country from the deduction of the Colony, to the Emperor Adrian, when the Samaritans were firſt perceiv'd to worſhip a Pigeon: It is impoſſible to draw any Conſequence from the worſhip of the Aſſyrian Colony, to that of the Inhabitants of Samaria in the ſecond Century of the Chriſtian Church. They might rather have borrow'd this Idol from the Aſſyrians, who were their Neighbours, and who ſtill worſhipped Venus.

XIII. The third Conjecture turns upon the Image of a Pigeon, which Adrian ſet upon Gerizim, and which ſpoke when any one came to worſhip. 'Tis true, the Samaritans have inſerted this Miracle in their Chronicle, which they eſteem as much as the Books of Moſes. But are we oblig'd to believe 'em? The Heathens have not mention'd this braſen Bird, which had the Art of diſtinguiſhing a Samaritan from another Man, and to cry out Hebrew to advertiſe the Centinel.

But tho' it were as true as it is fabulous, yet the Samaritan would not have worſhipp'd a Bird deſign'd to ruin him, and that hinder'd him by its Outcries from going to worſhip upon Gerizim. He would have broken it to pieces inſtead of worſhipping it, as was actually done by Babarrabas.

XIV. For our part, we have already ſhewn, that the Jews, who have accus'd the Samaritans of worſhipping a Pigeon, relate the matter in ſo doubtful and diverſify'd a manner, that it is eaſie to perceive, 'tis a meer Calumny, invented to blacken their Enemies. For neither the Goſpel, nor any Hiſtorian, has mention'd this Worſhip eſtabliſh'd at Samaria. Joſephus, who would undoubtedly have laid his Finger upon this Blot, has not done it. Nor could any Notice be taken of it till Adrian's Reign. But how could this worſhip be ſo long unknown to the Jews bordering upon Samaria, who forget nothing to diſcredit its Inhabitants? R. Meir, who made this Diſcovery, has left no work, by which we may judge of the origin and truth of his Accuſation. It is not even found in the Talmud, but in the Gloſs; and would the Talmudiſts, who are inveterate Enemies to the Samaritans, have forgotten this Crime, if Meir had found it out long before 'em? The Gloſs is much more novel than the Talmud; ſo that this Accuſation was invented only in later times, for a pretence to rank the Samaritans with Idolaters. Laſtly, They are accus'd of another ſenſeleſs Folly; which is the Circumciſing their Children in the Name of a Pigeon. I am perſuaded, that People puzzle themſelves to no purpoſe, to ſeek out the Origin of a Crime, which is a pure Fiction of ſome Commentator of the Talmud, which he has invented as the Rabbins do abundance of other Fabulous Stories.

XV. The Samaritans might in their turn accuſe the Jews of having worſhipped an Aſs's Head; a thing that has been a long time ſaid of 'em, and that by grave Authors, and more ancient than the Talmudiſts. 'Tis even believ'd, that the common Reading of Petronius ought to be corrected, and turn'd thus, ſo that he reproach'd them with worſhipping the Ears of an Aſs; and whence came this Accuſation? The Learned Bochart ‖ ſays, it comes from Boded, becauſe frequent mention was made of one only God, בדד Badad; or elſe from the frequent mention of the Mouth of Jehovah, Pi Jao, and Pieo in Egypt, where Appian wrote, ſignify'd an Aſs. An ingenious Critick * thinks the Heathens grounded this Calumny upon the Aſs's Jaw-bone, which Samſon made uſe of to kill the Philiſtines, and to quench his Thirſt; which has ſome Analogy to what Plutarch ſays, That this Creature was worſhipp'd, becauſe he had diſcover'd to the thirſty Iſraelites Water-ſprings in the Wilderneſs. But ſo many Ages had paſs'd ſince this Miracle of Samſon, and ſo many Revolutions happen'd ſince that time, that it is not probable it was ſo often mention'd to the Heathens in Antiochus's days, as to give grounds to the Calumny of Adoration. The Jews often praiſe Aſſes; that of Balaam was the more famous, as that we read in the Sentences of the Fathers, That his Head was created at the beginning of the World, with the Cloud, the Manna, and ſeven other things. The Cabbaliſts add, It was the Angel Gabriel that ſpoke by this miraculous Aſs. Laſtly, The Prophet Zachary cries out, Rejoyce, O Daughter of Zion, for behold thy King cometh riding upon an Aſs. They tell, That Saul laughing at this Equipage, offer'd Samuel his Horſe for the Meſſiah: This Rabbin demanded of him an Aſs of a thouſand Colours; whether it was to retort a piece of Raillery by another, or that they are perſuaded, that the Meſſiah will come upon an Aſs of various Colours. In fine, we are told, that the Head of this Beaſt was found in the Temple, where it was worſhipp'd. It would be more probable to ſay, it had been given by ſome Heathen Prince, and that Antiochus took it out of the Treaſury of the Temple. But I am perſuaded 'tis nothing but a Fiction, like that of the Pigeon worſhipp'd upon Gerizim, whoſe Origin it is impoſſible to diſcover, becauſe they have no other Foundation than the Wit of the Inventors.

Judæus licet & porcinum Numen adoret,
Et Cilli † ſummas advocet auriculas.

XVI. For indeed, I obſerve four different things related by Writers. 1. That Zabidus entring by Night into the Temple, carry'd away this golden Head to Dara. This is a Fable; for it was impoſſible to enter into the Temple by Night, and the City Dara, whither the Robber retreated, is imaginary. 2. We are told alſo, that this golden Head was carry'd away by Antiochus. Here this Object of Worſhip is carry'd away twice, and yet all that have ſpoken of Antiochus, have ſaid nothing of this Circumſtance of his Life, except Appion, the mortal Enemy of the Jews. 3. Democritus, or Damocritus, who writ a Hiſtory of the Jews, ſays, that they ſacrific'd to the Head of an Aſs every three Year, or at leaſt every ſeven Year, a Stranger, whom they ſeiz'd and cut in pieces. How is this to be reconcil'd with Samſon's Jaw-bone, and with the Jewiſh Religion? 4. Laſtly, The Chriſtians are accus'd of worſhipping an Aſs; and the Jews themſelves have urg'd this Accuſation after an inſolent manner at Carthage. Whereas there is nothing in the Religion, nor in the Hiſtory of the Primitive Church, that gave any foundation to this Calumny. As the Chriſtians have been groundleſly accus'd of having an Aſs for their God, we muſt ſay the ſame thing of the Jews, and the Pigeon of the Samaritans, without troubling our ſelves farther to diſcover the Original of theſe abuſive Stories.

* Janah ſignifies to oppreſs, to break, נגש Jona ſignifies a pigeon. V. Buxt. Lex. Thalm. p. 958, 960. † 'Tis read Cœli, but corrected Cilli, that is to ſay, Aſs. Monſ. le Fevre ſays 'twas becauſe of Onias and the Temple of On, from whence they have made ὄνος an Aſs. ‖ Bochart. Hieroz. l. 2 c. 18. p. 226. * Edwards's Truth of Scriptures, c. 4. p. 141.

XVII. We have ſaid enough of the Samaritan Chronicle; however, we'll add, that they make no ſcruple to add to this Work, ſince ſome of theſe Books conclude much ſooner than others: For one of theſe Chronicles, which is kept at Cairo, reaches as far as Mahomet; and that we have inſerted in our ſecond Tome, ends not till the 898th Year of the Hegyra. But I much queſtion, whether they are ſo ancient as is commonly believ'd. The Stories of Saubec, and the Wars of Joſhua, found in the Book that goes by his Name, muſt needs be of modern Invention, ſince Joſephus, who wrote the Hiſtory of his Nation, without omitting the Fabulous Occurrences that had been tack'd to the Sacred Hiſtory, has not mention'd 'em. Theſe Schiſmaticks were never upbraided with thus depraving the true Book of Joſhua; nor is it probable that they would have mention'd the Sanhedrim as a Council inſtituted by Moſes, if this Council had ſtill made a Figure at Jeruſalem, when the Author compos'd his Chronicle under the Name of Joſhua; but the Sanhedrim having been aboliſh'd, and no Footſteps of it remaining, there was no room for jealouſie; and this Inſtitution was the more freely ſpoken of, becauſe no Conſequence could be drawn from it againſt the Samaritans. Laſtly, As the Original Hebrew is not to be found, and the Citation made in the Juchaſin may have been taken from the Arabick, 'tis very likely that this is the Original rather than a Verſion; for the Samaritans, who have ſo religiouſly preſerv'd the Pentateuch, would not have ſuffer'd the Original Hebrew of the Book of Joſhua to be loſt, for which they have ſo great a Veneration. However, this Book may contribute to the underſtanding many Places of Scripture, as Mr. Reland has ſhewn, by the Obſervations he has imparted to us with a Civility that deſerves our Acknowledgment.

XVIII. Laſtly, In treating of the preſent State of the Samaritans, we have confuted Pietro de la Valle, who ſays, he diſcover'd no Cutheans in Sichem, nor in all Aſia. His Error proceeded from his diſtinguiſhing the Cutheans from the Samaritans, and conſidering the former as a particular Sect. But he learnt from Father Morin that he was miſtaken, and own'd, there were ſome Samaritans, or rather Cutheans, in the Eaſt. But at the ſame time he has run into another Fault, by placing them at Jeruſalem, where they never were. The Synagogue of Damaſcus, where they formerly flouriſh'd, is deſtroy'd; but they are ſtill at Cairo in Egypt, and Gaza, and eſpecially at Napolouſſe, where they have their Temple and High-Prieſt. They are very ignorant, ſince they don't know that England is a Kingdom, or conſider this Kingdom as a City; for the Superſcription of their Letter is, To their Brethren in the City England. We ſee alſo that they willingly flatter themſelves, that they have Brethren in ſo remote Places; for there are no Samaritans in England, but they have groſly miſtaken the Jews for their Brethren.

CHAP. XXVII.

The Hiſtory of the Jews in Ethiopia, in Egypt, and the reſt of Africa, for the two laſt Centuries.

I. The Jews and Chriſtians agree better in Ethiopia than elſewhere. II. The People of the Book, a Title of the Jews. III. Preſter John: The River Sambation in his Territories. IV. David a Jewiſh Embaſſador to Clement VII. V. An Error upon this matter. VI. Bartolocci's Conjecture refuted. VII. The Hiſtory of this Embaſſy. VIII. A ſecond Embaſſy. IX. A Mountain of Ethiopia inhabited by the Jews, and their Loyalty to Claudius. X. Whether their Authority in Ethiopia invalidates Jacob's Prophecy. XI. Their decay in this Country in the laſt Century. XII. A very great Danger they were deliver'd from in Egypt. XIII. Moſes Aleſhar, or the Red. XIV. Their preſent ſtate in Egypt. XV. And in other Parts of Africa.

I. ETHIOPIA is one of the Places where the Jews have been leaſt diſturb'd. They agree more eaſily with the Chriſtians of this Country, becauſe theſe latter are Circumcis'd. They eat no Swines-Fleſh, and religiouſly obſerve the Sabbath. Even their Kings fancy themſelves Deſcendants from the ancient Jews, and have a Lion in their Scutcheons holding a Croſs, with theſe Words, The Lion of Judah hath prevail'd. In the Letters that King David wrote to Clement VII. he took theſe Titles, I David, beloved of God, the Pillar of Faith, ſprung from the Tribe of Judah, the Son of David, the Son of Salomon, the Son of the Pillar of Sion, and of the Seed of Jacob. Mr. *Ludolf, who was beſt acquainted with the Genius and Stile of theſe remote Nations, ſays, That theſe were not the common Titles of the Kings of Ethiopia, but that they ſwelled them upon that occaſion to give greater Luſtre to their Embaſſy to the Pope. The Conjecture is probable; nevertheleſs, it is certain, that the Kings of Ethiopia believe themſelves the Poſterity of the Jews, which muſt render 'em more favourable to this Nation. On the other hand, the Jews in this Country have not receiv'd the Talmud and all that Trumpery of Traditions, which ſmother their Religion in other Places.

II. When the Saracens made themſelves Maſters of Ethiopia †, the Jews fearing their Perſecution, retir'd and took Sanctuary in Abyſſinia. They were treated with more Humanity than the Natives of the Country, ſince an Arabian, who has given the Elogy of the Ethiopians, aſſerts, That a general

* Ludolf. Hiſt. Æthiop. l. 2. c. 1. † Ibid.

Maſſacre

Maſſacre of the Inhabitants being reſolv'd upon, they begg'd, as a Bounty of the King, that they might be treated like the People of the Scripture. Theſe Scripture-People, in the Arabian ſtile, are Jews. This Name is given 'em in the Alcoran *; for Mahomet ſpeaking of 'em, calls 'em the People of the Book, becauſe of the Book of the Law and the Prophets. The Ethiopians † therefore deſir'd the ſame fate as the Jews; and the King of the Arabians granted their requeſt, on condition, That they would give themſelves a Cut on the Face to be known and diſtinguiſh'd by.

III. They pretend to be very Potent in this Country, and to have poſſeſs'd very conſiderable Kingdoms there. Some place the River Sambation in the Lands of Preſter-John; which Preſter-John, as has been believ'd for an Age or two, is the King of Ethiopia. For they perſuade themſelves, that there was formerly in China a Chriſtian King, called Preſter Chan, that is, The Prince of the Worſhippers, or Chriſtians. Alexander III. wrote to this Prince, and the Superſcription of his Letter, which is ſtill to be ſeen in the Engliſh Annals, is, To my moſt dear Son in Chriſt, the illuſtrious and magnificent King of the Indies, moſt Holy Pretre, or Prieſt. Theſe laſt Words have made it thought, that this Prince was the Pontiff and Prieſt as well as King of his Nation, and from hence they have given him the Title of Preſtre Chan, or Preſter John. A uſeleſs ſearch has been made after this Kingly Prieſt, in the Indies and China; and not finding him there, they have fancy'd he was in Ethiopia. And therefore they call the King of the Abyſſines, the Prieſt John. The Jews formerly plac'd their River Sambaſion, and the Kingdoms they poſſeſs'd upon the Banks of it, in I know not what remote Territories of Aſia. But an Age or two paſt, ſince the Portugueze have pretended to diſcover Preſter John in Africa: and among the Abyſſines, they have chang'd the Courſe of this River, and convey'd it into Ethiopia. But all this is fabulous; for there is no Preſtre Chan, or John in Ethiopia, as a very learned Man ‖ has obſerv'd, nor a River Sambation, nor a Kingdom of Jews.

IV. We are told another thing of this Kingdom, which is equally falſe. "The Jews believe, that a Rabbin nam'd David, of the Tribe of Reuben, was ſent by the King of Ethiopia, on an Embaſſy to Pope Clement VII. in the Year 1534. He appear'd at Rome in a ſumptuous Equipage, mounted upon a Mule, conſtantly attended by above two hundred Chriſtians. With this Train he entred into St. Peter's Church; near the Altar he had Audience of the Pope, who favourably receiv'd him. Ghedalia, the great Hiſtorian of the Jews pretends, That David was General of the Jewiſh Army, and was ſent by the Kings of the Nation, who reign'd at Chabor, at Chalec, &c. to demand Succour againſt the Neighbouring Princes: That from Italy he paſs'd into Portugal, and made the ſame Requeſt to the King. But during the ſtay which this little Man, who was as black as an Ethiopian, made at Court, he corrupted a Secretary of the King, who had been formerly a Jew, who reſum'd his Religion, and writ many Books".

V. Ghedalia * confounds two very different things. We have already ſpoken of the Tranſactions of the Court of Portugal, and the Adventures of Salomon Malcho, who was burnt in Italy by order of Charles V. whilſt David was convey'd into Spain. We will only here obſerve, That this David was not Ambaſſador from the King of Ethiopia, as is pretended, to do Honour to the Nation; but it was the King of Ethiopia who ſent † an Embaſſy to Rome.

VI. Bartolocci ‖ fancy'd, that the Jews were ignorantly miſtaken, and that reading the Title of this Embaſſy, Lambaſciaria di David, Re dell Etiopia, al Santiſſimo S. N. Clemente VII. in ſieme con lobedienza al prefato S. N. Reſa, thought the Name of David was that of the Ambaſſador, and that he was a Jew, a Reubenite, ſent by ſome Kings of Ethiopia, that is, by the Jewiſh Kings that were in the Indies. But how can this Conjecture be made out? The bare Title proves David to be King of Ethiopia. Beſides, had Ghedalia read but the Title of this Relation, and could not he upon enquiry, have diſcover'd the Name of the Ambaſſador, and of the Prince that ſent him? He has purpoſely turn'd David King of Ethiopia into a Rabbin of the Tribe of Reuben. He has metamorphos'd the Chriſtian Prince into Jewiſh Kings, that liv'd in the Indies. Laſtly, He has invented a Jewiſh Ambaſſador, whoſe Diſpatches might make it believ'd, that his Nation held then a conſiderable Rank in the Indies or Ethiopia. The matter of Fact was thus.

VII. David King of Ethiopia had been preferr'd to his Elder Brother, who was the rightful Succeſſor. It was alledg'd, That his Brother was born in a Priſon during his Father's private Life; that he was a haughty and cruel Youth, who would tyrannize over the Nation. But the true reaſon of this Preference was, that his Grandmother Helena, an imperious Woman, was willing to be Regent; and thought, ſhe ſhould have a greater Power during her Grandſon's Minority, who was but eleven Years old. And indeed, the thing happen'd as ſhe had believ'd; for ſhe govern'd the Kingdom with an abſolute ſway. David was ſubmiſſive and regular whilſt ſhe liv'd; but after her Death he fell into debauching, and grew ſo cruel, as to incur the hatred of his Subjects and Neighbours. They declar'd War againſt him, which prov'd fatal to him. He was flatter'd with the hopes of drawing Succours from the Pope, and therefore he diſpatch'd Alvarez with a Letter to Clement VII. which was read in a numerous Aſſembly of Prelates, before Charles V. All this was manag'd with a great deal of Fallacy and Illuſion. The Pope had no deſign to ſend Succours to Ethiopia, as he was made to believe; neither had King David any intention to ſeparate from the Patriarch of Alexandria, in order to ſubmit to the Pope. But the Buſineſs was to deceive the People, and perſuade 'em, that if God rent the Northern Churches from the Roman by the Reformation that was made in Germany, he gave to it other Churches of the Eaſt, by the re-union of the King of Ethiopia. This was the Embaſſy of King David, whom the Jews transform into an Ambaſſador; and make this Ambaſſador deſcend from the Tribe of Reuben, and ſend him to Rome, which is falſe.

VIII. David, whom his Enemies ſtill preſs'd hard, diſpatch'd a Biſhop to Rome, call'd John Bermudas. He found Paul III. in the See, who Confirm'd him, tho' he had been Ordain'd by the Patriarch of Alexandria. The Pope countenanc'd the Abyſſines who were then at Rome, and gave 'em Money to pay for the Impreſſion of the Liturgies and the New Teſtament in their Language. But neither Jew, nor Pope, nor Ethiopian, reap reap any advantage from this ſecond Embaſſy: For firſt, the Jews had no hand in it, ſince it was a Biſhop that King David ſent to Rome. 2. The Ethiopians receiv'd no Supplies from the Pope, and his Charity to the

* Alcoran. Sur. III. p. 38. † Hottinger. Hiſt. Orient. l. 1. c. 2. p. 214. ‖ Ludolf. Hiſt. Æthiop. l. 2. c. 1. l. 3. c. 9. V. Comm. * Ghedal. Schalſch. Hakkab. p. 44. Wagenſeil Tela Ignea Sat. t. 1. p 233. † An. 1533. ‖ Bart. Bibl. Rabb. t. 1. p. 43.

Abyſſines was inconſiderable. 3. The Pope was only rewarded with flattering Encomiums, which the Abyſſines beſtow'd upon the Holy See, and Farneſe his ſpiritual Daughter. For indeed, David had much ſtudy'd the Scripture and the Councils. He even often diſputed with Alvarez upon Points of Religion. But this was all done out of Policy, and with the hopes of procuring Money and Forces. For Claudius, his Son and Succeſſor, was one of the moſt zealous Princes againſt the Roman Church. Even this Teſtimony is given him, That he often confounded the Miſſionaries that were in his Kingdom, and to whom he gave Liberty of Conſcience.

IX. David afterwards fell under Misfortunes, which gave the Jews an opportunity to demonſtrate their Affection to his Family. Gradamet, at the ſollicitation of his Subjects, who were tir'd with his Cruelties, declar'd War againſt him. This Gradamet was King of Adel. The Portugueze abſurdly call his Kingdom Zeila; for Zeila is a Port belonging to the Abyſſines, and the Kingdom of Adel, which is near it, has another Capital, call'd Auca Curele. Gradamet, at the Head of his Army, entred the Frontiers of the Abyſſines. Moſt of the Cities open'd their Gates to him with the greater eaſe, becauſe he exempted them from the exceſſive Taxes which David had impos'd upon them. David, who perceiv'd that his Subjects would deſert him unleſs he repell'd the Enemy, march'd to give him Battle; but his Soldiers, unable to bear the fire of Muskets, which they were not us'd to, diſbanded, and the King was forc'd to fly to the Mountains, where he miſerably * ended his Life. Thoſe that continu'd faithful to him, immediately proclaim'd his Son Claudius King of Ethiopia; but Gradamet, who had ſeiz'd the Royal Treaſure, preſſing him on one hand, and his own Brother James diſputing the Right of the Crown on the other, he was forc'd to ſeek Sanctuary in a Mountain hardly known. This great and vaſt Mountain is in the middle of Ethiopia †. It can be come at but on one ſide, and is aſcended with a great deal of difficulty. At the top of it is an agreeable Plain, water'd with ſeveral Rivulets, and ſtor'd with excellent Fruits, and good Paſturage for Cattle. Here the Jews, not one of which is found in all Ethiopia, are ſaid to have fix'd their Abode. They never deſcend from this Mountain, and have no Communication with the reſt of the Abyſſines. They receiv'd the new King, who took Sanctuary among them, with open Arms, and defended him ſo vigorouſly againſt Gradamet, that this Prince ſeeing it impoſſible to force him in this Retreat, retir'd. A Portugueze Fleet having landed at that time in Ethiopia ſome Troops, Claudius came down from the Mountain, and afterwards re-eſtabliſh'd his Affairs; and the Jews, whoſe Fidelity he had experienc'd in his Neceſſities, were highly protected all the time of his Reign.

X. Oviedo, whom Julius III. had made Patriarch of Ethiopia, with hopes to re-unite this Kingdom to his See, and was ſent into this Country to no purpoſe, ſays, That the Jews ‖ poſſeſs'd great inacceſſible Mountains; that they had diſpoſſeſs'd the Chriſtians of many Lands which they were Maſters of, and that the Kings of Ethiopia could not ſubdue them, becauſe they have but ſmall Forces, and it is very difficult to penetrate into the Faſtneſſes of their Rocks. La Sierra Tienen los Judios con otras muchas tierras que tienen uſurpadas de los Chriſtianos, y el Reyno puede con ellos, por ſer la tierra muy forte y tener el pocas fuercas. Such as fear leſt this little Corner of a Kingdom, or rather this retreat into Rocks and Mountains, may weaken our Interpretation of Jacob's Prophecy, and furniſh the Jewiſh Doctors with a Pretence, that the Sceptre of Judah is not broken, are too weak and timerous. We ought never to diſpute or deny Matters of Fact through Intereſt: For this is not the Kingdom of Judah, which Jacob promis'd to his Poſterity; and it would be ridiculous to ſay, That ſome Jews conceal'd in inacceſſible Mountains, keep up that Succeſſion of Princes and Lawgivers, that were to make the Nation flouriſh in the Holy-land.

XI. They ſtill preſerv'd that Authority at the beginning of the laſt Century *, which ſometimes render'd 'em formidable to the Kings of the Abyſſines. For indeed, they poſſeſs'd at that time near three Provinces: But Suſneus, who then reign'd †, and was a bold Prince, having defeated ſome Idolatrous Nations, call'd Gallants, among whom he had been educated, carry'd the War ‖ even into the Rocks of the Jews with ſo much vigour, as to drive 'em out. They were oblig'd to abandon the Provinces they had poſſeſs'd *, and to diſperſe themſelves over the Kingdom. Some retir'd toward the Springs of the Nile, near the Cafres, where they ſtill ſubſiſt. Others remain in the Province of Dembe, where they ſpin Wool. In effect, ſome of 'em are Weavers, and others Smiths. As the Abyſſines hate this Trade, they leave it to the Jews, who undertake to furniſh them with all Warlike Inſtruments. They have there their Synagogues, and Publick Worſhip, in which they uſe the Talmudic Hebrew, tho' they have not receiv'd that Collection of Traditions. Laſtly, great numbers follow the Court of the King of the Abyſſines. An Arabian, who had travell'd in that Country at the end of the laſt Century, aſſur'd Mr. Ludolf †, that ſixty thouſand of 'em were at Court. They correſpond with the Chriſtians, and live very familiarly with 'em in that Country.

XII. Egypt bordering upon Ethiopia has ſerv'd 'em for a Sanctuary. They were very near the brink of Deſtruction in the Year 1524. but God delivered them by an unexpected Revolution. Achmed, to whom Solyman II. had intruſted Egypt ‖, revolted againſt him, and reſolv'd at the ſame time to make himſelf Maſter of his new Subjects Eſtates. The Soldiers had already began to plunder the Jews Houſes, as being perſuaded they might do all things ſafely in the beginning of the Rebellion. But Achmed reſolving to enrich himſelf, tax'd this Nation two hundred Talents. They repreſented their Inability, and only brought fifteen Talents to the Treaſury. Achmed inrag'd at this Refuſal, order'd all to be committed Priſoners that had not paid the Tax. But the very moment that Sadus, one of his Officers, was executing his Orders, News came of a Conſpiracy againſt Achmed, who having been ſurpriz'd in the Bath by the Plotters, was oblig'd to fly with nine Men with him; that he was purſu'd by an Army of Circaſſians; and that it was impoſſible for him to eſcape his Enemies. He was actually taken, and Peace and Tranquility were reſtor'd at Cairo. The Jews being deliver'd, made * a great Entertainment, and call'd the Feaſt they celebrated in Memory of this Event, Neſſim; becauſe this Word ſignifies a Mi- racle,

* An. 1539. † Joannes de Caſtro ſinus Arabici S. maris rubri Itinerarium, p. 32. ‖ An. 1557. * An. 1608. † An. 1611. ‖ Pauli V. Ep. ad Suſneum, vel Sultan Saghedum apud Ludolf. Comm. ad Hiſt. Æth. p. 491. * Suſneus dy'd in the Year 1632. † Ludolf. ibid. l. 2. c. 7. l. 4. c. 5. n. 12. ‖ Salomon Ben Virgæ p. 402. * Ganz An. 284.

racle, and the Stake to which Achmed's Head was faſtned.

XIII. Moſes Aleſcar, or the Red, appear'd a little after *. His Name has made it thought, that he was of the Family of the Rubeis, that was famous in this Nation: He declar'd for Moſes the Egyptian, or Haramban, that is, Maimonides, and confuted thoſe who had written againſt this Doctor. Buxtorf ſpeaks of a Treatiſe written by him, concerning the Redemption; but as he only mentions the Title, we can't gueſs, whether Moſes the Red endeavour'd to comfort his Brethren upon the delay of the Deliverance which they in vain expected.

XIV. The Liberty which they have enjoy'd in Egypt has made 'em conſiderable. Their Mechanicks were diſpers'd over the Countrey, and in all the Cities: Their rich and creditable Merchants dwelt at Cairo. In fine, they pretended † to be more numerous in this Countrey, than when Moſes led them out of it: But this number is much leſſened ſome Years ſince; for the Travellers, who have known 'em, affirm ‖, That they have no Settlements except at Cairo, and the Maritime Cities of Egypt; and that they are ſo far from being in other Places, and in the Country, that if their Buſineſs oblige 'em ſometimes to go thither, they are forced to diſguiſe and conceal themſelves, becauſe the Country People abuſe 'em as ſoon as ever they find 'em out.

XV. There are ſome of them in other Parts of Africa: For it was a Jew of this Countrey *, that furniſh'd Mouley Archey, King of Tafilet, with one of his principal means to make War againſt the Prince of Quiveane, to whom he fled for Sanctuary. For going † to the Caſtle of Dar Michal, upon pretence of viſiting the Governour, he ſeiz'd the Citadel, and began to manifeſt his Revolt: But he muſt have miſcarry'd, had he not found a Jew vaſtly rich, whom he ſtripp'd of all his Treaſures, by means whereof he aſſembled the Inhabitants of the Province, was elected King, and diſpoſſeſs'd his Brother King of Fez and Morocco. He acknowledg'd the Service the Jew had done him, by granting the Nation the ſame Liberty it had enjoy'd, and ‖, making Joſhua Ben Amoſſech Prince of it. Mouley Iſhmael, Brother to the King of Tafilet, and his Succeſſor, had ſtill greater Complaiſance for 'em: For in recompence for Dom Joſeph de Toledo's Services during his Diſgrace at Miquenez, he not only made him one of the firſt Officers of his Houſhold, but ſent him to the Courts of ſeveral Princes, to negociate with 'em; and 'twas he * who concluded the Peace with the United Provinces, in the Year 1684. This Prince continu'd the Offices to the Son, who injoys the ſame Honours as his Father.

They have remain'd a long time at Oran, and been imploy'd in conſiderable Offices; and in ſpite of the Grounds they have to complain of the Spaniards, who had perſecuted them, and continu'd to uſe 'em very ſeverely, they perſever'd in an inviolable Fidelity to them. Firſt, it was a Jew who facilitated the Conqueſt of it, when Cardinal Ximenes undertook it. This Cardinal had given up his Church Preferments to turn Monk of St. Francis. His Order not ſeeming ſufficiently devoted to its Duties, he took a great deal of pains to reform it. But after he had preferr'd the Auſterities of a Monaſtery to the Dignities of an Eccleſiaſtical Life, he quitted the Monaſtery and became an Archbiſhop. He ſhould at leaſt at ſeventy Years of Age have Conſecrated himſelf to God, and have thought of a Life to come; but by one of the incomprehenſible Freaks of a human Mind, this Monk turn'd Cardinal, and became a General: He put himſelf at the Head of an Army, and undertook the Conqueſt of Oran at his own Expence, in ſpite of his King, who ſecretly oppos'd him. He had been a Perſecutor of the Jews; for it was he that infus'd the cruel deſign into Iſabella of expelling them, and caus'd it to be executed, contrary to all good Politicks. Notwithſtanding, he pitch'd upon a Jew to facilitate the taking of Oran, who, with the aſſiſtance of two Moors, betray'd the City, and ſerv'd the Perſecutor of his Nation. The Action of the covetous Jew, who was corrupted with Bribes, is not ſo ſurpriſing as that of the Conqueror, who tempted him. I conſtantly admire, how a Hero, who tramples under foot his Religious Profeſſion, who cheriſhes in his Heart none but cruel and worldly Vertues, who to the end of his Life loads his Head only with Politick Reflections, and dies with vexation to be thrown out of the Management of Affairs, can find any extravagant Panegyricks among Churchmen.

The Jews have continu'd to favour the Spaniards in Oran; for when this City was threatned by its Neighbours, they reſolv'd to ſacrifice their Lives, rather than ſuffer it to be taken by the Neighbouring Princes. In a Rebellion, they kept the Troops in obedience, by paying their Wages, and furniſhing them with Proviſions. However, they were all expell'd † in the Year 1669. They accuſe the Marqueſs de los Velez of having contriv'd ſeveral Artifices to obtain this Order from the Queen, becauſe he was willing to ſatisfie the Ambition of a Woman that he lov'd, by giving her an Office, which had for a long time been Hereditary in a Jewiſh Family. But was there any occaſion to make ſuch confuſion, and to move ſo unwieldy a Machine, to take away an Employ?

They were numerous in the Province of Suz, which depended formerly ‖ on the Kingdom of Morocco, and is ſeparated from it. They had, in the Capital of this Principality, a rich and fine Synagogue, ſerv'd by many Prieſts; and their own Judges and Interpreters of the Law, paid by their Nation, that liv'd upon Labour and Trade. There are in the Mountains of the Kingdom of Morocco Farriers and Smiths, and People that ſerve to build their Houſes, becauſe the Inhabitants think this Work too laborious. But they are not always imploy'd in ſuch ſort of Works; for they often force themſelves into Court, and enter into Offices. 'Twas a Jew that the King of Morocco ſent Ambaſſador to the States of the United Provinces, at the beginning of the laſt Century *. Their Synagogues † having been pull'd down in the Kingdom of Fez, Muley Mahomet not only cauſed them to be re-built, when he re-aſcended his Throne, but he made a Jew his Treaſurer and firſt Miniſter, as we have been ſaying.

* An. 1555. † An. 1673. ‖ Vanſleb's New Relation of a Voyage to Egypt, p. 15. * An. 1666. † Hiſtory of the King of Tafilet. ‖ He dy'd in 1672. * Los Altos Eſtados Generales, qui en la Gran Haya Batava ſubidos la Paz aiuſtan con el Ceſar Moro por Medio dal Hebræo Paranimpho. Hiſtoria general. de M. Barrios. † Hiſtoria Univerſal. Judaica de Miguel de Barrios. ‖ An. 1535. Curio Marochenſis Regni deſcript. p. 308. & 341. * He dy'd at the Hague in the Year 1604. and was bury'd with great Pomp. His Name was Pacheco. † An. 1660.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The State of the Jews at Conſtantinople, in Greece, and the other Provinces of the Ottoman Empire, for the two laſt Centuries.

I. The preſent State of the Jews at Conſtantinople. II. The way of treating them. III. Their Abjurations. IV. Whether Bajazet was poiſon'd by a Jew. V. The Iſle of Cyprus taken at the ſollicitation of Michſez. VI. A Preſs at Conſtantinople for Hebrew Books. VII. Japhe's Writings intitled Fine. VIII. Ghedalia attempts to re-unite the Caraites. IX. Mardochai the Conſtantinopolitan Rabbiniſt. X. The Jews expell'd out of Salone. XI. Numerous in the Cities of Greece. XII. Particularly at Theſſalonica. XIII. Moſes Pardo retires thither. XIV. They are Potent at Prouſia. XV. At Rhodes. XVI. At Smyrna.

I. THE Jews have, for many Ages, preſerv'd their Liberty and great Privileges in the Territories of the Grand Seignior, not excepting Conſtantinople it ſelf. They inhabit a conſiderable Suburb *, which was call'd Jewry in the Cruſading days, becauſe they had been ſettled there a long time. The Ambaſſadors of Foreign Princes reſide amongſt them. They have at preſent thirty Synagogues, and an hundred and five thouſand Families in this City, or the Neighbouring Villages. Whereas the Caliphs oblig'd them to wear a diſtinguiſhing Badge of yellow Cloth, they ought to wear, in the Ottoman Empire, a Felt Hat without Brims, call'd, in deriſion, Haurout, or Cloſe-Stool-pan. But we are aſſur'd, that this Law only relates to Strangers that come from Spain or Portugal, and that the Jews, born Subjects of the Grand Seignior, are excus'd from it. Theſe latter wear Turbants of various Colours, and are only diſtinguiſh'd from the Chriſtians by that of their Shoes; for the Chriſtians wear red, and the Jews purple or black. They are allow'd the Privilege of ſelling Wine; which is the more conſiderable, becauſe theirs has the Preference of that of the Chriſtians, becauſe the Law of Moſes condemning Mixtures, 'tis imagin'd, that the Jews dare not violate it, and that they ſell their Wine in puris naturalibus.

II. They are here, as every where elſe, much addicted to Trading and Uſury. One part of 'em are Porters; but there is a very diſadvantageous Diſtinction againſt them; for they are forbidden to uſe a Quilt of Hay under their Burdens, like the Turks. One of theſe poor Wretches petitioned, as a Recompence from Mahomet IV. the liberty of having a Bag of Hay, and obtain'd it: He found this Prince in a Wood, where he had been Hunting, and where he would have wandered all Night, had he not brought him back to Conſtantinople: In acknowledgment for this Service, it was allow'd him to eaſe his Pain; but the Privilege extended to none of his Brethren. Laſtly †, They are Poll'd: But inſtead of having it levy'd by the Officer of the Empire, they have compounded with him for a Sum, and the Head of every Synagogue proportions the Quota; and as he adjuſts it to the Wealth of each particular, the Poor are conſiderably reliev'd by it.

III. Nevertheleſs, it often happens, that the preſſures of Poverty make them turn Muſſulmans. It has been ſaid, that ‖ they are requir'd to eſpouſe Chriſtianity firſt, as a Preliminary to Mahometiſm; but this is nothing but a Jeſt, which has paſs'd for a real Truth. They are not Circumcis'd, becauſe they already wear that Mark of the Covenant; nor are they baptiz'd to make them Chriſtians: But having inquir'd into the Motives of their Change, they are made to pronounce theſe Sacred Words, which it is not lawful, upon pain of being burnt, to utter without becoming Muſſulmans: La Illah Illalah Mehemet Reſoul Allah; There is but one God and Mahomet his Prophet.

IV. The Chriſtians charge the Jews with the Murther of Bajazet II. For they ſay, that Selim, his Son, apprehenſive of being excluded the Empire by his Father's Preference of Achmed, rebell'd againſt him: He loſt the Battle, but fail'd not after his Defeat, to gain the Janizaries; ſo that Bajazet was oblig'd to quit Conſtantinople, and retire to Demoticha, the Place of his Birth: But he dy'd by the way, becauſe a Jewiſh Phyſician, ſuborn'd by Selim, gave him Diamond Powder, or ſome other Poiſon, in the Bath, and Selim forthwith kill'd him *. But it muſt not be diſſembled, that the Muſſulmans don't accuſe either Selim or the Jewiſh Phyſician, of ſo deteſtable a Crime, but believe Bajazet's Death to have been natural.

V. Another Man of this Nation, call'd, Michſez, is accus'd of having put Selim II. upon the Conqueſt of the Iſle of Cyprus †, and occaſioning the Ruin of this fine Kingdom. It is ſaid, That this Man being enrag'd at the refuſal of the Venetians, to receive a great number of Refugee-Marines, who were deſirous to leave Portugal and Spain; or elſe at the Puniſhment he had receiv'd for ſome Crimes, retir'd to Conſtantinople. His Riches gave him admittance to Court; and being reſolv'd to take Vengeance of his old Maſters, he extoll'd to Selim II. the Beauty of the Iſland, call'd, The Countrey of the Bleſſed ‖. He alſo cry'd up the Excellency of the Wines, which Selim II. was a great lover of, notwithſtanding the Law which forbad the drinking 'em. He repreſented, That the Venetians, who were Maſters of it, made Incurſions into Syria, and diſturb'd the Paſſage of the Caravans to Meccha. Laſtly, the unfortunate blowing up of the Magazines of Powder at Venice, contributed to Selim's determination. One day, when he was half drunk, he promis'd Michſes, or Michez, the Crown of Cyprus, as a Reward for putting this Deſign into his Head. Nicoſia, one of its principal Cities was taken. Famaguſta ſubmitted the next Year; and the Iſland was hereby reduc'd. Michſes was not made King, as it was promis'd; but his Nation had greater Privileges granted them in the Iſland, which they ſtill preſerve, than the Chriſtians. Selim did more; for he ſent a Jew, call'd Salomon Rophe, to Venice, when the Chriſtians had won the Battle of Lepanto, to negociate with the Republick, and conclude a Peace.

VI. The Jews obtain'd, a ſhort time after *, the liberty of having a Preſs at Conſtantinople. It was a new ſight for the Mahometans to ſee Books printed, and they were alarm'd at it. The Mufti was afraid,

* Smith Sept. Eccl deſcr. † Smith ib. p. 116. ‖ Thevenot's Voyage to the Levant, l. 1. c. 32. * An. 1472. Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 104. † An. 1570. ‖ Macaria. * An. 1576.

afraid, leſt the Alcoran ſhould be Printed, and leſt the love of the Sciences, which would hereby grow eaſier, ſhould be propagated from the Jews to the Arabians. This was a great advantage to the whole Nation; for the Copies of the Law, which were grown very ſcarce in the Eaſt, were univerſally diſpers'd; and People fell more earneſtly upon the Study of the Law, becauſe the reading was more eaſie, and they had greater Aſſiſtances to underſtand it.

VII. In effect, this produc'd abundance of Learned Men, and Illuſtrious Heads of Synagogues. Salomon Japhe, who had left his Native Germany, came thither in the preceeding Century. He explain'd the Talmud of Jeruſalem, and rendred it more compleat, by adding ſome neceſſary Illuſtrations. He publiſh'd two other Works *, which he call'd, Fair in the Eyes; and, Fair in the Look; alluding to his Name, which ſignifies Fair. The one contain'd Sermons, and the other the Explication of Middruſh Rabba upon the Pentateuch.

VIII. Ghedalia, who pretended to be of the Race of David, choſe alſo to leave his Father, and his Birth-Place, Lisbon, to come and practiſe Phyſick at Conſtantinople. But as moſt of the Jewiſh Phyſicians are alſo Doctors, he taught the Rites and Laws of his Nation. He was made Head of the Synagogue, and labour'd to reconcile the Caraites and the Rabbiniſts. He ſays, That the Caraites deſir'd him to inſtruct them, and reduce them to the Synagogue: But whether the Rabbiniſts were too uncompliant, or that they thought the Affair too nice, or that the Caraites return'd to their former Prejudices, the Reconciliation was not made, and the latter only reap'd the advantage enjoy'd at Conſtantinople, of Printing Books; for they publiſhed ſome of their Works, which nevertheleſs are very ſcarce. Ghedalia publiſh'd, on his part, the ſeven Eyes †, and ſome other Works; for we muſt not miſtake him for one of his Relations of the ſame Name, whom we ſhall ſpeak of in the ſequel.

IX. We'll mention but one more, that is, Mardochai: He was Son of Eliezar, and took the Title ‖ Conſtantinopolitan, tho' he commonly reſided at Adrianople. He explain'd the Grammar which Aben Ezra publiſh'd, with the Title of Jeſod Mora, the Foundation of Fear. But there has been lately diſcover'd, a Manuſcript Commentary upon the Pentateuch, whoſe Explications are ſo literal, that it has been thought to have been written by a Caraite. An Author ‡, who has examin'd it, acknowledges, That he can't infer that Conſequence from the Commentary. But yet if we will judge of it from the Quotations he has produc'd, we may advance two things: One, That this Author had a great Opinion of his own Merit; for he declares, that his Explications of Scripture ſhall be grounded upon the Rules of Grammar and Logick; the Paſſages relating to Natural Philoſophy ſhall be illuſtrated by that Science. Laſtly, The Author brags of employing Aſtronomy, Arithmetick and Geometry, to illuſtrate Moſes, as often as there is occaſion. 2. We have reaſon to believe this Author was a Rabbiniſt, ſince it was not the Method of the Caraites to fetch their Explications from foreign Sciences, ſuch as Geometry and Arithmetick: He had taken this method from Maimonides, who fancy'd it was extremely advantageous. Beſides, he often quotes Aben Ezra; whereas the Caraites very ſeldom Copy their Enemies.

X. There are ſome Cities of Greece where the Jews have not the Privilege to ſettle themſelves; ſuch is the City of Salone. Geographers have thought this to be the ancient Delphi, ſo famous for its Oracles. But ingenious Travellers have diſcover'd, by an Inſcription, that it was Amphiſſa: And tho' Strabo ſpeaks of it as a City that was already deſtroy'd, yet it was re-built; ſince Pauſanias, who liv'd above an hundred Years after, gives the Deſcription of it. The Inhabitants, which are at preſent Turks and Greeks, hate the Jews ſo much, that they can't ſuffer them in their Territories. They have the ſame uſage at Athens, where they were ſettled in St. Paul's time. Perhaps as the number of Chriſtians is there greater than that of Turks †, who are more inclin'd to Toleration, the Chriſtians have obtain'd an Order that excludes the Jews from this City.

XI. But if they are deny'd acceſs in ſome Places, there are a great many others where they have ſtill conſiderable Eſtabliſhments. They have four Synagogues at Patras, ſo famous for Callirhoe's Indifference, and St. Andrew's Martyrdom; two Events perhaps equally fabulous. At leaſt, that Stone which ſtinks, becauſe St. Andrew's Judge ſat upon it, is an Invention of the Greeks. The Jews have their Judges here, which they chuſe out of the Old Men of the Nation. They have alſo their particular Burying-place upon a neighbouring Mountain, which looks like a great City, becauſe it conſiſts of ſeveral little Stone-Houſes, in which each Family is bury'd, and a Marble Stone, on which the Name of the Family the Tomb belongs to is ingrav'd, ſerves as a Door. But as there are but few Inhabitants in this City, the Jews, which are not above a fourth part, amount but to a thouſand Perſons. Some of the Circumcis'd are at Lepanto and Livadia, a City in old time ſo celebrated for Trophonius's Oracle, which was given in the Cave of a Mountain near the City. Some alſo are at Corinth and other Cities, where they can live by Trade. But Greece is ſo depopulated by the Revolutions it has undergone, by the Tribute it pays, and ſtill more, by the Oppreſſions of the Grand Seignior's Officers, that their Condition is very miſerable.

XII. At Theſſalonica they make a greater Figure; where they were even in St. Paul's time very froward and bigotted to their Law. They have not only ſtood their Ground, but for many Ages have had a conſiderable Academy in this Place. Plantavitius, ſo well vers'd in the Names of the Doctors, makes ‖ R. Moſes Abelda, a Sicilian; but he is evidently miſtaken: He took Salonichi for Sicily; whereas 'tis the Name which is at preſent given to Theſſalonica, where Moſes Abelda compos'd a large Volume of Sermons, and endeavour'd to comfort the People againſt the Frailties and Calamities of Life, by a Treatiſe which he call'd, The Gate of Tears, and his Son Printed. Here it was, that in the Year 1490. Joſeph the Son of Seu taught, known by the Tract he wrote about the Uſe of the Gemara. He was at the ſame time Head of the Synagogue of Conſtantinople, and of the Academy of Theſſalonica. This was the City that Tzevi preferr'd, before ſo many others, for the Stage to play his Impoſtures on, in the Year 1666. being perſuaded, that if he could deceive the Heads of this Academy, he could eaſily carry away the Multitude.

XIII. Here it was * that the famous Apoſtate of * Japhe Enaiim, Japhe More, Pulcher oculis, Pulcher aſpectu. Bart. B. R. t. 4. p. 395. 549. † Sciva Enaiim, Septem Oculi ex Zachar. 7. 10. ‖ He was call'd Bomptianus, בומסיאנו Conſtantinopolitanus. ‡ Frey Baſilienſ. excerpta Aharonis. † There are at Athens ten or twelve thouſand Inhabitants, and three quarters of them are Chriſtians. V. Wheeler's Voyages, t. 1. p. 398. ‖ Plantavit. B. R. p. 136. * An. 1614. Ep. Moſh. Pardo apud Schut. Comp. Hiſt. Jud. l. 3. c. 1. p. 445.

---

Marpurg

Marpurg retir'd: He was a Chriſtian by Birth, and a Profeſſor in that Academy; but being ſcandalized with the Myſtery of the Trinity, which he could not comprehend, he threw himſelf into Judaiſm; He entred under the Wings of the Creator by Circumciſion at Theſſalonica, taking the Name of Moſes Pardo, inſtead of Victor, which he had before. Poverty purſu'd him to this Place, and he wrote from thence to Hartman, who had been one of his Friends, to let him know his Condition. He deſired this Profeſſor to perſuade the Landgrave of Heſſe, to grant him leave to return to his Houſe, and Wife, who had not written to him in ſeven Years time. He propos'd to him the Example of the Grand Seignior, under whoſe Empire he liv'd, who claim'd no Prerogative over Mens Conſciences, tho' he had a great one over their Bodies. He maintain'd, That all the Bibles were corrupted, except thoſe of the Original Hebrew, which he had much ſtudy'd ſince his being at Salonichi. He would not abandon the Law, becauſe it was a Divine Religion, as every body own'd, whereas People did not agree about Chriſtianity. The frequent and terrible Earthquakes felt that Year at Salonichi, doubtleſs increas'd his Fears, Remorſes and Miſery. Nevertheleſs he dy'd in the Religion he had embrac'd. Laſtly, 'tis to this Academy that the Jews of Conſtantinople at preſent ſend their Children to learn the Hebrew Tongue.

XIV. They have continu'd, and ſtill ſubſiſt, at Gallipoli, a City ſeated in the Thracian Cherſoneſus, at the Mouth of the Propontis, and at this day they make one fourth of its Inhabitants, which conſiſt of ſix thouſand Jews, as many Greeks, and twelve thouſand Turks. They are more conſiderable at Prouſia, built upon an Hill of Myſia, near Mount Olympus. This City was the Capital of the Ottoman Empire, before the taking of Conſtantinople; and as they could not Maſter it but by the deſtruction of a hundred thouſand Chriſtians, who vigorouſly reſiſted the Mahometans, they * are not permitted to live in it, but confin'd to the Suburbs, whilſt they number twelve thouſand Jews within its Walls. There has been found here an ancient Medal, ſtruck in Honour of Marcus Aurelius, having on the Reverſe a Man forcing himſelf upon his Sword; and 'tis ſaid to be the Figure of Ajax, who kill'd himſelf in this City.

XV. The Jews have alſo their Habitations at Rhodes. They had formerly † a Diſtrict aſſign'd them near the Wall, call'd, The Wall and Quarter of the Jews: And when Mahomet II. beſieg'd the Place, the Baſha, who could not carry either St. Stephen's Mount, or St. Nicholas's Tower, erected a Battery of his heavieſt Canon againſt this Wall. 'Twas a violent Aſſault, and the Quarter was taken. Some Nations were already Caballing to oblige the Grand Maſter to ſurrender; but he ſuſtain'd the Aſſault, and repuls'd the Enemy, tho' he had receiv'd five Wounds. The Turks rais'd the Siege, and to preſerve the Memory of this Event, the Grand Maſter, d'Aubuſſon, erected a Church near the Wall where he had beaten the Turks. Some time after he reſolv'd to expel all the Jews, not only from their Quarter, but the whole Iſland, and from all the Eſtates of the Order. The better to authorize his Violence, he repreſented to the Council, That the Commerce between Jews and Chriſtians was dangerous; that, according to the Opinions of Divines and Canoniſts, the Jews were all Slaves of Chriſtian Princes; from whence he inferr'd, they had loſt the natural Power of Fathers over their Children, and that they might be baptiz'd whether they would or not. The Jews ‖ were allow'd to ſell their Effects in forty days time; but when that term was expir'd they were oblig'd to depart. They were prohibited going and ſettling in the Levant, for fear they ſhould become Spies to the Grand Seignior; as if they ſtill preſerv'd any Authority over thoſe they had baniſh'd. In fine, they detain'd all the Children, which they caus'd to be baptiz'd, and kept at the Expence of the Church, leſt leaving the Iſland, they ſhould reſume their old Religion. 'Tis true, ſome Proteſtant Divines, as well as Catholick, have determin'd, That it was the deſign of God to enſlave the Jews, and that they have deſerv'd it, by crucifying Jeſus Chriſt: But this Will of God is general, and reſpects all Sinners that diſhonour their Birth by their Crimes; they are Slaves of the Devil, and their Paſſions; but Chriſtian Charity is inconſiſtent with Slavery.

Rhodes having been taken * by the Turks, the Jews enter'd and ſettled there again, and they are even treated more favourably than the Chriſtians †; for the latter, who have their Ware-houſes and Shops in the City, are not allow'd to lodge in it; whereas the Jews are not oblig'd to quit their Houſes to ſeek Beds in the Neighbouring Villages. However, they reckon but two hundred of 'em to thirteen hundred Turks.

XVI. They are more numerous at Smyrna ‖; where they reckon ſix thouſand Souls of their Nation, and have many Synagogues. In fine, there are few Cities or great Towns in the Ottoman Empire, but have ſome Jews. They ſuffer much by the Avarice of the Sultan's Officers; but this Misfortune is common to them with moſt of the Subjects of this great and extenſive Empire.

* Wheeler's Voyages, t. 1. p. 185. Spon's Voyages, t. 1. p. 209. † An. 1480. ‖ Bouhours Hiſt. d'Aubuſſon t. vi. p 457
* An. 1652. † Stochove's Voyage to the Levant. p. 227. Thevenot's Voyage. l. 1. ‖ An. 1690. Smith Sept. Eccleſ.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXIX.

The State of the Jews in Italy for the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth Centuries.

I. John XXIII. a Persecutor and unhappy. II. Nicolas II. peaceable. III. St. Simonin's Canonization. IV. Alexander VI. admits the Jews to Rome. V. Picus de Mirandola takes them into his Service. VI. They are expell'd out of the Kingdom of Naples. VII. Cardinal Sadolet's Censures of Paul III's. Protection. VIII. Julius III. causes the Gemara, and other Hebrew Books to be burnt. IX. Joseph Tzarphati's Conversion. X. Jews famous at Rome. XI. Paul IV. persecutes them. XII. Jewish Women possess'd: Their Fraud discover'd. XIII. Pius V. banishes them out of the Ecclesiastical States. XIV. Sixtus V. tempted by the hope of being a Gainer by the Silk Manufactures. XV. Clement VIII. expels the Jews, with a limitation. XVI. Bombergues Bibles. XVII. His Stem of David. XVIII. The Protection of the Republick. XIX. Famous Rabbins in the last Century at Venice. XX. A Press at Soncino. XXI. Ghedalia the Author of the Chain of the Cabbala. XXII. The Academy of Padua. XXIII. Disputes at Mantua. XXIV. Corrections of Moses the Old. XXV. Jechiel de Pesaro converted. XXVI. Leo of Modena, his Works. XXVII. Jacob Tsaphalon, his precious Stones. XXVIII. The Academy of Rome absolves Tribotti. XXIX. Synagogues at Rome frequented by the Christians. XXX. The Protection which Innocent XI. gives the Jews at Venice. XXXI. This Pope's pains to convert 'em vain. XXXII. The way of praying for them. XXXIII. The Apostolical Tax of the Synagogues. XXXIV. Their number in Italy.

I. THE Jews complain, That they had a terrible Enemy in John XXIII. They say, that this Pope, who was fitter to make a General, and to Head an Army, than to be Head of the Church, was their violent Persecutor. He issu'd * many Edicts to force them to turn Christians; and not content to torment them in his Diocese, he wrote to the Queen of Spain, who was Regent in the Minority of John II. whom his Father, the Sickly, had left in the Cradle, that this Princess acting in conjunction with him, might make the greater number of Proselytes. And indeed, by her Severities, she forc'd † sixteen thousand Jews to abandon their Religion. Part of those that persever'd perish'd by the Fire, and part by other Punishments they were sentenc'd to; the others, as they fled, fell into the Peasants Hands, who murder'd 'em. A very small number of 'em ransom'd their Liberty and Lives by Money. Not long after they had the pleasure of hearing their Persecutor complain, in his turn, of the Miseries that overwhelm'd him, in these words.

Qui modo summus eram gaudens & nomine Præsul,
Tristis & abjectus nunc mea fata gemo.
Excelsus solio nuper versabar in alto,
Cunctaq; gens pedibus oscula prona dabat;
Nunc ego pœnarum fundo devolvor in imo,
Vultum deformem quemque videre piget.
Omnibus in terris aurum mihi sponte ferebant;
Sed nec gaza juvat, nec quis amicus adest.

II. Nicholas II. comforted the Circumcis'd of his Territories for the Afflictions they had undergone, and granted them his Protection ‖. He gave a check to the Inquisitors, who continu'd tormenting them unreasonably. He wrote in his turn too to Spain, to prevent, by his Remonstrances, the forcing of their Consciences. He maintain'd the voluntary Converts in the Privilege of entring into Offices, which the Inhabitants of Toledo had taken from them by a solemn Edict.

III. Sixtus IV.* Canoniz'd little Simonin at Trent. He was Son to one Simon a Mechanick. 'Tis said, that the Jews unmercifully murder'd him: They shew still a Knife, and Pincers, and four great Needles, with which they us'd to drain out his Blood, and two silver Goblets, in which they drank it. And farther, all this Tragical Story is painted in one of the Churches of the City, where the young Saint has his Chappel. The Inhahitants pretend, that this Murder † was committed in the Year 1276. But whether the Child's Saintship was not sufficiently known, or that it requir'd time to ripen the Story, and give Credit to the Miracle; or whether, lastly, There are Ages, in which People disgusted with the old Saints, are oblig'd to find out new ones, to revive their Attention and Curiosity; this Child was not Canoniz'd till the Pontificate of Sixtus IV, two hundred Years after the Event. This Canonization drew great Calamities upon the Circumcis'd, not only in the Bishoprick of Trent, where they pretended the Crime was committed, but also in all the Territories of the Republick of Venice. The Preachers ‖ kindled the People, who mov'd by the Notion of a false Miracle, plunder'd and murder'd all the Jews they met with. So great was the disorder that the Doge and Senate were oblig'd to repress it, and to order the Magistrates of Padua to treat the Jews like their other Subjects, and to hinder 'em from being abus'd; Because the Report spread at Trent to 'em appear'd a Falshood, contriv'd by Art, for a certain end the Senate would not examine into They were all banish'd out of the City of Trent, where the Magistrates were less equitable. But some time after, they obtain'd the liberty of living there three days together, because they made a considerable part of the Commerce. We are told, that some time after, the three days liberty were reduc'd to three hours, in punishment for their obstinate defence of Buda against the Christians, in the last War with the Turks.

IV. Alexander VI. instead of ill-using 'em, received 'em with abundant Charity. Being expelled Spain by Ferdinand the Catholick, and Fugitives in all Places, they knew not where to rest the Sole of their Feet. Those that came to Rome were ill-receiv'd by their cruel and barbarous Brethren, who would have suffer'd 'em to die with Hunger, if Alexander VI. had not succour'd 'em.

In effect, this Pope, tho' a Spaniard by Birth, and Head of the Church, understanding that the Jews, who had long been settled at Rome, left the Exiles in Misery, without attempting to succour them, he threatned to expel 'em, unless they chang'd their Conduct, and gave their miserable Brethren opportunities of settling in the Ecclesiastical State. He thought it convenient to profit by Ferdinand's

* An. 1412. † Salomon Ben Virgæ, p. 312. ‖ An. 1447. * An. 1472. † Misson's Voyage to Italy, p 147. ‖ See the Ordonnance du Doge Mocenigoat Cardoso las Excellencias, p. 27. It is dated April 22. Indict. 8. 1475.

Error, and to enlarge his Revenues at the Coſt of others. There have been a great many People, who would not perſecute the Jews, nor yet would ſuffer their numbers to multiply in their States, by the Conjunction of Strangers. But the Pope liſtned not to the Reaſons dictated by his Religion, but would have the new Comers have the ſame Privileges at Rome, that the old Inhabitants of the ſame Religion had.

V. Others being inform'd of the Pope's kind Inclinations, flock'd from all Parts into Italy. Jochanan Aleman came from Conſtantinople, and was taken into Service of Picus Count of Mirandola, as his Preceptor. This Prince, for many Years *, had been opinionated with the Writings of the Rabbins, and even of the Cabbaliſts. He is reported to have ſaid †, That thoſe who read the Hebrew Books drew at the Fountain-Head; That the Rivulets had flow'd from thence to the Greeks, and that nothing but Marſhes and ſtagnating Water was found among the Latins. He maintain'd, That Eſdras had caus'd certain Caballiſtick Books to be written, which he had purchas'd at a great Price, and that Sixtus IV. had order'd 'em to be tranſlated into Latin. This prejudice of his was objected to him as a Crime; but he call'd God to witneſs, That he had found the Trinity in the Cabbala, and all the other Myſteries of Chriſtianity, ſo that there remain'd not the leaſt Controverſie with the Jews, who ſpoke like St. Paul, or St. Jerome. Laſtly ‖, he told, That diſputing at Table with a great Cabbaliſt, call'd Dattilius, he had converted him by the help of this Science. 'Tis no wonder, that a Prince of this Character gave Refuge to thoſe that were baniſh'd out of Spain, and took one of 'em into his Houſe, to comfort him for the Miſeries he had undergone. But Bonis de Latis, a Native of Provence, who liv'd at that time, dedicated to Alexander VI. his Treatiſe concerning the uſefulneſs of the Aſtronomical Ring, which he had invented. He wrote it in Latin, and his Stile has not been thought bad, tho' he thought himſelf oblig'd to apologize for it in theſe two Verſes;

Parce (precor) quæ ſunt rudibus errata Latino,
Lex Hebrea mihi eſt, lingua Latina minus.

VI. Another part * of the Spaniſh and Portugal Refugees thought to find a Retreat at Naples; but the Inquiſitors † purſu'd 'em thither with that Heat, and exercis'd ſuch terrible Oppreſſions under this Pretence, that the People rebell'd. The Viceroy reſolv'd to expel ‖ the Jews, that he might at once get rid of the Inquiſitors. He alledg'd, That the Diſtemper having ceas'd, and the Faith of the old Inhabitants being pure and well known, there was no need of theſe cruel Phyſicians, who made Wounds, and laid 'em open, inſtead of cloſing 'em. This Conduct was confirm'd afterwards by Charles the Vth. who would not tolerate the Jews in this Kingdom, nor in Sicily. The truth is *, this Prince hated them, and the Impoſtures he had diſcover'd, ſeem'd to authorize him in it. A Perſon of this Nation had the Confidence to maintain, in his Preſence, that he was the Meſſiah. Charles fully ſatisfy'd he was an Impoſtor, caus'd him to be burnt. A more artful Cheat plaid his part better for ſome time. He was originally a Jew, but had been brought up in Chriſtianity. He alſo poſſeſs'd a little Poſt at the Court of Portugal, when David arriv'd there, and reſolv'd to make him back his Deſign. David boaſted to be the Leader of the Army of Iſrael. He had publiſh'd it at Rome, where he had ſeen Clement VIII. Coming to Portugal, he ohlig'd this young Chriſtian to reſume his old Religion, with the Name of Salomon Malcho. He caus'd him to Study, and his Progreſſes in the knowledge of Traditions and the Law were ſo ſpeedy and great, that the Jews of Italy maintain'd, that an Angel dictated his Sermons. But not content with his forcible Preaching, he wrote † many Books, which gave new Radiations to his Glory. His Colleague David, diſtinguiſh'd himſelf alſo by his Faſtings. They ſay, he continu'd ſix days without taking any Food. He liv'd in publick, and had Witneſſes of his total Abſtinence, who look'd upon him as a Divine Man; but neither he nor Malcho durſt venture upon the Title of Meſſiah. They both contented themſelves with the Glory of being the Fore-runners of him, who was to appear and deliver the Nation. Malcho had the imprudence to deſire an Audience of Charles V. who was then at Mantua. He granted it him; but as he left the Chamber, he order'd him to be ſeiz'd and burnt. David was arreſted Priſoner, and baniſh'd into Spain. The Jews were not undeceiv'd by theſe ſad Accidents, and they long believ'd, that David was alive, and return'd every Week to viſit his Wife, who was left in Italy.

VII. Notwithſtanding theſe Impoſtures, the Jews were ſo Potent ‖ under the Pontificate of Paul III. as to provoke the Rage of Cardinal Sadolet. He was Biſhop of Carpentras, in the Dioceſe of Avignon, where the Jews had ever been tolerated, ſince Joan Queen of Sicily made a Preſent of this City to the Pope. They had their Synagogue there, as they have at this day, tho' this City be in the midſt of France, from whence they were baniſh'd. The Prelate * was not able to bear it. He wrote to Cardinal Farneſe, repreſenting, 1. That the Pope had never been ſuch a Benefactor to the Chriſtians as he was to the Jews; That he had granted 'em Titles, new Privileges and Honours, which rendred them haughty and inſolent; inſomuch that the Chriſtians were but like Sheep in the midſt of Wolves; That they were driven from their Houſes, and even commonly from the Cities where they ought to live at reſt. 2. That it was unaccountable, how a Pope could ſo rigorouſly perſecute the Lutherans, and grant at the ſame time ſo glaring a Protection, and ſuch ſingular Favours to the Jews, who ſeem more worthy of his Indignation. 3. He obſerv'd, that the true method for a Man to make his Court, and to riſe to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, was to countenance this Nation. Its Credit therefore muſt neceſſarily have been great, when Biſhopricks and Dignities were the conſequences of the Flatteries that were paid it. 4. Laſtly, He lays open the real ſource of this Protection; for this Favour proceeded from the Pope's Treaſurers, and the Intendants of his Finances, to whom the Jews were neceſſary Men. However, ſome regard was had to the Cardinal's Remonſtrances. In which caſe they did what is commonly done at Rome; when any uſeful Abuſe is diſcover'd, they palliate it, and retrench the too manifeſt and glaring Enormity.

VIII. A little after, Julius III. † being perſuaded, that the Allegorical Interpretetions of the Gemara were dangerous, caus'd the Talmud to be burnt. All the Books of the Gemara, which were in Italy, were burnt, ſay the Hiſtorians ‖.

IX. 'Twas in this Pontificate, that Joſeph Tzarphati, a famous Rabbin, who had taught a long time

* An. 1493. † Apud Menaſſe de Fragil. Præf. ‖ Pici Mirandi Apol. p. 82. * An. 1510. Dacherii Spicil. t. 9. p. 162. † An. 1492. ‖ An. 1539. * An. 1534. † V. Imbonat. Bibl. Rabb. t. v. Ganz Tzemach Ghedalia Schialſchelet p. 45. ‖ An 1539. * Sadolet, L. 12. Ep. 5, 6. † An. 1554. Bullar. t. 1. Conſt. Paul. IV. 19, & 24. ‖ Ganz Tzemach David p. 153.

time at Rome, embrac'd Christianity. His Family was of Fez, and he was born in France; but retiring into Italy, where Learning flouriſh'd, he explain'd the Talmud in the Synagogue and the Academy of Rome. He was converted, and to do more Honour to Pope Julius, he took the Name of Monte. He prov'd, That this Pope was known in Holy Writ, and extracted his Name by the Gemara from the Contents of the Sacred Text. He writ a long Letter of Peace to the Synagogue of Rome, which he had left, to prove *, That the Meſſiah was come. He was order'd to preach to the new Converts, and to the Jews, who were to be preſent at certain Sermons; but his Perſon being odious, becauſe of his Deſertion, they complain'd of him to Cardinal Siclet, who remov'd him from this Employ. He publiſh'd a Treatiſe † concerning the confuſion of the Jews, pretending, that all the Myſteries of Chriſtianity are found in the old Teſtament; and as this Book was not printed, an Italian Author, who has publiſh'd the Dialogo di Fede, thought he had liberty to make uſe of it, and to ſteal from it.

X. There were, moreover, at this time other famous Jews at Rome. Elias the Levite was || born at Padua; but having loſt all, when this City was taken, he was receiv'd by ſome Cardinals, whom he taught Hebrew. Being an unfortunate Man, he once more loſt what he had, when the Conſtable de Bourbon * plunder'd Rome. He retir'd to Venice, and from thence to Germany; but being not accuſtom'd to the Cold of this Country, he return'd to Italy, where he dy'd † at eighty Years of Age. He was ſuſpected to have great inclinations for Chriſtianity, and this Suſpicion was a ground ſufficient for his Nation to hate him; but he did not abjure the Faith of his Anceſtors, tho' ſome have believ'd and written it. Laſtly, There was || a Woman at Rome, call'd Deborah, who then began to diſtinguiſh her ſelf, and continu'd to do it by her Poems and other Works; for ſhe dy'd not till the beginning of the ſeventeenth Century. But to return to the Popes.

XI. Paul IV. declar'd himſelf * an Enemy to this Nation. He hated it mortally, and the firſt Year of his Pontificate he put out two Bulls, which the Jewiſh Writers bitterly complain of. By the firſt he order'd each Synagogue erected in his Territories, to pay ten Ducats Annually, for the Inſtruction of the Catechumens that ſhould abjure Judaiſm; and by the ſecond, which was more rigorous, this Pope oblig'd the Men to wear a yellow Hat, and the Women a Veil of the ſame Colour. He neceſſitated them all to live in the ſame Quarter of the City, the Gates whereof were to be ſhut by Night. They were depriv'd of all Societies, Offices, or Profeſſions among the Chriſtians, without excepting Phyſick and Merchandize; for their Commerce was confin'd to ſmall Wares; they were prohibited more than one Synagogue in each City. They were commanded to ſell all their Lands in ſix Months time; which ſo ſunk the Price of 'em, that they could not get the fifth part of the value, which nevertheleſs amounted to five hundred thouſand Crowns. Laſtly, He made an Ordinance againſt Hebrew Books; for whereas Julius, his Predeceſſor, had condemn'd 'em without diſtinction to be burnt; he diſtinguiſh'd the Writings wherein Jeſus Chriſt was treated in a blaſphemous manner, from others which only explain'd the Jewiſh Religion. He allow'd theſe to be read, and burnt the reſt.

XII. This credulous Pope fell into a Snare that was laid for him; for they perſuaded him, that the Jews, to revenge themſelves of ſome Women, who had embrac'd Chriſtianity, had poſſeſs'd 'em with Devils, which cruelly tormented 'em. And indeed, there were eighty nine Jewiſh Women at Rome, who acted the poſſeſs'd. Being exorcis'd by a Benedictine Monk, they anſwer'd, That the Jews had ſent thoſe Devils into 'em, becauſe they were baptiz'd. The Pope, who hated the Nation, and was but a poor Divine, being inform'd of it, entred upon a Reſolution of baniſhing all the Jews out of his Territories. A Jeſuit ſtop'd him, by repreſenting, That the Devils were not thus at Man's devotion, and they did not go to a determin'd Point in the time and place preſcrib'd 'em. Upon this Intelligence, ſtricter Informations were made. The Demoniacks confeſs'd, upon the firſt Laſhes that were given 'em, That they had acted the Poſſeſs'd, and talk'd againſt their Nation, only at the requeſt of ſome Courtiers, who hop'd to reap their Spoils, becauſe the Pope would give 'em the Sequeſtration of thoſe he ſhould baniſh or put to death. Theſe Courtiers were ſeiz'd, and puniſh'd with death by night, and the Pope hearing of the Execution, broke out; "Without my good "Jeſuit, I had been damn'd; for I ſhould have "wrongfully put all the Jews to death. I pray "God to convert 'em; but as long as I live, I "will not hate 'em nor moleſt 'em as I have done; "by which he gain'd great Honour with all Chri-"ſtian Princes". Theſe things happen'd in the Year 1552. The Author is miſtaken, for the Theatin, in whoſe Pontificate this Diſcovery was made, was Paul IV. who was not elected till 1555. However, Lewis Guion †, who tells the Story, liv'd pretty near this time, and he boaſts of having receiv'd the thing from his Brother, who had been Chaplain to Cardinal de Granvelle. This may ſerve to undeceive two ſorts of People, ſome whereof too lightly believe the Accuſations alledg'd againſt the Enemies of the Faith, and others who allow too much to Devils and Sorcerers.

XIII. Pius V. || ſhew'd himſelf ſtill ſeverer to the Jews, and the Conſtitution he publiſh'd againſt 'em, was enough to make them hated by all the World; for he accus'd 'em of hating the Chriſtians; of ruining the Eccleſiaſtical State, by the exorbitant Uſuries they drew from it; of ſheltering Robbers, and thereby facilitating Robberies; of inſinuating themſelves into good Houſes, to debauch the Women, and managing their Rendevouz with their Gallants. Laſtly, They are tax'd with dealing in Magick, and foretelling things to come. For this reaſon they were expell'd out of all the Cities of the Eccleſiaſtical State, except Rome and Ancona. This Exception makes for the Accus'd; for we can't conceive, that if they had been convicted of the Crimes charg'd upon them by the Pope, he would have left 'em a Sanctuary at Rome, the Capital of his States, the Holy City, the Seat of Religion, and the Reſidential Place of the Sovereign Pontiff. The ſame Vices for which they were baaniſh'd ſo many Cities, ought, for a ſtronger Reaſon, to have remov'd 'em from Rome, where the Corruption has more dangerous Influences. The Reaſons the Pope alledg'd to juſtifie ſo contradictory a Conduct are pleaſant enough. He kept the Jews in his Capitol, that the Chriſtians, who ſaw 'em there, might be put in mind of the Paſſion of the Son of God. He hop'd alſo, they would be Converted by their Society with Christians, and would grow less wicked by the Pope's Neighbourhood. But the only Reason that is offer'd with any foundation, is, that these People are useful to the Pope, to keep up the Eastern Trade, and for the Profit he drew from it. The Vicars of God are Men, like the rest, and are govern'd by Interests purely human. But however, ought he not to have had Judgment, to invent other Reasons, or to conceal those he produc'd, that he might not be contradictory with himself?

* An. 1582. † Fabiano Fiochi Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. iii. p. 818. || An. 1509. * Ibid. p. 898. † An. 1542. || An. 1560. * An. Jud. 5315. Chr. 1555. † Lewis Guion's various Readings, t. 2. l. 3. c. 9. p. 485. || An. 1569. Bullar. t. ii. Pius V. Conſt. 80. Spond. Ann. An. 1569.

XIV. Sixtus V. was more sincere, tho' he is accus'd of having always dissembled. For he confest, That the true Motive that inspir'd him to tolerate the Jews, was the hope of Profit. A Rabbin, call'd Meir, or Master Magin, of a French Origin, who resided at Venice, came to Rome, and being a Man of Wit, he was very agreeable to the Pope. He dedicated a Book to him, and wrote Verses in his Praise, which were translated into Italian. Lastly, He presented a Petition to have a particular Privilege of working in Silk. He pretended to have an admirable Secret to multiply the Worms, Silk and Profit accruing from it. The Pope granted him * several Privileges, voided all the contrary Declarations and Bulls of his Predecessors, tho' they had been made with an Oath and Menace of Excommunication. The hope of enriching the Apostolick Chamber, by laying a great Duty upon every Pound of Silk, was the Motive that oblig'd Sixtus V. to distinguish this Jew and his Deputies from all other Workmen, and give him a Patent which ruin'd the rest.

XV. Clement VIII. † shew'd 'em but little favour; for he renew'd the Bull of Pius V. who banish'd 'em out of the Ecclesiastick State. However, two things are observable in this Bull. One, that he added the City Avignon to those of Ancona and Rome, where they still preserv'd their Liberty of Conscience. 2. This Pope founded the Privilege of living at Rome, upon this reason; ‖ That the Jews ought not to be remov'd far from Rome, and the Pope's sight, that they might be always at hand to be converted, as if the Conversions were more frequent at Rome than other Places; and that this was a reason to retain 'em, when he banish'd 'em his other Cities. By this Principle, he should have given liberty of Conscience to all the Hereticks at Rome, and have fill'd the City with 'em, that they might always be at hand to be converted.

XVI. The Nation at that time had other considerable Settlements in the Cities of Italy; but one of * the most noted was that of Venice. The Republick receives 'em all in its Territories, and gives 'em a very favourable Entertainment. They boast also, to have in part deserv'd this Kindness by their Fidelity, and the great Services they have done it in the War with the Turks, and particularly at the Siege of Candia. Here it was that Daniel Bombergue printed † their Hebrew Bibles the first time. This Printer came from Antwerp to Venice, and chiefly dealt in Hebrew Books: To Print 'em the more correctly, he employ'd the most Learned Jews, whom he kept in pay. We are told, that he had above a hundred of these Pensioners. Felix Pratensis had the care of an Edition ‖ of the Bible with the Chaldee Paraphrases, and the Commentaries of many Rabbins, which he dedicated to Pope Leo X. But this Edition is not the best, because he could not regularly enough dispose the different Readings of the Massoreths. He made another, from which the Inquisitors curtail'd many things which they thought injurious to Religion, which renders it still less exact than the foregoing; and an Edition in Folio *, of 1548. is preferr'd to 'em both, which has at the beginning a Preface of Jacob Chajim, or Joachim, Author of the Collection of the Massorah.

This Printer, besides Bibles, would have a Grammar, upon which R. Abraham de Balmis work'd by his Order; and he wrote a very long one, which he call'd, the Possession of Abram, imagining he could no longer be call'd Abraham, because he had lost his two Children, whilst he was composing this Work. He dy'd † before he accomplish'd it. R. Calonymas, who was then at Venice, supply'd what was wanting to it. Lastly, Bombergue printed the Works of many Rabbins, which put him to prodigious Expences, and has render'd his Memory very precious with the Jews.

XVII. 'Twas to Venice that David the Son of Isaac de Pomis retir'd; who, by way of acknowledgment, wrote a Treatise to prove, That the Laws of that Republick are Divine, and that God has promis'd by his Prophet to preserve it. Che le Constitutioni Venetiane sono divine & e promessa da Iddio per becca del Profeta di conservare tal santa Republica. This Rabbin pretended, That his Family descended from one of the Heads of the Captives whom Titus carry'd from Jerusalem to Rome. He reckon'd among his Ancestors, one Isaac the Rich, and one Elias the Saint, on whose Tomb miraculous Fires were seen to shine for seven Nights together. He was a Prodigy of Learning in his tendrest Years, if it be true, that at seven Years old, he compos'd his Stem of David. His Father liv'd at Spoleto, but the Germans having pillag'd Rome, he was afraid of being ruin'd by the like Fate, and therefore carry'd off all his Effects, and went to seek a retreat somewhere else. He fell into the Misfortune he sought to avoid; for Colonna's Troops meeting the Mules that carry'd his Treasure, seiz'd it, and reduc'd him to extreme Poverty. He settled at Bevagna ‖, where his Son, who was born in the Year 1525. strongly apply'd himself to Study. The Manuscript of one of his Ancestors, who liv'd in the beginning of the twelfth Century, and who had then compos'd a Hebrew * Dictionary, accidentally fell into his hands. He not only study'd it, but resolv'd to make another larger, in which he put the Terms which the Rabbins often make use of, tho' they are not Hebrew. He inserted into his Work all that was good in those of Rabbin Nathan, Elias the Levite, and Kimki's Roots. In it we find the Hebrew Words, the Foreign Terms, with the Latin and Italian. I can hardly believe that David compos'd so large a Work, being yet a Child.

Bartolocci †, who says it, has not rightly taken this Author's Thought. " He relates, That being " at Bevagna, he found Nathan's Book, which he " read very attentively; that he form'd a Design " of abridging it; that he found, some time after " the Meturgamam and the Thisbi of Elias the Le- " vite, with the Roots of Kimki; and that from " all these Works he compos'd ‖ the Stem. Last- " ly, He says, that his Father left Bevagna in the " Year 1532. to retire to Todi". Bartolocci has concluded from this Account, that the entire Work was compleated between David's arrival at Bevagna, and his retreat to Todi, which happen'd five Years after. But David relates all that regards the Composition of his Work, and the Materials he imploy'd in it, without saying, he com-

* An. 1587. v. the Privilege in Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. iv. p. 20. † An. 1593. ‖ Clem. Const. 19 & 20. Bull. t. 3. * Luzati Cardoso. † An. 1511. Ganz Tzemach, p. 151. An. 271. ‖ An. 1517. * Simon's Catal. of Princ. Bib. p. 512. † An. 1525. ‖ Mevania, Lat. * This Book ii call'd ערוך Aruch, because Dictionaries are in an Alphabetical Order, from ערך ordinare. Nathan, Son to Jechiel de Pomis, Head of the Synagogue at Rome in 1106. was the Author of this Work, which was still in Manuscript. † Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. ii. p. 40. ‖ It was Printed at Venice in 1587.

pos'd

pos'd it in so short a time, or at seven Year old. He intitl'd it the Stem, because it was form'd by degrees, like the Shoot of a Tree; and indeed he did not print it till the Year 1587. after he had publish'd many Works. He was invited to several places, where he practis'd Physick. The Bishop of Chiusi oppos'd his Entrance into the City of his Bishoprick, tho' he was earnestly desir'd there. He pass'd from thence to Rome; but some Domestick Misfortunes having oblig'd him to hasten to Venice, he made that his last Place of Abode. As he had been very unfortunate, he compos,d, for his own Consolation, a Discourse about the Misery of Man, and the means to avoid it, which he imbellish'd with several Passages of Ecclesiastes.

XVIII. The Republick maintain'd its Rights in the War with the Uscoques. These Robbers often pillag'd the Merchants of this Nation, and the House of Austria pretended to dispute the Venetians their Privilege of Protecting them, because they were not Christians: But no regard was had to a Pretension, that depriv'd Sovereigns of the Right of defending their Subjects; and the Jew Henriquez was chosen by the Senate to go into Dalmatia, to endeavour the Accommodation of this Affair, which caus'd an unhappy War.

XIX. R. Simcha, alias, Simeon Luzati, publish'd here his * Socrates; in which † he shews, That the greatest Genius's are weak and wandering, when they are not guided by Revelation; ‖ Opera nella quale si dimostra quanto sia imbecille lintendimento humano mentre non e diretto dalla revelatione divina. He compos'd another Treatise concerning the present State of the Nation, of which we shall give an Extract at the end of this Book. 'Twas at Venice also that Samuel Nachmias liv'd, tho' he was of a Thessalonian Family. Here he abjur'd * Judaism, with David his Son, and part of his Family, which took the Name Morosini: To shew that his Conversion was sincere, he publish'd an Italian Treatise, intitled, דרך אמונה Via della Fede. He explains in it the Ceremonies of his Nation, and shews the uselesness of 'em. He proves, That the six hundred and thirteen Precepts, which they distinguish in the Law, are observ'd by no body. Lastly, He confutes all the Jewish Superstitions and Sects. He grew old in the Christian Church; for he did not die till the Year 1687. at Rome †, whither he was retir'd. Mardochai ‖ Korkos, who taught in the Year 1672. perform'd an Action, that was hardly less venturous nor less odious to the Doctors of the Nation; for he compos'd a Treatise against the Cabbala, and their Prejudices for that Science are so great, that a Man seems to shake the Foundations of their Religion who attacks it. And therefore the Doctors have had the precaution not to print this Book.

XX. At the same time that Bombergue had his Press at Venice, another was set up at Soncino. Plantavitius, who look'd for this City in the Diocese of Cologne, was misled by some Analogy in the Name. He took it for Zons, a little City of the Archbishoprick of Cologne; whereas it is in Italy, situate in the Dutchy of Milan, near the Oglio. It has undergone several Revolutions, which have often sunk it out of sight, but it still makes a shift to lift its Head above its Ruins. Some Jews from Spires went to settle here at the end of the fifteenth Century *, and quitted the Name of their Family, to take that of the City Soncino. Their principal Business was to print Hebrew Books; and as they were almost the first that did this Service to the Nation, they grew famous and considerable. By this means they drew from the Dust a great number of Rabbinical Writings, which would have been bury'd in it, and were not easily read. The Doctors, that hereby found it much easier to read the Works of their Predecessors, gave great Encomiums to the Soncini, which a long time continu'd in this Post, and from thence dispers'd themselves into other Cities of Italy. There have been also very famous Doctors of this Name, and R. Ascer was of this Family.

XXI. There was also a Synagogue at Imola, where † the famous Ghedaliah was born, who was of a Portugueze Descent. He boasted ‖ to be of the Family of the Jachiia, and maintain'd, That this Family proceeding in a right Line from Jesse, Father of David, had maintain'd it self in Portugal, where Athanaric, Son to the great Athanaric, first of the Name, had given three Cities in Fief to one of his Grandfathers, and made him Intendant of his Houshold, and his whole Kingdom. Dom Salomon, another of his Ancestors, who liv'd in the Year 1199. had been General of the Portugueze Armies. Thus he continues his Genealogy, tho' the Book of it had been lost, and there was no Person then in Spain or Portugal, that could descend from David. He even commits unpardonable Faults; for if he pretended that Athanaric, King of Portugal, was the immediate Son of the King of the Goths of this Name, the Error is extremely gross, by his own Calculation, since he makes the one live in the time of Constantine and Pope Sylvester, and the other in the Year 996. There was no Athanaric King of Portugal; nor were there any Kings of Portugal in that time, this Province being made a Kingdom a long while after. His Grandfather was Head of the Academy and Synagogue of Naples, when Charles V. banish'd the Jews from it in 1539. This Man had compos'd 21 Volumes, but the principal and almost only one which was printed, is, the Chain of the Cabbala, Schialschelet Hakkabbala. He wrote it at Imola, in the Year 1549. and tho' the Author stole a great many things from a Work like his own, and is very frequently mistaken in Chronology, yet he has been serviceable to Bartolocci, in his Rabbinical Bibliotheque *, as he owns himself; and 'tis one of the most necessary Books to those that are fond of the Chain of Tradition, and the personal Succession of the Doctors. But at the same time it gives a blow to the Church of Rome, which boasts of this personal Succession, as an infallible means to propagate the Truth from Generation to Generation, and to deliver it from hand to hand. He was a Preacher, for he publish'd 180 Sermons, which he dedicated to his Son Moses. He was the Author of many other Works, the Catalogue whereof would be too tedious.

At Modena was another Synagogue, with R. Samuel at the Head of it, who in the Year 1550. publish'd the Judgments of Salomon. We have already observ'd, what fastuous Titles these Gentlemen give their Books. This is a course of Canon-Law. Salomon is renown'd for the Wisdom and Equity of his Judgments; and the Author fears not to give the same Idea of himself and his Decisions, which are in reality much esteem'd.

XXII. There was an Academy at Padua, which also brought up a considerable number of Doctors, R. Meir † was its President. Joseph ‖ of Padua, who took the Name of his Native-place likewise taught there. * Isaac Phea publish'd there at the same time his way of Faith, which gave him great

* An. 1638 † An. 1613. ‖ Padre Paolo Istoria de gli Uscocchi. * An. 1649. † Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 4. p. 404. ‖ An. 1672. He was born at Venice. * An. 1490. † An. 1500. ‖ En. 1549. * Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 1. p. 722 &c. † An. 1558. ‖ An. 1550. * An. 1560.

Reputation.

Reputation. They had there their great Preacher Menachem Rabba, whose Sermons upon the four Seasons of the Year have been since printed by his Son. He was still alive in the beginning * of the last Century. The Jews were here admitted Doctors of Physick, and they might afterwards practise in the Territories of the Republick. In fine, they have moreover three Synagogues † eight hundred Persons of their Nation, and a considerable Ghetto. This is the Name in Italy they give the Streets and Quarter of the Jews, in which they are shut up at Night. That of Padua has three Gates, and upon one of 'em ‖ an Inscription, beginning thus; Ne populo cœlestis regni hæredi usus cum exhærede esset.

XXIII. The Synagogue and Academy of Mantua have been famous for a long time. Two Rabbins Meser Leone di Mantoua, and Kolon, who govern'd it at the end of the fifteenth Century, were divided. Jealousie perhaps was the true cause of their Enmity; but they conceal'd this shameful Passion, as Divines commonly do, under the Cloak of Religion, and difference of Opinions about Faith. Not only the Jews of Mantua * divided, but the Christians engag'd so far in this division as to come to blows. Lewis Gonzaga, who was then Marques of Mantua, try'd in vain all ways to reconcile 'em; but at last he took the resolution which is always to be taken, that is, to expel the Leaders of the Faction, and by the Exile of these two Persons restore tranquility to the City.

XXIV. Other Doctors succeeded the expell'd; and Moses Vecchio, or Moses the Old, made a great Figure in the following Century. Alphes, whom we have already mention'd †, had written a course of Law so conformable to the Talmud, that sometimes one is mistaken for the other. His Commentators, instead of censuring several things he had inserted in his Book, approv'd them, or indeavour'd to soften them by a favourable Interpretation; as is commonly done by the Opinions of those Divines we esteem, and whose Reputation we fear to blot: But Moses the Old setting himself above Alphes and all his Commentators, publish'd ‖ at Mantua his Corrections upon their Works, which did him a great deal of Honour.

XXV. The Jews were settled at Pesaro, a very ancient little City, since 'tis mention'd by Catullus. It belongs at present to the Church, and is situate in the Dutchy of Urbin, upon the Adriatick Sea. Here was born R. Jechiel of Pesaro; who having for some time heard the Sermons of an Inquisitor at Florence, went to Rome, to desire leave to abjure his Judaism. Pope Gregory XIII. who then was upon the See, was present at the Speech he made before a numerous Assembly, and receiv[illegible] him, as he descended from the Chair, with these Words; Blessed is he that cometh in the Name of the Lord. The Pope baptiz'd him some days after; he became a Preacher, and some of his Italian Sermons have been printed, which he preach'd * at Florence against the Jews, who were numerous there †.

XXVI. They have maintain'd themselves thro'-out all Italy for the last Century, and have had their learned Rabbins. Their learned Ichadah ‖ Arie, much better known by the Name of Leo of Modena, was born in the City that gave him his Name. He had a great hatred for the Christians, and did not conceal it; for he put into their hands the Discoveries he had made upon the Name of Jesus Christ, to prove, that he was either Antichrist, or a strange God. To this purpose he found the the number 666 in the Name of Jesus Nazarene, ישו הנוצרי Jeschu Nozeri. He found the number 612 in the two Words Jesus and Mary, Jesu and Miriam; and he joyn'd these Words to those of Deuteronomy, The strange Gods of the land, which also makes the number 612. Lastly, The Word Jesus is 616, and these two Words, Elohe Nechar, the strange Gods, contain'd the same * number. These Discoveries could give no great Idea of this Rabbin, but yet he was a learned Man. His Treatise of Ceremonies of the Jews is esteem'd by all Nations. The Mouth of the Lion is a Book still more necessary, because he has collected in it the Words which are neither perfect Hebrew nor perfect Chaldee, us'd by the Rabbins. 'Tis a Glossary of mighty use to those who would understand the modern Doctors. They boast much a Poem he compos'd at forty Years of Age; in which he so happily associated the Italian Tongue with the Hebrew, tho' most different, that the same Syllables are found in the Hebrew as in the Italian Verses. One of them will suffice to give an Idea of 'em.

Chi nasce, muor; oi me, che pass' a cerbo.

That is,

He that is born dies; alas, what a difficult Step is that?

The same Syllables are found in these Hebrew Words,

Kinah. scemor. ai meh. cepas. aotsor. bo.

It requires Art and Labour to make the Syllables thus meet. But I question whether those who do it are well paid for their pains, or whether they merit the little Praise that is given 'em. Leo de Modena would be little known, if to these flights of Fancy that are allow'd to Youth, he had not added several Works † full of Erudition. He died at Venice, in the Year 1645. being seventy Years old. Lastly, here flourish'd in the Year 1674 Mardochai Korkos, who having a better Judgment than most Doctors of his Nation, instead of running headlong with them into the Cabbala, has indeavour'd to make others dislike it. He even had the Courage to write against the ten so famous Sephiroths, which denotes his good taste for Divinity.

XXVII. Jacob Tzaphalon taught at Ferrara. He was born at Rome in 1630. He had also taken his Doctor of Physick's Degree in the University of this City; but he bent his Studies to the Law, and became one of the principal Doctors of the last Century. Finding that some jealous Heads made him uneasie in his Native Country, he forsook it to retire to Ferrara, and govern'd the Synagogue of that Place. This Situation was the more convenient to him, because he came near Venice, where he printed many Books. He publish'd his precious Stones; which is a Collection of devout Thoughts, and to which he hath prefix'd several Prayers. There is one among the rest, pretty long, for Physicians, when they go to visit their Patients. Few of that Profession think, that they have occasion for the Assistance of Heaven. They imagine,

* An. 1605. † Misson's Voyage to Italy, p. 185. ‖ An. 1687. * An. 1470. † See the History of the eleventh Century. ‖ In the Year 1580. * An. 1585. † Bartolocci ex Schedis Magliabechi Bibl. Rabb. t. iv. p. 564. ‖ Alluding to his Name of Leo; Arie signifies Lion. * Apud Voet disput. de Judaismo, p. 123. † Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. iii. p. 16. & iv. p. 56.

that

that natural Remedies work the Cure without its Influences. The more devout Tzaphalon * was willing to correct this Error. He wrote other Books. The Title of one is taken from the Prophet Micha. † Thou wilt perform the Truth to Jacob. The second is The Light of the Preachers. A third, which turns upon Physick, is call'd, The Theatre of Life, in which he treats of Fevers, Poisons, Simples, and Diseases peculiar to each part of Human Body.

Judas Azael was eminent also for his preaching in the last Century. His Reputation was so great, that the Christians went out of Curiosity to hear him. He publish'd the Thrones of the House of David †. He divides this Treatise into eight Houses, to which he gives fifty Gates; 'tis a Cabbalistick Tract. He is accus'd of having taken it from his Father Eliezer, who also taught at Ferrara, and to have only chang'd the Title; for he had intitl'd it, the City of David, עיר דוד. He put his Name to it, and assum'd the Honour of it. This latter dy'd at Ferrara, in the Year 1677.

XXVIII. Jehosuah Menaghem was President of the Academy at Rome, at the end of the last Century: there was another Doctor at the same tim call'd Jacob Dattilo delli Piatelli. He came of an eminent Family of his Nation at Rome; and we have already spoken of a famous Cabbalist of this Name, whom Picus de Mirandola converted. This Man was look'd upon as one of the best qualify'd Masters to instruct Youth. The R. Tribotti appear'd also in the middle of the same Century. † In his Tract of the Bath of Women, he advanc'd some Propositions which brought the Doctors of Italy upon his back. The Synagogue and Academy of Rome, to put a stop to the multiplication of Books, and the course of the Division pronounc'd upon all these Questions; it declar'd for Tribotti, and the other Doctors submitted to its decision, and so Peace was restor'd ||. Is Infallibility at Rome even in the Synagogue? The Fountain must needs be very exuberant, if its Rivulets flow into the Synagogue.

XXIX. They reckon twelve or fifteen thousand Jews in this great City, who are govern'd by Triumvirs, whom they call Memmonim, Governours. These three Men determine all the differences that arise betwixt Man and Man, and take care to preserve the Privileges the Popes have granted them. They are chang'd every Year, that they may not be able to abuse their Authority. They live so familiarly with the Christians, that the latter make no scruple to go frequently to their Synagogues, and they did it in such a number, that Innocent XI. was oblig'd * to threaten 'em with Excommunication, and to fine twenty five Crowns all those that entred into 'em. They have an Academy here, which they call Talmud Thora, the Study of the Law. They have their Professors, amongst whom not long ago † was Joseph Kimki. They have nine Synagogues; and it seems that they preserve a kind of Superiority over the others of Italy, since they are consulted upon doubtful Cases, and their Determinations respectfully receiv'd.

XXX. Innocent XI. gave 'em some years ‖ since a particular Instance of his Protection. This Pope, who conjur'd the King of France to persecute his Protestant Subjects, to oblige 'em to change their Religion, induc'd the Venetians to give liberty to some Jews whom they oppress'd. Morosini, General of this Republick, returning victorious from the Morea, brought with him from this Country many Christians and Jews he had found under the Power of the Grand Seignior. The first were set at liberty and the latter kept in Prison. They represented the Injustice that was done 'em, since they offer'd to dwell in the Territories of the Republick, where they are allow'd a full Liberty of Conscience. They have their Cœmetery at Venice, from which have produc'd some Epitaphs. They have their Synagogues, and they reckon near two thousand Persons of their Nation in that City. One would think, that what they desir'd could not be refus'd; but yet they could not obtain it; and their Fate would have been miserable, if the Pope, whose Protection they implor'd, had not sollicited for 'em. Innocent XI. not content to act at Venice, appointed a Congregation at Rome, to take cognizance of this Affair, and to regulate it; but the Republick granted what was demanded, and the Jews were set at liberty.

XXXI. This Pope also apply'd himself to their Conversion. Gregory XIII. had order'd a Sermon to be preach'd weekly to instruct them. An ingenious Man was to be chosen for it, who was to prove, That the Messiah was come, That Jesus Christ is the Messiah, who has abolish'd the Law; and to inlarge upon the long Misery this Nation has suffered for seventeen hundred Years. He oblig'd one third of the Jews of Rome to be present, in their turns, at this Sermon, and the Children who had reach'd twelve Years were registred among the Auditors. Paul IV. also founded a House, where all that were converted, were fed and cloathed. He built also a Hospital for the Catechumens and the Sick, who were kept there at the Jews Expence. All the Bishops ought to imitate this Example, but whether the Prelates have wanted Zeal, or through the distraction of other Affairs, they have neglected this, tho' of the greatest moment, it has had no success. A Dominican only went into the Pulpit every Saturday, and made a cold and incoherent Discourse against the Nation that did not hear him. Innocent XI. indeavour'd to remedy this Abuse. He order'd * the Sermon should not be preach'd in a Consecrated Church, because he understood they profan'd it by scandalous Indecencies. He oblig'd the Preacher to make a Prayer to God; but lest the Names of Jesus and Mary should scare 'em, it was to be pronounc'd softly. He appointed an Office of Inspector, to impose silence upon the Talkers. In effect, a Man with a long Pole goes thro' the Ranks, and strikes the Fingers of those that talk or laugh. But all in vain, the incredulous Jews will not be converted; and Cardinal Barberini, who was at a great Expence to forward these Instructions, acknowledg'd before his death, That the Conversions made by dint of Money, are feign'd and insignificant.

XXXII. Two other things are observ'd † at Rome which must provoke this Nation. 1. They are oblig'd to celebrate the Elevation of the new Pope, and to wait for him upon the way of St. John de Lateran, to pay him their Homages. They may form excuses to themselves, and say, That as they look upon the Pope as a Temporal Prince, they ought to acknowledge the new Master that is giv'n 'em, and to rejoyce at his Exaltation. But can they acquit themselves by help of this distinction? For the Inauguration of the Popes is a pure act of Religion, and 'tis a Head that is given to the Roman Church. The Jews may, in their turn, accuse the Popes of being more jealous of their own Glory than that of the Master they adore; for they force them to pay homage to the Pope, whilst they permit 'em to reject the Messiah. 2. The Pope ‖ prays

* Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. iii. p. 852. † Mic. 7. 20. ‖ סאות לביית דוד Chisfoth Leveth David. * Nathan. Tribotti, An. 1644. † An. 1644. ‖ An. 1685. * La Rocque Mem. de l'Egl. l. 5. p. 605. † An. 1685. La Rocque's Memoirs of the Church. * Wagenseil Tela ignea præf. : Sanctiones Ceremoniales Rom. l. 1. S. 2. f. 26.

‖ prays for 'em on Good-Friday, as well as for Heathens and Hereticks, that God may tear off the Veil of Moſes and enlighten 'em. But he doth not kneel in praying for 'em, becauſe the Church deſigns to expreſs thereby the Horror it preſerves for what their Anceſtors did the ſame day, in falling on their Knees before Jeſus Chriſt to mock him: As if the Reverence we owe to God, and the Adorations we pay him, ought to depend on the manner wherewith the Profane inſult him.

XXXIII. We have carry'd the Hiſtory of the Jews in Italy to the end of the ſeventeenth Century. If any one deſires a more exact knowledge of the number and preſent State of their Synagogues, he may conſult the Tax of thoſe that are in the Eccleſiaſtical State. They reckon nine at Rome, and nineteen in Campania, thirty ſix in the Marquiſate of Ancona, twelve in the Patrimony of St. Peter, eleven at Bologna, and thirteen in Romandiola, which beſides what may be ſqueez'd from 'em by extraordinary Oppreſſions, are tax'd ſomewhat above ſeven hundred Crowns, which they pay every Year.

XXXIV. We may farther ſee the will of Zachary a Porto, who dy'd at Florence towards the end of the laſt Century *. This Merchant had compos'd a kind of Concordance † upon the Commentators of the Talmud. When he dy'd, he intruſted his Work with the Doctors of Rome, and bequeath'd his Library to the School. But moreover, he gave twenty four thouſand Piaſters to his Nation. One fourth part to be divided among the Univerſities of Leghorn, Venice, Jeruſalem, and the Land of Iſrael, and other eighteen thouſand Piaſters were to be diſtributed into Portions for Jewiſh Maids, of the Synagogues of Rome, Ferrara, Ancona, Urbane, which was his Birth-place, Peſaro, Ceſano, Venice, Padua, Verona, Rovigo, Florence, Sienna, Piſa, Leghorn, Mantua, Modena and Reggio. This Enumeration ſhews, that there are ſtill a conſiderable number of Synagogues in that place of the World, where the Church of Rome reigns with the greateſt Authority. We don't condemn its Toleration; but it ought to be equal, or rather greater, for thoſe who worſhip not only one and the ſame God, but alſo one and the ſame Meſſiah, and have no other proſpect beſides the Reformation of Abuſes.

* Miſſale Rom. Fer. VI. in Paraſ. p. 182. Gaietani Ordo Romanus XIV. p. 368. † An. 1671. ‖ He intitl'd it, Aſaph Hammaſchir Collector. a Commentariis. V. Bart. Bibl. Rab. t. ii. p. 818.

CHAP. XXX.

The Hiſtory of the Jews in Germany, from the Fifteenth to the end of the Sixteenth Century.

I. The Landgraves of Turingia tax the Jews exceſſively. II. Jacob Movilin; Hebrew Concordances; their Author. III. The Creation of Doctors; the Origin of this Title. IV. An Ordinance of the Council of Baſil againſt the Jews. V. Regulations for the New Converts. VI. Lewis of Bavaria baniſhes them out of his Territories; Divers Accuſations; An Example of Deſpair. VIII. They are expell'd out of Nuremberg. IX. David Leimlein deceives the German Jews, and carries 'em to Jeruſalem. X. Victor a Carbe writ againſt 'em; They are expell'd out of Cologne. XI. The Prince of Preachers. XII. Pfepfercorn and Hochſtrat cauſe the Hebrew Books to be burn'd; Reuchlin's Oppoſition. XIII. He diſtinguiſhes two ſorts of Books. XIV. The Continuation of this Diſpute. XV. Pfepfercorn's Diſſimulation puniſh'd. XVI. Melſtinski a falſe Meſſiah. XVII. The State of the Jews under the Reformation. XVIII. Frequent Diſputes of the Proteſtants. XIX. R. Iſaac's Buttreſs of Faith. XX. Four Tracts that go by the Title of Nizzachon, or, the Victory. XXI. The Sect of Demi-Jews ill-nam'd. XXII. The Prince of the Captivity in Germany. XXIII. The Elogies of Salomon Luria in Auſtria. XXIV. Simoſn de Guntzbourg a good Geometrician. XXV. Iſerſes of Cracow, an Eſtabliſhment in Poland. XXVI. The Condition of the Jews in Bohemia. XXVII. They are expell'd and reſtor'd. XXVIII. Several Rabbins in this Country. XXIX. Judas Betſaleel, or Leo of Prague. XXX. Mardochai the Fair his Royal Garment. XXXI. Ganz, his Stem of David. XXXII. Their State in Moravia. XXXIII. They are plunder'd at Bonn. XXXIV. Their Settlement in the Territory of Brunſwick.

I. THE Fifteenth Century begun unhappily in Germany for the Jewiſh Nation. * A great many were ſettled in Thuringia, and in Miſnia. But the Landgraves made them commonly buy their Quiet and Liberty; whether it was that neceſſity requir'd it, or they were driven to it by Avarice, which prevails in the Souls of Princes, as well as of Private Perſons. They often demanded conſiderable Sums. It had not been long perhaps, that they had paid a great Tax, when a new one was demanded of them in 1401. They refus'd to pay it; but they were all committed to Priſon, and not ſet at liberty, till they paid a good Ranſom.

II. Jacob Movilin at that time gave reſt to the Law in Iſrael. He made himſelf famous by the great number of his Diſciples, as well as by his Anſwers † to the Queſtions that were propos'd to him. I know not whether we ought to place to the ſame time the Author of the Hebrew Concordances, to which they have given the Title of ‖ the Book that enlightens the way; for they don't agree about the Author's Name. One Arlot, a Monk, who liv'd at the end of the thirteenth Century, muſt have made Concordances that were tranſlated into Hebrew. But this Tranſlation is attributed to Iſaac Nathan, or Mardochai Nathan; and as theſe two are both equally unknown, we can't determin to whom the Glory of the Work is due. Waſerus was evidently miſtaken, in confounding the Author of theſe Concordances with Nathan, the Head of the Synagogue at Rome, who wrote an excellent Dictionary, at the beginning of the twelfth Century. It ſignifies little to examine, Whether theſe are two different Authors, or whether one Man has taken two Names, as it happens in Circumciſion or Repentance; or rather, whither the Father began the Work which the Son finiſh'd. It ſuffices to know, that it was compos'd by Nathan, at the beginning of the fifteenth Century. Reuchlin printed it, becauſe he found it very uſeful. There have been ſeveral Editions of it ſince; but the beſt of all is the Roman, made by a Monk, call'd Marius Calaſio *, for he not only added the Concordance of Eſther and Daniel, which were wanting, but we find Illuſtrations upon the Chaldee Notes, and upon all that relates to the deſcription of the Holy Places.

* An. 1401. † Ganz Tſemach David, p. 147. An. 1427. ‖ נחיב סמאיר Sepher Meir Nativ.

have

III. There was at that time a Diſpute among the Rabbins of Germany about Letters of Divorce. Young People pretended to make 'em; and as they were not perfectly acquainted with the Ancient Rites, they committed Faults. In order to prevent this Abuſe, it was appointed, that none but the receiv'd Doctors ſhould be privileg'd to draw up theſe Letters, and all the reſt ſhould be void and null; and it is pretended, that this was the Origin of the Title of Doctor, which Movilin aſſum'd. But it was probably Pride which gave Birth to this new degree of Honour. The Chriſtians gave the Doctors Cap with a great deal of Pomp in their Univerſities; and to imitate 'em, the Jews took this Title, and began to confer it with ſome Ceremony; whilſt the ſuperannuated one of Rabbins was deſpis'd. The Title Dom was only us'd in Spain; but the Doctors were diſtinguiſh'd among all the Chriſtians. Abravanel, who ſaw that the Germans Ordain'd their Diſciples, by ſaying, Morenu, you are our Doctor, was ſurpriz'd at this Cuſtom; but he found afterwards, that the ſame thing was done in Italy, where this Title very quickly came.

IV. The Council of Baſil which extended its care and juriſdiction far and near †, thought it ought not to neglect the Jews, who were numerous in this City and in Germany. It commanded the Prelates to chuſe in all the places where there were Jews, ſome Perſons skill'd in the Languages to preach to 'em. The Sovereigns were oblig'd to ſend all the circumcis'd of their Territories to this Sermon, and heavy Puniſhment were decreed againſt thoſe who conceal'd them, or hinder'd them from receiving Inſtruction. People at the ſame time forbidden to have any Commerce with them at Table, and in Civil Society. It was not allow'd to have Servants, Nurſes, Phyſicians or Farmers of this Nation, nor to hire them Houſes near Churches, or in the Body of Cities; and to diſcover them the more eaſily they were oblig'd to wear a different Habit from the Chriſtians. Laſtly, The Council condemn'd thoſe who pawn'd their Sacred Books, Croſſes, Chalices, and Ornaments of the Churches, to loſe their Money.

The Council alſo made Regulations about thoſe that were converted. The new Converts by Baptiſm acquired the Privilege of enjoying their Eſtates, except what they had robb'd by Uſuries; for they oblig'd 'em to reſtore their exceſſive Intereſts, if the Perſons were alive; and in caſe of death, as the Church was Miſtreſs of the Confiſcation of theſe ill-acquir'd Goods, ſhe made a Preſent of 'em to the new Converts. This Regulation is particular; for the Church has no right to appropriate the Goods of private Perſons, eſpecially when they are acquir'd before their entrance into it, and in the time of Ignorance. If the Church has this Privilege, it can't exerciſe it to the prejudice of Children, and the Heirs of thoſe to whom the reſtitution is due. Laſtly, They laid an obſtacle in the way of the Jews Converſion, by robbing them of their Acquiſitions.

V. The Council declar'd farther, by an Edictal Law, the new Converts capable of all Offices in Cities, where they were baptiz'd, becauſe it was more noble to be regenerated by the Holy Spirit, than to be born of the Fleſh. It does not belong to a Council to diſpoſe of the Offices of all the Cities. But 'tis a pleaſant reaſon it offers for it; If Regeneration gave any Claim to Temporal Dignities, a Man that appear'd Holy, might, by this Motive, make greater Pretenſions to a Prince's Crown, than his Son by Nature. The Council could not aſſure it ſelf of the Sincerity of theſe Converſions: and it appears, that it doubted of 'em; for it forbad that the new Converts ſhould have frequent Interviews and Intercourſes together; as finding by experience, that they corrupted one another, and weakned their Faith. They were forbidden alſo the burying their Dead after the Jewiſh way, the keeping the Sabbath, and other Rites of the Nation; which is a ſufficient Proof, that they had not heartily renounc'd them. Laſtly, The Pariſh-Prieſts were order'd to prevent the Miſchief, by procuring them good Matches among the Chriſtians. As the Council gave great Privileges to new Converts, it appointed likewiſe terrible Puniſhments for Hypocrites; for it authoriz'd the Prieſts to keep a ſtrict Eye over their Conduct, to impeach 'em to the Inquiſitors, and to call in the Secular Arm to puniſh 'em with greater rigor; declaring, That all that protected theſe Neophytes, ſhould be treated as Abettors of Hereticks; and carrying its Authority farther, it voided and annull'd all the Privileges which might have been given to the Jews, either by Popes or Emperors. It amazes a Man to hear Eccleſiaſticks talk at this rate. The Council neither does juſtice, nor underſtands what it is; but confounding perpetually Temporals with Spirituals, and Politicks with Eccleſiaſticks, it draws falſe Inferences. The Council was in the right in ordering the Jews to be inſtructed, and the new Converts to be kept by Charities; but it exceeded the bounds of its Power in ſetting it ſelf above Emperors, and pretending to aboliſh their Laws.

VI. The Decrees of Baſil caus'd no great alteration in Germany. 'Tis true, Lewis X. of Bavaria expell'd the Jews out of his Dominions, but it was twenty Years after ‖; and the Council laid not this Injunction upon Sovereigns. This Prince conſulted not his own Intereſts. It was in vain to repreſent to him, That the Baniſhment of ſo many rich People would leſſen his Revenues, he order'd 'em to depart the ſame day, and the very ſame hour from forty Cities, and all the Towns in his Territories: He confiſcated their Eſtates, and built Priſons and other publick Edifices, in the places that had belong'd to 'em. *

VII. The Princes of Mecklebourg † alſo made a cruel Slaughter of 'em in their Capital City. Thirty Jews were condemn'd to the Fire. One of 'em ‖ threw himſelf into the River, to avoid the barbarity of this Puniſhment; and, as the Women and Children were included in this Execution, a Mother, driven to deſpair, kill'd with her own Hand two of her Daughters, and the third would have undergone the ſame fate, if the Chriſtians had not taken her away. They were accus'd of having bought of a Prieſt, who was burnt with 'em, an Hoſt, which they had wounded and was found all bloody. They * were alſo accus'd in Hungary of murdering a Chriſtian, and drinking his Blood. They were put to the Rack to force them to confeſs, That they were not only guilty of the Crime, but that the Nation partook in it. I ſhould not touch any more upon theſe ſorts of Accuſations, if the Hiſtorian who relates this, did not ground it upon four Reaſons, which will convince the Reader of the falſhood of the Story. The Hiſtorian affirms, That the Jews us'd Human Blood, as an excellent Remedy to heal the Wound of the Præputium. He adds, That the Men having their Monthly Flowers as well as Women, this Blood helped to aſſwage them. For indeed, they ſay, That God to puniſh the Jews for the Crucifixion of his Son, order'd they ſhould have a Flux of Blood upon all Good Fridays, or at all the full Moons, which is what makes them look ſo pale. But 'tis a ſtrange thing to hear Chriſtians * ſerionſly reporting ſuch Stories. The third reaſon that oblig'd the Jews to murder Chriſtians, and to make uſe of their Blood, is, That it is proper to excite Love, when 'tis mingled with Food. Laſtly, They have made a Vow † to ſacrifice a Man annually in ſome part of the World; as imagining, they can't be deliver'd from the Infamy that covers them, but by offering to God the Blood of a Chriſtian; and they call that which they ſhed Joel, coming from God, or perhaps Goel, the Redeemer, in deriſion of the Crucify'd Jeſus. However it be, as this Blood was to be ſhed ſucceſſively in all Cities, it fell to the lot of Tirnau in Hungary, to kill a Chriſtian that Year ‖; but thoſe who had committed the Murder were diſcover'd and puniſh'd.

* He died at Rome in the Year 1602. and his Work was printed in 1622. See Imbonatus Bibl. Rabb. t. v. p. 156. † An. 1634. Concil. Baſil. Seſſ. 19. a 5. & 6. c. 2. p. 547. ‖ An. 1454. * Aventinus Ann. Boior. l. 7. p. 513. Europæ ſtatus ſub Frideric III. c. 32. apud Freher. Hiſt. Germ. t. 6. p. 79. † An. 1492. ‖ Nauclerus Gen. 50. t. 2. p. 1110. * An. 1494.

VIII. They had a greater Misfortune in Franconia; for the People of Nuremberg drove 'em * all from this great City, where for a great many Years they had been Rich and Powerful; but they went and ſettled in a little neighbouring City, where they erected a Synagogue. They were charg'd with ſeveral Crimes to juſtifie their Expulſion; but the Inſolence which their Proſperity inſpir'd in them, their numbers that render'd 'em formidable, their Uſuries which kept up the Debauchery of Youth, render'd 'em ſo odious, that it was reſolv'd to get rid of 'em.

IX. At that time appear'd the Impoſtor David Leimlein. He durſt not declare himſelf the Meſſiah, but he confidently maintain'd, That the Deliverer would appear in the Year 1500. and with this proſpect he oblig'd the credulous Jews to pull down their Ovens, in which they bak'd unleaven'd Bread. Theſe Ovens became uſeleſs, becauſe the Year following they ſhould eat unleaven'd Bread at Jeruſalem. They were already preparing for this happy Journey. A famous Rabbin confeſſes, that he had demoliſh'd his Oven like the reſt; and whether to juſtifie his Credulity, or that he was not recover'd from his dotage, he affirms, that this Man work'd Miracles, and that the Head of the Synagogue of Frankford aſſur'd him of it. David Leimlin was quickly aware, that he had prefix'd too ſhort a time for his Prophecies; and therefore he publiſh'd, That the Peoples Sins had retarded the appearance of the Deliverer; and the Nation, inſtead of being diſ-abus'd, aſſembled near Jeruſalem, where it celebrated a Solemn Faſt, in order to appeaſe God, and to haſten the Deliverance which did not come.

X. At the beginning of the ſixteenth Century, they were expell'd out of the Dioceſe of Cologne; and Victor a Carbe, who deſerted Judaiſm to turn Prieſt, expatiated on the Praiſes of the Biſhop of Cologne, congratulating his having pluck'd up the Tares in the Field of the Lord, and having purg'd his Biſhoprick from the People of his Nation. Proſelytes think, that they are juſtifiable in their heat againſt thoſe they have left, and that they have no no better way to remove the ſuſpicions that are uſually entertain'd of the Sincerity of their Converſion. They argue juſtly enough; for the People loves warmth, which it calls Zeal, and Moderation grows ſuſpected to them. But we ought not to follow the Inclinations of the Croud: A Man too ſoon forgets his own Miſery and Error, when he inſults his Brethren; and 'tis cruelty to inſult 'em upon the Shoar, when a charitable Hand has hinder'd 'em from being drown'd, like the reſt. However, 'tis the common Style of Proſelytes, who mean to pleaſe, or make their Fortune. Victor a Carbe, tho' an ingenious Man, was guilty of this Fault. At the ſame time that he made Invectives againſt his Nation, he counſell'd the Chriſtians never to diſpute with 'em, becauſe they were accuſtom'd to Diſputations from their Infancy, and that to conquer 'em a Man had need have a Quiver full of Arrows. However, he wrote againſt the Jews, and at this day we read theſe Words upon the Gates of the Church of St. Urſula at Cologne, Victor, formerly a Jew, in the Year 1509. writ four Books againſt the Errors of the Jews. He was near fifty Years old when he was baptiz'd; and 'twas probably the fear of being baniſh'd as his Brethren, that open'd his Eyes. But not to dive into the ſecret Motions of his Heart, we learn from his Teſtimony, that the Jews had ſuffer'd in the Dioceſe of Cologne in the beginning of the fifteenth Century.

XI. They had in the Neighbourhood an eloquent Doctor, R. Simeon, ſirnam'd, the Prince of Preachers, who compos'd a Gipeciere Falkout; thus he intitled a Collection of the old Doctors Interpretations of Scripture. This Collection is not perfect; but as he writ particularly for the People, he very judiciouſly thoſe that were adapted to their Capacities, and which he thought the beſt. He has not diſſembled what the Ancients have ſaid relating to the Meſſiah, and which may be apply'd to ours. Nevertheleſs, he is commonly too ſubtile; as when he explains theſe Words of the ſecond Pſalm, I have anointed my King; for he recurs to an Explication of the Talmudiſts upon the Word Meſſiah, as if it ſignify'd a Net, which God had ſpread upon Mount Sion, to ſignifie, that all ſhall be included in the Kingdom of the Meſſiah. This Work was printed firſt at Theſſalonica, and afterwards in Italy. A Rabbin of the Family of Ghedalia †, who was retir'd to Jeruſalem, compos'd a long Commentary upon the Gepeciere. He thought his labour was loſt, becauſe he was not rich enough to print it, when Dias Mokato, a rich Spaniard, undertook to be at the Charge of it. The Gipeciere therefore was printed, with Abraham's Notes, at Leghorne ‖. The Corrector * dedicated it to the Great Duke Ferdinand II. A new Gipeciere ירקוש חדש Falkout Kadaſh, has been ſince † printed at Amſterdam, wherein are collected the literal and myſtical Interpretations in an Alphabetical Order; whereas Simeon follow'd the Order of the Sacred Books, and confin'd himſelf to the Allegorical Senſe. Laſtly, There is a third Gipeciere, which is that of R. Reuben, and is only a Collection of Notes upon the Pentateuch, printed in the Year 460. that is, in the Year 1700 ‖.

XII. A Proſelyte, call'd Pfepfercorn, kindled a terrible War among the Learned of the ſixteenth Century *. Whether he went to make himſelf a neceſſary Man, and to acquire a Reputation in the Party he had newly embrac'd, or rather, that he had a mind to enrich himſelf at the coſt of his deſerted Brethren; he perſuaded the Emperor Maximilian, That all the Jewiſh Books ought to be burnt, becauſe they were full of Fables, Lies and Blaſphemies againſt Chriſt. He had the Art to aſſociate with

* Bonfin. Rerum Hungaria. Dec. 4. l. 5. † Spond. Ann. 1494. n. 10. p. 217. ‖ An. 1494. * An. 1499. † He was call'd Abraham Ben Samuelis Ghedalia. ‖ An. 1658. * He was call'd Abraham Ben Salomonis Chaiim. * An. 1678. 'Tis by an Anonymous. † At Amſterdam. ‖ An. 1510.

with him two Cologne Divines; amongſt others, the famous Hoochſtraten, who afterwards wrote againſt Luther. He was tax'd with deſigning to ſeize all the Books he condemn'd, and afterwards to oblige the Jews to ranſom 'em at a great rate. All the Devotees and Ignorants imbark'd in this Faction; and the Emperor himſelf being dazzl'd by the Authority of the Divines, gave a pretty favourable Anſwer to the Requeſt preſented to him. However, as this Affair made a noiſe, he was willing to know the Opinions of ſome Doctors, and particularly of the Smoak, otherwiſe, Capnion, or Reuchlin. This Man had ſtudy'd the Languages under Veſſelus. Some will have him to be tutor'd by John de la Pierre, a German born, who was afterwards Profeſſor at Paris, and became a Carthuſian. But 'tis certain, he was indebted for his firſt Erudition to this Profeſſor of Groningen, who was call'd the Light of the World. The Duke of Bavaria, who had a great eſteem for Reuchlin, having a very nice Affair to manage with Alexander VI. choſe him for one of his Miniſters. He continu'd a Year at Rome, where he perfected his Skill in the Hebrew, under a famous Jew that flouriſh'd at that time, call'd, Abdi Ben Jacob Spuon. The Emperor had nominated him to be a Triumvir of the League of Suabia, made in the Year 1489. to traverſe the Power of the Dukes of Bavaria, and he had executed that Office for eleven Years. 'Tis no wonder then, if this Perſon, celebrated for his Learning, and a noted Man in the Empire, was conſulted about the Fate of the Talmud, and other Hebrew Books.

XIII. Reuchlin went not into the oppoſite exceſs of his Enemies. He * diſtinguiſh'd two ſorts of Books, whereof one contain'd the Doctrines, Morality and Rites of the Jews, and the other abounded with Blaſphemies againſt Chriſt. Herein it was ſaid, That Jeſus Chriſt was an Idolater, born of an Adulterer, who had been hang'd for his Crimes. Reuchlin conſented to the burning two Books, call'd, Nizzachon, and † Toledos Jeſchu. He alledg'd farther, That the Decrees of Germany not being executed wherever the Jews ſubſiſt, it was impoſſible intirely to ſuppreſs the Books ſcatter'd over the Univerſe, whereof one ſingle Copy was ſufficient for the product of new Editions. Good Senſe requir'd, that he ſhould argue in this manner, and extend the Argument to all the Books that were printed and publiſh'd. Nevertheleſs, Reuchlin was mightily blam'd for ſpeaking after this rate, and the Divines began to perſecute the Author of this Opinion. The underſtanding a little Greek was not only ſufficient at that time to make a Man ſuſpected, and the underſtanding Hebrew to make him convicted of Hereſie, as ſaid Doctor d'Eſpences; but the deſign of ſtudying this Language was enough to bring cruel Enemies on ones back. Cologne eſpous'd its Divines; the Univerſity of Paris, which was conſulted, declar'd for 'em. The Affair was brought before the Elector of Ments; but Reuchlin appearing only by Proxy, Hochſtrat obtain'd the Sentence, which he caus'd to be publiſhed before the Term. Reuchlin appeal'd from it to the Pope, who commiſſion'd the Biſhop of Spires to judge of the Proceeding. Hochſtrat was condemn'd by Default, with Coſts, and Inhibitions were giv'n againſt his continuing his Proceſs. The Declaration of the Divines of Cologne was declar'd null. However, theſe Divines caus'd Reuchlin's Book to be burnt.

XIV. They were not ſatisfy'd with theſe Judicial Proceedings; but Hutten publiſh'd ‖ the Letters of obſcure Men. Paul Jove, who aſcribes them to Reuchlin, is miſtaken. Theſe Letters contain'd a cutting Satyr againſt the Monks. The Publick was overjoy'd to ſee 'em laſh'd in a ſprightly and vigorous manner; and Reuchlin hereby was reveng'd for the Abuſes that had been divulg'd againſt him. The revenge would have been more compleat, if * Hochſtrat had dy'd with Grief, as Paul Jove aſſures us; but this Monkiſh Inquiſitor liv'd ten Years after the Publication of theſe Satyrical Letters. Ortuinus Gratius, to whom they were dedicated, endeavour'd to repulſe the attack, by oppoſing to 'em the Lamentations of obſcure Men †, and the Letters of ‖ famous Men. But this Satyr prevail'd over the Apology, and at leaſt Men of Senſe ceas'd to look upon Reuchlin as a Jew, and as the Protector of their Opinions.

The Affair was judg'd at Rome; whither Hochſtrat went, fortify'd with the Letters of Princes, and conſiderable Sums, wherewith he purchas'd Protectors. He omitted nothing that could contribute to the carrying on his Cauſe. He threatned the Pope to appeal from his Judgment to the Council; to reject him as a falſe Pope, and to ſeparate from the Church, unleſs Reuchlin, and the Jews he defended, were condemn'd. Nevertheleſs he was forc'd to be content to have the Cauſe ſuperſeded; a favour which the Pope granted him, when he was going to be condemn'd: For the Judges favour'd Reuchlin, and would have pronounced againſt Hochſtrat, if a ſtop had not been put to the Judgment, by the Pope's Order. The Inquiſitor was oblig'd to return with diſgrace. Reuchlin's Friends waited for him near Nuremberg, where they would have us'd him ill, if he had not had notice of this Ambuſcade. We are told, * that Hutten meeting him one day, would have kill'd him, to puniſh his violent Proſecutions of the Lutherans, who began to ſpread in Germany. But the Monk being humbled, repreſented, that it was ſcandalous to kill a naked Man; and Hutten being wrought upon, only laid him on with the flat of his Sword.

XV. Pfepfercorn, a little after, bore the Puniſhment of his Iniquity; for being arreſted upon ſome ſuſpicion, he confeſs'd, He had acted as Prieſt for twenty Years, without having receiv'd Orders: That he had ſtole three Hoſts from a Prieſt, one whereof emitted Blood when it was prick'd, and the others had been ſold: That he had had a deſign to kill the Elector of Brandenburg, and his Brother the Archbiſhop of Ments: That he had voluntarily poiſon'd many Chriſtians, by pretending to be a Phyſician: And, above all, he acknowledg'd, that he had counterfeited the Meſſiah. All theſe Accuſations don't hang well together; and they appear ſo much the worſe contriv'd, that he is ſaid at the ſame time to have dy'd a Chriſtian, in the midſt of the moſt cruel Tortures, to which he was condemned.

XVI. Some ſay, that Pfepfercorn has been abſurdly miſtaken for an Impoſtor, call'd Jacob Melſtinski, who appear'd at the ſame time in Poland. This latter had given out, that he was the Meſſiah, and call'd twelve Apoſtles, with whom he run over Poland. He deluded the People by the noiſe of his Miracles. He paſs'd from thence into Sileſia, with the ſame Reputation of a Wonder-working Man;

* Hochſtrat. Galatin. Arcan. t. 1. c. vii. p. 22. Majus Vita Joh. Reuchlini Phorcenſis Phorzein. † It hath been ſince printed in Hebrew. Wagenſeil Tela Ignea Satanæ. ‖ Epiſt. Virorum obſcurorum. * V. Bayle's Critical Dictionary. Hochſtrat. t 2. † Lamentationes obſcurorum Virorum. An. 1518. ‖ Epiſtolæ clarorum virorum, printed in 1535. * Obſervationum ſelectar. ad rem literar. ſpectantium tom. iv. obſ. 9.

but a Countryman's House having been burnt by their Fault, they were so cruelly handl'd by the Neighbours, that they chang'd their course of life. I don't know why these two Men, who seem very different, should be confounded. But yet some will have them to be but one and the same Person; and others maintain, it was the latter that was burnt, whilst the other dy'd peaceably; tho' the Truth of the matter can't be well made out.

XVII. Reuchlin had reason to say, That the Monks had found such an Enemy in Luther, as would give them business enough to oblige them to let him die in peace; for so it actually happen'd. Reuchlin ended his days quietly. Not only the Jewish Books were saved, but People fell to the study of the Languages. They began to be sensible of the barbarity and gross ignorance of the persecuting Monks, and the Jews were no longer accus'd of those Massacres of Children, which had drawn upon 'em so many Miseries, and spilt so much of their Blood. The Miracles were no longer vented of these stoln and bloody Hosts, by means whereof they excited the Rage and Violence of the People. Idolatry at that time receiv'd a terrible blow, and the worship of God alone began to be restor'd. But on the other hand, the Protestants better skill'd in the Languages, than the Monks and Divines of past Ages have been, and surmounting vulgar Prejudices, study'd the Writings of the Rabbins, discover'd the Mysteries of them, and beat them with their own Principles. Their Example awakened the Roman Divines, who taking the same method, discover'd the weakness of the Jewish Religion. We must not here enter into Party Considerations, nor over-strain the Glory that is due to our Divines: They led the way, and the others have follow'd; they have drawn the People out of Barbarity, and the others have rejoyc'd in this Light; they have had their profound Doctors in this matter, as well as we. And so we can't determine, whether the Jews have got or lost by the Reformation.

XVIII. Luther could not agree with their Divinity; and he has often censur'd 'em with that impetuosity of Genius, that carry'd him beyond the bounds of Moderation. He tax'd 'em especially for being Cheats; because he had heard the Duke of Saxony say, That a Jew had promis'd to make him invulnerable; but having oblig'd the Impostor to make trial of his Art upon himself, the Fraud was discover'd, and the Jew dy'd of the Wound that was given him. The Rabbins provok'd with Luther's way of treating 'em, affirm *, That this Leader of the Reformation had demanded a great Sum of Money of their Frankfurt Brethren, promising to pay 'em with the Encomiums he would give 'em in his Books, and that they refus'd him, because they would preserve an inviolable Fidelity to Charles V. But this Story is ridiculous. The great Subject of their Spleen against Luther, proceeds from his having hinder'd some Christian Princes from receiving them in their Dominions. Moreover, the Reformation produc'd abundance of Doctors in Germany, who having throughly study'd the Languages, frequently dispute against the Jews, and prove to 'em the Truth of the Christian Religion.

XIX. It must not be deny'd, but that they had their Defenders, at the Head of whom we may rank R. Isaac, the Son of Abraham. This Man declares, That he spent his Life in the Courts of Germany, near Princes, who often gave him marks of Distinction. But yet he is not very much known. His Disciple, who has collected his Disputes, compares him † to the Patriarch Isaac, because he bore his Name; and as Isaac had two Children. This produc'd a Book in two parts, one of which may be compar'd ‖ to Esau, and the other to Jacob. But this dos not inform us who the Author was, nor in what time he liv'd. He had frequent Conferences with Luther's Disciples, and it was against them he compos'd his Buttress of Faith. He is often mistaken; as when he makes Julian the Apostate an Arian Emperor, and gives him a Grandson, a Defender of the same Opinions and the same Sect. But yet, it must be own'd, that his Book is one of the most dangerous that has been produc'd against Christianity. The Author runs thro' the whole Gospel, and dwells upon all the Passages of the Sacred Story that can furnish him with any Objections; he inforces 'em briskly, and at the same time refutes the Christians Answers. He argues more judiciously than the Rabbins generally do. The Portuguese have translated it into Spanish, to support the Faith of the Jews in that Country, and the Neighbouring Kingdoms. The Africans also have a great value for it; and 'twas from thence that the famous Wagenseil, who publish'd and translated it, brought it. It were to be wish'd, this learned Man had follow'd this Author step by step, and confuted him with the same Solidity as he has done Lipman. Bartolocci makes him to live in the Year 1674. without giving any reason for it. For indeed, his Book could not have been convey'd into Africa, nor translated into Spanish, if the Author had compos'd it but a few Years before it was brought from Africa, and publish'd with a Latin Version.

XX. At the same time was produc'd the Nizzachon, or Victory against the Christians. The Jews often give this haughty Title to the Books they publish against the Christian Religion, as pretending they are so many Triumphs over us. Wagenseil publish'd one of these Works, which he thought was compos'd about the twelfth Century, because no later Doctor was quoted; which Conjecture is very probable *. Schickard had determin'd to translate and confute another of 'em, which went by the same Title, and was compos'd by Mathatias; but death prevented him. A third Treatise of the Victory is attributed to Lipman, who liv'd in Germany at the end of the fifteenth Century; for the Author informs us, that he wrote about the Year 1499. He thought that a long Treatise against the Christians would not make so strong an impression on the Peoples Minds; and therefore he made an Abridgment in Verse, which may be easily learned; which Verses of Lipman, Wagenseil has publish'd with a judicious Confutation. Bartolocci † speaks of a fourth Victory, in which the Jewish Religion is defended with thirty five Arguments, and Christianity attack'd with forty two Objections, very artfully chosen. 'Tis said to be the Work of many Authors, who all wrote, notwithstanding, in the Purity of their Language; but they liv'd since the Reformation, since they quote Luther and Calvin's Works. However, the Jews seem to be afraid of its being publish'd, since one of 'em stole it from Hackspan, who was translating it into Latin.

XXI. Besides the Jews, who set up in Germany against the Reformation, new Doctors appear'd in Transylvania, call'd Demi-Jews; but this was rather an Affront, than a Name that they justly deserv'd. The case was thus: Seidelius, one of the heads of this Sect, maintain'd, That the Messiah did not re-

* Cardoso las Excellencias. † R. Isaac Munimen Fidei apud Wagenseil Tela Ignea Satanæ. ‖ Ibid. p. ii. p. 57, 107.
* Nizzachon vetus, apud Wagens. Tela Ignea Satanæ, p. 2. † Bartol. B. R. t. 4. p. 13.

spect

ſpect the Heathens, but only the Jews, to whom he had been promis'd by the ſame Title as the Land of Canaan; that is as a particular Privilege to be enjoy'd by them alone: He reckon'd alſo Sacrifices and Ceremonies as Rites peculiar to this Nation, contributing to the worſhip of God. But he was perſwaded * that all Religion conſiſted in the Decalogue, which was naturally engraven on the Hearts of all Men. This Man made vain attempts to gain Proſelites in Sileſia, where he was born; and ſeeing it impoſſible to retrieve his Country-men from the Idolatry they liv'd in, he went into Poland, where he had ſome Followers.

Francis David was alſo accuſed of being a Demi-Jew, becauſe he taught, that Jeſus Chriſt ought not to be invok'd, ſince all the Scripture teaches us to pray to God alone. Jeſus Chriſt, ſaid he, gives us the Example of praying to his Father, and recommending his Soul into his hands; he pronounced an Anathema Maranatha againſt him that added any thing to the Goſpel. Tho' it ſhould be true, that Chriſt took care of the Church whilſt he lived on Earth, yet the ſame thing could not be ſaid now he's reſting in Heaven; and having no ſenſe of our Neceſſities, we can't invoke him with aſſurance in Spirit and in Truth †.

Socinus writ againſt theſe Divines, and confuted their Objections. Many Proteſtants have done the ſame thing ſince, and accuſtom'd themſelves to look upon them as a Branch of Judaiſm; and therefore we thought, that we ought to ſpeak of 'em. However, I muſt own, that I think it Injuſtice to make the Inventors of a new Religion Members of an Ancient Church. The deſign of it is to make 'em more odious; and for the ſame reaſon, they liſt George de Novara among the Jews, who was burnt at Bolonia, becauſe he deny'd that the Meſſiah was come. Tis true, he drew this Poſition from the Jews, with whom he had correſponded: But ſhould he have been burnt whilſt the publick Patrons of this Opinion are tolerated? And could this be ſaid to be a Judaiſm? Father Merſennus, that Minime, ſo celebrated for his Commentaries upon Geneſis, ſpeaks of another private Perſon, who was burnt at Paris, becauſe he found, in the New Teſtament, Contradictions with the Old, which oblig'd him to reject our Goſpels. Others were condemn'd in England, who would obſerve the Sabbath, and abſtain from ſtrangl'd Meats. Theſe are, I confeſs, ſome Seeds of Judaiſm, but that is not enough. To bear the Name of a Sect, a Man muſt embrace its fundamental Opinions, whilſt ſome particular Errors that have only ſome Analogy, are not ſufficient to collate the Names of certain Hereticks. For this Reaſon, the Title of Manichees is impertinently given to the Iconoclaſts, and abundance of other People, who own but one God, and reject the two Principles and other Extravagancies of this Sect. Francis David was neither a Jew, nor a half Jew: He thought Jeſus Chriſt could not be worſhip'd, becauſe he conſider'd him as a meer Man, and argu'd more juſtly than Socinus. Seidelius eſtabliſh'd Natural Religion rather than Judaiſm, and tho' the rejecting the Meſſiah was a conſequence of his Opinion, yet he could not be ſaid to eſpouſe the Religion of the Circumcis'd. We have ſaid enough of theſe half Jews, let us return to the true ones.

XXII. They pretended to have been ſettl'd in the Dioceſe of Mersbourg, ‖ ever ſince the taking of Jeruſalem, but ſo venerable an Antiquity did not ſecure 'em from Biſhop Adolphus's Perſecutions, who expell'd 'em all from thence at the beginning of the ſixteenth Century *. They comforted themſelves by the protection which they found in other places; for the Emperor Ferdinand I. not only protected them, but granted them the privilege of having a Prince of the Captivity in Germany, and order'd, That the Rabbin de Wormes ſhould have this Preference before all the reſt of his Nation †. They reckon in the Catalogue of theſe Princes the famous Jakock, of a German Origin, born at Wormes, eſteem'd by his Nation for his Learning, and who left four ingenious Sons, who were ‖ all Preſidents of Academies, Princes of the Diſperſion, admired in this Age. One of 'em taught chiefly at Fribourg, where there was a School and a Synagogue, as in moſt Cities of the Empire, and particularly at Vienna, where they had raiſed a ſtately Edifice.

XXIII. They had in Auſtria a more famous Man than Jakok, which was Salomon Luria, * the Crown of Iſrael, and the wonder of his time; all the People walked by his Light, all the Diſperſion of Iſrael drank of his Water, and his Name was diſſeminated over all the Univerſe. He compos'd the Sea of Salomon, I am Salomonis. He alluded to his Name, and call'd his Book a Sea, becauſe it ſounded the depth of the Talmud. He examin'd particularly the Style and Phraſes of it. He was Call'd to the Heavenly Council, that is, he dy'd in the Year 1573.

XXIV. Simſon, a Native of Guntzbourg, which gave him his Sir-name, was a Geometrician of Repute, a skilful Architect, who after he had heap'd a vaſt deal of Wealth, diſtributed it with a very bountiful Hand. Eliezer, a German, had alſo a Reputation that reach'd from one end of the World to the other; he left Germany for Poland, where he became head of the Academy, and of the Houſe of Judgment at Poſnania. He publiſh'd two Books, one whereof was call'd † the Work of the Lord; and the other, ‖ the Addition of Doctrine.

XXV. Poland abounded alſo with learned Doctors. Iſerdes * taught at Cracow, and gather'd a vaſt number of Diſciples, who came from all parts to hear his Lectures. He was Devout, Perfect, and gave reſt to the Law in Iſrael Twenty Years; that is, he was Profeſſor ſo long. Joſeph Letts, † born in the ſame City, ‖ wore four Crowns, that of Prieſthood, of the Law, of Dignity or Empire, and of a great Reputation. At Cracow there was a Synagogue, an Academy, a Houſe of Judgment, and a great Aſſembly of the Circumciſed: They were diſpers'd in moſt of the Cities of Poland, where they had fine Privileges: But nevertheleſs they ſometimes ſuffer'd by popular Tumults: Their Houſes were once on fire at Poſnania, and they ſaw them burnt without being able to extinguiſh it, becauſe they were afraid, that the enraged Multitude would fall upon them. They ſuppoſe * that there was a fear of the Lord in it; and the terror had ſo ſeiz'd 'em, that they durſt not draw Water, ſo that all their Houſes, Effects and Books, even that of the Law, were reduc'd to Aſhes.

XXVI. Bohemia fed a great many Perſons of this Nation. We have already obſerv'd, that the Jews were ſettl'd there in the Tenth Century, † ſince they did ſervice to the Inhabitants againſt the Robbers, and built at that time a Synagogue at Prague; this Liberty being given 'em by way of Acknowledgment, for the Victories that had been obtain'd by their means. In proceſs of time, they alſo erected a College ‖. R. Falk was the Preſident, who was the firſt that began to exerciſe his Scholars in Diſputations like the Chriſtians; but this Method was not acceptable to the Sages, nor reliſh'd by all People.

---

* Martini Seidelii ad Cretum Cracovienſem Ep. 1. p. 806. † Franciſci Davidis Defenſio inter Op. Socini, t. 2. p. 717. ‖ An. 1514. * An. 1559. † An. 1563. ‖ Ganz. p. 153. * Ibid. p. 155. † Mahaſe Aonai. ‖ Joſeph Lekack. * An. 1553. † An. 1571. ‖ Ganz. ibid. * An. 1590. Ganz. p. 157. † An. 997. Ganz. ibid. t. 2. p. 181. ‖ Ibid. p. 151. An. 1530.

The

The Jews who have a Divinity wholly myſtical, and depending more upon Imagination than Reaſoning, can't be reconcil'd to Arguments and Syllogiſms.

They had alſo their Enemies and Perſecutors here. An almoſt general Conflagration having deſtroy'd one part of Bohemia, the Jews were accuſed of being the Incendiaries, and were condemn'd. Thoſe that eſcap'd the Flames were all expell'd by Ferdinand, who could no otherwiſe appeaſe the popular Commotion: Ten Perſons found favour, and were the only ones that were allow'd the liberty to remain at Prague; but the Incendiaries having been diſcover'd before the end of the Year, the Jews were recall'd, who came and ſettl'd again in their Country.

XXVII. Another Storm fell upon 'em a little after *, for they were ſuſpected of having made Prayers at Prague againſt the Chriſtians. Upon this ſuſpicion, they took away all their Books, and carry'd 'em to Vienna. This loſs was an affliction to 'em, not only on the account of the Price, which was very conſiderable, but eſpecially becauſe they were oblig'd to perform the Service viva voce, and by heart, without reading, which was ſubject to many Inconveniencies. The Storm was but ſhort, the Books that were taken were reſtor'd; and perhaps it was only done to oblige 'em to ranſom 'em. Ferdinand baniſh'd 'em the ſame Year from all Bohemia, only leaving ten Families in Prague; but at the ſame time he permitted 'em to live in other of his Dominions, and alſo reſtor'd 'em a little after. Weidnerus, who was one of their Rabbins, had deſerted them during this Diſgrace. He alſo preach'd againſt them in the Synagogue at Prague, and he affirms, that he converted many of his Brethren.

XXVIII. They had there † their Doctors, who rais'd the glory of their Academies. For Iſaac Meheling taught at the end of the ſixteenth Century. When he died, he left his Son R. Charam Preſident of his School. Here it was that the famous Liwa Bitſleer appear'd, with whom the Emperor Rhodolphus diſcourſed Face to Face, and of whom the Jews ſay, that all Iſrael drank of his Water, and walked by his Light. He founded a famous Academy || call'd Klauſe, whither he drew a prodigious number of Diſciples, and afterwards he was made Intendant over all the Synagogues of Poland.

XXIX. Judas Betſaleel, otherwiſe Leo of Prague, was born in Bohemia, and flouriſh'd in the Year 1553. He at firſt * govern'd the Academies of Moravia, and was Judge of his Nation in that Country. He came to Prague in the Year 1573, where he founded a new School, in which he taught eleven Years with great reputation. However he left it to go into Great Poland, where he died at the end of the ſixteenth, or the beginning of the laſt Century. He left many Books, amongſt which there is one, concerning the Redemption and the Eternity of Iſrael. He aſſures his Nation of the coming of the Meſſiah, and doubts not but that he will render the proſperity of his People eternal. He examins, whether at his coming, Nature will be chang'd, and whether the Creatures will ſubſiſt in the order we now ſee 'em. Some time before appear'd in the ſame City, one Abraham of Prague, who compos'd a Commentary upon the Commentaries of Jarki, and who died in the Year 1540, as his Epitaph declares. I don't know at what time one Abraham of Poland liv'd, a great Cabbaliſt, and who chiefly apply'd himſelf to explain the Tetragrammaton.

XXX. Mardochai Jophi, or the Fair, was alſo born at Prague; he retir'd to Poland, where he died in the Year 1611, with the Reputation of one of the moſt Learned Men of his Country and Nation. It will not be amiſs, in order, to know his method, to obſerve the Plan of one of his Works. He intitl'd his Book, † the Royal Garment; which Title is borrow'd from the Holy Story, which ſays, that || Mordecai went out from the preſence of the King, in Royal Apparel of blue and white, and with a great Crown of Gold, and with a Garment of fine Linen and purple. 'Tis the method of the Rabbins, not only to delight in Metaphors, even in their Titles, but to ſeek ſome Paſſage relating to the Name of the Author. He has divided his Work into ten Royal Habits, tho' there were but five that contain'd an accurate Commentary upon another Work. The firſt Tract is a Habit of purple, in which he treats of Bleſſings and Prayers. The ſecond is a white Habit, which relates to Feaſts and the Sabbath. The third is a Crown of gold, where he diſcourſes of things lawful and forbidden. The fourth is a Robe of fine Linen and purple, in which he explains the Ceremonies of Marriage; and the laſt is the Habit of the City of Suſan, which rejoyc'd in the Proſperity of the Jews.

XXXI. Laſtly, Ganz, that Jewiſh Hiſtorian we have ſo often quoted, was born at Prague, and there he compos'd his Stem of David, or his Chronology, from the Creation till the 1592d Year of the Chriſtian Church. We muſt not confound this Work with another Stem of David we have already ſpoken of; for the one is a Dictionary, and this is a Chronicle. The Author gives it this Title, becauſe it was the firſt of his Works; for he publiſh'd afterwards The Buckler and Tower of David; one of which treats of Arithmetick, and the other of Geometry. Beſides, as his Hiſtory diſcovers the Miſery of the Holy People, and the Power of the Chriſtians, he would hereby oblige his Readers to remember the Shoot of David, and to pray for his Manifeſtation. There are three things peculiar in his Work: 1. That he begins with the Creation of the World, and aſcends to the firſt Temple and the Patriarchs; whereas the Jews generally begin with the Epocha of the Greeks. 2. Tho' he has often copy'd Joſephus the Hebrew, and the Doctors of his Nation that preceded him, yet he hath been more exact, and corrected the Faults of them. 3. Laſtly, He has introduc'd into his ſecond Book ſeveral Chriſtian Authors, but he is not lucky in his choice; and as he departed from the Cuſtom of the Jewiſh Doctors, who ſlight foreign Hiſtorians, he ought at the ſame time to have preferr'd more exact Authors, and Men of a greater Name.

They built at that time at Prague a Synagogue, equalling thoſe of Poland and Jeruſalem; and as Mordechai Meuſel had liberally contributed to this great Edifice, as well as to the relief of the Poor of Bohemia and Poſnania, he calls him the Wall and Baſis of the School, the Head of liberal Souls, the Father of the Poor, the Oak of his People, and the Love of his Brethren; and with this Commendation he ends his Chronicle.

XXXII. Moravia had alſo its Synagogues; but they ſuffer'd a cruel Perſecution * in the Year 1574. for all the Profeſſors of this Religion were ſentenced to the Flames; and abundance were diſpatch'd before Complaints could be brought to the Emperor Maximilian, who at laſt took compaſſion on theſe poor Wretches, who were unmercifully burnt. They ſuffer'd, moreover, in Franconia; for ſome Houſes of the City of Bamberg being burnt, the Jews were accus'd † of ſetting 'em on fire, and at the ſame time the People entred their Houſes, plunder'd their Goods, and indemnify'd themſelves at their

* An. 1558. Ibid. p. 154. † An. 1583. || An. 1592. * Bartol. B. R. t. iii. p. 40. † Lebuſch Malchut. || Eſther 8. 15.
* An. 1574. † An 1573.

Coſt.

Coſt. But however, there was no Maſſacre.

XXXIII. Some time after they had the ſame Misfortune at Bonn †. Schenk, the Founder of the Fort of his Name, marching ſecretly at the Head of ſome Troops, had planted a Petar at the Gate of this City, and by the aſſiſtance of the noiſe which ſome Hogs in the Neighbourhood made, which they caus'd to cry on purpoſe, he approach'd the Gate, blew it up, and made himſelf Maſter of the City for the Hollanders. He gave the Plunder to his Soldiers, and the Jews complain, that they were diſadvantageouſly diſtinguiſh'd in that Pillage. However, this Miſery was common to them with the reſt of the Inhabitants, and no body was kill'd. Vorſtius is groſly miſtaken; for in tranſlating the Jewiſh Hiſtorian, he has put Bolonia inſtead of Bonn. Theſe two Cities are vaſtly different: But farther he ſhould have known, that Schenk was a Dutch General, who periſh'd ſome time after in a like Enterprize againſt Nimegen; nor did he enjoy his Conqueſt long, for the Spaniards re-took the Place ſome Months after; the German Princes, to whom Schenk would give it up, having refus'd to ſuccour him.

XXXIV. The Jews had ſomething to comfort 'em for theſe Misfortuns, ſince at the end of the Century they obtain'd liberty to ſettle in the Duke of Brunſwick's Territories. The Princes of this Houſe had always been perſuaded, that ſuch an Eſtabliſhment would be diſadvantageous. The Jewiſh Merchants were not ſo much as ſuffer'd to croſs their Lands, and when any one was taken, they plunder'd him with impunity. But their Complaints being brought to Henry Julius, Duke of Brunſwick, he not only granted ‖ the Jews Liberty of Conſcience in his States, but gave 'em a place in the Lower Saxon to trade in. So that there were few places in all Germany, but where they traffick'd at the end of the ſixteenth Century.

* An. 1588. † An. 1592. Ganz ibid.

CHAP. XXXI.

The State of the Jews in Poland, Bohemia and Germany, during the laſt Century.

I. The Authority of the Jews in Poland. II. The Converſion of R. Salomon, and his Demonſtrations. III. Rodriguez de Caſtro and Eſdras famous at Hamburg. IV. Prague defended by the Jews. V. The diſſimulation of R. Chaiim. VI. The hatred and deſpair of a Jew of Bohemia. VII. The Perſecutions they ſuffer'd at Prague. VIII. The Emperor baniſhes 'em. They are reſtor'd to Vienna. IX. The Precautions againſt 'em at Nuremberg and Ausbourg. X. A diſpute about the Name of God at Worms. Their Synagogue pull'd down by the French. XI. The number of the Jews at Frankfort. XII. Nathan de Spira a Cabbaliſt. XIII. Iſaac Loria, another German Cabbaliſt.

I. THE Reformation was baniſh'd out of Poland thro' Zeal for Religion: But as this Zeal of the Prieſts is unequal and capricious, they give the Jews an intire Liberty of Conſcience. They not only have Synagogues and Academies, but their Houſes of Judgment injoy a great Authority, ſince they determine in Criminal as well as Civil Matters. We are told, they have had * the Privilege of Coining Money, becauſe Shekels have been found there with an Hebrew Inſcription; but theſe Shekels might have brought from Judea, or ſome other place; and as the Tomb, in which they were found, is very ſuſpicious, we can't ground hereupon a Prerogative of Coining Money, which only belongs to the Sovereigns.

II. 'Tis Poland that ſends out the Learned Rabbins †; and hither the Youth is ſent to ſtudy, that would be acquainted with the Talmud, and the Tradition of the Fathers. We have in the preceding Century noted many of theſe Rabbins, who did Honour to their Country. In this, one of 'em, call'd Salomon, imbrac'd Chriſtianity in the Year 1656. and publiſh'd thirty ſeven Demonſtrations againſt the Religion he had quitted. He was committed Priſoner at Dantzick, becauſe he had been bound for ſome of his Brethren, whoſe Debts he could not pay, which rendred his Converſion at firſt much ſuſpected. He ſent unleaven'd Bread, with a Letter, to Botſaccus, to conjure him to intercede with the Magiſtrates, and to inſtruct him. The Principles were firſt agreed upon, upon which they might diſpute, and the Rabbin gave up the Talmud and the Cabbala, as too ſubtile a Wiſdom. He own'd, ‖ That Reaſon neither ought nor could be judge of the Myſteries of Faith, and that we ought only to depend on Revelation. At laſt he acknowledg'd, That the Meſſiah was come; and afterwards he was made to own, That if God had formerly giv'n ſuch ſenſible Marks of his Preſence in the Ark, which was only a wooden Cheſt, we ought for a ſtronger Reaſon to believe, he had been united to the human Fleſh, of which the Ark of the Covenant was only a Type. Theſe Words, cry'd the Rabbin, are ſweeter than Honey, and penetrate my Heart. After he was baptiz'd, he labour'd upon the Converſion of his Brethren; and the ſtreſs of his Work lies in this. 1. That the Word מימרא in Scripture ſignifies neither God the Father, nor Ark of the Covenant, nor a reſounding Voice, nor a Promiſe, nor an Angel, nor the Attributes of God, as his Anger, his Vengeance, his Magnificence, his Might, nor the Providence, nor the Decrees of God, as the Socinians and the Jews maintain, but that it is a Divinity diſtinct from the Father. 2. He prov'd, That this Word was God; and Jeſus Chriſt being the Word ſo well known by the Ancient Doctors, he concluded, that he was God. He dedicated his Book to King Caſimir, to whom he wrote in the moſt emphatical manner imaginable.

III. Hambourg, is the little Jeruſalem *. In the beginning of the laſt Century, there was an ingenious Phyſician †, who wrote two Treatiſes; one concerning the Infirmities of Women, the other intitled, Medico Politico. A Learned Rabbin was there after-

* Hiſt. Univerſal. Judaica, cap. 3. † Ibid. p. 18. Villalpand. t. 2. P. 2. D. 3. p. 85 & Fr. Juan de la Puente Convenencia de las Monarchias, p. 1. l. 2. c. 21. ‖ R. Johan. Salamonis 37 Demonſtrat. cum Hiſt. Colloquii cum Jo. Botſaco, & Ibid. Congreſſus primus. Prol. V. p. 14. * But yet their Synagogue is at Altena, under the juriſdiction of the King of Denmark, who gives them alſo Sanctuary at Glucſtad. † His Name is Dom Rodriguez de Caſtro. His Son entred into the Service of Queen Chriſtina, and was her Phyſician.

afterwards call'd Ezdard, or Eſdras, who having imbrac'd Chriſtianity, converted many * of his Brethren; an Event that ſeldom happens. A Divine imagin'd, that Inſtructions would be much more effectual, if they were ſeconded with Violence; but the Senate ſuppreſs'd a Zeal, which would have leſſen'd the number of its Citizens, and had already caus'd an unhappy Commotion.

IV. The Emperor † Ferdinand III. granted them great Privileges, becauſe when the City Prague was beſieg'd by Carolus Guſtavus, who was lately declar'd ‖ Generaliſſimo of the Armies of Sweden and Germany, they defended themſelves with a ſurprizing Fidelity and Vigour; the little City was already taken, and the reſt deſir'd to Capitulate; but the Conqueror having refus'd honourable Conditions, the City that lay almoſt all open, ſuſtain'd many aſſaults, even till the Peace. The Jews diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in theſe Aſſaults, and defended their Poſt with a Courage that merited Praiſes and new Privileges.

V. Here it was the Rabbi Chagim, or Joachim, deceiv'd the Chriſtians by a profound Diſſimulation. After a conſiderable Robbery he had made, he embrac'd Chriſtianity to wipe off the Scandal of his Crime. He compos'd a very virulent Book againſt his ancient Brethren. He went to Vienna, and inſinuated himſelf into the Court of Ferdinand, who gave him his Protection. Some time after perceiving his Fortune to ſink, with the help of two other Jews, his Accomplices, he robb'd the Imperial Treaſury. The Criminals were quickly diſcover'd, and condemn'd to death. Ferdinand Francis Angelsberg, this was the Name which the Convert had taken in his Baptiſm, diſſembl'd till he had loſt all hopes of ſaving his Life; but being upon the Scaffold, he declar'd *, That he had never been a Chriſtian; that he had liv'd and died a Jew; and that if he had receiv'd the Sacrament a few hours before, it might be found again in his Urinal, where he had put it; and throwing the Croſs he held in his Hands, he broke it; prodigious was the Jews aſtoniſhment. Bartolocci ſuſpects him to be the Author of the Toldos Jeſchu, which was Printed at Vienna in 1640, and which we have Confuted. But would he have printed this Book, when he was already a Chriſtian, or pretended to be ſo?

VI. In the ſame place was ſeen an Inſtance † of their hatred for the Chriſtians; for, one Lazarus, an Inhabitant of Prague, underſtanding that his Son deſir'd Baptiſm, fell upon him and kill'd him. He was committed to Priſon, where, animated with another Deſpair, he ſtrangl'd himſelf with the aſſiſtance of another Jew, who was in the ſame place. This latter was condemn'd to be broke upon the Wheel. He demanded Baptiſm in order to ſave his Life. He was granted the Sacrament, but deny'd the Grace he hop'd to obtain by it.

VII. As they hate the Chriſtians, ſo it muſt be confeſs'd, that the Chriſtians of Prague allow 'em a Toleration, but intermix'd with Violence. They reſolv'd to oblige 'em to pay Homage to a Brazen Crucifix, plac'd upon a Bridge that divides the two Cities of Prague. In order, the more ſubtilly to deceive them, they put round about the Crucifix, the Names of God in Hebrew Characters; but as the Nation, that has been us'd to abominate Images, paſſes by without paying any Veneration annex'd to it, this is a common occaſion of diſturbance. The Scholars, ‖ excited by a falſe Zeal, abuſe the Circumcis'd, who are oblig'd to defray the expences of a Battle, after they have ſubmitted to the Blows and Diſgrace of it. Nevertheleſs they are ſo numerous in this Country, as to fill, of themſelves, the third City of Prague, but they are poor and miſerable * there. They flock about all Strangers, and proſtitute themſelves to the meaneſt Services to get their Bread.

VIII. They are alſo often expos'd to Diſgraces from the Court and People in the Capital of the Empire. In the middle of the laſt Century, Zachary had obtain'd Liberty to build † a ſtately Synagogue there, and to add a School, to revive the love of the Sciences, which ſeem'd extinct in this Country. He had ſettl'd a Penſion for twenty four Perſons, who were to read the Talmud every Hour, Day and Night. One reliev'd the other; and the School that was always open, was never found without a Doctor; but his Building was ſcarce finiſh'd, when the Emperor drove ‖ all the Jews from his Capital, and ſeiz'd the Synagogue to make a Church of. They * complain, that the ſuperſtitious Empreſs imagining that the Toleration the Court gave the Jews, occaſion'd her Barrenneſs, preſs'd the Emperor to baniſh them; and they add, That God puniſh'd her for it, by taking away her Life, and bringing a Daughter into the World. After the death of this Princeſs, † they were reſtor'd to Vienna. The Emperor had a new ſubject of Diſcontent againſt 'em in the Turkiſh War, becauſe they aſſiſted the Infidels to maintain the Siege of Buda, and diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by their Valour. But at bottom this was an Act of Fidelity they paid their Sovereign; and tho' this reſiſtance render'd them odious, not only to the People of Germany, but Italy, where they roſe againſt 'em; yet we cannot condemn them, ſince they were then Subjects to the Ottoman Empire. In reality, the Emperor favours them at Vienna; admits 'em into his Affairs, and gives honourable Titles to thoſe that are employ'd, or purchaſe 'em. Only the People, jealous of the Riches they heap together, endeavour ſometimes to ſtrip 'em by violent Tumults ‖.

IX. They keep up themſelves in Servia, Croatia, Moldavia, Valachia, and in the rich Cities of Germany. If they have been expell'd Nurimburg, they are ſpread abroad in the Country Towns, and have their Synagogue at Ffurt, which is in the Neighbourhood. They may enter into the City with a Guard.

They had always their Settlements at Ausbourg. Velſerus ‖ ſays, They were carry'd thither from the ruine of Jeruſalem, becauſe he had diſcover'd this Inſcription there.

TIB CLEUPHAS JULII. VIR AUG. NEGOCIATOR ARTIS PURPURARIÆ.

The Name Cleophas appears to him to be Jewiſh by the Holy Scripture. This Man, ſays he, to his own Name, had added that of Tiberius, becauſe he depended on a Family that bore it, as Joſephus took that of Flavius, by reaſon of Veſpaſian his Benefactor. Laſtly, This Tiberius Cleophas was a Seller of Purple, or a Dyer, which perfectly agrees with the Jews, who were then ſpread over all the Earth †.

Per omnes
Terrarum Pelagique plagas tua membra feruntur.

* Kidder demonſt. p. 3. c. ult. p. 47. ſays, That there have not been ſo many Converſions ſince the time of Miracles; as Eſdras made of them at Hambourg, in the Year 1690. † An. 1648. ‖ Cardoſo is miſtaken in ſaying, That this Defence was made in the time of Guſtavus Adolphus. It was his Nephew who was afterwards King of Sweden. * Wagenſeil Ignea Tela Satanæ, p. 189. † An. 1994. ‖ An. 1704. * Remarks Hiſtorical and Critical, made in a Voyage from Italy to Holland, in the Year 1704. p. 130, 131. † An. 1660. ‖ An. 1669. * Hiſtoria Judaica de Barrios. † An. 1673. ‖ An. 1705. * Velſeri Rerum Aug. Vind. l. vi. p. 294. † Rutil. Itinerar.

Velſerus

Velſerus was ſo confident of the truth of his Conjecture, that he cenſures the Author of the little Chronicle, for ſaying that Veſpaſian ſent a great many Families of the Houſe of David into Spain *, as if this was the only place where Colonies were ſent; and he ſuſpects that the Author talked thus, only out of fondneſs for his Country.

This ſuſpicion is ill grounded; for the Author of the little Chronicle, which has not the Antiquity aſſign'd it, has follow'd the general prejudice of his Nation, which groundleſly fancies, That the Nobleſt Families were tranſported into Spain. Nor can it be ſaid but by a very weak Conjecture, that they came into Germany and Ausbourg; for no body knows it, and there is no Monument old enough to inform us. The Argument he draws from the Name of Cleophas and the Purple Trade, may be true; but yet it muſt be own'd to be very uncertain. Beſides, there is one great defect in it, ſince it can't be conjectur'd at what time the Inſcription was cut; for if Cleophas was a free'd Man of Tiberius, he would have been buried there before the Ruin of Jeruſalem. He ſhould alſo have own'd, that they had exercis'd Offices in the City; and how could he imagine that the Jews had forc'd their way thither ſo early? 'Tis only true, that they were Numerous and Potent there; for Benjamin de Tudela, ſays, That there was at Asburk, which he calls a Metropolis, a Synagogue kept up by rich Merchants; there were alſo Doctors and Scholars. They maintain'd themſelves there, but at laſt they have been baniſh'd out of the City, and if they have liberty to enter into it, they make 'em pay † dear for every Hour they ſtay there.

X. It would be tedious to run over all the other Cities of which we have ſpoken, where they ſtill ſubſiſt without any conſiderable change in their Condition. We muſt inſiſt upon thoſe that deſerve ſome notice. The Jews of Ratisbonne are charg'd with robbing the Chriſtians of one of their greateſt Saints: Tho' the Proceſs be hard to be determin'd, yet let me take leave to relate it. The Chriſtians ‖ ſay, That the Saint Emmeram departed from Poitou, to preach the Goſpel to the Huns, or barbarous and ſavage People; but being arriv'd with his Partners at Ratisbonne, he was frighted at the Difficulties which Theodon their Commander gave him. He ſtop'd in Bavaria, where the ill-converted Inhabitants made their Children drink the Cup of the Euchariſt, and that of Devils. Emmeram was kill'd upon an Accuſation of a young Lady, who aſſerted that he had debauch'd her. He was made a Martyr of, and the Jews and Chriſtians of Ratisbonne, laid equal claim to him. The Chriſtians ſaid that he was their Biſhop, eminent for the multitude of Converſions, whom the Counteſs Uta falſly accus'd of Debauchery. The Jews maintain'd, That he deſcended from Amram, the Father of Moſes, whoſe Name he bore. They added, That Amram's dead Body had floated againſt the Stream of the Danube; and that this Miracle was to be attributed to the Book of the Law, that was found in his Arms. There is one violent prejudice in favour of the Jews. Which is, that they are not ſo zealous for Saints, as to ſteal thoſe of the Chriſtians; whereas the Chriſtians graſp at all:

Tros Rutilaſve fuit, nullo diſcrimine habebit.

The Hereticks have furniſh'd a pretty good quantity of beatify'd Souls. Why ſhould they ſpare the Jews, and not ſteal Saints from them wherewithal to enrich the Church? But rather both ſides ought to drop their ſuit, for the Tradition of the Chriſtians is very uncertain. 'Tis enquir'd who this Theodon, Governor of Ratisbonne was, who arreſted Emmeram in Bavaria, without being able to diſcover him. There are a great many other Faults in this Legend. The Author there ſpeaks of a City Aquitain, which was upon the Frotiers of Poitou. This City is unknown. Auguſtoritum, which they ſubſtitute in its place, would be rather the City Limoges than that of Poitiers: Who knows whether the ignorant Writer has not confounded the Country of Medoc and Buchs, which is in Aquitaine, with Bavaria? The Conformity of Names may perhaps have occaſion'd this Blunder; and 'tis more probable, that St. Emmeram went from Poitou to neighbouring Aquitaine than to Bavaria. On the other hand, the Jews would be to blame to claim this Man; but we may ſay that he that fathers this upon 'em, ought not to be believ'd, ſince he relates it only upon hear-ſay. He had heard the Jews ſay it; but they were Jews that liv'd at Ratisbonne a long time after the Event, and who ridicul'd, perhaps, the Chriſtians * that relates it.

Thoſe of Worms affirm, That many ages ago, they had the name of Jehovah carved a top of their Synagogues; and they ſuffer their Spiders to ſpin their Webbs without daring to bruſh 'em down, becauſe they are afraid of blotting the ſacred Name. They imagine that the Divinity has his reſidence behind the Spiders, which conceal him; and this Imagination, falſe or true, has made a ſubject of Controverſie with a Proſelyte, † who had left the Synagogue, and taxed its Doctors with this Superſtition. Theſe latter were not ſilent. A Rabbin of Ottenbourg has endeavour'd to ſalve the Honour of his Nation; but he palliates the Fact inſtead of juſtifying it. 'Twas another Superſtition to believe, That the Name of God, carved in this Synagogue, was the ſupport of the Building; but the French have convinc'd 'em to the contrary, by demoliſhing the Synagogue, when they had taken the City in the laſt War.

XI. A Modern Traveller ‖ reckons thirty thouſand Jews at Frankfort. I queſtion whether he does not amplifie on this account; but however they are often plunder'd. They are reduc'd to the ſlavery of being Water-carriers, to extinguiſh the Flames when any Houſe is on fire. They paint the Jews in ſeveral places, as making paſtime for the Devils and the Swine, that, by theſe Images, they may excite the Peoples Hatred and Horror.

XII. They had a famous Cabbaliſt * at Spires, in the middle of the laſt Century, nam'd, from his Birth-place, Nathan de Spira. He publiſh'd the good of the Land, in which he celebrated the Holy Land. He compos'd another Volume of Profundities, Megillath Hamucoth, which is a Cabbaliſtick Commentary upon ſome Verſes of Deuteronomy, † in which he pretends to ſound the depths of Myſteries, and to reſolve the Difficluties that he finds in 'em.

XIII. But one of the moſt famous Doctors that Germany produc'd in the laſt Century, was Iſaac Loria, the Author ‖ of the Metaphyſical Introduction to the Jewiſh Cabala, from which we have quoted many paſſages. He examins the Reaſons that oblig'd God to create the World; and maintains, that this Work of the Creation was neceſſary, to fill up the Idea's we have of the Perfections of God, and his Names of Elohim. He explains alſo the manner of the Creatures emanation from God. Doctor Moor was charm'd with this Work. He eſpous'd moſt of his Principles, and carry'd his prepoſſeſſion ſo far, as to believe 'em moſt proper for the Converſion, not only of Jews, but alſo of Heathens.

* He calls it Aſpamiam. Seder Olam Zuta. † They paid at Auxbourg a Florin an Hour. ‖ Velſerus rerum Boicarum, l. iv. p. 121. * Laurentius Hoſhuarts in Catalogo Epiſc. Regin. l. i. c. 6. apud Velſerum. † This converted Jew was called Schlangenbach, and the Rabbin Samuel Zui. His Tract is call'd Judiſchen Tiriach, in Germany. See Wagenſeil in Sotah Miſnah. t. 5. p. 188. ‖ Hiſtorical Remarks upon a Voyage from Italy. * An. 1640. † Deut. 3. 13. ‖ An. 1650.

CHAP. XXXII.

The Settlement of the Jews in Holland, and their present State.

I. German Jews, deceiv'd by Zieglerus, who promises them a Messiah. II. The Settlement of the Portuguese Jews, and their first Synagogue, the House of Jacob. III. A second Synagogue; their Seasons. A Division that occasions a third to be built. IV. A Cessation of the Schisms. V. The building of Schools, and the great Synagogue. Talmud Thora; Verses in its praise. VI. Sermons preach'd at its Consecration. The Application of a Prophecy of Isaiah. VII. R. Menasses; his Birth and Works. VIII. The rest of his Treatises. IX. Accusations made against him. X. Whether he was a Pelagian through policy. XI. Difficulties about his Opinion. XII. His Death. XIII. Zachut, his Friend, a Lisbon Refugee. XIV. Acias, his Treasure of Precepts. XV. Aboab, his Works upon the Cabbala. XVI. Musaphia, a Commentator of the Jerusalem Talmud. XVII. Spinosa's Life. XVIII. Explication of his Opinions. XIX. His injudicious study of the Holy Scripture. XX. His Posthumous Works. XXI. Orobio, Spinosa's Enemy. His History. XXII. His Conference with Mr. Limborch, and his Objections. XXIII. The Answers of the latter. XXIV. A continuation of his Answers. XXV. David Cohen de Lara, at Rotterdam. XXVI. Juda Leon, his Temple of Salomon, and his other Works.

I. OF all the States of Europe, there is not one where the Jews live more quietly than in Holland * They enrich themselves by Trade, and by the lenity of the Government, they possess their Acquisitions without fear. There are two sorts of Jews in Holland; some are Germans, and others come from Portugal and Spain. They are divided about some Ceremonies, and hate one another, as if the Essentials of Religion were concern'd; Zieglerus † was of the German Faction. He came purposely to Amsterdam to vent his Visions; promising a Messiah, that he had already seen, and who was to appear the very moment that the Conversion of the Jews should be wrought. We must not mistake this Visionary ‖ for another Person of the same Name, who was of the Family of Salmes, a Native of Landau, excellently vers'd in the Sciences, and who died seventy Years before the Man we speak of. This Man promised a Messiah of the House of David, and of the Line of Nathan, whose Ancestors had liv'd a Thousand Years in the Kingdom of Tunis. They had remov'd from thence into the Kingdom of Granada, from whence having been expell'd by Ferdinand the Catholick, they settl'd in Germany, where he was born fourteen Years ago. He had seen him at Strasbourg. He kept a Scepter and a Sword to put into his Hands, when he should be of Age to fight. He was then to destroy Antichrist, and the Empire of the Turk; to extend his Monarchy to the end of the World; to assemble a Council of Constance, which should last twelve Years, and in which all the Differences about Religion should be concluded. This Messiah did not appear, and those that believ'd the Impostor, perceiv'd, too late, that they had been abus'd.

II. The Spanish and Portuguese Jews, who make another part of this Nation, retir'd into Holland to avoid the Cruelties of the Inquisition. Strada accuses one of their Leaders of having intreagued in the War of the Low-Countries, and kindling the Fire by promising Hopes of a potent Supply. This Man was Michez, we have already spoken of. He was a Spaniard born; but the fear of Punishment had oblig'd him to seek Sanctuary at Antwerp, where he grew into the Knowledge and Affections, not only of the Magistrates of this City, but of Mary Queen of Hungary, who then govern'd. Going from Antwerp to Venice, and from thence to Constantinople; he wrote to the Malecontents he knew, and to the Protestants of Antwerp *, That it was their best way to adhere constantly to the League they had made against the Catholicks, because the Grand Seignior was meditating Designs against the Christians; and in a short time, would so embarrass King Philip, as not to give him leave to think of the Affairs of the Netherlands. His Letters were read in the Senate of Antwerp, and gave great hopes to the Allies, but Michez did not make good his Promise. He follow'd his Masters Views, who turn'd his Arms against the Kingdom of Cyprus. It only appears, That the Jews were more secure in the Netherlands than in Spain, since Michez sought a Retreat there; but it was but forty Years after, that the Refugees of Spain and Portugal began to settle in Holland. Their first Assembly at Amsterdam occasion'd even some Jealousie in this City, where all things were supected during the War, which continu'd with great heat. They were taken for Roman Catholicks, who shut themselves up, and conceal'd their Images. They say they were pursu'd into the place of their Religious Worship; but as they found nothing but Hebrew Books, and the Law of Moses, they laid no other Condition on them, than to pray for the prosperity of the City, which they promis'd to do; and at the same time they founded their first Synagogue, which they call'd the House of Jacob, because that was the Name of the Donor.

La primer † Synagoga Amstelodama, Fundada fue del grand Jacob Tindo,
Que por su nambre, Bet Jahacob la Vama;
Y per & pueblo de Jacob Sacrado.

III. They rais'd another Synagogue ‖ which they call'd Neve Schalom, the House of Peace. These Synagogues conjointly labour'd upon a Collection of Prayers, but they could not agree about it. The last was headed by a Doctor, that came from Africa, which he left, and retir'd to Constantinople, where he publish'd the History of his Nation, 'till the ruin of Jerusalem by Titus *. Uziel, who succeeded him, censur'd the Faults of his Nation so smartly, as to incur its hatred. A third † Synagogue was form'd, in which the Schismaticks assembl'd under the Conduct of David Pardo. It was call'd the House of Israel. Beth Israel. 'Tis in vain for the Authors to say, That this Schism did not at all abate their Piety, nor their Devotion for God.

---

* Enningiana parte del Mondo tuenen mei or recelo que er Amsterdam, tanto per la libertam de conciencio, de Vnssiete Unidas provincias, quanto por la bonta de sus ingenioſos Moradores. Daniel Levi de Barrios Casa de Jacob, p. 24. † An. 1624. ‖ This was call'd Philip, and the other James. Zieglerus, who died in the Year 1559. V. Voetii disput. Selectæ, t. 2. p. 95. * An. 1566. Strada, l. 5. p. 214. † Silva del Anton. Alvares Soares. ‖ They obtain'd a Cœmetry, notwithstanding the opposition of the Town of Alkmaer. * He was call'd Juda Vega. He must not be confounded with a Polish Rabbin of the same Name, who lived under the reign of Sigismond; and publish'd Sermons in the Year 1590. † An. 1618.

Sin

Sin perder en la ira el alto objecto.

IV. What is inevitable in all Eccleſiaſtical Separations, as well as Civil Wars, this was accompany'd with Heat. The Synagogue of Ben Jacob eſpous'd the Separatiſts. But the Schiſm ceas'd, after it had continu'd ſomewhat above twenty Years, * and the three Synagogues united into one, to which they gave, as to many others, the Title of Talmud Thora, the Study or Science of the Law †.

V. They have been careful to found Schools ‖ as well as Synagogues, one whereof is call'd the Crown of the Law, Kether Thora, and has been govern'd by learned Men. But that which beſt demonſtrates the proſperity of this Nation, is the great and ſtately Edifice they Conſecrated * in the Year 1675, and which deſerv'd the extraordinary Encomiums of a Chriſtian Poet.

Sævit in omne tuum Fiſco, ferro igne, Tyrannis;
Cenſorum, O Fuda, nec latuiſſe ſat eſt.
Nil ſequanâ, nil tuta Tago, prudentior Amſtla,
Templa palam in gremio, ſcitque foretque ſuo.
Sponſa Sion Hymnos pſallantium ut audiit, inquit:
Hunc Populum, hanc Urbem quis negat eſſe Dei?
State Diu, pia tecta, aliis inviſa Monarchis,
Mirenturque apices ſæcula ſera tuos.

VI. The Doctors of the Nation neglected not to celebrate ſo glorious a Deſign; and they have made a Collection † of Sermons that were ſpoke at its Conſecration. One of the Preachers made theſe words of Deuteronomy his Text. ‖ Ye that did cleave unto the Lord your God; and endeavour'd to prove, That the times of Miracles were not paſt; but that God has only changed the method of their Operation; for they are wrought in a ſecret and hidden manner, inſtead of being obſervable and manifeſt. Ezechiel intimates this truth, when he introduces God, ſaying, * I will be to them as a little Sanctuary in the Countries where they ſhall come; for the Sanctuary denotes the Preſence of God; and its littleneſs deſignates a weaker and leſs manifeſt Operation. One of theſe ſecret Miracles was doubtleſs the Zeal and Charity expreſs'd in building the Synagogue they now Conſecrated. The ſecond Preacher † ſailing through Speculation, "diſcovers a New World, which "is not ſo big as the Univerſe, nor ſo little "as Man, who is call'd the Microcoſm. The People "of God is the New World; for it has all the Pro-"perties of the Univerſe; and as the three Worlds "were repreſented in the three parts of the Old "Temple, they are alſo found in the three Orders "of Perſons, that conſtitute the Holy Nation; "for the Prieſts are the Angels of God, ſince Know-"ledge dwells upon their Lips; and as the Heav'ns, "which are inferior to the Angels, declare the Glo-"ry of God; the Levites, who were inferior to him, "praiſe him. A Panegyriſt, who came afterwards, aſſerts, That the building of the Synagogue of Amſterdam was foretold by Iſaiah, when he introduces ſeven Women, who lay hold on one Man, ſaying, We will eat our own Bread, and wear our own Apparel; only let us be call'd by thy Name. For theſe Women are call'd in the Hebrew Naſſim נשים, which makes an alluſion to the Prince of Orange Naſſau, who was elected Captain General at the time the Synag[ogue] was building. ‖ "Theſe Women, took hol-"him, a Word that ſignifies ſtrong, becauſe indeed "the Lion which holds ſeven Arrows, and repre-"ſents the Union of the ſeven Provinces, is very "ſtrong. They deſire they may be call'd by this "Prince's Name. They cover themſelves with his "Robe, for they took Orange Scarfs. The Bread "they eat was the Duke of Villahermoſa, Governor "of the Netherlands. They introduce Charles II. "King of England, under the Name of Darius. "Moreover the Synagogue was built in the time "of the War, and in an extremity like that the "People of Iſrael ſuffer'd at the time ſpecify'd by "Iſaiah. Laſtly, The Prophet adds: In that day "ſhall the Branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious, "and the Fruit of the Earth ſhall be excellent and "comely for them that are eſcap'd out of Iſrael, which "was then accompliſh'd.

VII. Theſe Preachers and Panegyriſts are not perhaps the Men that have done moſt Honour to the Synagogue. It has had alſo many Poets; an exact Catalogue * whereof may be ſeen elſewhere; but in the laſt Century it has ſhewn us famous Doctors.

Menaſſes † was one of the moſt learned and exact Divines that has appear'd among the Jews for a great many Ages. He was of a Spaniſh Origin, of the Family of the Abravanels, and he was ally'd to't by marrying a Daughter of this Houſe. At eighteen years of Age he was choſen at Amſterdam to explain the Talmud, in which Imploy he acquir'd a Reputation, which drew upon him Jealouſies and Enmities; but he deſpis'd their Inſolencies, and continu'd his Application to Study. He was not yet eight and twenty, when he publiſh'd ‖ la primiera parte del Conciliador nel Pentateucho. He endeavour'd to reconcile in it the ſeeming Contradictions of Scripture, by the Explications of ancient and modern Doctors, and his own Conjectures. This Work *, which he finiſh'd afterwards, has made him paſs for a Top-man in his Nation. And indeed no Rabbin has writ upon this Subject with ſo ſolid Erudition. He compo'd, † ſome time after his Problems upon the Creation, which made him to be call'd a Divine Author. A Chriſtian Poet join'd his Commendation to thoſe of his Nation, and proteſted, that the difference of Opinions ſhould not make him break with ſo learned a Man.

Si ſapimus diverſa, Deo vivamus, amici,
Doctaque mens pretio conſtet ubique ſuo.
Hæc fide vox ſumma mea eſt: Hoc crede, Menaſſe;
Sic ego Chriſtiades, ſic eris Abramides.

For indeed Menaſſeh was not one of thoſe intractable Jews, that ſhunn'd Chriſtians Converſation. He had Friends among ſome of the State. The matter went ſo far, that ſome of the Learned and Divines took fire, and indicted Barlæus for the Verſes he had publiſh'd in the Praiſe of his Friend. A Paper-War broke out; every one eſpous'd a Party, and the Poet had the worſt of it againſt a Man, who pretended to plead the Cauſe of God.

VIII. Menaſſeh alſo wrote a Treatiſe of the Reſurrection, which we have often quoted in our Ex-

* An. 1639. † Talmud, a למד Limad, diſcere. ‖ An. 1643. * They finiſhed it in April 1671. The War cauſed ſome interruption, but they fail'd not to finiſh it in four Years time. † Sermones que pregaraon. Sermaon primeio. ‖ Deut. 4. 4. * Ezechiel 11. 16. † Sermaon 2. ‖ Governo popolar Judaico de Barrios, p. 31, 32. * Relation de les Poetas, y Eſcritores Eſpannoles de la Nation Judayca Amſtelodama, por Daniel Levi de Barrios. He was himſelf a Poet. He ſays that the Count de Monterey had promiſed to make him Conſul of Spain, at Amſterdam, when he was recalled from the Low-Countries; yet he owns he was poor, as Poets generally are. Barios Epiſtola al Kahal Kados of London p. 22. † Menaſſe de creatione Præfat. ‖ Conciliator. * Zachutus Epiſt. ad Menaſſ. Conciliat. præfixa. † Jonas Abravanel, & Himanuel Nehamias, Carmina Hiſpan. ab amicis ſcripta.

plications of this matter. He undertook to prove the Immortality ‖ of the Soul, and its Operations, not only whilſt it is united to the Body, but after its Separation; and 'tis in this Treatiſe, printed after his death, that he defends the Tranſmigration. As he was Head of the Synagogue at Amſterdam, he was oblig'd to ſtudy the Rites and Laws. He wrote two Tracts upon 'em, one whereof was an Abridgment of the Miſnah, with this Title, El Theſoro de los Dinim, le Treſor des Jugemens, The Treaſure of Judgments. The other particularly related to queſtions concerning Marriage, the Condition of Children, and the Diviſion of the Eſtates; la Economia que contiene todo que toca al Matrimonio y dinim de las Mugeres Hiios ſiervos, vienes. He writ alſo about a defence of the Babylonian Talmud. He compos'd a Treatiſe concerning the Science of the Talmudiſts, and of Rabbinical Philoſophy. He pretended to Eloquence and Poetry; for he tranſlated Phocylides into Spaniſh Verſe; he made Queen Chriſtina's Panegyrick, and a Prayer for the Prince of Orange. He had alſo form'd the ſame Deſign we at preſent are upon of writing the Hiſtory of his Nation, from Joſephus to his own times: Pero todo eſto mas largamente ſe vera en mi Hiſtoria, y continuation de Flavio Joſepho haſta nueſtros tiempos ſe el ſoberario ſennor nos diede vida, y tiempo para acabarla. It ſeems that he began this Work, but he could not finiſh it. Another Author * form'd the ſame deſign afterwards. He divided his Project into five parts; the firſt whereof contain'd a general deſcription of the Holy Land. In the ſecond, he was to give the Hiſtory of the Rulers, from the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem till Mahomet, De los que dominaron d'eſto Tito à Mahoma. He went on from Mahomet to the Conqueſts of Saladin. In the fourth part he was to run over all States, to gather up all the conſiderable Events of his Nation, till their Baniſhment from Spain. Laſtly, He would have given an Idea of the preſent State of all the Synagogues; but the Author was content to publiſh the Plan of his Work, without executing it.

IX. Bartolocci accuſes Menaſſeh of deſigning to profit by the troubles of England under Cromwell; and attempting to procure a Settlement for his Nation, and of throwing himſelf into the Remonſtrants Party in Holland, to gain Friends and Protectors. Laſtly, He objects, as a Crime, his not deſiring the Approbation or Cenſure of the Chriſtian Doctors, when he printed his Works. The Accuſations are weak; for 'twas enough for Menaſſeh to have ſubmitted his Works to the Examination of his Superiors, inſtead of expoſing 'em to the Cenſure of the Chriſtians. 'Tis carrying Authority too far to ſubject Strangers to the Laws of a Society, into which they never entred. An Author † of his Nation affirms, that it was Cromwell and the Republick of England that invited him; but not to examine the truth of this matter, it was natural to endeavour to eſtabliſh his Nation, and all that he is to blame for, is, the conceiving ill-grounded hopes of it.

X. He ‖ entred but very indirectly into the Diſputes of Grace, and the Controverſies of the Remonſtrants. And, in my opinion, they have not rightly taken his Sentiments. Having read Voſſius's Pelagian Hiſtory, he met with ſeveral things, which engag'd him to ſtudy this Queſtion throughly. He diſſented from Pelagius, becauſe this latter thought a Man could perfectly fulfil the Law, and live without Sin, which to him appear'd impoſſible. He prov'd it alſo by the Authority of Akiba, who wept in reading ſeveral Paſſages of Scripture, that diſcover the Impotence of Man. He added, that the Sins of the Heart, and of Concupiſcence, were condemn'd as well as Sins of Ignorance. But after he had impugn'd Pelagius upon theſe Articles, he entred into his Party by another Door; for he believ'd, That Adam was created Mortal. "If Man, ſaid he, "loſt, by his Fall, part of the Beauty of his Body, "and of the Light of his Mind, yet he had ſtill ſufficient Strength to carry him to Good. If a Man "has naturally a greater bias to Vice than Virtue, "this proceeds from Complexion, from Educati"on, from the Place where he lives, and the im"preſſion of outward Objects, to which we are ve"ry ſenſible; for the Heavenly-born Soul ſoon "forgets its Original, and cleaves to Matter *. "However, 'tis in its own Power to do good".

XI. Hereby he involv'd himſelf into great difficulties; for he was ask'd, How it came to paſs, that he who had abſolute liberty to fulfil certain Commands, is not able to perform them and live without Sin? If it be impoſſible to fulfil the Law, why did God give it, and pronounce theſe terrible Words, Curſed is every one who continues not in all theſe things to do them? He was contented to anſwer, 1. That God gave many Precepts to the People of Iſrael, in order to facilitate their Salvation, by opening many Gates for 'em to enter. "God, ſaid he, † imitates a wiſe Phyſician, who "finding his Patient ſqueamiſh, orders many ſorts "of Meats, that he may chuſe what he likes beſt. 2. He owns, that the Doctors are divided about the Obedience that is neceſſary to obtain Salvation. Some have thought the Obſervation of one Precept alone ſufficient; others, that God reckon'd up the Sins and good Works, and compenſated one with the other; but he took the ſafeſt ſide, by ſaying, It was neceſſary to expiate Sins by Repentance, and to do good Works. As the Threatnings of God againſt thoſe who accompliſh'd not the Law, puzzl'd him, he quotes Abravanel, who ſays, That a Man is conſtant in the Law, when he executes one of its Precepts, tho' it be only one. He adds, ‖ that this relates to the Judges, who ought to ſee the Law executed, and who are Curſed when they fail in their Duty. He believes a Man is not curs'd for breaking the Law, but for not repenting of the Breach of it. 4. Laſtly, He * ſays, that he does not wound the Liberty of Man, by maintaining, he can live without Sin. However, 'tis impoſſible to reconcile theſe two Principles; and Pelagius, who left Man the power of fulfilling the Law and attaining Perfection, reaſon'd more juſtly than he. 'Tis perceiv'd alſo, that he paſſes this Article over gently, as if he were ſenſible, he could ſay nothing to reſolve this difficulty. Be it how it will, Menaſſeh follow'd his Anceſtors, and thoſe that had taught before him. He can't therefore be accus'd of having eſpous'd this Notion out of a Spirit of Faction, and of fondneſs for diſturbance.

XII. He dy'd at Amſterdam in the Year 1652. and left a Son, who inherited his Preſs, and imploy'd it in printing ſome of his Father's Works.

XIII. † Menaſſeh had a Panegyriſt and Friend in a famous Phyſician, call'd Zacuth. This Name ſignifies Purity; whether the People of this Family, which is ancient, pretend to diſtinguiſh themſelves for the Purity of their Lives, or have taken the Name from ſome other Reaſon; this Man was born at Liſbon, in the Year 1575. His Parents, who diſſembled their Judaiſm, ſent him to ſtudy at Salamanca and Conimbra. From thence he return'd ‖ Sepher Niſmath Chaiim, Liber ſpiraculi Vitæ ex Geneſ. 21. 7. * Dom Miguel de Barrios in 1684. † Barrios. ‖ Menaſſe de Fragil. Hum. p. 141. * pag. 130. † Ibid. Sect. 10. ‖ Sect. II. p. 98. * Sect. 13. p. 114. † Abrzham Zacuth Author of the Genealogies, who left Spain in 1492, was of this Family.

and

and settl'd in his Native place, where he was much esteem'd, because he was very charitable to his poor Patients, and perform'd considerable Cures at Court. He wrote many Books, and amongst others the History of the Principal Physicians ‖. He dedicated his Book to a Canon of the Cathedral of Lisbon, and Referendary of the Pope, who afterwards was oblig'd to quit his Imploys. I know not whether his Disgrace proceeded from the suspicions conceiv'd of his Religion; for there are a great many Ecclesiastick Jews in Portugal, and this perfectly understood Hebrew. His intimacy with Zacuth confirms the Suspicions; for this Physician having dissembled thirty Years, fled to Amsterdam, where he was circumcis'd, and dy'd in the Year 1642. writing many Books, which he could not finish.

XIV. Athias, a Native of Spain, taught at first at Hambourg; but he came from thence to Amsterdam.

[illegible] Athias, fertil de conceptos,
En la Corte que Banna el Albis claro,
El Kahal Kados Postoreo y el raro
Tesoro Abrio do Todos los preceptos.

He printed * a Bible, which is much esteem'd. The Jews boast, that this Edition was made upon two very ancient Manuscripts; one of Hillel we have spoken of; the other of 1299. in which was the great Massorah, written with the Figures of Beasts, Bears and Dogs. Mr. Vander Hoogt † has given a new Edition of this Bible much more exact. The Preface of this learned Man, explains his Design and manner of executing it. He follows Athias's Edition; and if some different Readings are observ'd in it, we find the like in the Bibles printed by the Jews at Venice in 1639. and 1678. He often prefers the Massoreths Corrections before others, because, besides that he thinks 'em more judicious, he is persuaded, that they were made by Esdras, and the Doctors of the great Synagogue, all the Members whereof (three of which were Prophets) out-liv'd their Work forty Years. Lastly, He distinguishes the different Readings of the Oriental and Occidental Jews. He observes the Sections and the Masses. But for all this the Volume is very incommodious.

Athias's Treasure of Precepts and Judgments was printed first at Venice, with approbation of all the Sages, Cachamim, of that Country. The Author thought himself oblig'd to handle this Subject, because the most useful of all Books are those that teach the fear of God. The preceding Doctors had compos'd many of 'em, but the Spanish dispersion had destroy'd a great part of these Works. Besides, these ancient Writers compos'd them in Arabick, which was then better understood. Lastly, He proves, that this Treatise ‖ was necessary, because the Law without a Commentary, is a Torch without Light; it must be lighted to make it illuminate. 'Tis a Body without a Soul, which has no motion. Lastly, to render it more useful, he join'd Tradition to the Law; Practical Rules to Speculative Truths. He explains also the knowledge of those Rites which are not at present in use; that the Jews, who know them, being struck with their Excellency, may ardently breath after their Restoration. The Commentary upon each Precept is short, and one of the best that can be read to understand the Jewish Laws. 'Tis strange, that Bartolocci, who had seen and read so many Rabbins Works, has only hinted this upon the Testimony of Menasseh, or of the Author of the Catalogue of Spanish Writers.

XV. Isaac Aboab, who came from Brasile, was not only a reputable Preacher, but a great Cabbalist. 'Twas he that translated another Cabbalist, call'd Irira's Gate of Heaven *, from Spanish to Hebrew, from whose Version it has since been Latiniz'd.

Tomo en Hebreo el libro que en Hispano
Llamo Puerta del Cielo el Cabalista
Abraham Herrera †.

He publish'd a Paraphrase upon the Pentateuch, and sung Moses's Triumph in Heroick Verse.

XVI. Musaphia ‖ was another learned Man, who commented the Jerusalem Talmud. He study'd a Subject that was still more obscure and intricate, since he went to explain the Flux and Reflux of the Sea. Lastly, He was so perfect a Master of the Hebrew Tongue *, that he compos'd a Dictionary, in which he took a new and easie method.

XVII. We ought not to forget Spinoza, who made himself famous by a new invented Atheism. He was born at Amsterdam † in 1632. His Parents were Portugueze-Jews. He came of a creditable Family; but he receiv'd nothing but a Bed from his Fathers Possessions, and always liv'd in poverty. It was not to follow the Law, and imitate the Rabbins, that he learnt the trade of polishing Glasses, and making Spectacles; for he already despis'd 'em, but his Design was to subsist. He compar'd himself to a Serpent that bites his Tail, because he had nothing left at the Year's end, tho' he liv'd upon Milk and Water-gruel. He was so disinterested as to refuse a considerable Sum, that one of his Friends offer'd him to relieve his Necessities, and only accepted a little Pension that this Friend caus'd to be paid him. He had learnt Latin of Vanden Ende, who taught then at Amsterdam; and who retiring to Pikpus ‖, embark'd in the Chevalier of Rohan's Conspiracy, and was hang'd. 'Tis pretended, it was this Pedant that sow'd the first Seeds of Atheism in Spinoza's Mind, because he profes's'd it, and taught it his Scholars. But it was, especially, Descartes's Philosophy which gave him a dislike to the Principles and Science of the Rabbins. He did not find in their Writings those evident Truths built upon Demonstrations, which Descartes recommends to his Disciples. When he was perceiv'd to neglect the Sabbaths and Synagogue, they attempted, in vain, to retain him by a Pension of a thousand Livres; by this refusal he incur'd so violent a hatred, that it was resolv'd to stab him. As he came from the Old Portugueze Synagogue * of Amsterdam, he saw a Man with a Dagger in his hand, and he endeavour'd to shun him; and indeed the Blow only reach'd his Coat, which he kept in memory of this Event. Not thinking himself safe in his Native Country, where the Jews were numerous and potent, he sought a retreat near Leyden, and afterwards at the Hague. He had the great Excommunication thunder'd out against him; but he protested against this Sentence given in his absence, and signify'd his Protestation by a Writing in Spanish, ‖ De Medicorum principum Hist. lib. X. Amstel. 1629. in 8*vo*. * In 1661. in 1667. † Vander Hoogt Præfatio in 8*vo*. ‖ Atias Tesoro de preceptos prohemia. * Barrios Vida de Ishac Huzick p. 46. † This Author was called Abraham Cuhen Irira, and his Work may be seen in the Cabbala Deruidata. We have spoken of it. ‖ He intitled his Book ארוך מוסף Aruch cum Benjamini Musaphiæ addendis ad nobilissimum hoc Lexicon, Amstel. apud Emanuel Benevisti 415. that is, 1655. * Barrios ibid. † 24 November. ‖ Near Paris. * I have said t. 3. p. according to the common opinion that this was in going from the Play-house, but he says 'twas as he was going from the Synagogue. Colerus Life of Spinoza, p. 19.

addres's'd

addreſſed to the Rabbins in the Synagogue. He publiſh'd firſt a Geometrical Demonſtration † of Deſcartes Principles, and afterwards his Meditations; but at laſt he produc'd ‖ the Tractatus Theologico Politicus, in which he form'd a new Syſtem of Atheiſm, which makes him much eſteem'd by thoſe that prefer Novelty to ancient Truths, and Obſcurity to the deareſt things. The Prince of Conde, who loved Men of extraordinary arts, was deſirous to ſee him. Spinoza, who with his old Night-gown, was yet very ſenſible to Glory, and ambitious of an immortal Name, took a Journey to Utrecht upon a very nice Circumſtance. This Journy rais'd the Peoples murmurs againſt him, and was not only imprudent, but uſeleſs; for he could not ſee the Prince, who was gone from Utrecht ſome days before. The Prince Palatine offer'd him a Philoſophy-Chair at Heidelberg; but he refus'd it, becauſe the liberty allow'd him to Philoſophize was too ſtrait for him, ſince he was not permitted to attack the prevailing Religion. Some Men of Letters indeavour'd to draw him into France, but 'tis falſe that he went thither, and that the fear of the Baſtile oblig'd him to fly in a Cordelier's Habit, as Menage is made to ſay *. He left not Holland, where he dy'd in 1677. at forty four years of Age. A Story goes, That finding his end approaching, he forbad all People his Chamber, that he might not be oblig'd to maintain Diſputes, and that he might die at quiet. 'Tis added †, That he had always by him the Juice of Mandrakes to haſten his end, and not to be ſenſible of its approach. Laſtly, They put theſe Words into his Mouth, O God have mercy upon me miſerable Sinner. But he knew the Divinity no better at the hour of death than he did in his life-time. Tho' he ſent for a Phyſician, yet death ſurpriz'd him, and having languiſh'd a long time, as People in Conſumptions do, he was choak'd when he thought he had many days to live. He had reaſon to flatter himſelf with this hope, ſince he came down from his Chamber the ſame day that he dy'd. He has left behind him a Sect that has eſpous'd his Principles. We can't tell whether it be numerous, ſince 'tis conſtituted of Perſons diſpers'd in different places, who make no Body, nor Society. We muſt reckon thoſe for nothing, who gave him the Title of Bleſſed after his death, ſince they were Mechanicks; but the ‖ Flemiſh Tranſlator of his Theologico-Politicus, calls him the Judicious and Political Divine. It has been alſo tranſlated into French; and the better to open it the Gate of France, or the more eaſily to ſurprize the Readers, they produce it under different Titles, which are not ſuſpected; ſuch as that of the ancient and modern Ceremonies of the Jews.

XVIII. We have ſpoken of this Jewiſh Deſerter's Opinion of the Creation; and, that acknowledging but one Subſtance, he confounds Matter with God. He complains in one of his Letters, * printed after his Death, of the Injuſtice of this Accuſation, which had been made a long time before, as if he had never believ'd, that God and Nature was one and the ſame thing. However, according to him, there is but one infinite Subſtance; ſenſible Matter muſt be that infinite Subſtance, which muſt be God. Matter is a Modification of the Divinity. If that Modification be a Subſtance, Matter is God, ſince there is but one Subſtance. If it be not the ſame Subſtance with God, Spinoza's great Principle falls; for 'tis true, that one Subſtance may beget other Subſtances. This Subſtance, begotten or produc'd, is preciſely the ſame with the Infinite Subſtance, or it is not. If it be the ſame Subſtance, God and Matter are the ſame thing; and if it be not, the Infinite Subſtance may produce a Subſtance different from it ſelf, which Spinoza formally denies. The Spinoziſts, who exclaim againſt the Slander, ought to determine, whether their Maſter makes the Univerſe a God, or whether he acknowledg'd a ſuperior Cauſe, and diſtinct from the Creatures, either Spirit or Body, which has acted voluntarily and freely in producing them, and giving them a Being different from his own. They may call it, if they pleaſe, Modification of Subſtance; the choice of Terms is not important, provided they explain themſelves. But in ſtudying his Principles, we obſerve no diſtinction betwixt the Univerſe and God. He ever makes uſe of this to prove, that God is one; for there would be many Gods, if there were many Subſtances in the World ‡.

Spinoza put no ‖ difference betwixt Body and Spirit: the Soul and Body had one and the ſame Subſtance, which had different Modifications, one of Thinking, and the other of Extenſion. He plac'd Man in three different States; one was Natural, in which he does whatever he pleaſes; the other of Liberty, when he follows the motions of Reaſon. He does neither Evil nor Good, in virtue of divine or humane Laws, but becauſe the Reaſon he conſults ſo dictates; and this he calls Liberty. A Man is free, becauſe he can accompliſh his deſires, and Reaſon permits him. Laſtly, Man is in a State of Slavery, when he follows his Paſſions, inſtead of hearkning to Reaſon. But at the bottom, what Reaſon dictates to be bad, with reſpect to particular Laws, is not ſo with reſpect to Order and general Laws. Beſides, all the Actions of Man are the Productions of the Divinity; and if it be God that does the Good and Evil, how can he puniſh or reward his own Work? If the Univerſe be God, or if God be the Univerſe, 'tis God that does all, and there is neither Good nor Evil, Reward nor Puniſhment *.

XIX. Spinoza had undertaken an intire Verſion of the Old Teſtament, and the Pentateuch was finiſh'd, but he burnt it ſome days before his death. We can't eaſily comprehend this Conduct, for he deſign'd to illuſtrate the Miracles of the Old Teſtament. He alſo cavill'd with the Chriſtians about the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt, as if that Event was to be ſuſpected, becauſe Jeſus Chriſt had appear'd only to familiar Witneſſes, inſtead of ſhewing himſelf to the Sanhedrim. He endeavour'd to prove, by the words of St. Paul, that this Reſurrection was ſpiritual, ſince this Apoſtle knew not his Maſter in the fleſh. But did not this Jew perceive that his Syſtem could not ſtand with the Holy Scripture? Why then did he receive it? and conſtrain his Wit to change the Events by wreſted Explications? For he expos'd himſelf hereby to the confounding Blows both of Jews and Chriſtians. If he had perſever'd in his Religion, or had profeſs'd Chriſtianity, he might have had reaſons for this Diſguiſe; but he had deſerted the Synagogue without entring into the Church. Here is another whimſie of Wit; for he aſſur'd his Landlady of the goodneſs of her Religion. † Your Religion is good, ſaid he, and you ought not to ſeek another, nor doubt of obtaining your Salvation in it, provided you give your ſelf to Piety, and live at the ſame time a peaceable and quiet life. This was, perhaps, the firſt Founder of a Sect, who did not recommend his Doctrines as important Truths, and that thought all Religions good, and that Salvation was to be had in them. In all probability, he thought them all

† An. 1664. ‖ An. 1670. * Menagiana. ‡ Colerus Life of Spinoſa, p. 172, 174. ‖ Jean Hendrikſen, Glaſs-maker. * Op. Poſthuma, Ep. 21. † Velthuyſen de cultu naturali, t. 2. 1374. ‖ Spinoza Op. Poſth. Ep. 40. * Velth. ib. p. 1384, 1385. † Colerus p. 73.

all indifferent, and equally bad; but he durſt not explain himſelf ſo freely with a Woman.

XX. Beſides the Treatiſe he publiſh'd in his lifetime, a Volume of Poſthumous Works came out after his death, in which we find a Morality Geometrically demonſtrated, the Cure of the Underſtanding, Letters, an Abridgment of the Hebrew Grammar, and a Treatiſe of Politicks.

He had caſt into the Fire a Treatiſe of the Rainbow, becauſe the Learned who read it, did not think it worth the printing. Was this Vanity, Indignation, or Submiſſion to his Friends? He was accuſed of having publiſh'd in 1665. a Book under a borrow'd Name againſt * Eccleſiaſtical Rites; in which he maintains, That the Clergy, depending abſolutely on the Magiſtracy of the Places where they reſide, ought not to teach what they believe, but what the Sovereign commands. Spinoza deny'd this Work to be his, and 'tis father'd upon a Phyſician †, who ſerv'd him in his laſt Sickneſs, and who was alſo the Author of the Holy Scripture explain'd by Philoſophy.

XXI. Spinoza found Contradictors in his Nation. Orobio oppos'd the progreſs of his Sect. This Phyſician was call'd in Spain, where he was born, Dom Balthaſar Orobio; but he chang'd his Name when he was Circumcis'd, and took that of Iſhak. His Parents, who profeſs'd the Roman Religion, taught him betimes to diſſemble like themſelves. He ſtudy'd ‖ Philoſophy, and became Metaphyſick Reader in the Univerſity of Salamanca. He was a Lover of this Science, which was then much in faſhion. He afterwards became a Phyſician at Seville, where he was ſeiz'd by the Inquiſition, becauſe he did not ſufficiently conceal his Religion, to remove all ſuſpicions. He continu'd three Years in the Priſons of this famous Tribunal; and his Head was very near being turn'd in his Dungeon, for he already ask'd himſelf, Am I Orobio? He was taken from thence to be put to the Rack. He was ty'd Hand and Foot, and faſten'd againſt a Wall with Cords put thro' Rings, which the Executioner drew with violence. The Cords not only took away his Reſpiration, but caus'd an inſupportable Pain, by entring into the Fleſh, which they ſwell'd to that degree, as to force the Blood out of his Nails. The violence of the Torments would have made others confeſs Actions they had not committed; but, on the contrary, Orobio conſtantly maintain'd, he was a Chriſtian, tho' he was a Jew. He got off from thence, but by an unaccountable whim of Brain, inſtead of ſeeking a ſecure Retreat, and the liberty of profeſſing a Religion which had coſt him ſo much Miſery, he continu'd to play the Hypocrite; and changing his Abode, he fix'd at Tholouſe, where he diſputed the Phyſick Profeſſorſhip. He nonplus'd his Competitors by Metaphyſicks, which he poſſeſs'd to perfection. Having had leiſure in Priſon to exerciſe himſelf to Diſputations, and to make Arguments pro & con, he appear'd like a Hero in the Scenes, and was elected Profeſſor, tho' a Stranger. At laſt he was tir'd with diſſembling, and came to Amſterdam, where he receiv'd Circumciſion. He practiſed Phyſick there with great Reputation, and he aſſures us, that his preſſing Occupations did not permit him to apply himſelf to ſtudy, as he could wiſh. When he ſaw Spinoza's Book appear, he deſpis'd that growing Atheiſm, and thought it too obſcure to pleaſe the People, and too evidently falſe to dazzle the Learned. He quickly obſerv'd that he was miſtaken. He had Bredenbourg's Book ſent him *, who in confuting Spinoza, conſented to two dangerous Principles; one, That nothing was to be receiv'd in matter of Religion, but what was evident to Reaſon: The other, That Reaſon not being able to comprehend, that any thing can proceed from nothing, and that God could act upon a Void, we could not admit the Creation of the World. Bredenbourg continu'd doubtful upon this matter; but Orobio thought that he conceal'd his Sentiments under this ſeeming doubt, and that he entred into Atheiſm by going to refute it. He writ † againſt Spinoza, and againſt his Antagoniſt in Philoſophy, who was well read in Metaphyſicks.

XXII. Orobio alſo undertook the defence of his Religion againſt the learned and judicious Mr. Limborch ‖, and it can't be deny'd, but that he manifeſted a great deal of Subtilty in this Conference. He thought he triumph'd in demanding, How it was poſſible, that God having deſign'd, that Man's Salvation ſhould depend upon the Meſſiah, ſhould not have more frequently and more clearly commanded our Belief and Worſhip of him in the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets. He ſet up to oppoſe the Writings of the new Teſtament; he ſuſpected they were Greeks who had compos'd it, ſince Hebrew was the Language of the Jews, for whom theſe Books were written. On the one hand, he would not allow the Sincerity of the Apoſtles to be boaſted of, under pretence, that they were Idiots; ſince St. Paul was an ingenious Man, and St. Luke a Phyſician. On the other hand he maintain'd, That it was ſufficient for theſe poor Fiſhermen to have found Bread and Water, ſo that the Sacrifice they had made was inconſiderable; and the rather, becauſe they had nothing to fear from the Romans, who were not ſevere about the difference of Religions, and againſt whoſe Idolatry they only preach'd in clandeſtine Aſſemblies. The Romans confounded the Chriſtians with the Jews, whoſe Worſhip was authoriz'd by the Laws; and when the Apoſtles appear'd before the Sanhedrim, who were much nicer, they affirm'd, they did not aboliſh the Law, even tho' they undermin'd its very Foundations.

XXIII. Mr. Limborch left not Orobio to enjoy his pretended Advantages; he ſhew'd that God had not only promis'd, but Characteris'd the Meſſiah by his Prophets; and ſince the Jews own it as well as we, he is oblig'd to confeſs, That God deſign'd he ſhould be own'd for the Redeemer, and that we ſhould reſt our Hopes upon him. And indeed to what purpoſe were ſo many Prophecies, and ſuch a multitude of Types, Sacrifices and Ceremonies, denoting the Perſon, the Place, the time of the Birth, and the principal Actions of the Meſſiah, if we ought not to receive him as the Redeemer, and believe in his Word? He prov'd in the next place, by comparing Moſes with Jeſus Chriſt, and the Books of the Old Teſtament with the New; that we have more evident Proofs that theſe Books are divine, and that Jeſus Chriſt is the promis'd Meſſiah, than the Jews have for the Divinity of the Books of Moſes, or the Miſſion of this Prophet.

XXIV. But farther, Orobio built upou falſe Suppoſitions; for St. Paul is not one of the Evangeliſts, that were ocular Witneſſes, whoſe ſincerity is vouch'd, as to the Actions and Life of Jeſus Chriſt.

---

* Lucii Antiſtii Conſtantis de jure Eccleſiaſticorum, in 8*vo*. † This Phyſician is ſignified by two Letters, L. M. that is, Lewis Meyer Philoſophia S. Scripturæ Interpres, Colerus p. 97. ‖ Le Clerc Univerſal Bibliotheque, An. 1687. t. VII. * A Merchant at Rotterdam, who imploy'd People to work in Silk; therefore he is called Textor. † Iſhak Orobio certamen Philoſophicum adverſus J. B. Principia. ‖ Profeſſor among the Remonſtrants at Amſterdam, Collatio cum Judæo.

The

The Apoſtles were declar'd Enemies of the Roman Idolatry, and the plurality of Gods; and the Heathens could not doubt of it, ſince they confounded them with the Jews. They declar'd alſo againſt the Ceremonies and Sacrifices of the Law, ſince St. Paul preach'd up their Abolition and uſeleſsneſs; and the Sanhedrim did not ſpare theſe avow'd Enemies of their Rites. Laſtly, The Goſpel was not written only for the Jews, but alſo for the Gentiles, whoſe fulneſs were to enter into the Church; and of all Languages, there was none ſo well known in the Eaſt and Weſt as the Greek, and therefore the Apoſtles preferr'd it above all others. 'Tis true, the Diſciples, in quitting all to preach the Goſpel, did not ſacrifice either Riches or Honours, but they expos'd their Lives to the moſt cruel Tortures: And Orobio knew by Experience, that it was deſirable, even tho' it was miſerable. This Doctor died at Amſterdam in the Year 1687, a little after this Conference was held and Printed.

XXV. There have been eminent Rabbins in other Cities. David Cohen de Lara, Huziel's Diſciple, is compar'd to Hercules, the Conqueror of Monſters.

Y en Rottardam la cientia fue ſu clava.

He compos'd the City of David, עיר דוד, in which he proves the Analogy of the Hebrew with the Greek, and many other Languages. He wrote alſo * the Crown of the Prieſthood, which is a Dictionary much larger than Nathan's, ſince he has added two thouſand words to it. Laſtly, He Tranſlated the beginning of Wiſdom out of Hebrew into Spaniſh, a Title borrow'd from theſe words of Salomon, The Fear of the Lord is the beginning of Wiſdom. Bartolocci has not mention'd this laſt Work; but yet it is properly his, ſince the Spaniſh Poet who has made his Encomium, and who muſt have known him, attributes it to him.

Des ſacro idioma en Eſpanol traduio,
El Libro del Hebreo, intitulado,
Reſir Jockma, Principio del eſtado
Sapiente, del temor di Dios dibuio.

XXVI. Laſtly, Juda Leon, ſo well known for his Deſcription of Salomon's Temple, compos'd this fine Piece at Middleburgh, the Spaniards claim him, becauſe he was originally of that Country. But he left it in purſuit of a liberty which he wanted in his native Soil. That he might have a clearer Idea of the Temple of Jeruſalem; he built one of Wood upon the Plans he had drawn from ſeveral Authors of his Nation. He afterwards made the Deſcription of his Edifice, which he publiſh'd firſt in French, and Printed at Amſterdam. He afterwards enlarg'd this † Work, when he Tranſlated it into Hebrew. The Learned admir'd ſo exact a Picture of this Ancient Edifice; and the Duke of Brunſwick order'd it to be Tranſlated into Latin, that he might judge of it himſelf. Juda did not ſtop at this firſt work; he made a Deſcription of the Tabernacle, a Treatiſe of the Cherubims, an Eplication of the Pſalms: He undertook alſo to exlain all the Metaphorical Paſſages of the Talmud. He ſays himſelf, That this Work coſt him a great deal of Labour and Pains. He wrote the Narrative of ſome Conferences he had maintain'd againſt the Chriſtian Doctors. But theſe two laſt Tracts were never Printed ‖, nor that of the manner of offering the Morning and Evening Sacrifice.

* Kether Lehunna, Corona Sacerdotii Bartolocci. † The firſt Title of this Book is, a Deſcription of Salomon's Temple, by Jacob Juda Leon, an Inhabitant of Middleburg, in the Province of Zeland, in the Year of the World 5403, that is 1643, The Hebrew Title is, היבל בנית. Farnith Hehal, a Portugueſe, writ that this firſt Work was Spaniſh, but he is miſtaken; the Original was French; and was Printed the ſame Year that Juda finiſhed his wooden Model. Saubert had his Latin Tranſlation Printed in Quarto, in 1655. at Helmſtad. Leonis Judæ de Templo, &c. ‖ Theſe are the Titles of Juda's Works which were not Printed: Theatro de todas las figuras que ſe neceſſitan para intelligencia de los difficultoſos paſſos de todo el Talmud, obra de mucho eſtudio. The 2. Diſputas que tuvo con differentes Theologos de la Chriſtian dad. The 3. Exercicio del Templo en Hebrayco ſobre el modo con que ſe ofrecian los Sacrificios todos los Dias. The 4. Argumentos y Queſtiones para aprovacion de ſus eſtudios ſobre la fabrica del Templo.

CHAP. XXXIII.

The preſent State of the Jews in all parts of the World.

I. A general Deſcription of the Nation made by Luzzati. II. A ſecond Deſcription by Menaſſe. III. An Interpretation of the Prophet Iſaiah. IV. A Continuation of the ſame matter. V. The difference of the Ten Tribes and the others. VI. A particular Idea of Menaſſeh, concerning the Ten Tribes. VII. The Proofs he alledged. VIII. The ten Tribes are in the Eaſt.. IX. The Confutation of Menaſſe's Proofs. Whether Ophir is Peru. X. Whether the Ten Tribes are in China. XI. A Letter written from Cochin to the Synagogue of Amſterdam. XII. The preſent ſtate of the Jews in the Eaſt. XIII. In the Territories of the Ottoman Empire. XIV. A Diviſion of the Weſt into two Parts. The ſtate of the Jews in theſe two Parts. XV. Their Number and Diſperſion.

"I. 'TIS * a difficult thing, ſays Luzzati, to give "an exact Account of the Number of the "Jews, which are at preſent diſpers'd into ſo many

* Simon Luzzati Diſcorzo circa il ſtato degli Hebrei, c. 18. In quanto al numero de gl' Hebrei non ſi puó diffinirlo preciſamente, non havendo n'anco ferma notitia de lochi ove dimorano. In quanto alle Dieci Tribu, che furono captivati da Salmanaſſar, innanzi la diſtruttione del primo Tempio, non ſi ſa di loro certa novella, encora che ſia il mondo hoggidi tutto indagato e ſcoperto; è principiando dalla parte Orientali, ſapiamo che ſotto il Ré di Perſia ſe ne ricovra quantit a grande, é con mediocre liberta. Nel ſtato del ſig. Turcho é la principale ſtanza della Nationе, non ſolo per l'antica loro habitatione, ma anco per il concorſo d'Hebrei, sbandati da Spagna, che gran portione di loro alla fine Capitarono ſotto quel Dominio. In Conſtantinopoli, e Salonichi, vi ne é maggior numero, che in altre Citta, e ſi Giudica, in queſte due ſolamente eſſerne piú di 80. mila e ſe ſtima che ſotto l'Imperio Turcheſco paſſano li miglioni. In Terra ſanta, & in particolare Hieruſalem vi capita annualmente non ſolamente numero grande d'Hebrei di tutte le Nationi del mondo; ma ancora groſſiſſima quantità de renditi annuali, che li vien offerto, per mantener poveri, e ſoſtentare Academie. In la Germania ſotto l'Imperatore, vi ne ſono gran qnantità, ma multo piu in Polonia, Ruſſia, e Lituania. Ove vi ſono gran quantitá, Academia & Vniverſita di migliaia di Gioveni, e ſ'eſſercitano nelle Leggi Civili, e Canoniche de Hebrei, havendo in quelle Regioni libera poteſtà di giudicare qualunque differenza e controverſia, ſi civile; come criminale; che accada fra la Nationе. Soto li dominii diviſi della Chieſa Romana, per il piú non vi ſtantiano Hebrei. Tutta via de Paiſi Baſſi ſono con grandiſſima Carita, & amore volezza trattati, come in Amſtradamo, Rotrodamo & Amburgo di Olſatia, per eſſene Dominii, che per la Floridezza della profeſſione mercantile, Concedono humano hoſpitio a tutti. Verſo Occidente poi non reſta altro che l'Italia, & nella coſta di Africa il Regno di Feſſa, e Maroco. In quanto al Italia ſono univerſalmente da Prencipi che le ricettono protetti, e favoriti, & oſſervati li loro indulti, e Privileggi, ſenza alcana alteratione, che par eſſerució ſotto l'occhio d'ogni uno non occorre chio vi all ungo, e credo arrivare al numero di venti cinque mila. In Maroco, & Feſſa & altre Cittá Circonvicini non ſottopoſti al Dominio del Tucho vi ne ne ſono numero grandiſſimo, eſſendovi anco in quelle parti capiatti dalli eſilii di Caſtiglia, e Portogalo, per la vicinanza de lochi; ſi dice eſſer vene un infinita nelli-lochi mediterranei dell' Affrica, che per eſſere paeſe poco praticato & ignoto, non ſi puó limitarne il numero con certezza.

" places

" places. We cannot tell any certain News of the " ten Tribes Salmanazar carried away; and 'tis not " known where they are, tho' the whole World be " sufficiently known. To begin with the East. We " know that there are abundance of Jews in the " Kingdom of Persia, tho' they have but little Li- " berty. The Turkish Empire is their chief retreat, " not only because they have been settl'd there a " long time, but because a great many of those that " were banish'd out of Spain, retir'd thither. There " are more of 'em at Constantinople and Salonichi, " than in any other place. They reckon above " fourscore thousand in these two Cities, and above " a Milion in the Grand Seignior's Empire. A great " number of Pilgrims come from all Corners of the " World to Jerusalem, and considerable Sums are " sent thither to sustain the Poor, and keep up the " Academies. There are a great many of 'em in " Germany in the Emperor's Dominions; but they " are more numerous in Poland, Lithuania, and Rus- " sia: Here we have Academies and Disciples by " Thousands, who study our Civil and Canon Laws, " because we are allow'd the privilege of judging " the Civil and Criminal cases, that happen in the " Nation. There are not so many Jews in the Pro- " testant States which separate from the Roman " Church; but yet they treat them with a great " deal of Charity and Indulgence in the Low-Coun- " tries; at Rotterdam, Amsterdam and Hambourg, " because these merchandizing Cities are open to " Foreigners. All the Italian Princes receive the " Jews, countenance 'em, protect 'em, and invio- " lably maintain their Privileges without altering " 'em; and I believe there are not less than twenty " five Thousand in this Country. Fez and Mo- " rocco, and the other neighbouring Cities, which " are not subject to the Turk, contain the greater " numbers, because they are not remote from Spain " or Portugal, from whence they may retire thither. " There are other places upon the Coast of Africa, " which are also peopl'd with Jews; but as we " know but little of 'em, 'tis hard to fix the num- " ber. Thus this Italian Rabbin, who not long since taught at Venice, reason'd upon the state of his Nation; to which let us add the Description which Menasseh has left us.

II. This Doctor, who believ'd the Jews return to be just at hand, imagin'd their Condition was clearly expres's'd in these words of Isaiah:

* The Lord shall set his hand again the second time, to recover the Remnant of his People which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the Islands of the Sea. And he shall set up an Ensign for the Nations, and shall as- semble the Out-casts of Israel, and gather together the Dispersed of Judah, from the four Corners of the Earth: The Envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the Adver- saries of Judah shall be cut off. Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. The Pro- phet adds, † That the Lord shall beat off from the Channel of the River unto the Stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye Children of Israel.

III. Menasse observes, That this Oracle can't be apply'd to the return from the Babyloniſh Captivi- ty, because God did not then recal all the dispers'd Tribes, nor all the Israelites that were scatter'd a- mong the Nations. The Deliverance promis'd is call'd the Second, because that general one from Egypt was before it; whereas the return from Ba- bylon only respected two Tribes; and when the Is- raelites left Assyria to pass into the Holy Land, they did not cross the Nile, nor any River of Egypt or Ethiopia, as God promises they shall at the general Redemption; or the Waters of the Nile and Eu- phrates shall be divided to leave a free passage to the Tribes, like the Waters of the Red-Sea, when Is- rael came out of Egygt.

IV. Hence he concluded, That Isaiah intimates the general Return of the Nation, and the different places it shall come from. The Prophets speaks 1. ‖ " of Assyria and Egypt, because in these two Pro- " vinces the twelve Tribes shall be re-united. 2. He " mentions Pathros, by which we must not under- " stand either Pelusium or Petra; but the Parthians " lying near the Caspian Sea, where many Doctors " place the River Sabbation, beyond which dwell a " great number of Jews. 3. Cush is Ethiopia. And " in reality, there are many Tribes in Abyssinia. " 4. Elam is a Province of Persia on the other side " of Euphrates, where we find hideous Deserts not " inhabited, in which one part of the Nation is " conceal'd. 5. Shinar is another Province near " Babylon; for Moses has situated Babel in the Land " of Shinar; and Daniel relates, that Nebuchadne- zar carried the Vessels of the Temple into the " Land of Shinar. 6. The Scripture speaks often " of Hamath; and the Chaldee Paraphrast, who is " follow'd by many Interpreters, affirms, that this " is Antioch. They reckon twelve Cities of this " Name, which have been built in divers places " by different Princes; but this is the City of An- tioch in Asia in Tartary; * Loqueyo conjecturo, es " que sennalala Antiochia Asiatica en Tartaria. 7. The " LXX Interpreters have translated the Word " Hamath by the East, and they had reason for it, " because Hamath חמת is perhaps the same thing " with חמה Hamah the Son, or the East. So that " the Prophet speaks there of the Jews, who are, " at present, dispers'd in the East of the Holy " Land, that is in the great Asia, the East Indies " and China. 8. Isaiah declares, that the Israelites " should come from the Isles of the Sea, for so ma- " ny Interpreters have translated it. But it ought " to be translated the Isles of the West; because in " all the places where the Scripture speaks of the " four parts of the World, it means the West, by " the word ים Yam †: And the Prophet under " this expression, includes all that are towards the " Sun-setting, westward of the Holy Land; that " is, the Jews, who, at present, people a certain " part of America.

V. " Lastly, the Prophet affirms, That God shall " bring back the Out-casts of Israel; and he uses a " word which signifies separated, (excommunicated) " because in reality, the ten Tribes separated from " the rest, not only inhabit places very remote " from the Holy Land, but are conceal'd in the " Extremities of the Earth, and in the Provinces " peopl'd by the Gentiles; but for the Jews, they're " dispers'd, and God shall gather 'em together from " the four corners of the Earth. Because indeed the " Tribe of Judah is dispers'd in different places, " and as it has Synagogues in America, it shall re- " turn from all the corners of the Earth; but there " shall be no more Division nor Jealousie betwixt " these two parts of the Nation; betwixt Ephraim " and Judah, as says the Prophet Ezekiel ‖. There " shall be but one King, and they shall be no more two " Nations, neither shall they be divided into two King- " doms any more at all.

VI. We don't pretend to reconcile these two Rabbins, nor to follow 'em step by step, but yet the general Account they give us of the present

* Isaiah xi. 11, 12, 13. † Ibid. 27. 12. ‖ Menasse la Esperan. sa. di Israel, p. 83, 84, 85. * Ibid. p. 81. † Genes. 28. 14. ‖ Ezek. 37. 22.

Condition of the Jews, deſerves to be conſider'd. They don't agree about the Fate of the ten Tribes; for one ſays, They have been deſtroy'd long ago: And the other maintains, That they are conceal'd in America, and in ſeveral places where God has convey'd 'em, and miraculouſly preſerves 'em 'till they appear again at the general Deliverance; for then they ſhall come from all the places where they live, and rendezvous in Aſſyria and Egypt, from whence they ſhall all fly to Jeruſalem, like Birds to their Neſt.

VII. Menaſſeh * ſupports his Opinion upon the People of America's being unknown, and not appearing to have any Communication with the reſt of the Inhabitants. The Spaniards certifie, That when they came into Peru, they found there a lofty Edifice, which was dedicated to the Creator of the Univerſe; ſeeing the Indians were Idolaters, and as yet had no knowledge of Iron Inſtruments employ'd in building Houſes, this Structure muſt be conſider'd as a Synagogue erected by the Jews: And the Indians alſo approv'd this Conjecture, ſince their Tradition ſignify'd, that this Palace had been made † by a White and Bearded Nation, and more ancient than the Inchas.

Moreover Genebrard relates, That in the Iſland of St. Michel, one of the Azores, the Spaniards diſcover'd a Tomb with a Jewiſh Inſcription ‖.

מה טכם אל שאל כיו מת דעאל.

By changing only one Letter of this Epitaph, * we find theſe Words: How perfect is God? Schakbin is dead: He knows God. By another change of the Letters, we find Mehetabel ſual, Son of Mathadel. For 'tis the Hebrew Style to put their own and Fathers Name upon their Tombs. We muſt therefore read, מהתבאד שאל בל מחר זאך.

But whatever way we read this Epitaph, 'tis ſtill true, that the Jews engraved it, and that they have been in that Country.

Laſtly, Menaſſes † quotes a great many Chriſtian Authors, who lend a helping hand to fortify this Conjecture about the ten Tribes. Even the Spaniſh Poets have not forgotten to ſpeak of 'em,

Vez las manchas de Tierra tan Cubiertas,
Que puede ſer a Pinas diviſadas.
Haſta que Dios penuita que Parezcan,
Porque mas ſus ſecretos ſe engrandeſcan.

VIII. For our part, we believe that the ten Tribes ſubſiſt ſtill in the Eaſt, and in moſt of the Places where Salmanaſſar carried them, and here we ought to look for 'em. We have already obſerv'd, that Salmanaſſar had plac'd 'em upon the Banks of the Chaboras, which falls into the Euphrates; which is the ſame River the Greeks call Aborras. Procopius ſays, ‖ it was a great River, and indeed Julian's ans Army paſs'd over it upon a Bridge of Boats. Strabo * ſays, it run near Anthemuſia, which ſome have thought a City, others a Province depending on the Perſians, becauſe Ammianus † Marcellinus places a Cittadel call'd Batne in this Province. This River emptied it ſelf into the Euphrates, at its Mouth ſtood Carchemis, ſince call'd Cercuſium. On the Weſt was Ptolemy's Chalcitis, and the City Carra. And therefore God has brought back the Jews to the Country from whence the Patriarchs came. On the Eaſt was the Province of Ganzan, betwixt the two Rivers Chaboras and Saocoras. This was the firſt ſituation of the Tribes. But they ſpread into the neighbouring Provinces, and upon the Banks of Euphrates. 2. The ten Tribes were ſtill in being in this Country when Jeruſalem was deſtroy'd, ſince they came in multitudes to pay their Devotions in the Temple. 3. They ſubſiſted there from that time to the Eleventh Century of the Chriſtian Church, ſince they had their Heads of the Captivity, and moſt flouriſhing Academies. 4. Tho' they were conſiderably weaken'd by Perſecutions, yet Travellers of that Nation diſcover'd abundance of their Brethren and Synagogues in the twelfth and fourteenth Centuries. 5. No new Colony has been ſent into the Eaſt, nor have thoſe that were there been driven out. At this day a great number of Jews are obſervable in Perſia. We have even ſeen that Amurath, who found 'em at Bagdet, ſaved them, tho' they ought to have been confounded with the other Subjects of his Enemy. 6. Laſtly, we have deduced our Hiſtory from Age to Age, without obſerving any other Change than what was caus'd by the different Revolutions of that Empire, the various Tempers of the Governors, or the inevitable Decay in a Nation, which only ſubſiſts by Toleration. We have therefore reaſon to conclude, that the ten Tribes are ſtill in the Eaſt, whither God ſuffer'd 'em to be carry'd. They are neither deſtroy'd, nor gone from thence into hidden Lands. If the Families and Tribes are not diſtinguiſhable, 'tis impoſſible it ſhould be otherwiſe in ſo long a courſe of Ages and Afflictions, that they have gone through.

IX. This Conjecture has a much better Foundation than all Menaſſes, who makes God work a Miracle to conceal theſe ten Tribes, and hide 'em a long time from the Eyes of Men. For it can't be concluded, becauſe ſome Nations are unknown in America, or ſtrange Nations in this Country, that they muſt needs be Jews, and of all the Jews, thoſe of the ten Tribes, which God has ſent thither by the Streights of Anian, which was not form'd till after their paſſage. Is one Palace ſufficient, whereon to bottom this Conjecture? The Hebrew Inſcription found in one of the Azores, ſhews only that a Jew died there, but does not prove that the ten Tribes came thither. 'Tis the Character of this Nation, which only employs it ſelf in Trading to go into all places, where it has any proſpect of Profit. Private Men go over Sea and Land on this account, as the Phariſees did to gain a Proſelyte. But theſe Rambles of particular Merchants are no Argument of the ten Tribes conveyance behind the Mountain Cordilleras. Iſaiah did not know America; his intention was to ſpeak of the Iſlands of the Sea, as all unprejudic'd Interpreters have tranſlated it. Laſtly, The Authors quoted prove nothing, becauſe there is hardly one of 'em that ſpeaks of the ten Tribes, nor of a Jewiſh Colony in America. The Spaniards, who have ſo long poſſeſs'd it, know nothing of this Plantation; and even thoſe who touch upon this matter, only hazard ſome very uncertain Conjectures. Arias Montanus ‖ found Peru in Ophir, and maintain'd that it had gone by this Name from the end of Salomon's reign, when the Letters of the firſt Name Ophir, אופיר were tranſpos'd and turn'd into פרוים Peruvaim; which word ſignify'd * two great Provinces between which lay the Gulf of Panama. This Conjecture he thought the more ſolid, becauſe this Country had been peopl'd by Joctan, and we find there the Province of Jokatan, as well as the River of Peru. However this Notion is ridiculous, for

* Menaſſes, Eſperanca d'Iſrael, p. 114, 115. † Menaſſes, ibid. p 44. ‖ Ibid. p. 26. * By changing ש. † V. p. 116. ‖ Procop. de Bello perſ. l. 2. c. 5. * Strabo Geogr. l. 16. † Ammian Marcellin. l. XIV. c. 4. p. 16. Cellar. Geogr. Ant. l. 3. p. 438. ‖ Ar. Montanus Antiquit. Judaic. Phaleg. 5. l. 1. c. 9. p. 545. * Becauſe it is the dual number.

for Peru took its Name only when 'twas diſcover'd by the Chriſtians. One of the Inhabitants who was ask'd the name of it, imagining he was ask'd his own, anſwer'd it was Pirou, whereas the queſtion was, what was the name of the Country, and of its Inhabitants.

'Tis therefore a ſafer way to ſay, that the ten Tribes are at preſent diſpers'd in Perſia and all the Eaſt; and that thoſe in America conſtitute no Body, ſo far are they from having Kings, and poſſeſſing a great extent of Land unknown to the exacteſt Travellers. Here are only ſome particular Perſons, moſt of 'em Diſſemblers, who have left Spain to enrich themſelves in this new World, whom the Inquiſition purſues thither, and makes 'em often bear the puniſhment of their own Avarice and fondneſs for Wealth, which they go in queſt of to this Country.

X. 'Tis pretended farther, that the ten Tribes appear, and make a figure in China *. The Jew we have ſpoken of, and who, being deceiv'd by the Jeſuit Raci, worſhip'd the Virgin, maintain'd that there were at Pequin ten or twelve Families of Iſraelites, and a Synagogue which had coſt them ten Thouſand Crowns to repair. He aſſerted, that they had been ſettl'd in this Province above five hundred Years, and that they religiouſly preſerv'd one of the five Books of Moſes, which he call'd Sepher Thora. He could not read Hebrew, having neglected the Study of it in his youth; by which negligence, he was excluded from the Offices and Government of the Synagogue, which his Brother exercis'd, becauſe he underſtood the Language, but he repeated the Stories of the Old Teſtament, particularly thoſe of Abraham, Judith and Eſther. He added, That there were in the Capital † of the Province of Chequiam, a great many Synagogues, and Iſraelite Families; for they give themſelves that Name, becauſe being the Poſterity of the ten Tribes, they knew not that of Jews. This Account has two things true in it, one that there are in China ſome Jewiſh Families; the other, that they may have there ſome ſecret Synagogue. There are alſo two things falſe, one as to the Antiquity this Iſraelite pretended to. And indeed, who could depend upon the ſincerity of this Iſraelite, who was ignorant of what related to the Ancient Hiſtory of his Nation? The other Falſity is, That thoſe who might have paſs'd into China for Traffick, made a conſiderable part of the ten Tribes, and the Title of Iſraelites, which this Jew gave 'em, was not ſufficient to prove it.

XI. I know not what we ought to think of a long Letter, which the Jews of Cochin writ ſome years ago in Hebrew, to the Synagogne of Amſterdam; for they ſay, "That they withdrew into the Indies "at the time that the Romans Conquer'd the Holy "Land. They affirm, they have had ſeventy two "Kings there, ſucceeding one another for a thou-"ſand Years; and that then a Diviſion ariſing "through the jealouſie of two Brothers, who di-"ſputed the Crown, the neighbouring Princes "ſubdu'd them. From that time they continu'd "ſubject to the Indian Kings. However they had "given ſo many Teſtimonies of their Loyalty to "theſe Princes, that Samuel Caſtoel, who died in "1640, was Governour of Cochin, and left his Go-"vernment to a Man of the ſame || Name and Re-"ligion with himſelf. I will not determin whether this Letter be falſe or ſpurious, having no Proofs. But however this Succeſſion of ſeventy two Kings, founded upon the Jews retreat to Cochin in Titus's time, ſeems only an Invention to ſupport the glory of the Nation. They refer us to remote time and unknown Hiſtories, becauſe there is nothing to be found in this preſent time that can impoſe upon us.

XII. We conclude only from this Narrative, that there are now ſome Jews diſpers'd in the Eaſt Indies. There are ſome of 'em at Cothin, Gora, Malabar, in China, and even in the Iſles of America; but they are not the ten Tribes that paſs'd into theſe Countries. They are Merchants, drawn thither by Commerce from all the Families of the Diſperſion, not diſtinguiſhable but by an uncertain, not to ſay entirely falſe Tradition. Beſides, there is no place where the Nation had Kings, and a ſupreme Government. They live in the Eaſt, and in America, as in Europe, under the Dominion of Chriſtian or Infidel Princes. In fine, if we would ſeek out the Remains of the ten Tribes, we muſt do it only on the Banks of Euphrates, in Perſia, and the neighbouring Provinces, as we have ſufficiently proved. They are poor there, but nevertheleſs they ſubſiſt.

XIII. I don't know how Strada * could ſay, that Soliman granted them a City, with its dependencies, at the ſolicitation of Michez, who was much in his Son's favour; for this Nation had been ſettl'd long before in moſt of the Cities of the Ottoman Empire, and no City was ever given 'em that they could call their own. They are only tolerated there, and ſometimes admitted to Offices, particularly † in Egypt. The Ottoman Princes alſo ſend 'em upon Embaſſies, and then they think themſelves oblig'd to raiſe the glory of their Nation by the Pomp and Magnificence of their Retinues. The Proſperity they enjoy, makes their numbers to be reckon'd a Milion of Jews in their Dominions. And ſo we may count twelve or thirteen hundred thouſand Perſons of this Nation in the Eaſt at this day.

XIV. The Writers we have quoted, divide the Weſt between two Sovereigns, or rather between two prevailing Religions, the Proteſtants and the Roman Catholicks. 1. They highly praiſe the Popes; for la || Pontificia Roma ſiempre los ha patrounado deſde que deſtruyo a Jeruſalem ſu General Tito. Papiſh Rome, ſay they, has always protected them, ſince its General, Titus, took Jeruſalem. Titus was not General of Papiſt but of Heathen Rome. Beſides, the Popes have ſometimes chang'd their management, and have perſecuted inſtead of protecting them. But nevertheleſs they have great reaſon to glory in this Papal Protection; for the good they have receiv'd from the Popes by far outweighs the Evil, and the Obligation muſt be remarkably the greater, if the Maxims of Rome, and the Conduct of its Miniſters againſt the Chriſtians be conſider'd, who not only worſhip one and the ſame God, but the very ſame Meſſiah. If the Pope honours the Jews with his protection, the Kings under his Obedience treat 'em in a harſh and barbarous manner. The Spaniſh and Portugal Inquiſitions reduce 'em to the Dilemma of being either Hypocrites or burnt.

The number of theſe Diſſemblers is very conſiderable; and it ought not to be concluded, that there are no Jews in Spain or Portugal, becauſe they are not kuown: They are ſo much the more dangerous, for not only being very numerous, but confounded with the Eccleſiaſticks, and entring into all Eccleſiaſtical Dignities. France tolerates 'em no where but at Mets, and the number of the Diſſemblers is not ſo great; but there are ſome of 'em in trading Towns. They find a Sanctuary in the Cities of the Empire. Poland and Lithuania are a far more ſafe retreat for 'em, and here they are moſt flouriſhing.

* Trigaut de Chriſtiana expeditione apud ſinas ſuſcepta, & Menaſſe Eſperanca. † Hamche. || David Caſtrol. Hiſtoria Univerſal Judaica de M. Barrios. * Strada de Bello Belgico, l. 4. p. 285. † In Egypto Menaſſeh Eſper. p. 103. & p. 104. || M. Barrios Hiſtoria Univerſal Judaica, p. 3.

Their * Writers complain often of the Proteſtants, as having not ſufficient Humanity. However they find not among them the barbarous Court of Inquiſition. They live peaceably in abundance of Cities, where the Reformation is eſtabliſh'd, and Holland of all places of the World, is that where they make the greateſt Figure. But it would be uſeleſs to repeat what we have already ſaid of 'em.

XV. 'Tis impoſſible to fix the number of Perſons this Nation is at preſent compos'd of. But yet we have reaſon to believe, there are ſtill near three Millions of People, who profeſs this Religion, and as their Phraſe is, are Witneſſes of the Unity of God in all the Nations of the World. They ſtill conſider themſelves with their ancient haughtineſs as the People of God. They ſay that they are the Sons of the King, and conſequently no Baſeneſs or Diſloyalty can be apprehended on their part. They often intitle themſelves Barons el Varon, tho' they live in Poverty, and we can obſerve no diſtinction in their Birth. They always are expecting a glorious Return, which ſhall raiſe 'em above all the Nations of the Earth. They flatter themſelves, that this Deliverance will ſpeedily arrive, tho' they are ignorant of the time, or rather, becauſe having been often deluded, they dare not fix it; but of this Reſtoration, we ſhall ſpeak in the following Chapter.

* Menaſſe Eſperanc. p. 95, 41.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Several Reflections upon the Converſion of the Jews, and the Methods that have been taken to accompliſh it.

I. The re-call of the Jews. II. Foretold by Hoſea; this Propheſie explain'd. III. Foretold by St. Paul. IV. This Apoſtle's Converſion., Typical of the Jews. V. The precautions that have been taken. VI. Ordinances of the Council of Nicæa concerning the Jews rejected in France. VII. Inſtances of falſe Converſions. VIII. Two forms of Abjuration preſcribed by the Greek Church. IX. An Extract of one of theſe Forms. X. The Eſtates of the Converted ſequeſtred. XI. Whether it be lawful to promiſe 'em Rewards. XII. Whether Miracles ought to be propos'd to 'em. XIII. Whether they ought to be accus'd of ſinning againſt the Holy Ghoſt. XIV. The ſecond Advent of the Meſſiah proper to convert them. XV. The neceſſity of this Advent. XVI. The method of proving the Myſteries by Heatheniſm. XVII. Heathens inſtructed by the Prophets of Sydon. XVIII. Divines that follow this method. XIX. Whether it be good and ſafe. XX. The complaiſance of the Cabbaliſt-Chriſtians. XXI. The Jews impugn'd by the Authority of the Rabbins. XXII. The Propheſies inſignificantly quoted by the Fathers. XXIII. Freſh Inſtances of theſe Quotations. XXIV. The method we ought to follow in the choice of Controverſies. XXV. An Argument ill inferr'd from ſome fabulous Hiſtories. XXVI. An Inſcription related by Kircher. XXVII. Other Proofs produc'd by Vincenti. XXVIII. Conferences difficult and dangerous. XXIX. The choice we ought to make of the Subjects and Prophecies of the Old Teſtament. XXX. Characters of the Meſſiah. XXXI. The neceſſity of proving the Correſpondence of the Law and Goſpel. XXXII. The neceſſity of Tranſlating the Rabbins Works.

I. WE have compleated the Hiſtory of the Jews, and ſeen this Nation diſpers'd into all parts of the World, preſerve it ſelf in being, tho' deſtitute of all the ordinary Bonds and Ligaments of Society. We find among 'em neither Prince nor High-Prieſt, who might re-unite his Subjects and People by an Authority that every body reſpected, or by a Proſperity that invited 'em. We have reaſon to believe, that God, who always acts for an end proportionable to his Actions; works a Miracle, and perpetuates it for a great many Ages, becauſe he reſolves to ſave the Remnant of this People, and to convert them hereafter. And indeed, the Prophet Hoſea has foretold, that the Children of Iſrael ſhall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a ſacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim: Afterward ſhall the Children of Iſrael return, and ſeek the Lord their God, and David their King. By this the Prophet deſigns to repreſent the remarkable State of a Nation. 1. It ſhall have no King nor Prince. Sovereign Authority is the Foundation of States; 'tis impoſſible to ſubſiſt without a Centre of Union, and a Government that checks the Inſolence of the People, and puniſhes their Crimes. The Jews preferr'd Monarchical Government, before Liberty they injoy'd under their Judges. At preſent they have neither King nor Governour. Ask them where are the Kings of the Nation, or the Judges, thoſe Deliverers and Leaders that God ſent 'em inſtead of Kings, and they can't ſhew you one of 'em. 2. The Sacrifices made the moſt notable part of their Religion; and the Ephod, compos'd of precious Stones, in which was the Urim and Thummim, ennobled the High-Prieſt that wore it. The Sacrifices and the Prieſt have been aboliſh'd for above ſixteen hundred Years. 3. 'Twas natural for this People, who had loſt all that was exterior and ſenſible in its Religion, to borrow the Images and Teraphim from other Nations. There is a diſpute about the Figure of theſe Teraphims, but to me it ſeems undoubted, that theſe Statues had a Human Shape; ſince Michol put a Teraphim in David's Bed, to perſuade the Guards it was her Husband aſleep. The Jews inclination for Statues and ſenſible Objects of Religion was ſo violent, that God could not repreſs it but by continual and miraculous Chaſtiſements. 'Tis the general inclination of Mankind; for upon examination you'll find, that almoſt all Religions had their Sacrifices or Idols, and commonly both. However, the Jews have neither Sacrifices, nor Teraphim, tho' they be paſſionately fond both of the one and the other. They can no longer Sacrifice at Jeruſalem, and they never fall into Idolatry, tho' they be mingl'd and incompaſs'd with Idolatrous Nations. 4. They are to remain in this condition many days; that is to ſay, a long time. And indeed, ſixteen Centuries have already paſs'd, ſince they have been without King and Governour, without Image and Sacrifice. They are not without God, but without the Worſhip they are oblig'd to pay pay him; for they have neither Sacrifices nor Ephod. 5. The laſt Circumſtance is very remarkable; for Hoſea declares, they ſhall ſeek David their King. David has been long ſince dead, and his Poſterity is ſo extinct or confounded, that we challenge the Jews to diſtinguiſh it. This David, who ſhall be their King, can be no other than the Deliverer promis'd by the Prophets, and the Meſſiah, to whom they ſhall return. But ſince the time of his coming is paſt, and the Prophet effectively ſpeaks of a King, who exiſted before they ſought for him, we have reaſon to believe, that the Jews, by returning to God, ſhall acknowledge this David, this Anointed of the Lord, this Meſſiah whom he hath ſent.

III. St. Paul has alſo foretold, that all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, and that the Deliverer ſhall come out of Sion. Perhaps it ſhould be tranſlated to Sion; for this better ſuits with the Apoſtle's thought, who affirms, that the Goel, the Deliverer, by way of Excellence, ſhall addreſs himſelf to the Jewiſh Nation; this is what Zachary ſays, Rejoyce, O Daughter of Zion, behold thy King cometh unto thee. Moreover, 'twas upon this hope of God's recalling his People, that the Fathers, and a great many Divines have maintain'd, That they were to be more kindly treated than the reſt of the Erroneous.

IV. Joſeph Medde fancy'd, That the Converſion of St. Paul, who had Crucify'd Chriſt, like the reſt of the Jews, who were bent on his Deſtruction, was the Type of their Converſion *. "1. Paul "was a great Zealot for the Law, a furious Per- "ſecutor of Chriſtianity. The Jews are alſo great "Zealots for Moſes, irreconcileable Enemies of "Chriſt. 2. Paul was converted, not like the reſt "of Men, by meer preaching and the ſight of Mi- "racles, but by a glorious Apparition of Chriſt, "ſhewing himſelf from Heaven. In like manner, "'tis very probable, that the Converſion of the "Jews will not be effected by any ordinary means, "like that of preaching, for this Peoples Heart is "incorrigibly harden'd. And therefore, 'tis pro- "bable, that Chriſt will Convert them by ſome "glorious and ſurprizing Manifeſtation; and ap- "pear to 'em inveſted with the Characters which "the Prophets aſcribe to him, that they may no "longer miſtake him. 3. Paul's Companions in- "deed ſaw the Light, but Jeſus Chriſt did not ap- "pear to 'em. The Gentiles and Chriſtians who "ſhall then be alive, may have ſome part in this "glorious Apparition; but perhaps they ſhall not "ſee the whole. 4. Paul was inſtructed by way of "Inſpiration in all Myſteries, as ſoon as Jeſus "Chriſt had appear'd to him. The Underſtanding "of the Jews ſhall be unclouded. The Veil that "at preſent infolds their Hearts, ſhall be taken "off, and ſuddenly they ſhall ſee clearly into the "Oracles of the Law and Prophets. 5. St. Paul "was Converted the laſt of all the Apoſtles: The "Jews ſhall be the laſt call'd of all Nations. 6. "Paul, when converted, was the moſt zealous of "'em all: The Converted Jews ſhall be more fer- "vent than all other Chriſtians. 7. Paul Conver- "ted was the Apoſtle and Inſtrument of the Con- "verſion of the Gentiles: The Converted Jews "ſhall compleat the Converſion of Heathen Na- "tions that are remote and at the fartheſt parts "of the World". There is Subtilty in all theſe Parallels; but 'tis not for us to ſound the thoughts of God, or the manner how he will accompliſh this great Work.

V. Men have for a long time attempted it, and have ſometimes brought over conſiderable numbers; but theſe Converſions have ever been ſuſpected, and they have been forc'd to lay in great Precautions againſt their return into the Synagogue. In the beginning of the ſixth Century, the Council of Agde † in vain indeavour'd to ſecure the Fidelity of the Jews that turn'd Chriſtians. They return very often to their Vomit, ſaid the Council. "They are "faithleſs in their Promiſes, and therefore they "muſt be oblig'd to a ſix Months Inſtruction "amongſt the Catechumens; and after that Ex- "periment they ſhall be baptiz'd, upon aſſurance "of their Sincerity". Which Law was not to be violated, except for thoſe that were in danger of death; for then they haſten'd their Baptiſm.

A ſecond Council of Nice ‖ obſerv'd, that the new Converts openly ridicul'd Chriſtianity, when they had imbrac'd it; and therefore they were order'd to keep their Religion, and to profeſs it publickly; and at the ſame time it was forbidden to baptize their Children, or to appropriate their Slaves, unleſs a Man was fully aſſur'd of the ſincerity of their Faith.

VI. But theſe Ordinances were neither receiv'd nor conſtantly obſerv'd; for Florus, who liv'd a little after the Nicene Council, has preſerv'd, and perhaps compos'd the Letter of a Biſhop to the Emperor, in which he implores the Secular Arm againſt the Jews and their Children. Indeed the Emperor, to whom the Letter is addreſs'd, was Charles the Bald; and I ſuſpect that Remi, who was then Biſhop of Lions, wrote it, or caus'd it to be written by his Deacon. He repreſents to the Prince, that he had order'd Preaching every Saturday in the Synogogue, and that many People having embrac'd Chriſtianity, he had employ'd 'em to bring over * the Children, who were much eaſier won, than thoſe who were grown inveterate in Error; but that the Fathers, vex'd with this Artifice, had ſent moſt of their Children into the Cities of Maſcon, Vienne and Arles, where they were more powerful and numerous, which thing had diſpleas'd him. He added, that he had ſummon'd all the Jews before him, and upon asking, Whether any one would embrace Chriſtianity? Immediately ſix Children threw themſelves at his Feet, and deſir'd Baptiſm; and that this Example had been follow'd by forty ſeven others. He concluded from thence, that if the Emperor gave his Orders to the Biſhop of Arles, and forc'd him to do the ſame thing, many of 'em might be gain'd: And the Motive was the more forcible, becauſe if it be a Charity to reſcue a Man from the jaws of wild Beaſts that devour him, 'tis a much greater to deliver a Soul out of the hands of thoſe who are infected with Error, or of wicked Spirits, that prevent his coming to God.

It appears, that this Biſhop made no ſcruple to baptize Jewiſh Children, by forcing 'em from their Fathers who had given 'em life; and that the Authority of the ſecond Nicene Council was not reſpected in France, which condemn'd theſe Baptiſms, that contradicted the Laws of Nature. St. Remi affirms indeed, that he ſent back many Children, without doing 'em any Violence, intactos; but yet he baptiz'd all he could get, tho' void of Knowledge. The Complaint he made of thoſe Fathers, who took Precautions againſt his Sollicitations, and the Petition he preſented to the Emperor, to force the Biſhop of Arles to follow his Example, are Arguments ſufficient, that this Biſhop neither regard-

* Jurieu's Accompliſhment of Prophecies, t. 2. p. 217. † Conc. Agathen. C. 34. t. iv. p. 1389. ‖ An. 787. Conc. Nicæn. II Actio 8. C. 8. t. vii. p. 604. * Epiſtola Epiſcopi ad Imperatorem, Flori excerpta apud Dacherii Spicil. t. 12.

ed

ed the Law of Nature, nor that of the Council of Nice.

It was ſtill more openly violated, by maintaining, that all the Jews were the Slaves of Chriſtians; for hereby they appropriated their Children, and had power to appropriate their Perſons, and to put 'em into ſevere Slavery; whereas the Council wou'd not ſo much as have their Slaves appropriated, unleſs they were aſſur'd of the ſincerity of their Converſion.

VII. 'Tis no wonder that the Chriſtians have been often deceiv'd by Converſions, ſince they made them with ſo little Prudence. It would be infinite to produce all the Inſtances. We'll only mention ſome few, beſides thoſe we have already ſcatter'd in the Body of this Hiſtory.

Conrad Otton, after his Baptiſm, writ violently againſt the Synagogue. He charg'd it † "with "having very few Perſons that read Hebrew, and "underſtood the Talmud, and other Books neceſ- "ſary to the becoming Learned; that they liv'd "there like Beaſts, without thinking of Futurity; "that in their Prayers to God, they knew not, for "for the moſt part, what they ſaid, and gave no "attention; that great part of 'em knew not "what they believ'd, nor underſtood ſo much as "the means of Salvation". Nevertheleſs, this Man, ſo ſcandaliz'd with the Ignorance and Devotion of his Brethren, quitted * this Profeſſion in the Univerſity of Altorf, and return'd to Judaiſm.

About ſix or ſeven Years ago, † a Rabbinical Profeſſor at Vienna, who was thought zealous for Chriſtianity, for the ſake of which he tranſlated the Epiſtle of the Hebrews into Hebrew, and turned Abravanel's Commentaries upon the Prophets into Latin, diſappear'd, to return to the Boſom of the Synagogue he had left.

In Spain and Portugal we find ſuch as ſeem to be Converts commonly ridiculing the Converters. A Portugueze, known by the Name of Rodriguez Caſtelli Albi, or white Caſtle, but more by the Books he publiſh'd, and which gave him the Reputation of one of the moſt ingenious Men of his Age, left ‖ his Country to ſeek a Sanctuary at Rome. But fearing his Apoſtacy would be ſeverely chaſtis'd, he went to many other Cities of Italy, accompany'd with the ſame fears. Having diſſembled in all Places, he retreated to Theſſalonica, where ſeeing himſelf ſecure, he profeſs'd the Religion he had always believ'd, and diſguis'd under the pretences of Chriſtianity.

Thoſe that endeavour to convert this People, ought therefore to be always miſtruſtful, and never depend upon their Sincerity, but when their Converſion is altogether voluntary. 'Tis not enough, that it was not produc'd by fears and hopes, but it ought to be bottom'd upon ſolid Arguments and a ſafe Method.

VIII. The Grecian Church thought it could not be too precautious, in admitting into its Boſom People of a ſuſpected Faith; for beſides what we have already obſerv'd, we find ſome marks of its Severity in their Forms of Abjuration, which the Jewiſh Proſelytes were oblig'd to make. There are two of 'em; one whereof is inſerted in * the Greeks Ritual, and the other found by Mr. Cotelier, in a Manuſcript of the King of France's Library. This laſt is much newer and larger than the other, becauſe they add what they pleaſe to ſuch ſort of Pieces. For we find in this Formulary, the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, and the Neophyte is made expreſly to ſay; I * believe the Bread and Wine myſtically conſecrated by the Chriſtians, to be the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, which are chang'd by his divine power intellectually, inviſibly, above all thought, and in a manner conceivable only by himſelf. But there is not the leaſt ſhadow of this Doctrine in the Greeks Ritual; however, we ſhall prefer this laſt Formulary to the firſt, becauſe it is more ample, and we are not meddling with Controverſie.

IX. Firſt, The Prieſt obliges the Converted Jew to own, that he does it voluntarily, and that neither fear nor hope has any influence on his Converſion; that he has been led to it neither by Poverty, nor the deſire of Riches, nor Honours, nor Violence, nor any human Motives. He was oblig'd alſo to make a Proteſtation of his Innocence, leſt the change of his Religion ſhould be undertaken to avoid the Puniſhments he had deſerv'd. This firſt Article is not found in the Ritual of the Greeks. 2. He was made to abjure very preciſely, all the Jewiſh Worſhip, the unleavened Bread, Circumciſion, the Paſſover, Faſts, Sabbaths, &c. 3. He was oblig'd to anathematize all the Hereſies and Sects that have been among the Jews. To whom they join the Scribes, aſcribing to 'em the waſhing of Pots and Veſſels, as if that Superſtition was peculiar to them. They are alſo here conſider'd as the Defenders of Traditions, whereof Rabbi Akiba made the firſt Collection; Annas has compos'd the ſecond; Judas, one of the Aſmoneans, who violated the Sabbath, is look'd upon as the Author of the third. Thoſe alſo were anathematiz'd that kept the Feaſt of Mordecai and Haman, which ought to be aboliſh'd in the fifth Century; and the Authors of another Feaſt, call'd Monopodana, perhaps becauſe they dance upon one Foot. They anathematiz'd Elias, Benjamin Zebedee, Ahram and Simbatius, who are look'd upon as ſo many Atheiſts; and, above all, the Meſſiah, who is to come, or rather, the Antichriſt the Jews expect. 'Tis ſtrange they ſhould cauſe a Man to be anathematiz'd before he was born. Nevertheleſs, this laſt Anathema is in the old Formulary, where no Hereticks are mention'd. 4. The Proſelyte was oblig'd to make a Confeſſion of Faith, to which they have tack'd ſeveral Additions, according to the exigencies of times. 5. Laſtly, He was made to ſay, That if he made not this Profeſſion with his whole Heart, without any deſign to return to Judaiſm, if he had ever any Commerce with the Jews, either by entring into their Synagogues, or eating with 'em, he pray'd God, that all the Curſes of the Law might fall upon him; that he might have the trembling of Cain, the Leproſie of Gehazi, and that his Soul might go to all the Devils.

X. People have often endeavour'd to win 'em with the Promiſes of a Temporal Proſperity, which is a great Temptation to 'em; but by an unaccountable capriciouſneſs, they took away the Eſtates of the Proſelytes in France, and Charles VI. was oblig'd to prevent the Confiſcation of the Goods of thoſe that were baptiz'd. This Prince's Ordinance is ſtill in being; by which we ſee, 1, That they ſeiz'd the Eſtate of a Jew, who imbrac'd Chriſtianity, and inſtead of recompencing his Faith, reduc'd him to the miſerable neceſſity of begging his Bread. 2. The King had a ſhare in this Oppreſſion, with the Lords of his Kingdom. 3. And tho' he iſſu'd a Declaration to hinder this Abuſe, yet Joſeph de Vaſa, who had been baptiz'd by the Name of Lewis de Harcourt, deſiring this Prince † to reſtore his Eſtate, they had confiſcated; he only gave him part of it, and left the reſt to ſome Lords of his Court.

† Apud Wagenſeil Tela Ignea, t. 2. p. 119. * An. 1675. † An. 1698. ‖ An. 1554. * Ordo & Catechiſm. ex Hebræis apud Goar. Rituale Græc. p. 344. * Μεταβαλλομενα τῇ ἐκεινης θειχῇ δυνάμει. Expoſitio certa apud Coteler. Monum. Apoſt. Not. in Recogn. S. Clem. l. 1. c. 54. t. 1. p. 499, 500. † Caroli VI. litteræ apud Mab. Anal. t. 3. p. 512.

IX. Gregory

XI. Gregory the Great *, on the contrary, made it a sort of Merit to win these erroneous Souls, by discharging 'em from Taxes, because, said he, we gain either the Fathers or the Children. If the former are not sincerely converted, yet their Children are baptiz'd with greater certainty, and bred up in the Christian Faith. However, this Traffick of Souls, in which the Conscience of a Man is bought, and his Faith is sold, and he makes his Religion a Temporal Convenience, has always appear'd dishonourable to me. 'Tis the Devil that cries, I will give thee, if thou wilt worship me. And therefore the Emperor Arcadius † perceiving, that the Jews came into the Church only to skreen themselves from the Prosecution of the Judges, for Crimes or Debts, forbad any to be receiv'd, that had not satisfy'd their Creditors. Balsamon ‖ reports the same Institution, which proves it was still in force many Ages after this Emperor.

XII. The Superstitious, doting on Miracles, fancy there is nothing more proper to dazle the Jews. If these Miracles were true, 'twould be a short way to convince the Unbelievers. The Jew formerly ask'd for Signs, but Jesus Christ would not multiply 'em for 'em. To tell 'em of bloody Hosts, and to make Crosses, and other inanimate Creatures work Miracles, is the way to scandalize 'em. They cannot admit Miracles wrought to authorize the Worship of the Creature, because Idolatry was the manifest Character whereby God design'd to distinguish a false Prophet from the true. But moreover, they have Miracles of their own, attested by Doctors they reverence, and which have been wrought since the ruin of Jerusalem. If you reject the truth of these Prodigies, supported by the Testimony of Rabbins, they have no less reason to except against the Legendaries, which have often been decry'd by judicious Writers. They say, that their Rabbin Joseph Karo heard every day a Voice from Heaven, which explain'd to him the Mysteries of the Law. This was not done by Night, nor in secret, but by Day, in his School, in presence of other Rabbins, who heard it as well as he, and consequently were so many Witnesses of the Miracle. How will they contest this Fact, who maintain, that Images talk and sweat Blood, and to prove it, produce only the Depositions of some superstitious and credulous People?

XIII. One while they are flatter'd, and another they are provok'd. I find Divines *, who not content to talk in a strain of harshness which shocks the Mind, and is unbecoming Christians, represent Judaism, as if it was the Common-shore of all Heathen Pollutions, and of all Heresies. They make 'em Socinians and Pelagians, because they agree with them in some Principles concerning Christ and Grace. They accuse 'em of sinning against the Holy Ghost; and what remains after this Accusation, since this Sin shall not be pardon'd neither in this World, or that to come? Each Religion ought to be attack'd in its Principles, without making a monstrous heap and combination of Heresies, which only serves to demonstrate the outrage and hatred of the Writer, and render the Persons he confutes odious instead of instructing and converting them.

XIV. A great Man has fancy'd, that the best expedient was to flatter their hopes. To be always telling the Jews † of a Messiah that is come, and was crucify'd by their Fathers, is cruelly to upbraid 'em and throw 'em into Despair. People seldom will attend to a harsh and unwelcome Truth, and the Mind that has nothing to hope is easily discourag'd. 'Tis a more sure and acceptable method, to tell 'em of the second coming of the Son of God, than of the first, because that which is past has afforded 'em nothing but Misery and Shame. The second must be glorious, and procure wonderful Prosperity to the Church. The Jews must have their share in't as well as we; why then should they not be flatter'd with so pleasing an expectation, and so agreeable to their Prejudices? Under this view it has been attempted to demonstrate, by the explication of the Prophecies, that the second coming of the Messiah is at hand. There are only thirty five Years to come of the 1260. mention'd by Daniel; and if we reckon Lunar Years, after the manner of the Chaldeans, as Daniel did, who liv'd in this Country, this Event must be accomplish'd in the Year 1716.

XV. This method appears so much the more necessary, as that without it the Prophecies of the Old Testament are imagin'd to be false and delusive. Let them tell us, in short, says a famous Author ‖, 'What are the Blessings the Jewish Na-'tion have receiv'd from the Messiah. For near 'two thousand Years this miserable Nation has 'been scatter'd over the Earth: 'Tis the Off-scou-'ring, the Curse, the Refuse of the World; and 'it groans under a long and cruel Captivity. So 'that this will happen; the day of Judgment will 'come, and the Jews will perish in their Mise-'ries! If this be so, certainly all the Prophecies 'are Delusions. The Holy Spirit has deceiv'd this 'Nation; all the Oracles are false, and God has 'fed 'em with vain hopes; for it would be mock-'ing God and our selves to say, That these Pro-'mises were accomplish'd in that small number of 'Jews that were converted to Christianity: Jewish 'Christians, such wretched Christians, that they 'have only serv'd to found a miserable Heresie and 'Sect, which they call Ebionites and Nazarenes. It 'will be said, doubtless, That the Jews shall find 'these great Promises accomplish'd, by their return 'and recal at the end of the World. And indeed, 'tis one of the Doctrines of true Christianity, that 'the Jews shall be re-call'd. 'Tis promis'd by a 'thousand Prophecies, some of which we have quo-'ted; the miraculous manner of God's preserving 'this Nation, in my mind is an invincible proof of 'it. For, in fine, 'tis an unpresidented and incom-'prehensible thing, that God for two thousand 'Years, should preserve this People dispers'd among 'the other Nations, without being confounded 'with 'em, without learning their Manners, their 'Religions and Customs, as is usual with all disper-'sed People: This clearly demonstrates, that God 'preserves 'em for some great design. But pray, 'supposing this, that the Jews shall be converted 'immediately after the end of the World comes, 'and they shall neither possess in themselves, nor 'in their Posterity, the glorious Advantages that 'are promis'd 'em, how shall they see the effects and 'accomplishment of so many Prophecies? Behold 'innumerable millions of Jewish Souls, that have 'been lost in the space of seventeen hundred Years; 'a small number only of this People shall be saved 'in the last Years of the World. In the Name of 'God, is this sufficient to fill up the great Ideas 'that are rais'd in them by the mighty Promises 'to their Nation? Moreover, it must be obsery'd, 'that the Messiah belongs to the Jews; that he 'was promis'd to the Jews; that this Nation from its

* Gregor. l. l. iv. Ep. 6. † Arcad. Cod. Theod. ‖ Balsamon in Nomocan. Phot. t. iv. p. 71. * Hulsii Theol. Judaicæ Pars 1. Præfat. † De Messiæ duplici adventu Diss. duæ contra Judæos, 1701. ‖ Jurieus Prophecies, t. 2. p. 205, 206, 207.

" its Infancy has been fed with the hopes of this " Messiah's coming, as of an happiness, so great as " could not be express'd or describ'd. Behold him " come, and this Nation, instead of the " accomplishment of these great promises, sees its " Temple burnt, its capital City raz'd, its Wor- " ship abolish'd, its Children dispers'd over all the " Universe, and made the Execration and Con- " tempt of mankind. And so this Messiah, the " glory of the Nation, brings 'em nothing but Shame " and Confusion, and infinite Miseries, such as " have no example in all the rest of the World. " For all their recompence, some thousand Jews " shall be found at the end of the World, who shall " be converted, and shall not be damn'd. I must " own that I understand nothing of the Conduct of " God and his Oracles, if this be so. A time then " must come, which shall be the reign of the Mes- " siah and the Jews, in which this Nation shall be " exalted, as has been promis'd, above all the Na- " tions, and it shall reign by its Saints, its Pro- " phets and Apostles. For otherwise, I am bold to " say, That all the Prophecies made to this People " were delusive, and were only given them for a " Snare.

'Tis to be fear'd that the Jew will wait the accomplishment of the Prophecy, and put off his Christianity till this miraculous coming of the Messiah. He will alledge too, that all Christians not being Millenarians, and the most part looking upon this visible arrival of Jesus Christ upon Earth, as an Imagination of Papias, a Man decried for the weakness of his judgment, he ought not to be converted by a prejudice peculiar only to some Divines.

XVI. Some endeavour likewise to remove the Scandal, which is given to Strangers, by the profound Mysteries of the Christian Religion. The Reformation shortens the way, because it rejects the Real Presence, and Transubstantiation, against which, Reason produces a Load of unconquerable Difficulties; but it is still far from its aim, since the Trinity, the Incarnation of the Word, and the Crucifixion of the Messiah, raise other exuberant sources of Objections. They fancy they ruin this prejudice in proving, That the Heathens have believ'd most part of these Mysteries; and from this Proof they draw this advantage against the Jews; that these Mysteries are not contrary to Reason, since they have been taught by Philosophers, that consulted it alone, without any respect to Revelation; or if Reason was not able to discover what God has done for the Salvation of Mankind, the Heathen must needs have plough'd with the Heifer of the Hebrews, and have learnt from their School, that there was a Word, that could assume our Nature; and if the Fathers of the Synagogue, who lived before our Saviour, were the Heathens Masters and Instructors concerning these Mysteries, their Posterity have no just pretence to reject them. I have handled this Subject very largely, in speaking of the Cabbala, and its Origin; and have espous'd a Side which probably will not please, since by rejecting this Method, we stop up an ever-flowing Fountain of Conjectures, and take away the liberty of vending a very dazling Erudition. It seems likewise, that we should not rob those of this Argument who think it a sound one, tho' it be otherwise. For how many of the Learned, think they do the Christian Religion an important service in maintaining, that Heathenism is indebted to the Jew and Christian, for all that it has great and fine in it? The Correspondence of their Ceremonies and Mysteries charm them, as if the Infinite Wisdom of God needed to be supported by the Authority of the natural man, who knows not the things of God.

XVII. The Criticks lend a helping hand; and one of 'em has lately boldly affirm'd, That Pythagoras knew the most saving Truths. Hierocles, his Disciple, was so far from affronting the divine Fountain of the Scriptures, that he has no where else drawn greater and more sublime Ideas, concerning the Nature of God, nor Principles more holy and conformable to the Truths of the Christian Religion. Nevertheless this Hierocles was neither an ingenious nor honest Man. 1. To render him ingenious, he is forc'd to strike out a Negative Particle from Suides's Text, who represents * this Philosopher, as a rambling Talker, who utter'd certain moral Maxims to his Scholars, without having an exact Knowledge. 2. He adds, that having injur'd the Governours of Byzantium, they caus'd him to be whipp'd till the Blood came, and banish'd him. This Philosopher must needs have violated the Laws, and affronted the Emperors † to merit the Whip; for the thing was transacted judicially, and he appear'd before the Judges Tribunal: And if by the Governors we understand the Christians, Hierocles had affronted the prevailing Religion; so far was he from making use of it, and transcribing it into his Writings. What Honour could accrue to Christianity from a Man of this Character, publickly stigmatiz'd, and no true Scholar?

'Tis moreover acknowledg'd, that Judea was unknown to the Heathen Philosophers, and that these Sages, who ran over all the World in pursuit of Knowledge, were never seen to come into the Holy Land, and enter into the Schools of the Prophets, who might have taught 'em in a few Hours, whatever was most profound and sacred in Religion. ' ‖ But Pythagoras, the chief of the Philoso- " phers, was instructed at Sydon by the Prophets, " Disciples of Moschus; that is, Moses. He went " from thence into Egypt, where the Jews * had " left some sparks of Wisdom, and tho' they were only " languid and dying Sparks, yet they suffic'd, being ga- " ther'd together by degrees, and cherish'd by good Wits " to make a considerable fire. Hence it came, that this Philosopher not only worshipped one God, the Creator of the Universe; but he discover'd that God had begotten a Son like himself, which Son the Heathens have call'd the Word of the Father, and have acknowledged, That this Word created and disposd the Universe. " † He taught, That Man being " free, he voluntarily draws upon himself all his " Miseries, by the unhappy use of his Liberty, and " his obstinate refusal to see the Goods that are " near him, and which God has put into his power: " And he understood how to reconcile this Liberty " of Man with the Providence of God; without " which reconciliation St. Austin affirms, we can " neither have a good Faith nor a good Life. ‖ Py- " thagoras was the first that brought the true Name " of God, with the Understanding of all the Pow- " er and Virtue of this Holy Name, which he " communicated to his Disciples under the Name " of the Quaternary; for Pythagoras's Quaternary is " nothing but the ineffable Name, or Jehovah of " the Hebrews. This Philosopher having learnt

* Suidas, p. 1224. Τὴν δὲ γνῶσιν ἀκριβεῖ, Mr. Dacier's Life of Hierocles, p. 2. c. cxlix. Translates it, He discover'd a profound and exact Knowledge; He strikes out non. † Suidas, ib. Περισπερχὼς τοῖς κρατοῦσιν. Mr. Dacier Translates it, He incurr'd the hatred. But περισπεῖν θεῷ in St. Chrysostom, who lived at that time, signifies, to offend God, and sin against him. Besides, what follows, makes it evident, that this was Suidas's meaning, for Suidas was cited before the Judges, Εἰς δικαστήριον ἀχθεὶς. ‖ Dacier, life of Pythagoras, p. xl. * Id. Pref. Id. ib. ‖ Life of Pythagoras. p. lvii.

" this

" this great Name, either by the Books of Moſes,
" by converſing with the Jews, and ſeeing that in " Hebrew it had juſt four Letters, tranſlated it in-
" to his Language by the number Four; and as a
" Teſtimony of this Truth, he gave the true Ex" plication of this Word as he had learnt it, and " as it is ſtill preſerv'd in the Golden Verſes of " Lyſis, this Philoſopher's firſt Diſciple and parti" cular Friend; for this Author explains it in the " plaineſt manner, calling the Quaternary the Foun- " tain of the ever-flowing Nature, which is nothing " but the Explication of the word Jehovah; which " properly ſignifies the Fountain of all created Beings.
" Had Pythagoras run into the Myſtery of Numbers,
" here had been a fair occaſion of boaſting of thoſe
" wondrous Chymera's of a Four, which has pro-
" duc'd all things by a vertue annex'd to this Num" ber, but none but the Succeſſors of theſe firſt
" Diſciples fell into theſe Viſions. Laſtly, if any " one abandon'd his Sect, they performed his Ob" ſequies, and erected a Tomb for him. * " Which
" the Greeks had borrow'd from the Hebrews,
" with whom this was a familiar cuſtom, as we " find by St. Paul's Expreſſion, who, ſpeaking of the " Widow that lived in Pleaſures, ſaid, ſhe is dead
while ſhe lives.

XVIII. The Divines, who think it their Intereſt to maintain their Religion by this Argument, have not fail'd to inforce it. They † have found the Trinity in the Oracles of the Chaldeans, which can't be attributed to the Chriſtians, ſince we find in 'em manifeſt Signs of Magick.

Παντὶ γὰρ ἐν κόσμῳ λάκτισι τειὰσὶς μόνας ἀρχει.

The Trinity ſhines in all the Univerſe, and is govern'd by the Unity. The Meſſiah appears alſo in the Writings of the Philoſophers; the very Fables may be accommodated to the ſacred Hiſtory. For moſt of the miraculous Events ſung by the Poets, have been drawn from the ſacred Books. Lot ‖ is Orpheus, whoſe Wife Euridice return'd to Heli, becauſe ſhe look'd behind her. This ſame Patriarch is Amphion, Husband to Niobe, who was turn'd into a Stone. He is moreover Lycaon, whoſe Cruelties drew down the Vengeance of Heaven. Laſtly, he is Æacus the Judge of Hell; ſome do the ſame Honour to the Prophet Elias. The Trojan War is the Hiſtory of Joſhua's Conqueſt of Canaan. Helena is * the Ark of the Covenant, which was taken and reſtor'd to the Iſraelites. Caſtor and Pollux were the Pillars of the Cloud and Fire, and Ilium ſignifies the City of God. Nay, Chriſtianity was alſo pictur'd in the Fables; for Ganymede †, who came into Hebe's place, and, in falling, had ſhewn her Nudities, is Jeſus Chriſt, who was ſent to repair the Offence of Eve, who fell by her own fault, and was aſham'd of her Nakedneſs.

XIX. This Argument may be driven as far as a Man pleaſes. Reaſon preſcribes no Bounds, becauſe 'tis never conſulted, when he follows his Imagination. And therefore the Learned diverſify their Conjectures according to their Genius and their readings. But can theſe ſort of Arguments, violently extorted from the Infidels, convince the Unbelievers? Rather thoſe who already believe, will perhaps begin to waver. At leaſt, it will require a great deal of time and a long Diſcuſſion, to know whether the Heathen Divinity agreed with ours. It will be long queſtion'd, whether there were Prophets, Succeſſors to Moſes at Sydon, a Heathen City, to teach Pythagoras; and whether the Faith of theſe incomprehenſible Myſteries, notwithſtanding the want of Revelation, was preſerv'd in Egypt, where they had nothing but Natural Religion. I queſtion whether the Iſraelites had diffus'd ſo great a light there during their Captivity; but I am aſſur'd, that in Pythagoras's time, there was nothing remaining but the Aſhes; and let this Philoſopher's Genius be never ſo great, it was not ſufficient to re-kindle theſe dead Aſhes, ſo as to diſcover the Word, the Son of God, who has created Heaven and Earth. Laſtly, the Jews, without amuſing themſelves about the Notions of the Heathens, will ſtill re-aſcend to the Fountain-head, and deſire ſome Proofs, that their Anceſtors have believ'd the Trinity of Perſons, and the Incarnation of the Word, the Son of God; for if this Doctrine has not been clearly taught by the Prophets, 'twas impoſſible for the Heathens to extract theſe profound Myſteries from 'em. 'Tis therefore only to be drawn from Scripture. We have ſaid enough of this Method, which abundance of great Men have eſpous'd. The reſpect we have for 'em, does not forbid us to examin their Conjectures, and to believe they do not ſerve the Chriſtian Religion by 'em ſo much as is imagin'd.

XX. We flatter the Jews more agreeably by entring into their Cabbala. For a Chriſtian Cabbaliſt generally prepoſſeſſes them in his Favour. They ſedately liſten to him, whilſt that inſtead of fixing to the Body of Scripture, he is content to ramble like themſelves after Shadows. And therefore ſome Chriſtians ‖ have thought that they have conſiderably ſerved the Church, by diſcovering the Sephiroths in the Lord's Prayer, and proving that Jeſus Chriſt hereby made a cloſe advance to the Jews, as if he had borrow'd their Principles as well as their Expreſſions; or rather as if theſe vain Imaginations were as antient as they would make us believe. They boaſt much of the Converſions of Salomon Meir de Navarre, call'd Proſper Roger after his Baptiſm, for he brought over many Families by his Example. But, beſides, he converted one of his moſt cruel Enemies, by diſputing with him about the Point of a Letter.

XXI. Others beat the Jews with their own Weapons, and extract ſeveral Sentences from the Talmud, to prove, That the Rabbins have taught ſome of the Truths of Chriſtianity. This was the deſign of the Ponyard of Faith, which Galatin has tranſcrib'd *, and ſo many other Books loaden with Rabbinical Citations; this Method, tho' tireſome, has a great many followers, for the Doctors Works afford us many ſurprizing things; as for example, Simeon Jochaides, Author of the Zohar, quotes a Rabbin, more antient than himſelf, call'd, Ibba, who commenting on theſe Words, The Lord our God is one Lord; obſerves, that the Name of God is thrice repeated. 1. The incommunicable Name Jehovah, יהוה is the Father, the Prince of all. 2. The Name Elohim, אלהים is the Son, the Fountain of all Sciences. 3. The ſecond Jehovah is the Holy Spirit, proceeding from theſe two, which is the meaſure of the Voice. 4. He calls him one God, אחד becauſe he is undivided: But this Myſtery ſhall not be reveal'd till the Meſſiah's time. Moreover he calls theſe three Perſons, the three Lights, the three Mirrors, the three ſupreme Fathers, without beginning and without end; the Name, the Subſtance, the Root of Roots: A Chriſtian, one would think, could not ſpeak more clearly of the Trinity †. But this method is abus'd; for the Rabbins are often made to ſay what they never meant, and at moſt theſe are Words only eſcap'd unawares, and reduc'd to Chriſtianity by Conſequences againſt the Author's deſign. Thus, for inſtance, a Man || of prodigious Reading ſays, That ſeveral Paſſages may be drawn from R. Bechay's Books; tho' it was not his deſign to favour us, but on the contrary, he continually falls upon the Chriſtians, and barks with that violence againſt them, that they have been oblig'd to blot out of the laſt Editions thoſe Outrages the firſt were full of. Of what uſe are Paſſages urg'd againſt the Author's meaning, to prove he believes what he never did believe? Beſides, the Rabbins often complain of our fathering upon 'em things they don't believe. Jacob, the Son of Amram, in a Manuſcript Piece, intitled, The Gate of Truth, laughs at the Chriſtians that draw Proofs of the Trinity out of the Cabbala. For, ſays he *, the Cabbaliſts conceal under the exterior part of the Letter, Myſteries that the Vulgar can't diſcover. The Divines have no deſign to teach the Unity of God, and to explain his Attributes; and he muſt be a Fool that ſeeks the Trinity among 'em.

* Id. p. xlvii. † Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſias, p. iii. c. 6. p. 778. Fown's Triſagion, Book 1. & 2. c. 2. Edwards the Truth of the Scripture, c. 5, 6, &c. p. 1. p. 150, 193. Bochart. Hierozicon. Huet Demonſtratio Evang. ‖ Hulſii Melchiſedecus una cum parente, p. 278. * p. 268. † p. 248. ‖ See the Cabbala denudata. * See alſo Du Pleſſis Mornay, Advice to the Jews, eſpecially, ch. 1. p. 75. † Ibid.

XXII. The ſureſt Method is, to ſummon the Jews to the Oracles of the Prophets; but then we muſt confine our ſelves to a ſmall number that are clear. For indeed, all the Prophecies that are quoted do not ſpeak of the Meſſiah. People force and wreſt 'em, and thereby give an advantage to the Enemies of the Truth, who are vers'd in the reading of the Sacred Books, when they perceive 'em to wander from the drift of the Prophet. Of what uſe is the number and heaps of Paſſages, but to overwhelm the Reader? By the deſultory Tranſition from one Argument to another, a Man diſcovers a ſecret miſtruſt of the Solidity of the firſt. All Proofs are not equally ſtrong, and the Adverſary, who gladly ſees you multiply 'em, fixes to that which is leaſt ſound. And ſo commonly, by indeavouring to carry your Victory too far, you loſe it, and the Enemy triumphs over the bad Reaſons he is attack'd with. The Fathers were guilty of this Fault. Juſtin Martyr has loaded his Dialogue againſt Tryphon with ſeveral things, which inſtead of convincing a Jew, don't affect a Chriſtian. Tertullian †, with his ſtrong imagination, and hyperbolical method, was not fit to perſuade this Nation; he is even groſly miſtaken about the ſtrongeſt Prophecy, in beginning the Calculation of Daniel's Weeks from the firſt Year of Darius. St. Chryſoſtom, and Baſil of Seleucia, were improper Preachers to convince the Unbelievers, becauſe they follow'd the Raptures of an Eloquence that was fitter to move the Paſſions, than to cure the Errors of the Underſtanding. The former amuſes himſelf in proving, that Moſes has ſpoke of 'em, when he ſays, that Jeſurun waxed fat and kicked. By the help of this Oracle, he compares them to Horſes, coming from too fat a Paſture, which grow reſty, and will not be manag'd by the Coachman. And by the aſſiſtance of another Paſſage of Hoſea ||, he aſſures 'em, that they are brute Beaſts, who being no longer capable of ploughing the Land, are only fit to be kill'd as Victims. The Jews Miſeries render'd the application of theſe Oracles very eaſie; but was it juſt? And did the Prophets mean to ſignifie the time of the Meſſiah? The Eloquence certainly prevails much above the Reaſon.

XXIII. Can we alſo fancy it very eaſie to convert a Jew, by amuſing our ſelves with the ſearch of Chriſtianity in theſe Words of Iſaiah? * I will bring forth a ſeed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains, and mine elect ſhall inherit it: But ye are they that forſake the Lord, that forget my holy mountain, therefore will I number you to the ſword; for the Lord God ſhall ſlay thee, and call his ſervants by another name. The Mountains, ſays one, are the Apoſtles, elevated in the midſt of the World, and viſible like the high Mountains. God's Elect are the Laymen, or the reſt of the Faithful. Jeſus Chriſt is the holy Mountain they forget. It is † mention'd in the ſingular, becauſe it is more excellent than the reſt. God threatens Iſrael to ſlay him, becauſe he has rejected Jeſus Chriſt, to deprive him of all hope; for there's no return for the Dead, but he will call his ſervants by another name, becauſe thoſe that are converted ſhall change their Name, and be call'd Chriſtians. The Paſſion the Fathers had for the Chriſtian Religion, cannot excuſe 'em, for Zeal is no farther commendable, than as it is enlighten'd and accompany'd with Knowledge. But if the Fathers of the Church are blameable, what ſhall we ſay of the Divines, who live in a more refin'd Age, and yet run after Phantoms of their own Imagination, and neglect or condemn the Antients, tho' they err more groſly than they in the Interpretation of Scripture?

XXIV. We ought to inſiſt upon what is moſt eaſie to be prov'd, which is what is moſt commonly neglected. Andronicus || fancies, there was no better expedient to convince the Jews, than to let 'em know, That there is one God, whom the Beaſts acknowledge, and who has begot a Son. However, this is the moſt dangerous method of all; the Jews are to be firſt taught, that the Meſſiah is come, before it be prov'd, that he is God. Anaſtaſius * troubles his Head to tell 'em, That they muſt worſhip Images; and urges as a Reaſon for it, their Adoration of the Book of the Law, which is made of Skins and Leather; or the having worſhipt the Golden Calf, and the Image of Nebuchadnezzar. The Council of Nice committed the ſame Fault. Thus, when People are bigotted to a particular Doctrine, they make it a capital Point of Religion; they are eager and violent to prove it, and think they have done all, when they have inforc'd it upon the Enemies of their Religion, tho' it be only an incident and a particular Controverſie, which diſguſts and ſcandalizes, inſtead of gaining the Mind; for we know the Jews extreme averſion for Images; they do not trouble their Heads about the Controverſies of Grace and Free-will, and matter not, whether we be Pelagians or Semi-Pelagians. As they know not the Holy Spirit, they are little acquainted with his Operations and invincible Efficacy, which was not well known by the Chriſtians till St. Auſtin. And yet a Spaniard † has fancy'd he did Wonders, in beginning his Diſputes with 'em by the Subjects of Free-will and Grace.

XXV. An Italian || began with Original Sin, and proceeds from thence to all the leaſt Circumſtances, of our Saviour's Life, and all the Articles of the Chriſtian Religion. He inſults the Jews upon Jeſus Chriſt's being born of a Virgin, and maintains, That he found in their own Writings, how one day Simeon, to elude Iſaiah's Prophecy, went to blot out the H from his Book, which began the Word Halmah, that he might hereby change the Virgin into a young Woman; but he could not effect it, becauſe an inviſible Hand reſtor'd the H thrice over, and it continu'd, whether he would or no, in the Edition he was making; as if there was a Printing-Preſs at that time: The cutting off the H, upon which the Story is founded, removes only

|| Bartol. B. R. t. 1. p. 805. * Jacob Ben Amram, MS. apud Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſiah, p. iii. c. 4. p. 190. † Tertull. adv. Judæos, t. 8. p. 165. || Hoſ 4. 16. Chryſoſt. Hom. 34. adv. Judæos 1. p. 388. t. 1. * Iſaiah 65. 9, 11, 12, 15. † Alphonſi Dial. tit ii. B. p. t. xxi. p. 187. || Andronicus Dial. contra Judæos, c. 2, 3, 4. apud Caniſ. t. viii. p. 268. * Anaſtaſ. Abbas contra Judæos, ib. t. iii. p 134. † Petrus de Cevallaria. || Joannes Maria Vincenti, Il Meſſia Venuto. 'Tis a Volume containing a hundred Sermons; the Author was a Venetian; 'twas printed at Venice in 1659.

the

the Aspiration, but changes not the Signification of the Word. But besides, he imposes on the Jews, and this is not to be found in any of their Writings. He makes Josephus and Lactantius say ‖ a thing which could not happen till Justinian. He absurdly quotes Hegesippus and Tertullian, who have not mention'd this Miracle. He adds, That the Roman History affords a Proof of Jesus Christ's being born of a Virgin, which can't be suspected, since it was ingraven in very antient Characters. Which was, that according to St. Thomas, a Monument was found in the Empire of Constantine and his Mother Helena, in 1283. with these Words engraven on it, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, shall be born of the Virgin Mary, and I believe in him, O Sun! thou shalt see me once more. Another Stone was found in Castile, with these Characters written upon it. The Son of God shall be born of the Virgin Mary, and shall suffer for the Salvation of Men. Are not these convincing Proofs? Let us only observe the gross Blunders that are made in this History. He observes, that it was in Constantine and Helena's Reign; whereas it could not happen till the Reign of Irene and her Son; and, properly speaking, Helena never reign'd with her Son. What Ignorance, to place Constantine the Great in the Year 1283? 'Tis somewhat less, in respect of Constantine the Son of Irene; for the fault of Chronology is but five hundred Years, but the other is above nine. Thomas Aquinas, who is quoted as the Voucher of all these Errors, spoke of Irene.

XXVI. Father Kirker surpriz'd all the Learned of Rome, by decyphering another Inscription, concerning the Birth of the Virgin. A Monk found it, said he, * near Mount Horeb, where Moses saw God in the burning Bush, and having brought it to Rome, it was presented to Kirker, who knew none of the Characters; because indeed, it seems they were Figures made at pleasure. However, he made his Prayers to God, and by the help of an Oraison, he found these Words, God shall cause a Virgin to conceive. Returning a second time to the Examination, he discover'd this Addition, which had escap'd him at first, and she shall bring forth a Son. When Father Kirker and his Admirers were ask'd, What these Characters were, and how he could so perfectly decypher 'em? He could give no reason for it; for indeed there was none. And a Man might discover in these Hieroglyphicks what he pleas'd. Nevertheless, he was highly complimented upon this useful Discovery against the Jews †

XXVII. Let us add a word or two more concerning the Birth of Christ. Is it not very clearly prov'd to the Enemies of Christianity, by telling 'em, † That God has corrected all things by their Contraries; and that as he made Eve by means of a Man, without the conjunction of a Woman, it was necessary to produce Jesus Christ by a Virgin without the conjunction of a Man? Is it not also a very sensible Demonstration of this Truth, which is drawn from Minerva coming out of Jupiter's Head; of Bacchus being born without Mother; of Vulcan, whom Juno brought into the World without any commerce with a God? and of Venus, that sprung from the Froth of the Sea? It looks as if a Man took pleasure to expose his Religion to the Insults of its Enemies. Nevertheless, the same Author affirms ‖, that God has intimated, that the Messiah should be crown'd with Thorns, because when he told Adam, that the Earth should produce Thorns; the Earth answer'd, It shall be for thee Lord, and second Adam, I shall produce Thorns wherewith thou shalt be pierced. If Isaiah foretels, That the People shall produce Waters from this Fountain of Deliverance, or from this salutary Fountain, he puts the Messiah there, and quotes another Latin Version, which substitutes the crucify'd for the Messiah. Lastly, He proves Transubstantiation to the Jews by the Testimony of the Rabbins. People expose the Christian Religion to horrid Insults, when they take such Methods as these, and offer such insignificant Proofs. This Man was not the only Person, for Galatin † had given him an Example; and tho' he was much esteem'd, till he was perceiv'd to be a Plagiary, yet he begins his Proofs also by the Trinity; and he proceeds to shew the Jews the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin; and maintains, That it was for the love of Mary and her Son, that God created the World, because he well knew, that neither of 'em would be defil'd by Original Sin. Lastly, He proves to 'em, That the Bread of the Eucharist is turn'd into Flesh, and that the Wine also is invisibly converted into Blood, by the Testimony of the Rabbins, who would be strangely astonish'd to see themselves appeal'd to, if the Dead had any knowledge of what is done under the Sun; but if the Dead are ignorant of it, the Living laugh at it.

XXVIII. 'Tis easier to observe the defect of the Methods that are taken, and of the Proofs that are produc'd, than to give others that are more solid and effectual. The Conversion of this People is a difficult Work; and 'tis not always the Converters fault if they don't succeed. This Nation concentring in it self, and full of Contempt for the rest of Mankind, which seems to have run in their Blood for almost innumerable Ages, can't resolve with themselves to give an Ear to Strangers, or to read their Books. People have little Correspondence with 'em. Conferences are rare and dangerous, because 'tis hard to be so perfect a Master of the Hebrew Tongue, as to dispute with those who are accustom'd to speak it, and to answer ex tempore to the Difficulties they draw from the Signification and Sense they give certain Words. It seems also, that God reserves 'em for a general Conversion, which can't be wrought but by an extraordinary direction of Providence and Grace.

XXIX. Nevertheless, as we ought to endeavour the Conversion of particular Persons, till the general Call shall come, and God does not reject the ordinary means, we ought to employ 'em in favourable Opportunities.

First, We must prove to 'em, that the Messiah is come. This is their weak part. Read all the Conferences that have been held, and the different Works that have been publish'd against 'em, and you will easily observe, that they can't answer the Prophecies that have fix'd the time of the Messiah's coming, nor give any reason of that so long delay, and of that hideous Misery they are involv'd in. Let us not insult their Misfortunes. Christianity ought to inspire us with Compassion for the Miserable, but the ruin of their Temple, to which God had fix'd their Religion, is a Proof, that the Ceremonies and Sacrifices were to cease. The Wise God would not have forbidden them to sacrifice any where else but at the Temple of Jerusalem, or would not have suffer'd his Temple to have lain wast for so many Ages, if he had design'd the Sacrifices should have been always offer'd, and that the Ceremonies of the Law should never end. Besides, we have all the advantage in this particular; for the Prophecies which denote the time of the Messiah's appearance, are precise. There is no eluding that of Jacob, but by vain Subtleties. There has been no Scepter nor Lawgiver in Israel for sixteen Centuries. Shorten as much as you please the Persian Monarchy, yet it is still true, that Daniel's seventy Weeks have been long since accomplish'd. The Accomplishment of Prophecies, that specifie determinate time, don't depend upon the Sins or Repentance of the People; because the Wisdom of God, which foresaw this Impenitence, must at the same time have foreseen and noted the delay it would be oblig'd to make. Eternal Wisdom does not thus com-promise with Human Corruption, nor make his Faithfulness depend upon the good or bad Disposition of Men. By uniting Daniel and Haggai's Prophecies, we make a Demonstration concerning the Manifestation of the Messiah, to which nothing rational can be reply'd. If the Jew acknowledges the Messiah to be come, we may pass on to other Doctrines; but if he disowns this Truth, 'tis in vain to prolong the Dispute; for he will not admit the other parts of Christianity if he rejects this, and tho' he should receive 'em, they would be useless to him, without the Knowledge of the Messiah.

* Disc. 22. * Kirker Prodrom. Copt. c. 8. † Fabian. Fioghi Introduttione alla Fide, c. 42. ‖ Vincenti il Messia Venuto. † Disc. 25. p. 237. Disc. 26. Isaiah 12 3. Disc. 63. Es. † Galat. de Arcan. l. 2. c. 1 l. lxvii. c. 2, 3. l. x c. 6. p. 662.

XXX. When this Foundation is laid, the next thing to be examin'd is, Where this Messiah is that has appear'd, and has fill'd up the Characters the Prophets have given of this Redeemer. The Jews acknowledge, that their whole History affords no Person invested with all these Characters. The Christian alone shews a Messiah, that was born, and taught, and dy'd at the time specify'd by the Prophets. A Messiah that suffers and reigns; who has his Humiliation and Glory. One of the most violent Prejudices of the Jews, is the Temporal Prosperity they annex to the Messiah's Manifestation. They will not easily discover this Redeemer in Jesus Christ, whilst their Thoughts are all turn'd towards a Temporal Kingdom, and the Conquests he must make. And therefore we must assault this Prejudice, which is fortify'd by Self-love, and make two things appear. 1. That the Prophets have so lively describ'd the Messiah's Humiliation, that the Doctors have been forc'd to imagin two, one miserable and the other glorious. These two Characters, which the Prophets ascribe to one individual Person, meet in our Saviour Christ. 2. This Union of Characters grows more manifest, when instead of a transitory Glory, we * give the Messiah a spiritual and heavenly Reign, and extend his Empire over Souls, Hell and Death.

The Jews will readily agree with us in three things. 1. That Spiritual and Eternal Graces are more excellent than those which relate to the Body and the present Life. 2. And since they attribute to the Deliverer of the Nation whatever can be imagin'd most noble and great, they are oblig'd to confess, that the most glorious part of his Empire consists in the Redemption of Souls, and in the Conquests he shall make over the Devil by the Conversion of Nations. 3. They can't deny, but they have need of spiritual Graces; and therefore they ought to seek a Messiah that bestows them. The Author of the Jerusalem Targum, paraphrasing these Words of dying Jacob; I have waited for thy Salvation, O Lord, interprets them thus: I don't wait for the Redemption of Gideon, the Son of Joas, because that is a temporal Salvation. I don't wait for the Redemption of Samson, for that is a transient Salvation: But I wait for the Redemption of the Messiah, the Son of David, who shall come to bring the Children of Israel to himself; my Soul desires him, and waits for his Salvation. Jacob's hopes of the Messiah were Spiritual; and since Jesus Christ bestows these Spiritual Graces, which are more excellent than the transitory Redemption of Gideon and Samson, he has fully answer'd the true Character given him by the Prophets, and the Misery he has suffer'd, correspondent to their Prediction, ought not to hinder any one from embracing him.

XXXI. By comparing the Gospel with the Writings of the Old Testament, we find in the one those toothings which promis'd a new Edifice, and in the other that Edifice that fills up the whole Idea of the antient Architect, and from hence we conclude, it is the same God that was the Author of the Old and New Testament; in the one God promises, and in the other he performs; in the one he gives the Idea of a future Messiah, and in the other he produces this Messiah he had signify'd in the Types and Ceremonies of the Law.

We must prove the Divine Authority of the Gospel, before we ingage in the particulars of other Controversies; for whilst you establish a Trinity of Persons, the Word, and his Incarnation, by the Testimony of Heathens, and some Rabbins, you only shock the Mind of Man. All that, at most, is but a probability incapable of producing Faith, which they inwardly reject, even tho' they are silent; or else they refer it to an examination which they never make. These are foreign and weak Defences, but those drawn from the Gospel are powerful to the casting down of strong Holds, and of every Thought that exalts it self against the knowledge of God. Whilst you dispute, by the Authority of the Doctors, which you don't believe your self, you only glance upon the Controversie, and the Mind rebels against that uncertain Authority instead of yielding to it. But whilst you prove from the Accomplishment of the old Prophecies, that the New Testament is divinely inspir'd, like the Old, and that 'tis the same God who has dictated both; or that the Messiah, whom we worship, is that which the Prophets have promis'd, the other Controversies, which divide us from the Jews, fall of themselves, because 'tis easie to prove these Doctrines by the Gospel.

XXXII. The Conversion of the Jews would be much easier, if they had less respect for the Talmud. Being opinionated, That there is nothing Good but among themselves, they neglect our Books and Authors. They neither know the Christian Religion, nor the Foundation on which it is built. They feed themselves with false Notions, and shut their Eyes against the most certain Truths. They have not so much as any Relish for 'em. The way to rectifie their deprav'd Taste, would be to render their Writings more publick than they are. The generality of the Rabbinical Works being veil'd under a strange Language, are not expos'd to the Judgment of the Publick. Those who translate any part of 'em, take care to Preface them with mighty Eulogies, to conceal their Infirmities, and to set off all the Passages which have any relation to the Christian Religion. The Reader doth not take these Books in hand but with a favourable Prepossession and profound Respect, as if they came from a Sacred Place. The Jew's Veneration is redoubled for the Writings which his most dangerous Enemies esteem; whereas, if these Books were unvail'd and laid open, and put into every bodies hands, the Veneration for 'em would insensibly fall to the ground. The Doctors would be made sensible of the ridiculousness of their Works, and perhaps might be accustom'd to have other thoughts

* Vid. Du Plessis Advice to the Jews, cap. 1. & 6.

Tis

'Tis harder than is imagin'd, to redreſs a Mind that is corrupted by falſe Maxims and bad Principles. But when theſe Principles are corrected, and their Prejudices deſtroy'd, Truth makes its entrance into the Heart, and more eaſily perſuades.

Perhaps there were never ſeen ſuch a number of Men learned in the Oriental Tongues as there are at preſent. Inſtead of complaining of their Negligence, we ought to give 'em the Eulogies they deſerve, ſince many important Works have already appear'd tranſlated, and more are promis'd. Hereby the World will be able to judge of the Character of the Rabbins, and of the Interpretation they give the Scripture; and from hence it will be eaſie to draw Conſequences againſt the Doctrines and Religion they defend. Theſe Learned Men ought not to complain, that their Glory will be leſſen'd by making their Erudition too common. There ought to be no Myſtery in the Sciences; a Treaſure that is hoarded and never made uſe of is good for nothing. We muſt, according to the Counſel of the Wiſe Man, open the Sources, and let the Rivulets run into Publick Places, that he that is thirſty may buy without Money, and quench his Thirſt. This Character of Diſtinction, which a profound skill in Hebrew gives a Man, is loſt with his Life; but the Works, which ſubſiſt after death, immortalize his Name. The Publick is indebted to thoſe that ſerve it, and the Acknowledgment is proportion'd to the Advantages Religion reaps from 'em. I confeſs, the Jew will intrench himſelf in his Hebrew, and pretend to ſalve the Honour of his Religion and Doctors by the ſtrength of the Original Terms; but this will be a miſerable Extremity, and the Conviction will be the eaſier wrought, when he ſhall be reduc'd to cavil upon the ambiguity of a Word; beſides, as the Viſions of the Doctors are innumerable, they can conceal but a ſmall part of 'em by the help of theſe Conteſts, and the reſt will appear in all their Nakedneſs. The Chriſtian will talk with greater Aſſurance, when he ſhall have numerous Proofs in his Hand; and the Jew, attack'd in ſo many ſenſible Parts, by which his Maſters Illuſion is diſcover'd, will have leſs Courage and Reſolution to reſiſt. But, in reality, there are only external means, and God alone knows the time when he will recal this Elect Nation.

The Extract of a Letter which was writ by Mr. Cuper (formerly one of the Deputies of the States-General, and Deputy Extraordinary from their High-Mightineſſes to the Army, Bourghmaſter of* Deventer*) to Mr.* Baſnage, containing ſeveral Remarks upon his Hiſtory of the Jews, and particularly about an Impoſtor, who tries to prove by Miracles, that the Meſſiah, Zabathai Tzevi, is ſtill living.

SIR,

Since you are pleas'd with the Remarks I ſent you, upon your Hiſtory of the Jews, and ſince you think them good, give me leave to add theſe.

BOOK III. Page 238. You find two Mothers of the Gods in the Inſcription at Lyons, viz. the old, and the new, or Fauſtina Wife to Antoninus Pius. I confeſs, that the exceſſive Flattery of the Romans might warrant the application of this Title to Fauſtina, becauſe we find in ſome Medals ſtamp'd after her Conſecration, Matri Magnæ, or Deum Salutari; yet I do not conceive that ſhe may be found in this Inſcription. The Learned Men, who publiſh'd it, explain theſe particular Letters, Matris Deum Magnæ Idææ Dicæ; and a little after, Ex Imperio Matris Dicæ Deum. Thus Mr. Groſ. de Boze explains this, and alſo contends, that, Deam Diam is the Mother of the Gods. But Philip de la Tour, the learned Biſhop of Adria, proves, at the 101ſt pag. of his Antiquities of Antium, that it is Juno; and that appears clearly from the Inſcriptiones Fratrum Arvalium; although I ſee no reaſon why this Title might not have been given in other Places to the Mother of the Gods.

The ſame Prelate ſays, in a Letter which I had the honour to receive from him, That the I and D ought to be join'd together, and make Idææ; and afterwards he explains the D. Deum, Deæ Deum, becauſe Arnobius ſpeaks after that manner, Prius illa ſolemniter, quæ in Matris infertur Sanctum Deæ: and I have ſometimes thought, that Dindymenæ might be made of it. For you know, the Heathens fancy'd, that their Gods were pleas'd with a great many Names, or with Polyonomy. Gruterus's Inſcription confirms my Conjecture. For the Letters are therein in this order;

M. D. M.
I. D.
ATILIANA.
Matri Deum Magnæ Idææ Dindymenæ.

Beſides, the Term Matri Deum may be repeated twice there, becauſe the Taurobolium, belong'd to her; and ſhe had perhaps commanded Criſpus in a Dream to offer her this Sacrifice. Laſtly, the Title of Novæ Matri Deum would have been put there, had it been deſign'd for Fauſtina. However, Mr. Gros de Boze is of your Opinion, at the 11th Page of his Explanation.

Pag. 239. You ſpeak of Ptolomæus Phyſco, and ſay, that it was an Affront to this King of Egypt, to put his Belly in Medals, at which Scipio and the Roman Ambaſſadors laugh'd ſo heartily: And yet it was ſtamp'd upon a Medal. The Sirname of φυσκων is upon one of his Medals; and la Carry, a Jeſuit, mentions this in his Series Regum Ægypti. But, Sir, he was miſtaken in this; For ſuch Medals are not genuine, as that whereupon you find ΑΑΘΟΥΡΟΥ & ΑΥΑΗΤΟΥΣ, and therefore you have none of them in the Hiſtory of the Kings of Egypt, put out by Mr. Vaillant, and this famous Author hath been herein wiſer than his Predeceſſors.

You have inlarg'd very much upon the falſe Meſſiahs of the Jews. But I deſire you to determine, why Abulpharages † gives the Title of Luminum to him who appear'd under Trajan, and whom you call Andreas. Theſe Names are very different, and I do not apprehend the reaſon of their being alter'd. Victor ‖ relates, That there was an Inſurrection of the Jews in the Reign of Conſtantius, & interea, Judæorum ſeditio, qui patricium nefarie in regni ſpeciem ſuſtulerant, oppreſſa. True it is, that he doth not give Patricius the Title of Meſſiah; however, I don't doubt but the Jews look'd upon him as the King they expected. The Name of Patricius, is perhaps form'd out of a Hebrew Word, to ſuit it to the Roman Cuſtom, a thing which I deſire you'll examin.

---

* In 1706. † Dyn. p. 76. ‖ In Cæſaribus.

the

You are not, undoubtedly, inform'd of the Folly of the Eaſtern Jews; who, at this day maintain, That Zabathai Tzevi is ſtill living; and that he is to deliver the People of Iſrael out of Bondage. This I have from Smyrna, and I communicate it to you, that you may make uſe of it.

About three Months ago, * a Jew was baniſh'd out of this City by the Cady, or Governour and Supreme Judge. This Baniſhment hath occaſion'd a great diſturbance among the Jews, by reaſon of Zabathai Tzevi. You know, that he pretended to be the Meſſiah; and that he abjur'd his Religion, turn'd Mahometan, and thirty ſix or thirty ſeven Years ago, † loſt his Head by order of Sultan Mahomet. Notwithſtanding this, Daniel Iſrael aſſerts, that this pretended Meſſiah is not dead, but lies hid ſomewhere, whence he ſhall not come out, till he hath been there forty five Years. This Jew is not one of the Rabbins, or Cacams, but one of thoſe call'd Readers, or Interpreters of the Holy Scripture. He grounds Zabathai Tzevi's Retirement for that time upon the Prophecy of Daniel, which ſays, that 1290 Days ſhall paſs from the aboliſhing of the Sacrifice, that is, 1290 Years; and that then the Meſſiah ſhall appear to deliver his People with an out-ſtretched Arm, and a ſtrong Hand. Beſides, he makes uſe of Prodigies to confirm his Aſſertion. When he is in Company, or at Table, he draws back, and moves with wonderful rapidity. He raiſes himſelf in the Air, and cries out with a loud Voice in Hebrew, I have heard, and my Belly is diſturbed at it.

Whilſt he utters theſe Words, a Globe of Fire appears behind him, ſuſpended in the Air, and moves as Daniel moves, till he alters his Poſture, and turns his Face towards the Standers by. For then the Globe diſappears, and Daniel ſays aloud; The Lord is King; the Lord is King; he ſhall reign always and for ever.

The Holy Name of God is ſeen written in Hebrew Letters, in the Globe of Fire, and upon the Breaſt of this Jew; and above this Holy Name is a Crown ſeen. But all theſe things vaniſh in a moment, and he afterwards introduces a more amazing Impoſture.

Daniel deſires one of the Spectators to withdraw, and to think upon ſome difficult Queſtion; and then to write it upon a piece of Paper, of about the bigneſs of the Palm of the Hand, to fold it ſeveral times, to keep it cloſe and ſeal'd in his Hand, and reveal to no body what he hath writ: and he boaſts, that the Anſwer ſhall be fairly written in that Paper. If he will not give himſelf the trouble to ſeal the Paper, he will not anſwer, becauſe his Art would not appear ſo much without a Seal.

When what he deſires is comply'd with, he orders ſeveral Places of Scripture, as whole Pſalms and Chapters to be read. Sometimes part of it is read and read over again; then Daniel lifting up his Eyes towards Heaven, and ſpreading his Arms, repeats the Words in the Paper ſeal'd and kept cloſe, and in the ſame Order they are ſet down. He cries, from time to time, Jarad, ירד, He is come down; and names from time to time the Letter, which he pretends is deſcended into the ſeal'd Paper. He doth the ſame thing, till all the Letters which are to form the Anſwer, be deſcended in the Hand of him who hath propos'd the Queſtion. He alſo receives theſe Letters in his Hand, doth proteſt that he finds a ſtruggling in his Hand, as if theſe Letters were forc'd in. He afterwards opens his Hand, and the Writing is unſeal'd, and there the Letters are found in the ſame Order as Daniel ſaid aloud; and each is an Initial Letter, and is the beginning of the Words which compoſe the Anſwer.

As for Inſtance, theſe Hebrew Characters were once found in it ב ל ה ר ה א These Words are taken from the 5th ch. verſ. 1. of the Proverbs, and ſignifie, My Son attend unto my Wiſdom, and bow thine ear to my underſtanding; and theſe Words were the Anſwer to the Queſtion. He draws the Admiration of the Jews by ſuch Artifices. He is not only favourably heard and follow'd by the Crowd, but alſo approv'd and vindicated by the Rabbins. Abraham Michael Raphael Cordoſo, a Doctor of Phyſick, very famous among the Circumcis'd in Candia, hath openly declar'd for him. They ſay here (at Smyrna) that Daniel Iſrael is no Magician, but one inſpir'd by the Holy Ghoſt, and impower'd by him to work Miracles. His Followers believe that Zabathai Tzevi is ſtill living, and ſhall appear ſhortly. Nay, many celebrate the Day of his Nativity, which is the 26th of Kiſlew, or the 18th of December; they then greatly rejoyce, and drink ſeveral Bumpers, crying out, Long live Sultan Tzevi.

This Myſtery was a long time conceal'd, but it is come out at laſt, by the Jews being divided upon it. For part of their Learned Men have oppoſed Daniel Iſrael, as an Impoſtor who ſeduc'd the People. Their Remonſtrances to the Cady were ſo weighty, that he hath expell'd him out of this City, and condemn'd his Adherents to a Fine of 315 Crowns. Theſe laſt offered the Cady a greater Sum to have his Protection: Yet notwithſtanding Money doth every thing with the Turks, he durſt not harbour Daniel Iſrael, becauſe he was afraid of the Ottoman Court, and of the ſequel of this Buſineſs. Mr. Heyman's Abſence hath hinder'd him from examining it with his uſual exactneſs. He had reſolv'd to go to Daniel, who retir'd to a little Town call'd Caſſaba, ſituate in the Valley of Magneſia, upon the River Hermus, towards the Frontier of Dourgoutley, where Cotton grows. But it is thought, that this Impoſtor will return hither, when this Cady ſhall be out of his Government, and one more favourable to him ſhall come in his Room; and this ſhall happen within theſe ſix Months.

This was writ to me from Smyrna ſome Years ago. But I am now inform'd that this Comedy is over †. The hopes of the Jews are quite blaſted, becauſe Doctor Michael Raphael Cordoſo hath been ſtabb'd at Grand Cairo by his Son-in-law: It is ſaid, that it was out of Jealouſie. The Murderer is fled into one of the Moſques of the City, called Scamy Ellazar; and all thoſe who come into it either voluntarily, or through neceſſity, muſt turn Mahometans. Daniel Iſrael is ſtill here, but ſince the Misfortune of his Protector, he hath not his uſual Agitations. The Globe of Fire doth not now appear, and this Impoſtor is thought to be wholly deſtroy'd. I have been with Cordoſo at Grand Cairo, and he often ſpoke

* Firſt Letter, writ by the Baron de Hoch epied, Conſul at Smyrna, the 6th. in the Year 1703. tranſlated from the Dutch. † See Hiſtory of the Jews. ‖ ריחבונתי הן אונך בני ויחכמני ד קשיבה † This Letter is dated from Smyrna, the 29th of the Year 1707. and writ to Mr Cuper by Mr. Heyman, Miniſter to the Conſul of the Dutch Nation.

of

of the Prophecies of Noſtradamus. But it is no wonder that he knew that Book, becauſe he was born in Spain, and had ſtudied at Salamanca. His unexpected Death hath put an end to the Deluſion.

You might, Sir, add this Fragment of Hiſtory to what you have already ſaid of Zabathai Tzevi, which is a farther Confirmation of the Fondneſs of the Jews for falſe Meſſiahs.

I am, &c.

FINIS.

Alterations and Additions by the Author.

PAge 2. Col. 2. Line 54. of the Miſnah, which has been Tranſlated, add, ſome years ſince.

P. 3. Col. 2. l. 31. the Author of Toldas Jeſchu, add, I ſpeak but of one Author; for the laſt Book which has the ſame Title, was not then printed; but I have confuted both of them.

P. 4. Col. 2. l. 10. but perhaps much later, r. I have explain'd my ſelf more diſtinctly in the laſt Tome, wherein I have proved, that Joſeph was not living till the Eleventh Century.

P. 5. Col. 2. l. 44. firſt Founder of the Sanhedrim, r. I have corrected this afterwards, and inſtead of putting the Inſtitution of that Senate under Pompey, by Gabinius his Lieutenant, I have placed it under the Maccabees.

Ibid. l. 49. after immediately ſent him, add, into Judea.

P. 9. Col. 1. l. 12. dele that.

P. 11. Col. 1. Archelaus, r. Herod.

Id. Col. 2. paid a Didrachm. Blot out the reſt to Section XV. Thoſe two Proofs are not ſubſtantial; the one, becauſe it was concerning the Didrachm which was paid for the Temple; the other, becauſe that Archelaus having been baniſhed, Judea was then reduced into a Province.

P. 12. Col. 2. l. 22. dele then.

P. 14. Col. 1. Sect. 8. for he had only his ſhare in Galilee, r. he had only Galilee for his ſhare.

P. 20. Sect. 3. N. 13. l. 21. r. that belonging to one Lyſanias.

P. 26. Col. 1. Sect. 29. her Father, &c. r. whoſe Father, &c.

P. 50. Col. 2. l. 20. r. it is more certain that Edeſſa placed Auguſtus among the Gods, than J. CHRIST.

Ib. l. 58. r. that the Town of Edeſſa acknowledged Auguſtus for its God, and Tiberius for its Prince.

P. 65. Col. 1 l. 14. add at the end of the Paragraph, a third Author may be ſubjoined, who is guilty of the ſame fault, and that is Malela, who ſpeaking of what diſaſter happen'd to the Samaritans under Juſtinian, ſays, That the Runaways retired to the Mount Arpariſin. But we muſt neceſſarily read Har Gerizim.

P. 76. N. 26. l. 4. after Chriſtianity, add, the reſt retired into Perſia, and perſwaded Choſroes not to conclude the Treaty which he was about to make with Juſtinian; becauſe they put him in hopes that they ſhould be able to make him Maſter of Judea, but they were miſtaken.

P. 78. N. 35. l. 12. dele Pietro della Valla, and all the other Lines to the word poor.

Ib. l. 20. r. Thirty. 28 ד 58

Ib. l. 21. dele, to give them notice of the Death of their High-Prieſt, &c.

P. 82. N. 2. Col. 2. l. 18. dele from Laſtly to Book, two Lines lower.

P. 88. N. 6. l. 3. for Shalmaneſer, r. Eſar-haddon.

P. 91. Col. 2. l. 24. after knew not what, add, J. CHRIST ſays, that the hour cometh when God ſhall be worſhipped in Spirit and in Truth. He was no longer to be worſhipped either on Mount Gerizim, or at Jeruſalem; but to be adored in Truth, in oppoſition to the falſe and ſuperſtitious Worſhip which the Samaritans paid to God; and in Spirit, in oppoſition to the carnal and groſs Ceremonies of the Jews.

P. 92. Col. 2. l. 14. dele to Sebaſte, in the 19th Line.

P. 107. Col. 1. l. 2. r. he would have ſtopped the intercalary Years, that ſo he might not give thirteen Months pay inſtead of twelve.

P. 122. Sect. 4. l. 8. for obliged to make, r. obliged to prefer.

P. 147. N. 9. l. 4. dele from this Man to extol.

P. 150. in the Genealogy of the Patriarchs, N. 6. r. Simeon 3. Son of (Gamaliel 2.) inſtead of Simeon.

P. 155. Col. 1. We have fixed the Origine of the Patriarchs to Gamaliel II. Something here wants a little to be cleared up; for we have ſaid in p. 151 Sect. 4. that Simeon III. Son of that Gamaliel, is the firſt Patriarch that is known to us. Now the Equivoque proceeds from hence, becauſe we have placed the Origine of the Patriarchs under Nerva, and then Gamaliel II. is the firſt; but Simeon III. his Son, who lived under Adrian, is declared more expreſly in this Page, § 3. The Origine of the Patriarchs is referr'd to Gamaliel II. and the diſtinct Knowledge of it to his Son Simeon III. It muſt alſo be obſerv'd, that a little above Joſhua is put at the Head of the Academy, in the room of Gamaliel, but Eliezer was choſen Patriarch.

P. 156. Col. 1. N. 5. laſt Figures, inſtead of 136, r. of our Lord, 135, and ſo in p. 157. Col. 1. N. 11. r. in the year 135. of Jeſus Chriſt.

P. 158. Col. 1. N. 16. l. 7. at Babylon, r. Nahardea.

P. 167. Col. 2. l. penult, for forty, r. ſixty.

P. 169. Col. 2. N. 10. dele the two laſt Lines of the firſt Paragraph.

P. 170. the firſt Marginal Quotation, r. Διαλῆρωσις.

P. 172. Col. 1. for Peter, &c. r. Alfonſo King of Portugal.

P. 187. Col. 1. N. 12. l. 10. after Geneſis, r. This diſtinction was known by Maimonides, who alſo undertook to explain part of the Myſteries contained in the Mercava Bereſchit.* He maintains, that none ought to ſpeak of the Bereſchit, but before two Witneſſes: For if Plato, and other Philoſophers, have hid the Secrets of their Science under Myſtical Terms, it is ſtill more neceſſary to put a Veil upon Religion. Laſtly, he owns, That as no Book had been wrote upon the Mercava, it was difficult to explain it, and that moſt of thoſe who had undertaken to explain it, had miſtaken its Sence and Meaning.

* Maimon. more Nevochim. p. 2. c. 39.

P. 208. Col. 1. N. 3. l. 4. dele which it produces.

P. 225. N. 7. l. 10. Zeis, r. Zeb.

p. 230. Col. 1. N. 3. l. 3. not to have known, r. not to have made uſe of.

p. 262. N. 21. l. 2. Pirke Abbot, add, they have alſo publiſh'd other Sentences under, &c.

p. 306. Col. 2. l. 1. dele Hebrew.

p. 319. Col. 2. N. 4. l. 7 that Opinion, r. the contrary Opinion.

p. 330. Col. 2. N. 11. l. 2. dele be cannot be, &c. and the three following Lines, to the word Moſes.

p. 342. Col. 2. l. 16. dele ſeven.

p. 343. Col. 1. N. 1. l. 20. for two thouſand, r. ſeventeen hundred.

p. 416. Col. 2. N. 9. l. 7. from &c. r. by the Law.

p. 433. Col. 1. N. 21. l. 7. Machon, r. Methon.

p. 459. N. 7. l. 12. dele every Saturday.

p. 462. N. 2. l. 16. Swore by the things conſecrated to God, add, the Treaſure of the Temple.

p. 466. Col. 1. paragr. 3. l. 1. inſtead of thoſe, r. that.

p. 478. Col. 1. N. 3. l. 13. whether the Veſſel be pure, r. the Veſſel is pure, if.

p. 480. Col. 1. l. 2. after the Jews, add the words, of honour.

p. 481. Col. 2. N. 20. l. 36. for after, r. during the Sabbath.

Ibid. l. 41. after Story, r. from ſome Man of the Country.

p. 485. Col. 1. l. 16. r. did St. Peter only go into thoſe places.

p. 486. Col. 1. N. 8. l. 6. one or two Women, r. one Woman, and two Men.

Note, That after p 491, in R. of the third Alphabet, the page reverts to 464. the next Signature is Ooo, and the pages continue orderly afterwards to the end.

p. 493. Col. 1. N. 23. l. 4. for this Prince with which, r. that Prince by whom.

p. 494. Col 2. l. 21. Maſon was, add, in Meſopotamia, if however you had rather, ſay that it was the City Emeſe.

p. 497. Col. 2. N. 9. l. 8. dele during the Comitia.

Ibid. l. 9. r. where.

p. 501 Col. 2. N. 20. l. 3. for informed, r. revealed to.

p. 506. Col. 1. l. 11. for Alexander Severus, r. Severus.

p. 515. the laſt Note at the bottom of the page, for מרשה r. משהן.

p. 516. Col. 2. N. 16. l. 4. for ſixty nine, r. ſixty two.

p. 526. Col. 1. N. 16. l. 5. for that went but half way, r. that had made but ſmall proficiency therein.

p. 531. Col. 2. N. 17. l. 5. for this, r. his.

Ibid. l. 18. for was Prince, r. did ſo likewiſe.

p. 547. Col. 2. N. 22. l. 2. for which was, r. and it was.

Ibid. N. 23. for to be habited on occaſion, r. to come back on the account of.

p. 551. Col. 2. N. 4. for the loſſes, r. thoſe loſſes.

p. 559. Col. 2. l. 26. for Points of Honour, r. Degrees of Honour.

p. 560. Col. 1. N. 15. for promiſed them their, r. permitted them the.

p. 568. Col. 1. N. 16. l. 7. for ſmelling a Roſe, r. ſmelling to, &c.

Ibid. l. 10. for which appears, r. which is to be ſeen.

p. 588. Col. 1. l. 11. for Tysbon, r. Tybon.

p. 591. Col. 2. N. 10. l. 40. r. which of right ought not to have been exacted.

p. 593. Col. 1. N. 13. l. 52. dele, the Colour of the Abaſſides, and Green that of the Ommiades, the Succeſſors of Aly, r. the Colour of the Abaſſides, the Succeſſors of Aly, &c.

p. 647. Col. 1. l. 12. for to celebrate, r. to the uſage of celebrating the Paſſover.

p. 655. N. 11. l. 6. at the end of the twelfth or thirteenth, r. or beginning of the thirteenth Century.

p. 657. Col. 1. N. 11. l. 2. for Tranſexane, r. Tranſoxane.

Ibid. In the Notes at the bottom of the page at this Mark ‖ for Ann. 129. r. Ann 1291.

p. 674. Col. 1. l. 5. for where, r. whereinto.

Ibid. N. 14. l. 25. for violenter, r. more violently.

Ibid. l. 37. for growing rich, r. enriching himſelf.

p. 676. Col. 1. N. 20. for Videmus, r. Vidimus.

p. 682. Col. 2. N. 3. l. 15. for they had enjoy'd, r. which the Tartars had enjoyed.

p. 683. Col. 2. N. 9. l. 11. for Germecimam, r. Germeſheim.

p. 689. Col. 1 N. 8. l. 15. Pope Mark, r. Pope named Mark.

Ibid. l. 21. for taken an imaginary Man, r. put an imaginary Man in the room of Pope Martin.

p. 734. Col. 2. N. 32. for moreover, r. likewiſe.

p. 741. in the Notes at the bottom, at this mark ‖ r. הצדוב.